We are all aware of the law of evaporation. For instance, we may pour a glass of water and spread it over the floor of a 25 square meter area room. Then, we will notice that the water evaporates quickly. However, if we leave the same amount of water in the glass, only very little of it will be lost through evaporation. Accordingly, the greater the area or surface over which the water is spread, the greater the evaporation will be. The True Lord Glorified is He intended that three quarters of the earth's surface should be water because water is the origin of life. Further, Allah made some of this water salty so that its taste would not change or decay. In addition, saltwater is always spread over vast areas in order for it to evaporate, condense and then fall again in the form of rain. As rain falls, water runs into valleys, and the remaining of this water gets stored in outlets inside the earth as fresh water so that man can use the intelligence Allah has endowed him to extract it from the earth. The True Lord Glorified is He has created for us all the means we need to earn our livelihood.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, 'Do you indeed disbelieve in He who has created the earth in two days and attribute to Him equals? That is the Lord of the worlds.' (9) And He placed on the earth firmly set mountains over its surface, and He blessed it and determined therein its [creatures'] sustenance in four days without distinction – for [the information] of those who ask. (10)' (Fussilat: 9-10)

Accordingly, do not ever say that the human population will outweigh the livelihood and sustenance available on earth. Rather, admit that your creative and deductive capacities have waned. As long as Allah Glorified is He says: 'determined therein its [creatures'] sustenance,' we should know that no saying is truer than His. Consider the following example—and Allah has the supreme and most exalted parables. Assume that an employee bought all his monthly needs and stored it in the attic of the house in the beginning of the month. One day, he walks into his house and finds out that his wife did not prepare lunch; what would happen? He would be angry.

Allah has stored all the livelihood and sustenance we need inside the earth. Yet, we do not exert enough effort to benefit from it. Allah Glorified is He explains to us that if man did not avail himself of the laws Allah has set for him and failed to follow Allah's assigned commands and proscriptions, he would toil and would live in murk and misery.

Allah Glorified is He thus says: 'and Allah presents an example: a city which was safe and secure; its provision coming to it in abundance from every location, but it denied the favours of Allah. So, Allah made it taste the envelopment of hunger and fear for what they had been doing.' (an-Nahl: 112) This town enjoyed security and tranquillity, but it refused to show gratitude for Allah's blessings. When you examine closely the connection between cause and effect, between the universe and its laws, the human and what is created for him, you will notice a peculiar thing. This town was secure and tranquil and abounded with sustenance that came to it from everywhere. Thus, the town was the place of inhabitancy. Further, the place of inhabitancy is not the only place where there is sustenance; rather, sustenance used to flood it from everywhere else. It is as if every dweller of a particular place has other places serving it. However, this town refused to show gratitude for Allah's blessings.

The apparent meaning of ingratitude is concealment. Therefore, the town that showed ingratitude to Allah's blessings is the town that concealed these blessings. The blessings of Allah were present, but the humans in this town concealed these blessings through their laziness and failure to extract such blessings from the earth.

Alternatively, it could be that the people in that town managed to extract Allah's bounty to them, yet they hid it away from others. The evil in the universe is always due to one of these two matters: The people of several nations were too lazy to channel their efforts to extract Allah's blessings from the earth. Further, other nations possessed wealth that they threw in the sea lest it would go to other nations. The corruption we see in the relation between different parts of the world, indicates that the world is the town that Allah Glorified is He used as a parable, 'And Allah presents an example: a city which was safe and secure; its provision coming to it in abundance from every location, but it denied the favours of Allah. So, Allah made it taste the envelopment of hunger and fear for what they had been doing.'

Consider the precision of the style of the Quran in Allah's saying: ' Allah made it taste the envelopment of hunger.' We know that food is the thing that is often experienced through taste. Further, we know that the tongue is the organ that tastes. In contrast, al-libas—the Arabic word here translated as 'envelopment'—encompasses the entire body. The organ that tastes is not only the tongue but the entire body. The mouth ultimately eats for the benefit of the rest of the body. When the nutrients needed to sustain life do not reach the rest of the body, all the body experiences hunger as well.

The universe is created by Allah according to an accurate system of laws so that universal phenomena would follow the path set for it by Allah. When these laws function regularly, they yield the expected results to man—even after a while—to the extent that some of the commentators on the Quran and some theologians argue that hereditary illnesses and diseases are transmitted from the preceding generations to the succeeding ones due to the negligence of the ancestors and their tendency to encroach upon and breach the path set by Allah. Thus, if Allah Glorified is He sets a universal law for the human being, but the latter violates it, he must experience bad results to ensue from his action. The same holds true for groups and nations.

Nevertheless, reason tends to be preoccupied with calamities and evil things that befall people unknowingly and unexpectedly. Philosophy should have investigated this domain; however, religion teaches us the causes of these phenomena. Religion teaches us that if a human being fails to pursue the means and proper causes for securing success in whichever endeavour he undertakes, and then suffers a disaster, he should know that such a disaster is the consequences of his own actions.

Consider earthquakes, volcanoes, sweeping avalanches or ferocious storms. Man cannot interfere with or prevent any of these phenomena. All of them relay one message to man: if everything in the universe could be monotonously and consistently explained in terms of causal relations, we would not need to assume a connection with an unknown concealed force to which we must consistently submit.

Some philosophical schools in Germany, for instance, argued that the existence of evil in the universe is evidence that there is no god. Were there a wise god, all of these evils would not have happened, and no one would have been born with a single eye, stumbling leg or mutilated body. Another school in the same period of time argued: No, the monotony of the cosmic order is evidence suggesting that there is no god. If there were a god, He would break that order and cause certain events to happen in violation of the cosmic laws. Thus, we may realize that these people seek infidelity for its own sake. The evidence is that one school took the order of the universe as grounds for its infidelity, whereas the other school took the exceptional anomalies in the universe as evidence to substantiate its argument for disbelieving in God.

To both schools we say: you are immature. Whichever wants to seek order as evidence of the existence of a Wise God, and whichever wants to take the universal anomalies as an indication of the existence of an All-Capable God should realize that both aspects are present in the universe, and both are evidence of the existence of an All-Wise and All-Capable God if we are fair in judgement.

Consider the order of the higher universe. If a minor thing is amiss in this order, the entire edifice of the universe would collapse. Also, consider the sun, rain, planets and stars; they all follow a strict order. So, whoever wants to take order and regularity as evidence of the existence of the wisdom of a creator, would find what he seeks. By contrast, whoever wants to take anomalies as evidence of the existence of a dominating God—Who transcends the mechanical nature of the universe—would also find those clues; but anomalies are always individual cases. Accordingly, if there is a corrupt individual event or member in a system, this does not imply that the system is defective. The percentage of those born with a single eye to those born with perfect eyes is almost negligible.

However, when anomalies occur in the system of the universe and in the movement of celestial bodies, the destruction of the world may ensue. Thus, whoever wants to see that an ultimate order governs the universe and indicates the existence of a higher creative wisdom should consider and examine the higher celestial bodies. By contrast, whoever wants to take anomalies and aberrant incidents as an indication of the existence of a power that controls the mechanical structure of the world should know that such things are also present. However, anomalies are individual cases; thus, if there are one or two anomalous individuals within a system, the entire system would not fall apart.

We also know that the monotony of the blessings may distract man from thinking about the ultimate Giver and Lord. For instance, if one of us enjoys healthy teeth for a long time, he will never recall how painful bad teeth tend to be. However, if a tooth starts to decay, one remembers the bounty of having good teeth. The same thing holds true for the kidneys and eyes; if one feels pain in any of these organs, he immediately rushes to a physician. All of these matters are alarms intended to disrupt the monotony of the blessings one enjoys so that one may recall the value of these blessings. When we see a man whom Allah deprived of sight, each one of us immediately says, ‘thank Allah for His bounty’ and becomes protective of his eyes lest he should lose them.

The same attitude recurs when one sees a stumbling or mutilated man. All of these are direct and clear cosmic messages so that people would not be distracted by the blessings away from the One Who conferred such blessings.

If we consider the things that may befall an individual or a nation as a whole, we will always find that these are well deserved punishments for opposing Allah's instructions. If there is anything beyond man's capacity, we say that this is the wisdom of the Creator so that He may call our attention to the fact that He is the Ultimate Lord. For this reason, we notice that people who suffer from congenital mutilations are only a few. In addition, Allah compensates those who suffer from such anomalies with other permanent bounties. A poet said:

My eye was born blind yet blindness is often associated with intelligence
Indeed I peculiarly acquired a lot of knowledge
The absence of the light of the eye opened a space for a river of knowledge
To follow within me… a river that no one else could comprehend.

I once used the famous composer Ludwig Van Beethoven as an example. Even though he was deaf, he managed to compose symphonies that struck the entire world. For this reason, there is a common saying that states: 'everyone who suffers from a disability has great powers.' Inasmuch as Allah uses that person as a means to remind people of His bounties and blessings, Allah Glorified is He compensates the disabled by endowing him with another talent which attracts people's attention so that they may see Allah's Grace upon him. Therefore, we should ponder on the calamities that abruptly befall man and without him having to do with the cause. Those are part of the Divine Wisdom so that one may realize that the universe is not left without leadership and guidance.

Allah has created the universe and its universal laws to prove to us that He exists and that He controls the cosmos. If something happens, we ought to seek the wisdom underlying its occurrence. Wisdom is a violation of the universal laws intended to call our attention to the existence of a higher power that surpasses the mechanical nature of the world—a power that is capable of suspending this mechanical order.

Hence, the miracles of the Messengers of Allah assumed this nature. For instance, the nature of the fire is to burn; nonetheless, it did not burn Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Was the intention of the True Lord Glorified is He only to rescue Ibrahim (Abraham) from the fire? If His intention had only been to rescue Ibrahim (Abraham), Allah Glorified is He would not have allowed his adversaries to get hold of him. After the adversaries of Ibrahim (Abraham) apprehended him and lit up a fire to burn him alive, the True Lord Glorified is He could still have brought about a cloud, that the adversaries of Ibrahim (Abraham) would not be able to control, and caused rain to fall and extinguish the fire. No; Allah intended that the adversaries of Ibrahim (Abraham) would capture him, light up a ferocious fire and nothing would extinguish that fire; then, they would ultimately throw Ibrahim (Abraham) in the fire. Subsequently, the True lord explains: I exercise my dominion and mastery over the universal laws because I am the Creator of such laws, and I can suspend them whenever I will: 'We (Allah) said: 'O fire! Be you coolness and safety for Ibrahim (Abraham)!'' (al-Anbiya': 69) By contrast, had the other scenario taken place, and the fire had been extinguished by rain, people would have asked: what if rain had not fallen and had not extinguished the fire? The True Lord Glorified is He wanted to refute all the possible claims Ibrahim's (Abraham's) adversaries might come up with. When events not determined by man happen, we say: attribute these events to the wisdom of the Creator because He wants to direct the attention of His creation to the fact that He is the One controlling and dominating the universe. The mechanical nature of the universe baffles the minds due to its precision; nonetheless, it does not escape the control of our Lord. For this reason, wind sometimes blows so vigorously that one cannot see anything at all. This means that specks of dust have accumulated until they created some kind of a barring wall. Such phenomenon takes place no matter how much modern scientific equipment may try to control or prevent it from happening.

It is peculiar that Allah Glorified is He left us a sign that says: I have ennobled you, human being, with reason. However, I have not endowed you with an infinite power of understanding. There may be an instinct-driven creature that is still more capable of understanding things than human beings.

When an earthquake happens in a particular region, the first animals to sense it and flee are often the donkeys. This was intended by Allah Glorified is He so that man would not take pride in his knowledge and reason. ‘No! [But] indeed, man transgresses (6) because he sees himself self-sufficient. (7)’ (al-‘Alaq: 6-7)

Accordingly, if you see a cosmic phenomenon that is not up to man or to any nation or group of people to control, know that Allah Glorified is He intends that it happens for a wise reason so that He can direct our attention to the existence of the Highest Creator, and so that no one would think that the mechanical nature of the universe is monotonously autonomous, but rather, it is a system that Allah has implemented in accordance with His Power, Will and Wisdom.

Some people proudly say: the electronic mind does not err. They do not know that the fact that it is infallible is in itself problematic because inasmuch as you feed it with data, it produces information. It does not have a choice about anything. By contrast, the human mind is capable of deduction and discovery. Further, it can discard harmful data. This is indicative of the greatness of their Creator.

Others use a different example, namely, the fact that artificial flowers do not wither. To those who think this way, we say: it is the defect and flaw of artificial flowers that they do not wither; it indicates that they are lifeless and completely inanimate.

The Quran puts forward a glimpse of these issues—issues that were you to subject them to reason, you would not accept. However, when the One Who caused it to happen interprets it, we would find that it makes perfect sense. A good example to illustrate the point is when Moses went to the righteous servant. What happened? The righteous servant said: ‘Indeed, with me you will never be able to have patience.’ (al-Kahf: 67) The righteous servant then tried to give an excuse to Moses; he thus said: ‘And how can you have patience for what you do not encompass in knowledge?’ (al-Kahf: 68) Moses, who was among the most resolute Messengers of Allah, replied: ‘You will find me, if Allah wills, patient, and I will not disobey you in [any] order.’ (al-Kahf: 69)

Afterwards, the righteous servant [Al-Khidhr] made a hole in the ship which they boarded together. To the superficial, immediate understanding, making a hole in a ship is an evil act. Although Moses promised the righteous servant not to disobey his order and to be patient, he could not stand what happened. He thus said to him: ‘So they set out, until when they had embarked on the ship, Al-Khidhr tore it open. [Moses] said, ‘Have you torn it open to drown its people? You have certainly done a grave thing.'' (al-Kahf: 71) Moses suspected the act of the righteous servant on an apparent level. But when he understood the wisdom underlying the act, he found that it was the best course of action to take. Had not the righteous servant made a hole in the ship, the unjust king would have usurped a good and sound ship by force because: 'As for the ship, it belonged to poor people working at sea. So I intended to cause defect in it as there was after them a king who seized every [good] ship by force.' (al-Kahf: 79) Had the righteous servant not made a hole in the ship, its true owners would not have been able to keep it. The hole guaranteed that its owners would keep it because they could always fix that defect later. Accordingly, one should always bear in mind that anything that happens at odds with the superficiality of human understanding is caused by Allah for an underlying wisdom as long as no creature has caused it.

Is there anything more atrocious than murder? The righteous servant murdered a young boy. So what was the wisdom underlying such an act? If any one of us has a boy, he always thinks of him as the ravishment of his eye and his ultimate support in life. However, this son may be the cause of the corruption of his father's religion. He may also incite him to lie, take bribes or even to steal. This son may lead his father to Hellfire. It is thereby better that Allah removes this son from the life of the father so that he would not lead him to wrongdoing.

Someone may wonder what sin or wrong deed the young boy committed to deserve death. We answer: you do not understand matters properly; the death of the boy was better for him because he returned to the True Lord without having to go through the experience of having to choose whether to obey or disobey Allah; he was sent directly to the mercy of Allah, and this is better for him. Accordingly, killing the boy was a mercy for his parents. If something happens to one's self due to a violation of Allah's law, one ought to know that he is the cause of the detriment. The same thing holds true when a nation violates a cosmic or a religious law. By contrast, if matters are beyond the sphere of people's power and control then one should know that Allah caused them to happen for a wise reason. The story of the righteous servant with Moses abounds with wisdom. Both of them went to a village and asked its people for food. 'So they set out, until when they came to the people of a village, they asked its people for food, but they refused to offer them hospitality.' (al-Kahf: 77) Neither of them asked for money so that they would not arouse suspicion. They rather asked for food, which is the basic necessity of human life. However, the people from the village refused to offer them food as they were vile—despite the fact that the righteous servant erected and supported a wall that was on the brink of collapsing on the village. Then, Moses asked the righteous servant: why did not you ask the people of the village to pay you for your work? The righteous servant eventually explained to Moses the reason underlying his actions: 'And as for the wall, it belonged to two orphan boys in the city, and there was beneath it a treasure for them, and their father had been righteous. So, your Lord intended that they reach maturity and extract their treasure, as a mercy from your Lord. And I did it not of my own accord. That is the interpretation of that about which you could not have patience.' (al-Kahf: 82)

The mean village people who refused to give food to their guests when they asked for it were definitely incapable of undertaking the responsibility of keeping the treasure of the two orphan boys. Hence, Allah commanded the righteous servant to hide the treasure away from the village people. This way, if bad things happen to a man due to something he did, he should realize he is the one who did wrong and harmed himself. In contrast, if one did not have a hand in what happened to him, he should have faith in the wisdom of the One Who caused it. In such a manner, man can always be at ease whenever anything befalls him.

The one who has faith receives whatever evil thing that may happen to him strongly and patiently. If such things are due to things he did, he should adjust his behaviour. In contrast, if such things come from his Lord, he should have faith in the wisdom of his Lord: 'Say: All is from Allah.' This is an admonition for you, human being so that you could know that any deed is ultimately caused by Allah. Man does not have a hand in the energy with which Allah has endowed him. However, man channels and directs the energy and faculties Allah created for him towards obedience or disobedience.

Since all is from Allah, He wants us to feel astonished by the attitude of those people. Allah Glorified is He says: 'So what is [the matter] with those people that they can hardly understand any statement?' (an-Nisa': 78). It is as if the logic of reason and thought must lead to proper understanding. We should be rather astounded when people do not understand things properly. We should not be surprised unless the thing offered to them is a matter that could be comprehended by the mind. When one says that a particular person does not 'understand any statement,' this means that the latter's mind is incapable of understanding. Yet, when you put it with 'hardly,' this means that such person cannot even begin to understand. Subsequently, the True Lord says:

مَّآ أَصَابَكَ مِنۡ حَسَنَةٖ فَمِنَ ٱللَّهِۖ وَمَآ أَصَابَكَ مِن سَيِّئَةٖ فَمِن نَّفۡسِكَۚ
وَأَرۡسَلۡنَٰكَ لِلنَّاسِ رَسُولٗاۚ وَكَفَىٰ بِٱللَّهِ شَهِيدٗا ﴿٧٩﴾

Anything good that happens to you [Prophet] is from God; anything bad is [ultimately] from yourself. We have sent you as a messenger to people; God is sufficient witness [79] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 79)

If someone is subjected to a universal law, then it is from Allah. However, if some evil befalls you, then know that as much as you have done wrong, it is from you. It is as if the matter is divided into parts: a part for which you are responsible and a part for which you bear no responsibility. However, you should always consider anything that happens to you as a good thing because it ultimately contributes to spreading faith in the universe.

A believer should be in a state of alternation between self-reproach for the calamities for which he bears responsibility and faith in the wisdom of Allah Glorified is He concerning the calamities for which he bears no responsibility. 'What comes to you of good is from Allah, but what comes to you of evil, [O man], is from yourself. And We have sent you, [O Muhammad], to the people as a messenger, and sufficient is Allah as Witness.' But who is the Messenger? The Messenger is the one who conveys the message of the One who sent him to whom he was sent. As long as the Messenger relays and delivers the Message of Allah, then whatever he causes to happen is ultimately caused by Allah.

When the True Lord says: 'sufficient is Allah as Witness,' this means that it will not harm you, Muhammad, if they say that whatever evil that befalls them is from you because it suffices that Allah is on your side. Further, they are powerless to hold anyone accountable. Your Lord is the One Who is capable of holding people accountable. He testifies that you are honest in delivering His message and that you did not cause any evil to anyone as they alleged. Next, the True Lord says:

مَّن يُطِعِ ٱلرَّسُولَ فَقَدۡ أَطَاعَ ٱللَّهَۖ وَمَن تَوَلَّىٰ فَمَآ
أَرۡسَلۡنَٰكَ عَلَيۡهِمۡ حَفِيظٗا ٨٠

Whoever obeys the Messenger obeys God.
If some pay no heed, We have not sent you to be their keeper [80]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 80)

Obedience to Prophet Muhammad is a form of obedience to Allah. Whoever obeys Prophet Muhammad is also obeying Allah because the Messenger only delivers Allah's message.

For this reason, in personal affairs, Prophet Muhammad used to act like an ordinary human being, and he put it forth as such. When these matters were proven incorrect, Prophet Muhammad gave us an example of his honesty.

Anas Allah be pleased with him related that the Prophet passed by some people who were pollinating their palm trees. He then said: 'If you were not to do it, it might be good for you. (So they abandoned this practice) and there was a decline in the yield. He (the Prophet) happened to pass by them (and said): 'What has gone wrong with your trees?' They said: 'you said so and so.' Thereupon he said: 'You have better knowledge (of a technical skill) in the affairs of the world.'(1)

This indicates that the Heavens do not have anything to do with the empirical issues that are, for instance, subject to experimentation in the lab. As for the issues that are subject to universal cosmic laws, they cannot be left to the servants of Allah. It is quite peculiar that when Prophet Muhammad deals with something about which Allah has not enacted any prior decree, but later changes it, he is the one who communicates to us such change so that we would testify that he is most honest and sincere in delivering Allah's message even if it is against his own interest. This noble verse comes after the saying of the True Lord Glorified is He: 'And We have sent you, [O Muhammad], to the people as a messenger and sufficient is Allah as Witness.'

(1) Related by Ahmad, Ibn Majah and Muslim (who narrated this version of the Hadith)

A Messenger of Allah—as we know—is the one who delivered the law that Allah has intended to govern the life of His vicegerent on earth. Further, if we consider the letters which compose the etymological root of the word risala ('message' in Arabic): ar-ra', as-sin and al-lam, we will notice that the True Lord Glorified is He says in a different verse: 'And We did not send before you any messenger or prophet.' (al-Hajj: 52)

The messenger may be a messenger in the sense we understand or may be a prophet; however, both are sent by Allah. The difference is that a messenger brings forth a law—which he is commanded to deliver and communicate to the people so that they apply it. By contrast, the prophet is sent by Allah Glorified is He to give an ideal example of following the path and code of conduct set by the religion that preceded him; thus, he is sent to serve as a behavioural example. But, technically, a messenger is the one who brings forth a new path that could differ in some of its branches from the one that preceded it. Both of them are messengers; the messenger brings forth a new path and course of life to implement, whereas the prophet only sets his attitude as an example for the implementation and adherence to the path of Allah that the messenger before him has already relayed.

If the True Lord Glorified is He has sent the messengers and made Prophet Muhammad the seal of all of them, this means that his Message will be complete—with no subsequent Message. If that is so, how could it be possible that a human mind would try to second-guess it?

Allah Glorified is He has chosen Muhammad to be the seal of all messengers and revealed to him the saying: 'This day I have perfected your religion for you and completed My favour upon you and have approved for you Islam as religion.' (al-Ma'ida: 30) Therefore, there will be no subsequent message. So, how come a contemporary or a non-contemporary person dares to say, 'No, we want to include new additions to certain parts of this religion'? Or alternatively, that one may claim that a particular ruling does not befit the age. If Allah has not willed for the existence of any subsequent message because He has perfected it, what gives humans the right to second-guess it?!

Messenger Muhammad, when mentioned, follows either format: Messenger of Allah or Messenger to the people, as he is the middle man between Allah and creation.

Revealed messages are necessary for humans because, if man examines and traces existence with only his natural disposition and his sound reason, without the aid of a messenger, he may still discover that the universe must have a Creator whose power is commensurate with the wisdom and perfection of such universe. Further, he may discover that such Creator must be a Lord because He provides us with whatever we need. However, could reason reveal to us what this great power and capability wants from us? We can only conclude that a great power underlies this universe, and this power has enough capability, wisdom, knowledge, will and attributes of perfection to create this amazing universe in such perfect form and with such precise engineering. In addition, the universe has a purpose. However, can the mind assign a name to this power? The fact that it is a great power implies that it has capability and wisdom but does not reveal the name to us. Accordingly, a messenger has to be sent to provide the people with the answers to the questions that engross them namely, what the powerthat created this universe with such amazingly perfect form.

Here, reason should pause and wonder. When a messenger is sent from Allah to say: ‘I will lead you to the name and essence of this creative power,’ the creatures ought to listen because this messenger would solve the riddle that puzzles them. Both the believers and the disbelievers believe it because both find themselves in a universe wherein species that are more powerful than they are serve them involuntarily.

In addition, man finds that there are innumerable species that do not fall within the realm of his power or dominion. Further, the human mind falls short of understanding the functioning mechanism of a lot of tasks these species perform in fulfilling the purpose of being subservient to him. Therefore, man ought to have believed on his own.

We have already given an example to illustrate this point. We said: assume that a man survived a plane crash, and then lost his way in the desert without food or water. Afterwards, he sat down and fell asleep. Upon waking up, he found a table abounding with different kinds of food and tasty drinks. By Allah, would his mind not be preoccupied with the question as to who brought this food and these drinks, even before he touched them? For this reason, and before we avail ourselves of any of these blessings, we ought to pose the question: ‘who creates all these blessings?’ Despite that, Allah Glorified is He gave us a some time to think so that we would immediately believe, once a messenger comes forth to teach us that the power for which we search is called a particular name, asks us to do certain things and informs us that, since we have been created by such power, we are bound to eventually return to it.

The epitome of this whole argument is that Allah Glorified is He has prepared what may be called the bountiful table of the universe for His creatures before He even created them. Further, He has created all the species that man needs to sustain his life. As we have said before, the chain of species and the services they provide to mankind make us wonder: how is it possible that creatures which are more powerful and stronger than us serve us?

We also may wonder: how is it possible that the sun—that is far beyond the realm of my power and dominion, the moon—that I cannot reach, the wind—that I cannot control, and the earth—with which I cannot communicate, serve me? There must be something more powerful than me and all these creatures, which in turn subdued them to my service. Further, have you ever noticed that any of those creatures performed its service to you in a deficient manner? This may never happen because all of these creatures are, by nature, compelled to perform the function of being subservient to you. Thus, if a messenger comes to solve for us the riddle concerning nature and the origin of life and to guide us to its Creator, we must open our ears and listen to him. Accordingly, I should believe the Messenger of Allah if he tells me that the One Who created the universe is Allah, and that Allah is my Creator; He sent him [the messenger] with a particular path and code for living so that I can accomplish my mission in life by doing certain acts and avoiding others; and everyone will be judged by Allah for his acts in his worldly sojourn—such path is the epitome of all religions. For this reason, it is necessary that Allah Glorified is He sends a messenger and then supports him with a miracle that proves his honesty and the truth of the message he delivers Since Allah has sent a messenger to deliver the path that comprises His dos and don’ts; this means that one must obey this messenger. Our Lord says in a different verse: ‘And We did not send any messenger except to be obeyed by Allah’s permission.’ (an-Nisa’: 64) This means that obedience to the Messengers of Allah is a must, not because such obedience is due to the Messengers themselves, but because this obedience is part of being obedient to Allah. What sets apart Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from other messengers is the fact that the miracle that vindicates the truth of his message is the Book itself that was revealed to Him by Allah, and puts forward the path He has set for mankind. Other messengers were different. Every messenger of Allah used to be supported by a miracle in addition to the Book that set the way of life of the religion he preached. For instance, the stick of Moses, and his white hand were his miracles; however, his path was set in the Torah. Accordingly, the miracle supportive of every religion was different from the Book that set the path of life such religion delineated.

The miracle of ‘Isa (Jesus) was his capacity to cure the mute and mutilated. However, the Book that set the course of his religion—the Bible—was different. Nevertheless, the miracle of Prophet Muhammad was identical to the Book that set the path for his people because Allah intended that the miracle of the seal of all religions would not be separate from the course of life it defined.

Whoever witnessed the miracles of the previous messengers of Allah would believe in them. The one who had not witnessed such miracles only heard about them; if he trusted the person communicating the news of such miracle, he would believe him; if he did not, he would not believe him. Indeed, if Allah had not told us about those miracles in the Quran, we may have very well doubted them.

Yet, the miracle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will last as long as the path of life he has set for his followers lasts. Every Muslim is capable of asserting until the end of days that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, and that this is his miracle. Followers of others messengers are incapable of such assertion. None of them can assertively say: this person is the Messenger of Allah, and this is his miracle because such miracle has already happened and ended. In contrast, the Quran will stay and survive as long as the message and the universe last.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to deliver the message of Allah. The True Lord explains to us that I have sent the Messenger so that he would be obeyed. Thus, it logically makes perfect sense that the Quran would say: ‘He who obeys the Messenger has obeyed Allah,’ because the Messenger was sent to relay the message of Allah; we are thus more connected to the Messenger of Allah. We have learnt before that if the command to obey Allah is coupled with that of obeying His messenger, we must obey both. If Allah Glorified is He discusses a general issue like zakat (obligatory alms) or performing pilgrimage, and the Messenger of Allah then comes forth to explain the details and specifics pertaining to these matters; we have to obey Allah by following the general command and obey His messenger by adhering to the specifics and details he explained. If Allah Glorified is He puts forward neither a general issue nor a specific one, then know that the legislation will be decreed by Prophet Muhammad in accordance with the authorization Allah Glorified is He gave to His messenger in His saying: 'And whatever the Messenger has given you–take; and what he has forbidden you- refrain from.' (al-Hashr: 7)

The only Prophet whom Allah Glorified is He gave an authorization to decree and legislate is Muhammad. All other prophets only delivered the message of Allah, and none of them brought about anything pertaining to the religion he preached on his own except for Prophet Muhammad. Allah Glorified is He authorized him to legislate in His saying: 'And whatever the Messenger has given you - take; and what he has forbidden you - refrain from.' Thus, Prophet Muhammad also has a mission that is directly related to the domain of the Quran. We find analogous examples in our day to day lives. For instance, someone may say to an employee that the state law decrees that if an employee is absent for more than 15 days from his work, he must be fired. This employee may then refer to the state constitution and then retort: 'I have read the constitution of the state, but I did not find this law. Accordingly, what you are telling me about firing the employee who is absent from work for more than fifteen days is an unconstitutional claim.' To this person we say the following: the constitution states that in such a case a committee must be empanelled to regulate and organize the affairs of the employees in this regard. Through authorization, an authority or a committee could formulate and decree a law to be applied to all employees; if this happened, such a law would be constitutional. All the articles of the law concerning employees are included in the authorization the constitution grants to the committees and authorities that decree secondary and subordinate laws and regulations. Similarly, if someone probes you to adduce an evidence from the Quran that al-maghrib (evening) Prayer is three rak'as, Al-fajr (morning) Prayer is two rak'as, both Azh-zhuhr (noon) and 'Isha' (night) Prayers are four rak'as, you should say here 'is the evidence from the Quran: 'And whatever the Messenger has given you - take; and what he has forbidden you - refrain from.'' In order to protect the safety of his path against such distortions, Prophet Muhammad says: 'Let me not find one of you reclining on his couch when he hears something regarding me which I have commanded or forbidden and saying: We do not know. What we found in Allah's Book we have followed.'

In a different narration, Al-Miqdam ibn Ma'di Yaqrib relates that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Soon a Hadith from me will be conveyed to a man, while he is reclining on his couch, and he says: 'Between us and you is Allah's Book. So whatever we find in it that is lawful, we consider lawful, and whatever we find in it that is unlawful, we consider it unlawful.' Indeed whatever Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him made unlawful, it is the same as what Allah made unlawful.'(1)

I am relating this Hadith of Prophet Muhammad so that you would realize the stupidity of those who say so, and to tell them that your saying is evidence of the truth and honesty of Prophet Muhammad. In the Name of Allah, if someone claimed, as you do, that the only source of legislation is the Quran, what would we say to the narrators who relate the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad? Even if they had not said so, we would still respond that Prophet Muhammad said: the man lies on his couch, talks, and no one said anything opposing it. Therefore, the existence of these people is evidence of the truth and validity of the discourse of Prophet Muhammad. The very nature of assigning a mission to a Prophet automatically involves obedience. Obedience means acceding and responding to a demand. Rhetoricians and grammarians identify various kinds of demands. For instance, one can wish for something impossible, like the saying of the poet

I wish the stars would approach me so that I could reorganize them into

Necklaces of praise; my words would never satisfy you in describing them

---

(1) Related by At-Tirmidhi in Al-'Ilm; it was also related by Ahmad and Ibn Majah

Stars will never approach or come close. This is also similar to the saying of the poet:

I wish youth would one day come back so
I could tell it about what old age did to me.

This is a kind of demand wherein the thing demanded, though desirable, is not likely or may never happen. An interrogative structure is a kind of request because we use it to request for information. This is like when you ask someone you are visiting, 'Who of the family is home?' In contrast, to command is to tell someone to do something; or you may even ask someone to avoid something—then it is a prohibition. In short, obedience is to respond to the demand placed on you by someone else. The one placing the demand on you either requests or forbids you to do certain things. Obedience in an absolute, general sense only applies to the obedience of the servant to his Lord. You may also say, yet in a less absolute sense, that the son obeyed his father, the student obeyed his teacher, or the worker obeyed his mentor. All of these are examples of relating obedience to the one obeyed. However, if you use the word obedience in an absolute sense, it refers to the obedience of the servant to Allah. This is the safest and soundest form of obedience, why? The reason is that whenever anyone commands or forbids you from doing anything, it invites a doubt of whether that command would benefit him or not. However, if the one who asked you to do or refrain from a specific act is the All-Sufficient Who stands in no need of the fruit of your work, then know that the value of such a demand is indubitable. What arouses one's doubts about obeying a particular command or proscription is the fear that the commander has made the order for a benefit that will accrue to him or, in case of a proscription, that the proscription will either benefit or fend harm off the one commanding. But if the commander enjoys the attributes of absolute power before you have even come into existence, you must know that your entire existence, your work or your abstinence from work will not accrue anything to Him. Obedience to such a commander is thus the safest and most trusted kind of obedience.

Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him related that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Whoever obeys me, obeys Allah; whoever disobeys me, disobeys Allah.'(1)

---

(1) Related by Ibn Abu Hatim; it was also related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

The hypocrites are the ones who cannot endure light because they are accustomed to living in darkness. They are also disturbed by the presence of justice because they are endeared to the life of injustice. For this reason, they try to find any pretext to inhibit this religion. Hence, they said: ‘Did not you hear your friend; he is on the vicinity of polytheism. He tells us not to worship anyone but Allah, but at the same time, he is making himself a lord to whom love and obedience are due.’

Therefore, the True Lord revealed to His Prophet Muhammad: ‘He who obeys the Messenger has obeyed Allah.’ Obedience here is not attributed to the person of Prophet Muhammad because it is either due to His mission in communicating Allah’s message in partial texts or communicating Allah’s message through the general authorization he was granted. Since it is a delivery of Allah’s message through a general authorization to legislate, this implies that Allah Glorified is He has entrusted him with decreeing religious laws.

What is the opposite of obedience? It is disobedience and refusal. We have seen that people are divided into two groups in terms of their attitude towards Prophet Muhammad. There is a group that obeys him in all that he instructs. As for the matters about which no commands or proscriptions have been revealed, they are considered among the permissible. In other words, you have the choice of doing or not doing. Those who properly respond to Prophet Muhammad, in the sense of obeying him in all the dos and don’ts, are the ones who embrace the path that Allah has revealed to him. Those who do not obey Prophet Muhammadare the ones who turn their back upon this path and try to inhibit its application.

Consider how the True Lord Glorified is He protects Prophet Muhammad. Allah the Exalted says: ‘but those who turn away - We have not sent you over them as a guardian.’ Concerning the one who turns away and refuses to obey the Prophet, know Muhammad that the True Lord has not sent you to force them to believe in Him. There is a difference between ‘sent you,’ ‘sent you to them’ and ‘sent over them.’ The first means that your mission is only to communicate Allah’s message to them. In contrast, ‘sent over them’ means to force them to do so and so. This means that you should always bear in mind, Muhammad, that we have sent you to the people to communicate to them Allah’s message, and not be their keeper; thus, whoever wants may obey, and whoever does not may not. Therefore, do not overstrain yourself and think that we have sent you to force them to believe, and assign to yourself a task that Allah has not assigned you. 'Not upon you, [O Muhammad], is [responsibility for] their guidance, but Allah guides whom He wills.' (al-Baqara: 272)

The True Lord also says: 'So remind, [O Muhammad]; you are only a reminder. (21) You are not over them a controller. (22)' (al-Ghashiya: 21-22) In another verse, He also says: 'and you are not over them a tyrant.' (Qaf: 45) Know, Muhammad, that you cannot force them to obey Allah. Coercion contradicts with the essence of the individual accountability. It also contradicts with the idea of embracing faith voluntarily. 'We have not sent you over them as a guardian.' The word 'guardian' reflects how far concerned Prophet Muhammad was.

The True Lord asserts this matter in the interest of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him because Allah Glorified is He has explained to us to what extent Prophet Muhammad was preoccupied with the well-being of his followers, and how he wanted all of them to be observing, obedient believers. For this reason, the True Lord says: 'Perhaps, [O Muhammad], you would kill yourself with grief that they will not be believers.' (ash-Shu'ara': 3) They refused to believe; therefore, Allah Glorified is He explains to Prophet Muhammad: Be comforted; all what you are required to do is to deliver My message to the people. This alleviated the burden of Prophet Muhammad's mission.

We also notice that all the reproach Allah addressed to His messenger is not because he violated His commands, but because he has taken upon himself a responsibility that the message of Allah has not required him to do. This is similar to those who raise the story of Ibn Umm Maktum. They claim that Allah reproached the Prophet because he committed a mistake. To those who make such an allegation, we say: Prophet Muhammad wanted the most honourable and courageous men of the Quraysh to believe in him. Ibn Umm Maktum embraced Islam and came to him to inquire about a number of questions. It was easier for the Prophet to deal with Ibn Umm Maktum rather than the elite who opposed and antagonized him. But the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him preferred the more difficult alternative to the easier one. It is as if Allah Glorified is He says: Why do you torment yourself, Muhammad? It is not up to you whether or not they choose to purify themselves. This means: Why do you overburden yourself? Allah Glorified is He reproached Prophet Muhammad for his own advantage, not because he violated His commands.

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He told His Prophet: ‘We have not sent you over them as a guardian’ because He wanted to alleviate the burden of Prophet Muhammad. The guardian is the one who takes care of the one to whom he delivers the commands of Allah and adheres to His path. If the latter deviates, He will straighten him. Allah Glorified is He thus explains that He has sent Prophet Muhammad to deliver His message to them. Afterwards, people are then free to embrace it or not.

Therefore, the guardian assumes a dominating and prevailing role, as Allah Glorified is He says in another verse; the dominating or the mighty is the one who forces people to believe. The discourse here is concerned with the proper obedience to Allah. It means that your faculties should act in accordance with the commands of Allah Glorified is He. Obedience is not merely to say: ‘O Prophet Muhammad, we are obedient,’ but then try to breach such obedience. Obedience is not a mere verbal claim; it is carried out by all the limbs. The obedience of only the tongue, without the rest of the limbs, is not deemed a sign of faith. For this reason, the True Lord subsequently says:

وَيَقُولُونَ طَاعَةٌ فَإِذَا بَرَزُوا۟ مِنْ عِندِكَ بَيَّتَ طَآئِفَةٌ مِّنْهُمْ غَيْرَ ٱلَّذِى تَقُولُ ۖ وَٱللَّهُ
يَكْتُبُ مَا يُبَيِّتُونَ ۖ فَأَعْرِضْ عَنْهُمْ وَتَوَكَّلْ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ۚ وَكَفَىٰ بِٱللَّهِ وَكِيلًا ﴿٨١﴾

They say, ‘We obey you,’ but as soon as they leave your presence, some of them scheme by night to do other than what you said. God records what they scheme, so leave them alone, and put your trust in God: He is sufficient protector [81]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 81)

In this verse, the True Lord explains to His Prophet, Muhammad: you will deal with a faction of the nation to whom you are sent to preach Islam; however, the people that respond to you are the people that actually believe in Allah and His Prophet, Muhammad. When you command or demand something of the latter, they will say: ‘We obey you.’ This means that they are always in a state of obedience to your commands. 'But when they leave you, a group of them spend the night determining to do other than what you say.' Baraza—the Arabic word here translated as 'leave'—means going to al-baraz; al-baraz means a vast piece of land. For this reason, a warrior may say to a rival challenging him: 'ubruz meaning come out of your fortification. In the past, the Arabs did not use to have restrooms in their own houses. Whenever they needed to go to the restroom, they used to go out in the wilderness. This is why the word buraz is the root of the word indicating excreting in the wilderness.

The verse means that when they leave you, they ponder over the command to obey and realize how onerous and exhausting it is. They thus conceal their intention to violate your commands. We know that the word bayt means the dwelling and shelter wherein one lives and to which one resorts for comfort and rest. The best time for rest and respite is at night. Thus, they called the house where we live mabit, because we often spend the night in a place composed of a number of rooms and covered by a ceiling. Does this imply that no one can conceal anything during the day? No; it is rather that it is customary that people conceal and hide things at night. They do so to be away from an eye that could witness them; hence, they plan well. The verse may either mean that they were concealing their contrived plans at night, or that they were contriving in secret.

Etymologically, therefore, the Arabic word bayyt (conceal) is often associated with being at home, and the concealment is often associated with night time. Further, the root of the word bayyt (conceal) revolves around the meanings of concealment and covering. Thus, if someone is said to have bayyat (concealed) something, this means that he has concealed something at night or that he has contrived it in secret. Those people declared their obedience to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, but as soon as they left him, some of them schemed by night to do other than what he has said. This means that after leaving him, they contrived something at odds with what he has said. They declare in public that they are obedient, whereas their behaviour is contrary to such declaration. Their attitude reflects disobedience to Prophet Muhammad's commands or obedience to other than what he orders. Thus, if he ordered them to something, they would not do it, and if he ordered them not to do a certain thing, they would do the opposite of his command; they only obeyed their desires and devils. This part of the verse means that a group of them purported that they would always obey Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in all their affairs; yet, they concealed something contrary to what they revealed; that is why they were declared disobedient. Allah then says that He records what they have schemed; that is, He records that according to His Knowledge. The Arabic word yaktubu (record/write) was used in order to tell them that all their deeds are recorded so that they will be able to read what has been written when they examine their own records. If anything had not been recorded, they would have alleged that it had not happened. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to take his precautions against this group because they were bound to dissuade others from accepting the call of Islam. For this reason, Allah explains to His Prophet: 'Those to whom you were sent will not give you victory; rather, it is the One Who sent you who will grant it to you, viz. Allah. Therefore, do not let these deeds dissuade you or impinge on your determination to preach Islam. Should any group do so, leave them; that is, do not talk to them about any of these issues and leave Retribution to Allah because He will grant you triumph and victory despite their violation of your orders. Just make sure that you follow the commands of Allah, Who sent you.

We know that the interest of all Messages is always with the one who dispatches the Message. However, the new message which one receives may exhaust him because it may force him to go against his whims and desires. Therefore, know, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, that the One Who sent you is the guarantee to make you succeed in your preaching of Islam. So, leave them and put your trust in Allah for He is a sufficient Protector for you. Why has Allah prescribed such command upon you, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? The reason is that the believers have a very limited capability and lack in both the means and the ability to plan. However, the One Who sent you is capable of turning the number of your enemies as well as their weapons into soldiers for you, and He is also capable of granting you victory in a way that you would never expect. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He has intended that only a few people embraced Islam upon its advent. Had a lot of people embraced it at the very beginning, some could have said that if a lot of people support injustice, it will prevail. However, if only a few people manage to make a religion successful, this would be a good omen and an indication that you, Messenger Muhammad, did not triumph due to the support of your followers; rather, it was due to the Support of Allah. Subsequently, Allah says:

أَفَلَا يَتَدَبَّرُونَ ٱلْقُرْءَانَۚ وَلَوْ كَانَ مِنْ عِندِ غَيْرِ ٱللَّهِ لَوَجَدُوا۟ فِيهِ ٱخْتِلَٰفًا كَثِيرًا ﴿٨٢﴾

Will they not think about this Quran? If it had been from anyone other than God, they would have found much inconsistency in it [82] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 82)

Whenever you encounter the expression ‘Will they not…’ in the Quran, know that it is intended to blame and reproach the one who does not heed the thing that will follow this expression. This verse implies that they ought to have tried to understand the Quran. As far as the Quran is concerned, there are levels of comprehension including thinking, contemplation, remembrance, knowledge and reasoning. All of these words were used in the Quran: ‘Will they not try to know…’ (al-Baqara: 77), ‘Will they not try to reason…’ (Ya Sin: 68), ‘Will they not try to remember…’ (al-An‘am: 80), ‘Will they not try to contemplate…’ (al-An‘am: 50)? Therefore, there is a distinction among thinking, contemplation, remembrance, reasoning or knowledge.

When someone addressing you asks you to try to understand something, this means that he is confident that were you to exert yourself intellectually, you would reach the desired truth. But if someone wants to deceive you, he will not induce your cognitive abilities. For example, when you walk into the store of a textiles merchant to buy a piece of fabric, the merchant will offer his goods to you. In order to convince you that the fabric that he is trying to sell you is natural and not synthetic, he wets it and tries to tear it to demonstrate how resistant it really is. By doing so, the merchant excites you and alerts your cognitive abilities. Inasmuch as he does so, this indicates that he is confident that critically examining his claim is in his own interest. If examining the cloth had not been in his interest, he would have tried to deceive you, but he told you to look closely and test his claim.

Allah commands us to think about the Quran which means to examine every thought-provoking matter that your reason comes across to discover the evidence of its truth; this is the first stage. Then, if you discover the evidence of its truth, you should also heed what result would ensue if you did not follow what you have verified. Accordingly, the Arabic word tadabbur (thinking) means to consider the consequences and ramification of things. Therefore, when Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him tells you that Allah is One, you should use your reason to investigate the truth of this message. If you reach such conclusion, you should immediately believe that there is only One God. Do not ever say that this is a sophisticated or luxurious matter because the fire will be your punishment if you do not believe in the Only God. Thus, tadabbur (thinking) in this context means to investigate the ramifications of things and to try to envision the consequences that may ensue from them—this is a stage that follows contemplation (tafakkur). Contemplation requires that you recall what you have previously known concerning an object in case you have forgotten anything about it. Contemplation comes first and then understanding follows. For instance, you may say to your son 'In order to have a bright future and become an engineer or a medical doctor, he has to study and work assiduously.' Accordingly, the child contemplates being in the high status that the distinguished people in every vocation in the society enjoy; and thus he works hard.

Thus, the first stage is to contemplate over the matter you are considering and the second is thinking about it. If you slip into oblivion, we immediately tell you to recall what you have pondered over, and the results you have reached; also, think about the consequences that may follow from the matter you are considering. These are all mental processes. Reason starts with contemplating and it then tries to consider the consequences of the matter which it has contemplated. Afterwards, the memory enables you to recall what you have missed and what was once the focus of your consciousness and then was marginalised. So, if you reason about something on your own, it is then said that you perceive it rationally. If you understand what someone else has rationally conceived, this means that you know what that other person has rationally perceived.

Therefore, it is not necessary that you have reached every piece of knowledge using your own reason; rather, you may have taken the fruit of the reasoning that others had developed. That is why when Allah denies that someone may encompass the entire knowledge; this implies that the latter is basically incapable of all rational conception. The reason is that knowledge indicates one’s capacity to perceive what others reached using their capabilities without necessarily understanding the laws, rules and fundamentals that others employed to acquire such knowledge. He only knows how to benefit from and utilise it. In our daily lives, we notice that the illiterate may use technology and electricity; thus, they avail themselves of the knowledge of others; however, they cannot rationally conceive of the capacity of the scientist. Hence, the realm of knowledge is vaster than that of reasoning because it does not depend merely on the fruits of your reason. In the realm of knowledge, you may know and apprehend what others have rationally conceived. For this reason, when Allah addresses this issue, He reproaches some people because when they are commanded to follow what Allah has revealed, they reject it, saying that they would follow the faith of their forefathers, even if the latter had not used their intellectual capacity and had been devoid of guidance (al-Baqara: 170). In the same vein, Allah, in another verse, condemns some people for following the faith of their forefathers, even though they knew nothing, and were devoid of all guidance. (al-Ma‘ida: 104)

In the first verse, Allah Glorified is He states that they did not use their reason as they said that they would follow what their forefathers believed, without stating that it was sufficient for them. In the second verse, however, they said that it was enough for them to follow what their forefathers believed in. Thus, they insisted on rejecting and adamantly refused to submit to anything apart from their forefathers’ beliefs. Accordingly, Allah has reproached them for following their forefathers even though they knew nothing and were devoid of all guidance. Here, Allah has negated that their forefathers possessed any knowledge, which is more general than negating their capability of reasoning because negating the latter would mean a negation of their capability to deduce, but it does not preclude their capacity of availing themselves of what others have deduced.

When Allah Glorified is He encourages the listeners, especially those who violate His Path, to reflect upon the Quran, this means that He wants them to work out their minds in order to apprehend what they listen to. The reason is that Allah knows that if they use their minds to understand what they hear, they will indisputably arrive at the conclusion that He has put forward. However, their public declaration of obedience to Allah and covert scheming—to do other than what the Prophet had ordered—is evidence that they did not think about the Quran. The saying of the Allah, 'will they not think..,' follows after the verse, as if the latter serves as its evidence. If they thought about the Quran, they would know that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was honest when communicating Allah's Message, and that his discourse was true. By Allah, who told Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that they concealed in their hearts or secretly hid at night something other than what they have avowed in his presence? Therefore, had they tried to ponder upon things, they would have realised that Allah is the One Who divulged their secrets, cunning contrivances and what they tried to hide from Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Thus, he was honest in delivering the Message of Allah, and as long as he remained so, that would support the other verse that stated that whoever obeyed Messenger Muhammad obeyed Allah.

Therefore, all verses support each other. When the Quran was revealed in Arabic, Allah has willed that not every Arab who listened to it would embrace it because had all the Arabs embraced Islam, people would have said that their belief in the Quran made them overlook the challenges that the Quran posed to them. However, some Arabs who encountered with the Quran insisted on their disbelief. The disbelievers should be argued with and, therefore, the Quran challenged them to bring forth something the like of the Quran. In another instance, He Glorified is He asked them to bring forth only ten of its chapters, and in a third instance, to bring forth the like of the shortest of its chapter—all of these were challenges posed to them. Would such challenges not provoke their stubbornness? None of them uttered a word; what does this mean? It means that they were convinced of their incapacity to meet the challenges, but they, nevertheless, maintained their disbelief and continued to offend Islam and say what they used to say. In spite of all that, they could not find a response to the Quran. They could have possibly said that Messenger

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him claimed that the Quran is miraculous and exceptionally eloquent, yet he is mistaken in this and that point. Had they been believers, they would have concealed their claims, but they were disbelievers who always tried to spread rumours about mistakes in the Quran. There are also people who do not master the Arabic language and are not well-versed in its eloquence, and yet they try to claim that there are contradictions in the Quran. How can they lay down such claim even though they do not master the Arabic language or its eloquence, and they are not native Arabic speakers? How can they say that the Quran contains contradictions? The disbelieving Arabs were more worthy of such claims because they were well-versed in the Arabic language and they also witnessed the revelation of the Quran. Although they rejected Muhammad's Message, they have never alleged that the Quran contained contradictions. This proves that the allegations of the orientalists were mainly due to their deficient knowledge of the Arabic language.

To those orientalists, we say that the Quran addressed numerous issues to prove its eloquence and rhetorical miracle for those to whom it was originally revealed—since some of them were going to undertake the mission of preaching Islam. The Quran then bore other miracles to non-Arab nations. Therefore, the miracle of the Quran does not only consist in its eloquence; otherwise, someone may say that the Quran is only miraculous for the Arabs and that it has nothing to do with non-Arabs or Romans, for instance? To such person, we respond by asking: does the Quranic miracle consist solely of its rhetorical style? No; its miracle extended to matters that all people, irrespective of their languages, would assent to. For instance, it demonstrated that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, in accordance with the testimony of his rivals, never left the Arabian Peninsula except with the trade caravans to Syria. Further, no one could prove that he learned anything from a teacher. All his contemporaries were aware of these facts. Allah has even used the mistake they committed against them by stating that their claim that a person has taught him is totally false because the language of such person would be foreign while this revelation is in clear Arabic. (an-Nahl: 103)

The person that the disbelievers referred to was either a slave boy who was owned by Huwytib ibn 'Abd Al-'Uzza who converted to Islam and became a good Muslim, to another Roman slave boy or to Salman Al-Farisi

Allah be pleased with him. Hence, Allah explains that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not attended by any tutors and did not go on journeys. Afterwards, the Quran posed another challenge not using logic, language, eloquence or explanation, but rather, through a comprehensive matter for all minds; that is, the Book of the universe, events and incidents that all humans share.

Universal events, as we know, are covered by temporal veils. Events that took place in the past are veiled by the past time—whoever was living in those days knew about them, and whoever was not living in those days would not know about them. Thus, events of the past are veiled by the past time. Similarly, the events of the future are veiled by the future time as they have not happened yet. Even the present time that stretches ahead of us, Allah veils it through the spatial dimension. However, the Quran manages to penetrate all these veils through its diverse techniques. For instance, it poses a challenge by saying that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not present on the western side of the mountain when Allah has given His Command to Musa (Moses) (al-Qasas: 44). Allah also says that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not live among the people of Madyan or recite His Revelation to them. (al-Qasas: 45) In addition, He Glorified is He says that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had never recited any scripture before revealing the Quran, and nor had he written any scripture down, lest those who follow falsehood might have had cause to doubt (al-'Ankabut: 48).

The expression '…you were not present…' is used in the Quran to relate events that took place in the past. By Allah, had they suspected that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had some kind of knowledge or that he was attended by a tutor, would they have kept silent? Definitely, they would not; the reason is that the disbelievers wanted to exploit any gap that they could find to assail Islam. Afterwards, the Quran penetrates the veil of the future time when Muslims were incapable of protecting themselves. Allah says, 'Their forces will be routed and they will turn tail and flee.' (al-Qamar: 45) When this verse was revealed, 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him inquired about the forces which would be routed. The verses of the Quran then continued to be revealed, recited and memorized. Eventually, the battle of Badr took place and the forces of the disbelievers were routed. Another verse was revealed about Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira who was cruel and a tyrant. Allah says that He will brand him on the snout (al-Qalam: 16). When this verse was revealed, some Muslims wondered whether they were capable of reaching and laying their hands on this tyrant. After that, in the battle of Badr, they found that he was struck on his nose by a sword, and that the sword left an indelible mark on it. So, who penetrated the veil of the future? It is Allah and not Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. If you deliberated matters and tried to understand them properly, you would realise that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only delivered the Message of Allah as put forward by the Quran. You would also realise that the Quran is the discourse of Allah to Whom eternity, past, present and future are irrelevant, for He is Timeless. In this context, the Quran revealed that they say inwardly, 'Why does Allah not punish us for what we are saying?' (al-Mujadala: 8) They said this inwardly, and no one heard them. But the Quran was revealed to divulge what they have only said inwardly. What should they have said then? If they had thought about the Quran, they would have known that Allah Glorified is He is the One Who informed His Messenger Muhammad of what they said inwardly. Thus, the verse that is asking them to think about the Quran is followed by the verse that reveals their secret scheming to do other than what the prophet told them to do. Had they deliberated and tried to understand the Quran, they would have known that Allah, Who sent Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with guidance and the religion of the truth, is the One Who apprised him of what they concealed. Those who do not have a proper comprehension of the language may rejoice at a seeming contradiction that they thought existed in the Quran. They may say that a single verb attributed to a single agent cannot simultaneously be negated and affirmed; if you negate it, you cannot affirm it, and if you affirm it, you cannot negate it. However, the Quran contains similar cases.

They thought that the following saying of Allah involves such contradiction: '…when you [Prophet] threw [sand at them] it was not your throw [that defeated them] but Allah's…' (al-Anfal: 17). The verse negates that Prophet Muhammad threw and simultaneously affirms the same act. The Quran uses the same verb which is ‘throw’, and the subject of the verb is Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; so, how come the Quran affirms and negates a verb attributed to a single subject in one verse? To those who think in this manner, we say that you only thought so because you do not master the Arabic language. However, those who master the Arabic language, and are fluent in it, naturally and spontaneously did not think the same way when they heard such discourse, indicating that they properly understood its meaning.

But why should we revert back to the pre-Islamic era to understand the meaning intended in this verse? Let us adduce an example from our daily lives. For instance, if you tell your son, ‘Study! The exams are impending; I will stay to watch you and ensure whether or not you will study well.’ Your son may then pick up a book, turn its pages and nod his head constantly. After a while, he may call you and say, ‘Come and see what I have studied so far.’ You may then grab the book and ask your son a couple of questions about the material he claims to have covered, but he may fail to answer. Upon noticing such failure, you may tell him, ‘You have studied and, at the same time, you have not studied.’ This means that you have formally studied; however, the result of your studying is nil. Your statement, ‘You have studied,’ is an affirmation of the action of studying on his part. In contrast, your statement: ‘You have not studied,’ is a simultaneous negation of the same act. If a verb attributed to a single subject is simultaneously affirmed and negated in an eloquent discourse, know that the context in which it is negated is different from the context in which it is affirmed.

The saying of Allah in such verse means that when Messenger Muhammad engaged in war, he grabbed a handful of pebbles and then threw it at the enemy’s army. Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him undertook the formal aspect of the process, but was he capable of causing the pebbles to reach every individual in the enemy’s army? This matter is definitely beyond his capability. Thus, the saying of Allah means that he performed the act of throwing on the formal level, but on the objective level, the ultimate effect of such act of throwing is due to Allah Glorified is He.

Further, in another verse, Allah says that ‘most people do not know’ (ar-Rum: 6) which indicates negation. However, Allah immediately says afterwards that they know but the outer surface of this present life (ar-Rum: 7). The opponents of Islam might wonder: how is it possible that Allah says that most people do not know and then says that they know immediately afterwards? We reply by affirming that people do not have beneficial knowledge. His saying that they know only the 'outer surface of this present life' means that they do not know the essence of things or their ramifications. Therefore, if a verb is affirmed at one time and negated another time, it must be that the aspects, about which the negation and affirmation are made, differ.

Another good example is the saying of Allah that on the Day of Judgment neither mankind nor the jinn will be asked about their sins (ar-Rahman: 39). The Quran says in another instance that they will be halted for questioning (as-Saffat: 24) which means that they will be asked. To those sceptics, we say that they should first acquire a good knowledge of the Arabic language. Do teachers not ask their students? Thus, a knowledgeable person may ask the learner to evaluate what the latter knows and to make him acknowledge something—and not because the knowledgeable wants to know what the learner already knows. When Allah says that they will be questioned, do not ever think that He is asking because He does not know. He is rather asking so that you would acknowledge; indeed, the proof based on acknowledgment is more powerful than that based on examination and inquiry. Accordingly, if you notice that something is being negated and affirmed simultaneously, know that the aspects—to which the negation and affirmation are attributed—are different. Here is another example: we may adduce in demonstration of the miraculous nature of the Quran; Allah says, '…do not kill your children in fear of poverty'— We will provide for you and for them…' (al-An'am: 151). In another verse Allah says, '…We shall provide for them and for you…' (al-Isra': 31).

The one who is not well-versed in the Arabic language may wonder, 'Which is more eloquent? If the first one is more eloquent, the second would not be, and if the second is, the first is not.' To this person, we respond that you have considered the end of each verse only. You should consider the end of every verse along with its beginning. It is true that the end of each verse is different because Allah says in the first verse that He provides for you as well as for them, while in the second verse He says that He provides for them as well as for you. But is the beginning of each verse the same? No; the beginning of each verse is different because Allah commands us in the first one not to kill our children in fear of poverty. It is as if poverty already exists. For this reason, the one addressed was concerned with his livelihood before he was concerned with the sustenance of his child. Thus, He is afraid lest he should beget a child, he might not be able to feed that child because he is poor. Therefore, Allah first assures him about his livelihood and then assures him about the sustenance of his child, saying that He shall provide sustenance for you as well as for them. By contrast, Allah has not mentioned the same thing in the second verse. He rather says, ‘Hence, do not kill your children for fear of poverty…’, as if the father is afraid of losing his wealth and becoming poor upon begetting a child. Since He has said, ‘…for fear of poverty,’ this means that poverty does not exist. Rather, the father is afraid lest poverty may befall him upon begetting a child. Thus, Allah has explained to him that he should not be afraid, for Allah will bring about the sustenance of the child (al-Isra’: 31). Thus, if you consider both the beginning and the end of each verse, you will notice that the relation between them is integral and harmonious. Some of them try to find a way to question and cast suspicions on the eloquence of the Quran.

Further, one may wonder why Allah commands us in a verse to bear anything that happens steadfastly (Luqman: 17) and in another verse He says that if one is patient in adversity and forgives—this is one of the greatest things (ash-Shura: 43). To those who argue, we say that you did not understand the truth of these verses. In the first verse, Allah commands us to bear in patience whatever may befall us, which implies bearing the calamities wherein you face no rival. As long as you do not have a rival, what should you do? If you have a rival, you may be tempted to avenge yourself. For this reason, heed the first verse because it obviously befits a situation wherein you do not face a rival or adversary. In the second verse, Allah says that this is indeed one of the greatest things. This formulation better fits a situation wherein you face a rival or an adversary because you will endure both the calamity and the rival who caused it, for whenever you see him you will get provoked and enraged. For this reason, the verse strongly stresses the importance of patience and forgiveness.

This is the rationale of the orientalists who want to cast doubts about the Quran. They tell us, 'Look at the Quran from a sanctifying perspective. However, if you consider the Quran more scrupulously, you will identify numerous contradictions in it.' We ask these orientalists to mention to us these contradictions; we have already refuted them in the context of our reflections on the Quran. Some of them may, for instance, say that when the Quran addressed the issue of the creation of the heavens and the earth, all the verses dealing with this matter asserted that Allah has created them in six days. However, they claim that one finds a discrepancy upon examining the verses that address the details of creation. In those verses, Allah states that He has created the earth in two days. He then placed solid mountains on it, blessed it, measured out its varied provisions for all who seek them—all in four days. Then, He turned to the sky, which was smoke—He said to it and the earth, 'Come into being, willingly or not,' and they said, 'We come willingly'—and in two days He formed the seven heavens, and assigned an order to each. (Fussilat: 9-12). Upon examining these verses, the orientalists remarked that creation took a total of eight days and, therefore, claimed that the Quran entails a contradiction. To these orientalists, we say that you did not understand the meaning of these verses. When Allah Glorified is He says that He has created the earth in two days, has He talked about what would sustain life on earth? When He has talked about the earth, He only said that He has created the earth in two days and that He then placed solid mountains on it. This refers to the completion of the creation of the earth because He is talking about the earth. Then, Allah says that He has placed solid mountains on it, blessed it and measured out its varied provisions. All of these pertain to the earth. Thus, the second stage is that of the completion of earth's creation. Initially, Allah created the earth as a planet; afterwards, He placed on it solid mountains and dispensed the means of subsistence to everyone on earth and blessed all of this. But, how many days did it take Him to accomplish this task? It took Him four days; it is as if the first two days were included in the four because this is the completion of the earth's creation.

To Allah pertains the supreme and most exalted parables. You may, for instance, say that you have travelled from here to Isma'ilia [an Egyptian city] in one hour and to Port Said [another Egyptian city] in two hours. Your statement that you travelled to Port Said in two hours means that the first hour was counted. Thus, those orientalists did not understand the Quran. For this reason, Allah says, ‘Will they not think about the Quran?’ If you encounter something in the Quran that on a superficial reading arouses your suspicion, you will have to work it out in your mind and ponder over it until you realise that, if there is any contradiction, it is due to your own understanding and not to the Quran itself. The reason is that the Quran is the discourse of the One Who would always truly recount whichever story He tells; the One from Whom nothing is concealed; the One Who is not veiled by the past, present or the place. Allah admonishes them to think about Quran, for if it had been from anyone other than Allah, they would have found much inconsistency in it. The Quran is a big Book that encompasses one hundred and fourteen chapters. By Allah, find a novelist or writer who is capable of writing something like it? If you consider the eloquence of any writer, you will find that such a writer will be strong in certain aspects and weak in others. Afterwards, you may notice that he did not properly express the meaning of something; he may, for instance, say something and contradict it a few lines later as what Abu Al-‘Ala Al-Ma‘aryy did when he said:

Days shatter us as if we were
Like glass that cannot be fixed.

When he composed this verse, he did not believe in Resurrection.

However, upon restoring his sanity, he said:

Both the astrologist and the physician claimed
Those bodies are not going to be resurrected

So I say to both: if your claims turn out to be true, I will not be a loser; and if my claim turns out to be true, you are the ones to incur the loss.

Thus, contradictions emerge from the one whose opinions are liable to change; the one who may have an opinion and then modify it based on his experience or the reality. But Allah does not change, and His Knowledge also does not change; He is the True Lord. Thus, contradiction emanates either from someone who lies because he did not restrict his opinion to what is real, or from someone who is constantly changing. He may maintain a particular opinion and then change his stance towards it. But, Allah never changes. He says about this truism, 'Will they not think about this Quran? If it had been from anyone other than Allah, they would have found much inconsistency'

In fact, we find that all issues discussed in the Quran are essentially presented as texts that He has revealed to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, these issues are concerned with the nature of the cosmos that is constantly changing. Some of the changes are caused by those who believe in the Quran and some by those who do not believe. But have you ever come across any matter discussed in the Quran that was nullified or contradicted by a cosmic discovery even if the latter was made by a non-believer? No, there is nothing of this sort. For instance, in the west, they invented after the First World War a cylinder that was capable of fragmenting individual substances and atoms. This was the first stage in the process of fragmenting the atom. But the Quran uses the atom as an example of the smallest entity; the saying of Allah the Almighty indicates that he who will make a good deed, even if it is like an atom, will be rewarded. (az-Zalzala: 7)

When the atom was fragmented, some Muslim scholars were taken aback. They were afraid that something smaller than the atom was going to be discovered. Thus, some claimed that the Quran was revealed in an age wherein the smallest particle for the old Arabs was the atom. However, the Almighty Allah eternally knows that science aspires to progress to the point at which it can break down the atom. Thus the Almighty Allah says that He is the only one who knows the unseen so nothing would be out of His knowledge, even if it is a thing smaller or bigger than a weight of an atom, wherever it will be, since everything had been written in a clear Book. (Saba': 3)

Those who said so pondered over the Quran and understood the discourse of the Almighty Allah for whom all times are equal: the future is like the past, and His knowledge is not function of or bound to the differences among the future, the past or the present. Further the Almighty Allah explained to us that there may be something smaller than the atom. Accordingly, if they break down what has resulted from breaking down the atom, the result of this process will also be mentioned in the Quran. For instance, let us reflect upon social issues. You will find that the adversaries of Islam are trying to find a way to exploit them to assail Islam. You will also find that those who do not understand Islam follow in their footsteps and babble that the views propounded in the Quran no longer befit the age. The Almighty Allah says that those people do not even ponder over the Quran; if it had been from anyone other than Him, they would have found much contradiction.(an-Nisa': 82)

Here is another example. Some people say that there are differences in the readings of the Quran as in the case of the saying of the Almighty Allah, 'Lord of the Day of Judgment!' (al-Fatiha: 4) Someone may say: Some people may read it as malik instead of maalik—the Arabic word in the verse translated as Lord. However, this person did not notice that there is something that we call the order of priority. The meaning of maalik is identical to that of malik. But can someone claim that the Quran was not issued by the Almighty Allah? So, He replies that if the Quran had been from anyone other than Him, it would have contained much contradiction. That is, 'had the Quran been issued from anyone other than Allah, could any other than the Almighty Allah bring about the Quran?' No, no one can. The Quran can only come from the Almighty Allah; were it issued from any but the Almighty Allah, they would surely have found much contradiction in it.

The saying of Allah Glorified is He that 'why do they not ponder over the Quran?' is regarded to be an ennoblement and honouring of the human being. It is as if the Almighty Allah created man and endowed him with a faculty that, if used properly, enables him to arrive at the essence and realities that lead to the best understanding of the commandments of the Almighty Allah. This is a testimony in favour of the human being; it is as if man is equipped with a thinking tool. If man uses such tool, he will be able to arrive at the essence of things. The Almighty Allah only wants us to use this tool—such as in case of pondering over the Quran, reaching the conclusion that it cannot be possible for it to have been issued from any source other than the Almighty Allah. The Quran is the discourse of the Almighty Allah, and thus it is indicative of His Character and Attributes. Further, the Character of the Perfect Being is perfect, whereas contradiction is contrary to perfection. The meaning of contradiction, in this context, is to find a verse that contradicts another; this is impossible to take place in the Quran because this indicates that the one who said the first verse forgot about what he meant by it when he uttered the other. That is, He put forward a verse that negates the previous. Accordingly, if the one who is speaking were perfect, he would surely keep in mind what he had initially said to avoid contradictions in any of his following statements. Therefore, there is no contradiction or conflict in the Quran simply because it has been made by the Almighty Allah. Subsequently the Almighty Allah says:

وَإِذَا جَآءَهُمۡ أَمۡرٞ مِّنَ ٱلۡأَمۡنِ أَوِ ٱلۡخَوۡفِ أَذَاعُواْ بِهِۦۖ وَلَوۡ رَدُّوهُ إِلَى ٱلرَّسُولِ
وَإِلَىٰٓ أُوْلِي ٱلۡأَمۡرِ مِنۡهُمۡ لَعَلِمَهُ ٱلَّذِينَ يَسۡتَنۢبِطُونَهُۥ مِنۡهُمۡۗ وَلَوۡلَا فَضۡلُ ٱللَّهِ
عَلَيۡكُمۡ وَرَحۡمَتُهُۥ لَٱتَّبَعۡتُمُ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنَ إِلَّا قَلِيلٗا ﴿٨٣﴾

Whenever news of any matter comes to them, whether concerning peace or war, they spread it about; if they referred it to the Messenger and those in authority among them, those seeking its meaning would have found it out from them. If it were not for God’s bounty and mercy towards you, you would almost all have followed Satan [83]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 83)

Allah Glorified is He teaches the faithful a method and a style that would guarantee and secure for them the secrecy of their intentions and actions—especially when they are approaching a severe conflict and have fierce enemies. Thus, Allah the Almighty trains them to deal with their problems wisely to be able to confront spies. This verse refers to the case when a piece of news about any matter pertaining to the believers or their rivals reaches the believers. For instance, they may hear that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him will depart secretly towards certain destinations, and that such tribe is waiting to join him. When this piece of news reaches the weak hypocrites, they may spread it to others. As a result, the rivals of the Prophet may engulf the tribe—that promised to fight on Allah’s Messenger’s side—to keep it from going out and meeting Prophet Muhammad. They may also say that Prophet Muhammad is about to leave Medina to do something; that is how they spread the news. Thus the Almighty Allah explains to them: do not do this, especially in case of issues related to your interest as a group—that embraced a certain course of life, and you want it to prevail against its enemies.

So, do not divulge or spread any matter that you hear about before discussing it with your leader or with those whom your leader deems worthy—in this case the Almighty Allah means any [secret] matter pertaining to security—indicating that this admonition is in their interest. By contrast, fear refers to their enemy—indicating a matter that jeopardises their interest. However, the Quran states that they spread words about matters irrespective of its nature.

The verb 'dha'hu has a different meaning than the verb 'dha'bihi when it is followed by the prepositional phrase bihi—the verb and preposition here translated as to spread it broadly or publicly. The former means to say something in a general sense, whereas the latter indicates that the subject [of the sentence] talks about the object [of the sentence] to everyone he encounters. It is as if the piece of news is announcing itself—on its own. It is as if you tell other people about something, and they do not spread it further. However, 'dha' bihi indicates that the spreading of the news accompanies the news, from a limited sphere to an unlimited one, or from ears that respect its privacy to ears that are consistently trying to pursue and expose it. The Almighty Allah then says that if they had consulted the Prophet (Muhammad) concerning such matter, the Apostle—or those he appointed—were the ones entitled to decide whether or not the matter should have been divulged. Then the Almighty Allah says about the entitled ones who can draw correct conclusions from it—would have known about it (istinbat) —the Arabic verb here translated as deduction derived from an-nabt which means the appearance of something after being hidden and concealed; istinbat means to work assiduously to extract water. The word an-nabt means the first amount of water to come out, while the well is being dug. Thus, instead of using the word to refer to tangible things—as in the case of water—it is here used to refer to intangible things; that is, the news. We also started to use the word in sciences. For instance, you may give a student a geometry problem and provide the given. Next, the student will deliberate on the given information and draw a conclusion from it in order to solve the geometry problem. This process is called the process of inferring or deducing something from nothing or istinbat.

In this context the Almighty Allah explains to them: 'If you hear news about any secret matter pertaining to security or fear, do not spread it broadly before discussing it with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him or those whom the Messenger of Allah has given authority because they are the ones who can intelligently make the right judgment on the matter and decide on whether or not you should spread the matter publicly.

The Almighty Allah then says that if He had not bestowed His favour and mercy upon you, you would have followed Satan—except for a few. This statement indicates that they may have broadly spread some events that took place; yet, they were saved from the consequences of their deeds due to the bounty and grace of Allah Glorified is He. Among the secret matters they divulged were the news about the intention of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him to conquer Mecca. They did so even though the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him used to conceal the identity of he city he intended to conquer whenever he launched an expedition by claiming that he was setting out to conquer another city; he thus hid his actual destination so that he could surprise his enemies and defeat them—without giving them a chance to prepare to confront him, sabotaging their ability to resist.

Consider the mercy involved in the battle of al-Fath. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him commanded the Muslims to prepare to conquer Mecca. When the people of Mecca realised that Messenger Muhammad had mobilised an army that they could not confront, they decided to give in and surrender; this was an act of mercy towards them. Hatib ibn Abu Balta'ah heard about this incident and sent a message to the Quraysh. The message was picked up by a woman who mounted on her camel and headed out. Then, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard about the news and summoned 'Ali and his Companions, telling them: there is a woman crossing the meadow of Khakh who carries a letter from Hatib ibn Abu Balta'ah informing the Quraysh of our impending attack. They went, caught the woman and asked her about the message, but she denied it. Our master 'Ali Allah be pleased with him then threatened her and managed to get the letter out of her hair. They discovered the letter from Hatib ibn Abu Balta'ah to Quraysh. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then summoned Hatib and asked him: 'Is this your letter?' Hatib replied: 'Yes, O Messenger of Allah.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'What induced you to do so?' Hatib answered: 'By Allah, O Messenger of the Almighty Allah, I knew that the Almighty Allah would grant you victory, and that my letter would not change anything about the course of the battle. Further, I am not from the Quraysh; I am only associated with them and I do not bear any bias or prejudice towards them. I have a child and a family living among them. Thus, I wanted to do something that would make them think favourably of me lest they cause harm to my family. I did not do so due to my infidelity or because I have abjured my religion and relapsed into infidelity after embracing Islam.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then said to him: 'I know you have spoken the truth.'

Accordingly the Almighty Allah Glorified is He wants to base issues concerning faith—especially that which was connected to the relationship between the believers and their enemies—on truth. Thus, matters would not be straightened if everyone divulged and publicly spread whatever he heard. Rather, people should always refer the matter to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or to those with whom the Messenger of Allah has given authority because they are the ones capable of taking the right decision considering their conditions. Then, they may even give you permission to divulge the matter broadly and reveal the news or they may even tell you to say other things about the same matter—in case there is a way and there is need for misleading the enemies. This indicates that even though Allah Glorified is He has guaranteed victory to the believers and told them not to fear their enemies because He is their advocate and the One Who grants victory, Allah wants the believers to pursue the proper means to achieve victory—even if they depend on Him as the ultimate source of their victory.

Allah the Almighty then says that if it were not for His favour and mercy, they would have followed Satan except for a few. This statement indicates that they were the ones responsible for what happened, but the Almighty Allah's Grace supported and protected them. Thus, despite their deeds, He Glorified is He did not rule that they should suffer the repercussions or negative consequences that could harm them. We also know that, once an exceptional form follows a verb, we ought to immediately inquire as to whether the exception refers to the subject of the verb or the verb itself. In this verse, we immediately notice the saying of the Almighty Allah: 'you would have followed Satan, except for a few.' Thus, we wonder: Was it the case that a few followed Satan whereas the majority did not? Does 'a few' in this context refer to the event, the cause or the subject of the event? If we consider that 'a few' referred to the event, the verse would mean that they mainly followed Satan, except for a few things, wherein they followed the natural inclination that Allah has given them. By contrast, if ‘a few’ referred to the subject of the event, the verse means that all of them—but a few of them have a sound instinct—would follow Satan.

It has been authenticated that, before the Messenger of Allah’s mission with the Message of Islam, some people gathered and deliberated about the condition of jahiliyah (ignorance) they were living before Islam: including worshiping idols and totems. Then, they decided that it did not make sense to them. Accordingly, some of them quit such practices completely, while others set out to seek true knowledge of religion in other countries. For example, Zayd Ibn ‘Amr ibn Nufayl, Abi As-Salt and Qus ibn Sa‘idah were all led by their instinct that the idolatry of the Arabs in the Pre-Islamic period was not correct, and that the Arabs should not continue to practice it. Those few people who were enlightened were called Al-Hunafa’; some of them, however, continued to worship idols until the Almighty Allah enlightened them with the Message of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Thus, when the Almighty Allah says that if not for His Favour upon you and His Mercy, you would have followed Satan, except for a few—this means that the Almighty Allah will not, due to His Grace and Mercy, leave any room for the devil to insinuate itself in certain matters. Rather, the Almighty Allah will expose the alliance of Satan with the hypocrites. In doing so, He Glorified is He instructs you how to keep away from the Satan’s way to be on the way of the truth. Such process is only due to the Almighty Allah’s Grace and Mercy. Subsequently the Almighty Allah addresses Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying:

فَقَٰتِلۡ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ لَا تُكَلَّفُ إِلَّا نَفۡسَكَۚ وَحَرِّضِ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَۖ عَسَى ٱللَّهُ
أَن يَكُفَّ بَأۡسَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْۚ وَٱللَّهُ أَشَدُّ بَأۡسٗا وَأَشَدُّ تَنكِيلٗا ﴿٨٤﴾

So [Prophet] fight in God’s way. You are accountable only for yourself. Urge the believers on. God may well curb the power of the disbelievers, for He is stronger in might and more terrible in punishment [84] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 84)

When you encounter a sentence commencing with the fa’ particle, you are to know that it is an effect of the cause that precedes it. For example, consider the saying of the Almighty Allah: 'and in the end He causes him to die and brings him to the grave.' The meaning of this verse is that the grave follows death. Thus, if you encounter the particle fa', you should bear in mind that what precedes it is the cause of what follows it. For this reason, they call it the fa' Sababiiah (causal Fa').

So, what precedent could possibly be the cause for Allah's saying to his Messenger (Muhammad), directing him to fight for His cause holding no responsibility except for himself? In this respect, we say that, as long as the command was fight, we have to look for the previous verses that addressed the question of fighting. the Almighty Allah has said before, 'Therefore let those fight in the way of Allah, who sell this world's life for the hereafter; and whoever fights in the way of Allah, then be the slain or be the victorious, We shall grant him a mighty reward.' (an-Nisa': 75) In another verse, He encouraged the believers by asking them, 'why do you not fight for the sake of Allah?' (an-Nisa': 76)

Thus, He addresses the command to fight to Messenger Muhammad who, in turn, delivered it to the believers. He peace and blessings be upon him only needs to hear Allah's Command once and so as to carry it out immediately. He thus urges the believers to fight for Allah's cause. (an-Nisa': 74) So, whoever is a true believer must believe in Messenger Muhammad since he peace and blessings be upon him was the first one to receive this order of encouraging the believers to fight for Allah's cause [in both verses]. (an-Nisa': 74- 75)

As he peace and blessings upon him was the first to abide by Allah's Commands and Enactments, he, therefore, should be the first to adhere to them even if no one else listened to him. This is evidence of his complete faith in the One Who ordered him to fight the disbelievers. Before commanding the believers to fight, he has to fight alone. For this reason, when our master Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him assumed the Caliphate after the death of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, he insisted on fighting the disbelievers among the Arabs and said: 'If they do not give me what they used to give to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, even if it is little, I will fight them with the sword.' Some of the companions tried to dissuade Abu Bakr from pursuing his intention to fight, but he responded: 'By the Almighty

Allah, if my right hand disobeyed my order to fight them, I would fight them using my left hand.'

Thus, the order came from Allah to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to fight for His sake —calling our attention to the difference between delivering the Almighty Allah's Commands on one hand, and adhering to and executing these commands on the other. Since the Messenger of Allah has received Allah's Commands, he is committed and bound to implementing them first. Subsequently he peace and blessings be upon him should deliver such commands and decrees to the believer—whoever listens to him and believes in him should follow in his footsteps.

Allah the Almighty informs His Prophet Muhammad that he bears no responsibility except for himself; it is an assignment to the Prophet that he should execute and implement Allah's commands and not just deliver them to the people. As far as the latter mission is concerned, Messenger Muhammad is only responsible for delivering Allah's Message to the believers; whether or not they follow and adhere to what he communicates to them is not up to him, and he will not be held accountable for it. However, Messenger Muhammad should commit to fighting for the cause of the Almighty Allah, irrespective of their actions.

Does this mean Prophet Muhammad should leave those who have believed to themselves? No, Allah asked His Messenger to urge them to fight and not leave them to follow their own interests and desires: '…harred (urge) the believers on. Allah may well curb the power of the disbelievers…' (an-Nisa': 84) The Arabic verb harred is derived from al-hurd which refers to a substance that cleanses hands or clothes by removing impurities. It is a command to Prophet Muhammad to understand what it was that could probably keep his companions from fighting and seek to remove from their souls any factors that prevented them from fighting in the cause of Allah. Ponder the words of Allah: '… (Urge) the believers on. Allah may well curb the ba's (power) of the disbelievers…' (an-Nisa': 84). Allah wants to tell His Messenger in this verse that he would not achieve victory due to the greatness of the number of believers with him; rather, the believers are only the means Allah uses to support His Messenger, and triumph comes from Him only: '…victory is only from Allah, the Mighty, the Wise' (Al-'Imran: 126).

The word ba's in the verse we are dealing with encompasses the meanings of power, robustness in fighting wars, cunning plotting and the capacity to defeat enemies. It is a word with multiple connotations. Allah informs His Messenger that he would not be held accountable for those who have known His command and refused to obey it, and nor would victory be achieved through material power or support of the believers who fought with him; rather, Allah executes His Will through to those who fight for His cause and victory comes from Him alone: 'Fight them: Allah will punish them at your hands…' (at-Tawba: 14)

Why does Allah not directly grant victory to the believers without getting them to fight against the disbelievers and idolaters? Were victory to be granted due to some unknown cause without the believers having to fight, this would offer people no sign or proof of the truth, but rather would give them a pretext to persist in disbelief. Furthermore, Allah has willed that victory should be achieved by the hands of the believing minority to teach them that they have to pursue the proper means for attaining ends, meanwhile never forgetting that means and causes are powerless in themselves—and victory is only from Allah. In the Battle of Hunayn, pride crept into the hearts of some Muslims due to their large numbers; they thought they were too many to be defeated; they became full of themselves and their material power. To teach them a lesson, Allah made them experience defeat at the beginning before He granted them victory at the end. About this battle, Allah says: '… on the Day of Hunayn, when you took pride in your great numbers, and they proved of no avail whatever to you…' (at-Tawba: 25). This was intended to call attention of the believers that, while they exhaust all possible means to attain victory, they must always bear in mind that success comes from Allah alone. Allah creates means and causes to show through them His assistance to His believing servants. Were victory to be granted without any effort on the part of the believers, this would not afford sufficient evidence for their enemies to see that they are supported by Allah. Let me give you an example that illustrates the difference from the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Allah did not want to just save him from fire; had this been the case, he would not have let his enemies catch him in the first place. If Allah had prevented them from getting him, they would have said: 'Had we caught Ibrahim (Abraham), we would have done such-and-such to him.' Such would have been a chance for them to believe they were right, and they would have found a justification to persist in disbelief. However, Allah let them catch Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and throw him in their kindled fire. Then, He miraculously suspended the burning power of the fire: 'But We said, "Fire, be cool and safe for Ibrahim (Abraham)."' (al-Anbiya': 69) This was real frustration and enragement to them. If Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) had been saved by any unknown cause, other than such a tangible one, his adversaries would have found pretexts to justify their defeat.

Allah sent His Messenger, Muhammad, to all humankind and would not make him rely for support and victory on those who believe with him. Allah alone is Sufficient for His Messenger as Supporter and Protector. Were it just for granting Prophet Muhammad triumph over his enemies, Allah would have done that directly. However, He has willed that the believers enjoy the honour of fighting for Allah's Cause and earn the matchless reward He has prepared for those who strive and those who are martyred. Allah has willed to let victory be achieved through the hands of the believers to grant them superiority over other nations and to elevate their status. If it were only a matter of supporting Prophet Muhammad and assuring his victory, Allah would have done that directly without war or fighting.

Ponder the words of Allah: '… Allah may well curb the power of the disbelievers, for He is stronger in might and more terrible in punishment.' (an-Nisa': 84) The verse refers to the endless Power of Allah Who is capable of deterring the disbelievers and aborting their conspiracies. This Divine Power manifested itself later in the events. Consider what happened after the Battle of Uhud. The battle ended in a rather indeterminate manner; no one can tell which camp won and which camp lost. Muslims triumphed at first, but when the archers violated the command of Prophet Muhammad, and imbalance befell the Muslim forces. However, the warriors of Quraysh did not stay in the place of the battle and did not go into the city. For this reason, the Battle of Uhud did not end with a decisive victory for either party. They threatened to have their revenge in the following year and gave the promised battle the name: Badr As-Sughra (Badr Minor).

A year passed and the appointed time for the battle came. Prophet Muhammad called people to join him for the battle, but only seventy men obeyed him and set out for the specified location. They demonstrated courage and proved they were not afraid of confronting the disbelievers of Quraysh who certainly outnumbered them. Allah threw dread and fear in the heart of Abu Sufyan who ordered his forces to return to Mecca even before they reached the appointed place. Thus did Allah abort their plot; they appointed the time and place for the battle, spent a year preparing for it and even sent spies to spread rumours and fear among Muslims. Still, Allah has made fear overcome them and they did not dare confront the believers. Muslims stayed for days in that place, sold the goods they had, returned to Medina with immense profits and decided victory over their coward enemies.

Allah has fulfilled His promise to Prophet Muhammad: '…Allah 'asa (may well) curb the power of the disbelievers, for He is stronger in might and more terrible in punishment' (an-Nisa': 84). The Arabic word 'asa (translated in the verse as 'may well') bears the connotation of hope: ''Asa (I hope) you will receive good news soon.' Good news may or may not come, but the speaker expresses hope that it will.

This example is a little different: ''Asa (I hope) I will bring you some good news.' Here hope is stronger. In the first example, actualising hope is not in the least in the hand of the speaker, unlike the second example where the speaker seems to have the means to fulfil the stated hope. Nevertheless, the latter still does not guarantee that he will live and have the capability to bring about the good news he hopes he can bring. He may have a real intention, but he cannot guarantee to have the power to fulfil such intention.

If someone says: 'Asa (I hope) Allah will bring you happiness', the sentence expresses an even stronger hope, since hope, in this case, is pinned on the Almighty Lord. Still, can the speaker be completely sure Allah will answer his hope? Allah may or may not fulfil that hope, based on His Will and Wisdom; we have our own calculations, but Allah alone knows what is best for each of us. Unlike the aforesaid examples, it is Allah Who says about Himself: '…Allah 'asa (may well) curb the power of the disbelievers, for He is stronger in might and more terrible in punishment' (an-Nisa': 84). This is the most actual and concrete of all hopes. Nothing can prevent Allah from actualising it.

We have thus learnt the different semantic levels on which the word 'asa may be used. It may indicate a kind of hope expressed by someone and pinned on another. This is lowest form of hope. One may also use it to express his hope that he himself will do something. This is a stronger and more assertive kind of hope. In both cases, however, circumstances may stand in the face of actualising the thing hoped for. The strongest form of hope expressed by the word 'asa is the one pinned on Allah. The reason is that the fulfilment of such hope is attributed to the Supreme Power, and it is for Him to make it come true or not based on His Knowledge and Wisdom.

Unlike all three cases, 'asa may be used to express a kind of hope that will certainly be fulfilled. An example is expressed in the verse that we are dealing with: '…Allah 'asa (may well) curb the power of the disbelievers, for He is stronger in might and more terrible in punishment' (an-Nisa': 84). When the word 'asa is used by Allah, it refers to hope that must be achieved, and it is meant as an encouragement and good news to those concerned with fulfilment of the hope. It implies an urge to ask Allah for His Grace because He is the Most-Generous Who will make the desired thing come true. Those who possess power among the creatures of Allah are likely to lose that power. Weakness and fear may strike the most powerful on earth. However, the One Who confers power and capacity to act on His creatures is the One forever capable of truly acting; He is the One, the Most-Powerful and Most Capable of deterring wrongdoers, '… For He is stronger in might and ashaddu tankila (more terrible in punishment)' (*an-Nisa': *84). The word tankil (terrible punishment) is derived from the root nikl which denotes restraint. When a ruler administers punishment to someone who has perpetrated a crime, this act deters anyone who thinks of committing a similar crime. Thus, the punishment imposes a non-material restraint on others and prevents them from pursuing the same course of action. This is what it means to make a criminal an example; it is to administer adequate punishment to him so that everyone else is deterred from committing a similar crime for fear of suffering the same punishment. Thus, the word tankil denotes a non-material restraint that prevents one from committing a crime, or deters him from returning to a crime he had perpetrated before. This restraint consists of the fact that the punishment administered to the perpetrator of the crime would present itself in everyone's mind as a standing warning against slipping into wrongdoing.

When Allah created humankind, He distributed different talents among them. There is no single person who possesses all talents because Allah has willed that each person's thought and powers should vary. When He allots to every one of His servants only a specific share of talent, He means that different talents complement and integrate with each other. If every person had the same talents and gifts others have, everyone would dispense with the others. However, Allah wants us to form a community based on coherence and integration, with each individual or group possessing a power that distinguishes them on one level and integrates with the powers of others on the other level—all cooperating for the public well-being. With each endowed with a different talent, each will have a role to play for others, and a need to ask of them meanwhile. An adept engineer would build houses and establish roads and bridges. If he gets sick, he cannot cure himself, though, and would have to see a doctor. Both of them would need to consult a lawyer when they want to enter into a contract. Craftsmen are not less important; with their hands, ideas are put into action. Thus, there is not a single individual capable of doing everything on his own. If such a person existed, no one would need another, and society would eventually fall apart. For this reason, Allah says: '… We have raised some of them above others in rank so that some may take others into service…' (*az-Zukhruf:*32).

When people consider how Allah privileges some over others, they think only in terms of wealth. This is a narrow understanding. Allah may bestow His favours on His servants in the form of physical strength, useful knowledge, a forbearing temperament, etc. Thus, each and every one of us is privileged one way or another. Therefore, when Allah says: '…We have raised some of them above others in rank…' (az-Zukhruf: 32), some may wonder who are raised, and above whom are they raised? Everyone is raised through his talent, and others are raised above him through their talents. You are privileged, while others are privileged over you.

As we have said, we cannot sum up all the bounties of Allah in the single aspect of wealth. Let us consider all other perspectives in which one may be privileged; we will realize that every person is elevated above others in terms of certain privileges, and that others are raised above him in terms of other privileges. Each and every one is in a way in service of the others. This is the variation Allah has willed among His servants. Our duty is to cooperate to make the best use of our powers collectively. No one in the community of the believers should be left alone and helpless. Rather, each one of us should give others a helping hand with the powers Allah has given to some and deprived others from. Such is the meaning of solidarity and the essence of power. Individuals of the Muslim community are like the bricks of a wall in assisting one another: none of them is abandoned, and each of them is equally indispensable. When you allow the effect of your talent to be extended to another, each can be a part of a strong whole. To this, the following verse alludes:

مَّن يَشْفَعْ شَفَٰعَةً حَسَنَةً يَكُن لَّهُۥ نَصِيبٌ مِّنْهَا ۖ وَمَن يَشْفَعْ شَفَٰعَةً
سَيِّئَةً يَكُن لَّهُۥ كِفْلٌ مِّنْهَا ۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ مُّقِيتًا ﴿٨٥﴾

Whoever speaks for a good cause will share in its benefits and whoever speaks for a bad cause will share in its burden:
God controls everything [85] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 85)

Joining oneself to another in a good cause is to intercede for someone by offering good arguments in their favour to further an interest belonging to them. In this sense, extending the fruits of one’s talent to others is a no less honourable form of assistance, and the one who offers it is entitled to a share of its outcomes.

The aforesaid verse talks mainly about intercession. It is to act as an intermediary to help someone secure an interest he desires or, alternatively, to salvage this person from a detriment without asking him for anything in return in both cases. Likewise, everyone who has a specific talent has to extend his aid to those who lack this particular talent. Communities thus become stronger, instead of being composed of a number of weak individuals. Allah says in a Qudsi Hadith, addressing Prophet Dawud (David): ‘A particular good deed will cause its doer to be granted the privilege of allotting places for the dwellers of Paradise.’ It is as if that person were made a deputy of Allah in paradise! He is not only granted a place there, but Allah assigns through him the places for the other dwellers of paradise. ‘… Prophet Dawud (David) wondered: “Who will this person be?” Allah answered: ‘A believer who helps another with a need and is keen to fulfil it for him, whether or not he succeeds.’

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘If a believer assists another with a need until he fulfils it, this is better [more rewarding] for him than locking himself up for ten years to observe solitary worship, and [know that] locking oneself up for one day to observe solitary worship for Allah draws him away from the fire by a distance equal to three trenches; the breadth of each is bigger than the distance between the east and west.’ (1)

The reason is that in offering others the help they need, one thus shows gratitude for the bounties Allah bestows on him by employing them in a manner that pleases Him. Among the immediate effects of such generous attitude is that no one will envy or bear grudge to the possessor of any specific power or ability, since the latter employs that power to help those who do not possess it. Instead of envying him, therefore, others will wish him an excess of that benefit so long as he uses it to fulfil their needs. Allah says: ‘Whoever joins himself (to another) in a good cause shall have a nasib (share) of it…’ (an-Nisa’: 85). The Quran is not sent down for the good and righteous only, but as it promises reward for goodness, it also admonishes those who do wrong: ‘…and whoever joins himself (to another) in an evil cause shall have kefl [here meaning responsibility] of it…’ (an-Nisa’: 85).

Let us now consider the difference between the two Arabic words: nasib and kefl. Both linguistically mean ‘a share’, but the former has a positive connotation, the latter a negative one. The word nasib often refers to a share of a good thing, like wealth, for example. Contrarily, the word kefl often refers to a share of a bad thing. The aforesaid verse shows the Grace and Bounty of Allah; whoever does a good deed will be rewarded several folds for it—and this is a great share—and whoever does a bad deed will be recompensed only in proportion of it.

This verse follows after the one in which Allah commands Prophet Muhammad to urge the believer to fight for His cause which promises the believers who respond to the call and fight for the cause of Allah an ample share of His Bounty, a matchless reward.

Allah says: ‘… and whoever joins himself (to another) in an evil cause shall have kefl [here meaning: responsibility] of it…’ (an-Nisa’: 85). This means whoever contributes to an evil cause will suffer part of the repercussions of such evildoing; the undesirable outcomes of his involvement must befall him as well. By contrast, contributing to a good cause brings on reward to the contributor. This should urge people to spread the fruits of their talents to others by helping them with matters above their capabilities. As long as every member of society benefits from the talents granted to some, the result will be a united, strong society with individuals supportive of each other rather than conflicting and bearing grudge for each other. Everyone will be cooperative and live free of envy and hatred towards others since he knows whatever bounty any of his fellow believers enjoys will have its effect on him as well.

Accordingly, whoever wants to share in the bounties Allah has granted to others should learn to love the fact that they have these bounties. If you, believer, love to see others enjoy the bounties Allah has conferred on them, you will reap the fruits of these bounties. On the other hand, if you find yourself deprived of such fruits, then examine your heart and see whether or not you harbour any feelings of envy, jealousy or hatred. If that is the case, how can the effect of those bounties reach you? It is as if they felt angry on the account of their possessor and would not let the one who bears him a grudge ever taste any of their fruits!

Allah concludes the verse by saying: '…and Allah is Muqit over (controls) all things' (an-Nisa': 85). After promising contributors to good causes a share of their fruit, and to those who get involved in bad causes also their due share of responsibility, Allah makes this assertion for all His servants to take heed: nothing, no matter how small and negligible, may escape the reckoning of Allah; neither a good nor a bad deed will escape Him, for He holds absolute control over all things. Quran exegetes have extensively investigated the meaning of the Arabic word Muqit. Some have maintained that it means Allah is the Witness over everything; others have seen that it means 'the One who reckons everything.' Another interpretation says Muqit means Allah is the One Who dispenses livelihood to all His creatures; a fourth interpretation says the word conveys that Allah is the Guardian—and some say it means 'the Watcher.' I see all these interpretations, however, correlated and complementary, as not conflicting. Each word has a number of semantic references associated with it, so it can have several connotations based on the context, yet the basic sense of the word is that derived directly from its etymological root. The word Muqit is derived from the verb qat which means providing someone with livelihood. Why does Allah provide us with provisions? The reason is that He wants to preserve our lives. The fact that Allah provides for every one of His creatures to keep life going necessarily entails that He watches over His creatures and never lets any one of them escape His attention. Furthermore, since Allah gives each one his livelihood based on his needs, then He must keep account of everything. He is also the Witness Who is Ever-Watchful over His servants; He knows what everyone does and recompenses each for his deeds.

Thus, all these meanings and connotations are perfectly correlated. For this reason, we should not say that scholars have disagreed on the meaning of this word. We should rather say that each of them noted a semantic dimension of the word based on the context. Allah is the Muqit Who provides sustenance for His creatures and Who constantly watches over them. He is also the Witness Who has Knowledge of and Control over everything. He is also the One Who keeps account of everything since He is the Lord of all creatures Who knows all they do and provides them with the requirements of life, so He keeps account of everything. It is not only for people that Allah provides for, but He gives sustenance to animals and inspires them to choose a specific diet rather than others.

So we know that even though Quran exegetes have reflected on the meaning of Muqit from different angles, they were all right in their interpretations of the word. Every one of the several aforementioned meanings represents a single semantic aspect of the word. Allah watches over and provides sustenance for all His creatures: humankind, animals, plants and even inanimate things.

Botanists explain this fact. We grow plants by putting seeds in the soil; seeds are split into halves and absorb nutrients from the soil; then, the plant starts to develop roots that both fix it in the soil and absorb nutrients. As the roots grow, the two halves of the seed sprout into leaves. Who watches over this process and makes the plant prosper? It is Allah, the Muqit, Who provides for all and watches over all. Scientists explain that plants are capable of absorbing nutrients through capillary motion. This means that plants absorb nutrition from the soil through very thin roots that absorb water in which nutrients are dissolved.

Capillary tubes put in a vessel full of coloured water would be seen all turning into the colour of the water rising in them all; the water does not rise without the colour, for example. The thin roots of the plant, however, absorb from the soil only useful material and leave out harmful ones. Who inspires the plant to make such choice? A choice requires a mind capable of thinking, deliberating and choosing one alternative over another. The plant does not have a mind. Nature does not have reason, but everything is governed and managed by the All-Wise Allah Who has absolute Knowledge and Wisdom and Who is indeed All-Sustaining. Exalted is Allah! In this regard, Allah says: ‘…all watered with the same water, yet We make some of them taste better than others: there truly are signs in this for people who reason’ (ar-Ra‘d: 4). The seeds of peppers, molasses, pomegranates, etc. are all planted in the same earth and watered with the same water, but they develop into wonderfully different plants and fruits with different shapes, colours, tastes, smells, etc. This is the Might of Allah Glorified is He.

In the original Arabic text of the verse, this part, ‘…Allah controls all things’ (an-Nisa’: 85) the Arabic verb used is in the simple past tense. Use of the past tense in Arabic is different from its usage in English. In the former, present or even future events may be expressed by past verb forms and it is only meant for emphasis. Allah has been, is, and will forever hold control over all things. When the past is used in reference to humans, it means the state expressed was and is no more: Zayd kan (was) rich. This means that Zayd, who is subject to change like all other mortals, used to have a fortune and that his fortune is now gone. However, when we say Allah kan, even though it literally means ‘was’, it does not confine the description ascribed to Him to the past; all creatures are subject to change, but He is the Creator Who has eternally existed with no beginning and no end. Allah is the One Who causes all things to change and He never changes.In the following verse, Allah says:

وَإِذَا حُيِّيتُم بِتَحِيَّةٍ فَحَيُّوا۟ بِأَحْسَنَ مِنْهَآ أَوْ رُدُّوهَآ ۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ حَسِيبًا ﴿٨٦﴾

But [even in battle] when you [believers] are offered a greeting, respond with a better one, or at least return it: God keeps account of everything [86] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 86)

Allah wants our lives to prosper. What is the meaning of ‘…when you are greeted…’ At first sight, anyone would say it means when we receive the greeting of ‘peace be with you’, we have to return the greeting. Prior to the advent of Islam, Arabs used to say ‘ Allah greet you’, or ‘Greetings from Allah.’ After the advent of Islam, Allah has made ours a greeting of peace: ‘On the Day when they meet Him, they will be welcomed with the greeting, ‘Peace’…’ (al-Ahzab: 44), or as Allah says in another verse: ‘…greet one another with a blessed, goodly greeting, as enjoined by Allah…’ (an-Nur: 61). That is the greeting of peace.

However, let us examine the Arabic word for ‘greet’: hayya. It is derived from the root h-y-y from which the word hayah (life) is also derived. What is life? Most of us would say it is the motion of a living thing that testifies to the existence of a soul in him. We sum up life in the concept of motion that we perceive by our senses since this is the most immediate experience we have of the world around us. Nevertheless, a deeper understanding would allow us to see the notion of life even in inanimate objects. We are used to associate life with perceptible motion, but everything has its own befitting kind of life.

We have learnt at school about magnetic force and attraction. We used to bring a magnetic rod and move it in a certain direction above a handful of iron filings. As we do that, the iron filings are arranged in line with the direction of the motion of the magnetic rod. The magnetic rod is an inanimate object according to our understanding of the concept of life. Nonetheless, its charged particles can demonstrate a specific motion that we cannot capture the nature of. Thus, the magnetic rod has its own motion which we cannot perceive because we do not have the abilities required to do so.

Consider another example. On a certain moderate height, someone on a plane can perceive motion on land below. If the plane flies higher, everything below seems motionless as if there were no life. The motion becomes too subtle to be perceived. Therefore, I believe everything has a life that befits its nature and a motion that we perhaps cannot perceive. It is worthy of notice that Allah addresses this issue when He says: ‘… Everything will perish except His Face…’ (al-Qasas: 88). What is the meaning of ‘perishing’? It is the depravation of life. As long as everything is bound to lose its life, this implies that everything has a life until Allah orders life to be taken away from it. Some may wonder: does perishing truly mean deprivation of life? Verses of the Quran explain each other. One verse of the Quran may afford an explanation of another verse so that we may understand the Quran as a whole. Allah says: '… that he who would perish might perish in clear evidence of the truth, and that he who would remain alive might live in clear evidence of the truth…' (al-Anfal: 42). Therefore, perishing is the opposite of life.

A plastic vessel is bright and soft when still new and unused; however, after using it for a while, its brightness fades away and it becomes rather worn-out; so what happens to it? It has changed. What is the cause of the change? People say it is the normal wear and tear or the effect of sunlight. I believe the change indicates some kind of motion in this material. The same holds true for valuable gems and stones like amber and marble. The age of some is estimated to be thousands of years, and the colour and features of a gem changes through time.

Hold a leave and put it under a microscope, and you will see an immense number of small compartments that we cannot count. Seeing the wondrous creation of Allah, a believer should say: '…glory is to Allah, the best of creators' (al-Mu'minun: 14).

Everything that exists has a kind of life that befits its nature. If we investigate such forms of life and trace their details using tools that help detect their natures, we may be able to perceive them.

Then, there is the life of the noblest species; namely, the human being for whom Allah has made subservient all other forms of life on earth. This life ends in a time unknown to the human being but known to Allah. After this worldly life comes an eternal life. Allah has sent down His ordinance for people to abide by, so whoever obeys Him will be granted bliss in the eternal life. Thus, which is worthier of the two: the worldly life or the eternal one? It is the eternal Afterlife that never ends. For this reason, Allah says: '… the true life is in the Hereafter, if only they knew' (al-'Ankabut: 64). That is the true life. What is the worth of this worldly life where you are constantly threatened by afflictions, pains, disturbances and ailments? It is a life that knows no pure happiness and must one day come to an end. Allah offers us a life that will not be disrupted or come to an end. This worldly life is not the true life Allah has created us for; it is only a passage to the eternal life. Ponder these words of Allah: 'Believers, respond to Allah and His Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life.…' (al-Anfal: 24) Here, Allah addresses the believers. We have already been given life, but just according to biological laws. However, if we do not respond to what Allah and Prophet Muhammad call us for, this life will inevitably end and we will be deprived from the life that never ends, the true life where there are no threats, afflictions, burdens, diseases or any kind of suffering whatsoever.

Ar-rouh (the spirit) is the name Allah gives to the secret of life—the force that gives motion and sense to the human body, even if such a life comes to an end: 'And when I have formed him fully and breathed into him of My spirit…' (Sad: 72). This is the first stage of our existence; the temporary life given to both those who believe in Allah and those who do not.

Allah gives the same name also to the Message He has sent down to Prophet Muhammad: 'So We have revealed rouhan (a spirit) to you [Prophet] by Our command…' (ash-Shura: 52). Allah here refers to the Message by the same name he has given to the secret of life—the spirit—since this Message is what can lead one to the true life if he sincerely acts upon it. Thus, rouh is the secret that gives a temporary life and it is also the Message to which obedience gives one an eternal life free of pain and toil. Thus, the words of Allah: 'Believers, respond to Allah and His Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life…' (al-Anfal: 24) are an invitation to pursue the true life of the Hereafter, a command to abide by the ordinance of Allah in this worldly life to win eternal bliss in the Afterlife.

We have previously referred to the fact that the two words tahiyya (greeting) and hayah (life) are derived from the same root h-y-y. What do they have in common? When someone meets you and gives you the greeting of peace: 'Peace be with you', it is an invocation that Allah will give you security and tranquillity—what is the value of life without peace? Hence originates the similarity.

So the verb yuhayyi (the Arabic for 'greets'), or giving the greeting of peace, denotes a wish for the one addressed by the greeting that he will enjoy security and tranquillity. It is an endearing form of greeting that puts peace in the heart of whomever you meet and makes him feel happy to receive you. Thus, when Allah says: 'And when you are greeted with a greeting, greet with a better (greeting) than it or return it…' (an-Nisa': 86), it means if you are addressed with a greeting of peace—which brings you a feeling of security and tranquillity—you have to respond with a similar greeting. It is as if you pour life into the heart of your addressee through this greeting. Life without peace is nothing. That reminds me of an Arab poet who once said:

Do not call him who has gone to rest 'dead'!

Death is the gloom that overtakes the alive!

Therefore, he who greets you with the greeting of peace is actually adding life to your heart through his greeting, so Allah commands you to return it or even give a better greeting. If someone addresses you with: 'Peace be with you', reply with: 'Allah's peace and mercy be with you.' This is an even better greeting.

It has been narrated on the authority of Salman Al-Farisi that a man told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Peace be upon you, O Messenger of Allah', so the Prophet answered him back: 'Allah's peace and mercy be with you.' Another man went to him and said: 'Allah's peace and mercy be with you, O Messenger of Allah, so the Prophet answered: ' Allah's peace, mercy and blessings be with you.' A third went to him and said: 'Allah's peace, mercy and blessings be with you, O Messenger of Allah', so the Prophet answered: 'The same to you.' The man said: 'O Messenger of Allah, dearer you are to me than my father and mother; such-and-such persons greeted you and you answered them with better greetings than you have answered mine.' Prophet Muhammad then replied: 'You did not leave room for me to add anything. Allah says: "And when you are greeted with a greeting, greet with a better (greeting) than it or return it…", and I have returned your greeting to you.'(1)

Scholars have explicated the rulings regarding who should start with greeting first. They said a passer-by should give it to those sitting down as he passes. A rider should offer greeting to a walker. The young should greet the elder. He who has eyesight should greet him who is blind, and the few should greet the many.

As we know, juristic rulings in Islam are addressed to all the believers, males and females, unless a distinction is clearly made between both. This is a case where women have a special ruling. A woman is permitted to greet other women, her husband, or her unmarriageable relatives. Only an old woman who is no longer a temptation to men may be the one who offers a greeting first. As for a young woman, she may not start a man with greeting nor reply when a man greets her unless she is accompanied by women like her. People traditionally say: a woman can guard another woman better than a thousand men! When a young woman is among her peers, they take care of her and protect her. A young woman by herself is forbidden from being the one who starts offering a greeting to a man or replying to him if he offers her any, and it is makruh (discouraged) for a man to reply to her if she greets him or offers her a greeting himself. Why is that? When a young woman greets a particular man, this may arouse interest or desire of that man towards her; for the same reason, therefore, if a man greets her, she does not have to answer him back. Nevertheless, if she is accompanied by another woman or a group of women, there is no harm in her answering him back.

Scholars have also dealt with the following questions: How should a Muslim answer if the one greeting him is a non-Muslim? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained that the disbelievers may twist words. They would replace salaam (the Arabic for ‘peace’) by saam (the Arabic for ‘perishing’). Therefore, if a disbeliever greets you, reply with: ‘The same to you.’ This way, whatever they say by way of greeting will be returned to them, and they will not have the chance to indulge themselves in ridiculing a believer. Based on these grounds, some scholars hold that: ‘…greet with a better (greeting) than it…’ (an-Nisa’: 86) applies to fellow believers when they greet one another, and ‘…or return it…’ (an-Nisa’: 86) applies to the disbelievers when they greet the believers; we should return to them whatever they say.

It is true that the greeting of peace expresses the speaker’s wish that his addressee will have security and tranquillity. However, some would say it by way of hypocrisy. They would say ‘Peace’ with their tongues, but their hearts harbour nothing but hatred and malice and their intention is to do harm. By commanding us to return a greeting as it is or with an even better one, Allah means to teach His servants the concept of spreading goodness in general, which is not confined to verbal greeting. Returning greetings in the manner Allah prescribes is meant to promote respect and friendliness in the Muslim community. On a larger scale, this is an invitation to offer good in return to or in excess of any good done to you.

To increase goodness in society, Allah urges people to give more than they take and, by acting on this principle, whatever good one does will be returned to him in excess, which causes society to be righteous and coherent. At one time, a Saudi citizen would invite King ‘Abdul-‘Aziz Al Su’ud for a cup of Arabian coffee. How do you think the king would return the invitation? The return would be at the level of a king’s capacity which may be imagined. This and returning verbal greetings, all originate from the general concept of returning goodness.

Through abidance by that divine command, a believer would be sure that whatever respect or friendliness he offers his fellow believers would be returned at least equally. After giving that command, Allah reassures the obedient that when they show respect and benevolence to one another, they are sure to receive their reward in abundance since He watches over them and takes account of all they do. Allah concludes the verse by saying: ‘… surely Allah takes account of all things’ (an-Nisa’: 86). So, the reward is not just for returning what your fellow believer has offered you, but if your intention is sincerely directed to pleasing Allah, He has a far greater reward for you, a matchless reward.

Spreading the greeting of peace, as Prophet Muhammad has taught us, by saying to everyone you meet, ‘peace be with you’, ‘ Allah’s peace and mercy be with you’ or ‘ Allah’s peace, mercy and blessings be with you’ is an act of benevolence that promotes harmony and friendliness in the Muslim community. Healthy and noble relationships can be developed with everyone wishing and praying for his fellow believers to live in security and calm; everyone offering whatever good in his hand to others, and even going beyond this by praying to Allah to send His blessings to them.

In uttering the greeting of peace, ‘ Allah’s peace, mercy and blessings be with you’, there is a reminder to everyone who gives or receives it that faith is what binds them to Allah on the one hand and to each other on the other hand. It is at once a greeting and a message: we are all servants of Allah. By promoting goodness and benevolence among ourselves, by spreading peace and mercy, Allah will also bestow His Mercy and Favours on us. So, Allah says: ‘and when you are greeted with a greeting, greet with a better (greeting) than it or return it; surely Allah takes account of all things' (an-Nisa': 86). It is natural for us to understand that answering a greeting means that we should reply with a greeting exactly like the one we have received. Rather, answering a greeting means to put forward a similar greeting. The third person pronoun in the original Arabic text of the verse—translated into the aforementioned English version as 'it'—'… or return it…'—does not refer to the 'greeting', but its reference includes anything of the same sort of the noun 'greeting' it is associated with.

Third person pronouns in Arabic do not necessarily refer to the very noun they are associated with in a sentence, but their reference is identified through that noun. For example, when we say: 'I have given to charity a dirham and nisfa-hu (its half)', the third person pronoun hu sure does not refer to the self-same 'dirham' mentioned in the sentence, but to a value that equals it. By applying this to the verse we are dealing with, we then understand that Allah does not command us to offer exactly the same greeting in return to that we have been offered, but a greeting equivalent to it.

The fact that Allah has created us and given us free will to choose our faith and actions does not mean He will not hold us accountable for our choices. Allah does not compel us to accept faith, but He will certainly reward those who accept it and punish those who reject it. Allah does not command us anything that is beyond our capacity to observe, and nor does He forbid us anything that is beyond our capacity to abstain from. He has created us and He knows what is best for us in this life and the Afterlife.

When Allah decrees a command, He has already eternally known that we are able to execute such a command. He does not enjoin on us anything that is beyond our capacity. What then makes us violate the laws of Allah and disobey His commands? Disobedience comes as a result of letting one's own desire to prevail over the commands of Allah—so he does what he likes, even if Allah forbids it, and refrains from what he sees as a heavy duty even if Allah enjoins it. A prudent person, however, would not take advantage of the free will Allah has granted us to give free rein to his desires. Rather, reason calls on everyone to remember that, even though he is given the freedom to choose, he will inevitably be returned to the One Who has given him this freedom and Who will give him his fair recompense. Therefore, disobedience to Allah is the outcome of irrationality. A rational person who believes in Allah and in the Day of Judgment, when he meets Him and receives his due reward, would not waste his life pursuing whims and desires. Indulging in a thing Allah has made unlawful gives one a transient pleasure, but the price must be paid then at length. A believer would not sacrifice eternal happiness for a temporary joy. Rather, he would be mindful of Allah now in order to have rest and bliss forever in his eternal abode. In the following verse, Allah says:

ٱللَّهُ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَۚ لَيَجۡمَعَنَّكُمۡ إِلَىٰ يَوۡمِ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ لَا
رَيۡبَ فِيهِۗ وَمَنۡ أَصۡدَقُ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ حَدِيثٗا ﴿٨٧﴾

He is God: there is no god but Him. He will gather you all together on the Day of Resurrection, about which there is no doubt. Whose word can be truer than God's? [87] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 87)

This means that there is no deity other than Allah -the Creator of all things- will interfere to put an end to the existence of the world. He is the One Lord of the worlds and His is the only ordinance that offers the right guidance to humankind, and it is to Him alone that all creatures will return. There are no multiple Allahs who may give contrary decrees to humankind other than what Allah has prescribed. Only His ordinance is the best that furthers the interests of His servants, and only His prohibitions should be avoided; otherwise, we are only thus doing harm to ourselves. Allah refers to this Truth in His words: 'Say [Prophet], "Disbelievers: I do not worship what you worship, you do not worship what I worship; I will never worship what you worship; you will never worship what I worship: (if you keep to your present Allahs) you have your religion and I have mine."' (al-Kafirun: 1-6)

In the aforementioned chapter of the Noble Quran, Allah explains that we are not facing a case where there are two competing religions: a religion for the believers and another for the disbelievers. No, there is only one religion that befits humankind; it is the straight path of monotheism that all the Messengers of Allah called for, and that Islam has come to conclude and perfect; therefore, Islam is the final and timeless Message addressed to all humankind until the end of time. Since this is the true religion, Allah has assisted His Prophet and granted him victory against his enemies for the Message of Allah to prevail over all other alleged and distorted religions. Allah refers to this meaning in the chapter following the one mentioned above: ‘When Allah’s help comes and He opens up(1) your way [Prophet], when you see people embracing Allah’s faith in crowds, celebrate the praise of your Lord and ask His forgiveness: He is always ready to accept repentance.’ (an-Nasr: 1-3)

The aforesaid two chapters are followed by the chapter of al-Masad: ‘May the hands of Abu Lahab be ruined! May he be ruined too! Neither his wealth nor his gains will help him: he will burn in the Flaming Fire –(2) and so will his wife, the firewood-carrier,(3) with a palm-fibre rope around her neck.’ (al-Masad: 1-5)

Could Abu Lahab not have professed belief that there is no Allah but Allah and that Muhammad was His Messenger after this chapter of the Quran was revealed? Yes, he could have done so, and had he made such a profession, he would have cast doubts about this revelation or even proved it to be false altogether. However, and even though he had the choice, Allah did not guide him to make such a profession even by way of hypocrisy; why? He had defied Allah and declared enmity to His Prophet, so Allah decreed that he will never attain faith or be admitted to paradise. Whatever Allah decrees must happen, since there is no other Allahs that defy His Will, a truth which Allah presents clearly in the chapter of the Quran following the aforementioned three: ‘Say: ‘He is the One Allah’ ‘ (al-Ikhlas: 1).

There is no other Allah that may contradict or suspend any of the decrees of Allah Glorified is He: ‘He is Allah: there is no Allah but Him. He will gather you all together on the Day of Resurrection…’ (an-Nisa’: 87). The word ‘gather’ may be meant to denote the fact that Allah will bring all of us into His Presence, all of us with no exceptions, and no one will escape Him. It may generally also refer to the Day of the Gathering, when Allah will resurrect His servants from their graves to be recompensed for their deeds.

(1) ‘This sura [chapter of the Quran] is mainly understood by interpreters to refer to the surrender of Mecca to the Prophet [Muhammad]’. Abdel Haleem, The Quran, A New Translation (translation adopted and adapted).

(2) ‘Abu Lahab means ‘Flame Man’ and this verse contains a pun on this name’, Abdel Haleem, The Quran, A New Translation

(3) ‘She used to tie bunches of thorns with ropes of twisted palm fibre and throw them into the Prophet’s path’. Abdel Haleem, The Quran, A New Translation.

Why does Allah make this statement? It is a reminder to those of understanding: Before you disobey Allah, think of the punishment awaiting you. To act without thinking of the outcomes of one's action is foolishness.

Those who persist in sinning never actually recall or think of the punishment they will receive for their deviation. Crimes are committed, while the perpetrator is heedless of the punishment. A criminal commits his crime assuming that he will escape its punishment. A thief steals assuming that he will get away with his theft; however, if he bears in mind that he may be caught and penalized for his crime, he will never commit it.

That Allah has granted us freedom of choice is not meant to let us deviate from His Path and violate His commands with impunity. Rather, this freedom is meant to differentiate the devout from the depraved. In order not to misuse this freedom, ask yourself how much benefit you will receive from a sin, and how much grace and bounty Allah will bestow on you if you obey Him, then choose the alternative that will lead you to the highest good and most fulfilling status. A rational person would not let desire drag him into evildoing and suffering.

We will all be gathered on the Day of Resurrection about which Allah says: 'A Day when everyone will stand before the Lord of the Worlds' (al-Mutaffifin: 6). Death is like long sleep; this is the closest parable by which we can identify the nature of death. Allah has called it the Day of Resurrection, for it is when all creatures will be made to rise from their graves, as Allah Almighty tells us in the Noble Quran: 'He is Allah: there is no Allah but Him. He will gather you all together on the Day of Resurrection…' (an-Nisa': 87).

The way to deliverance is to have firm belief in the Day of Resurrection. When one believes that Allah has created the world, given His servants free will to do good or evil, sent them guidance through His Messengers and will sure gather them all on the Day of Resurrection, he will never persist in disobeying His commands.

Consider the following example. When we use examples to explain things about Allah, it is not meant to hold a comparison—Exalted is Allah above all comparison—but to make the point clearer and more accessible to the limited human mind. Now, suppose a father gave his son a pound and told him: ‘Go buy something with this money, but bear in mind that I will reward you if you buy something useful, whereas if you buy something bad, like playing cards, I will punish you.’ The father has given his son the freedom to buy what he chooses. The question is: if the son chose to buy a pack of playing cards, would such a purchase happen against the will of the father? Or would we say that the father imposed a choice on his son? No, the father is the one who has given him the freedom to buy what he chooses, yet the son has not taken his father’s warning into consideration and disobeyed him.

If a father has been given the right to punish or reward his son based on the latter’s use of the freedom he allowed him, would Allah not be entitled to do the same with His servants in as much as He grants them the right to freely choose their actions? If Allah wanted everyone to be rightly guided and obedient, He would have made people like angels and no one would have dared to commit a sin or an act of disobedience. When a sinner commits an offence, he only does it because Allah Glorified is He has granted him the freedom of choice. For this reason if someone says that acts are created by Allah Glorified is He he is correct and honest. But why is the perpetrator of the sin afflicted if he only used the power of freedom he was given to suit his convenience? To this we respond as follows: the sinner used his freedom in a manner that was contrary to the way Allah Glorified is He had intended for it to be used. The knife, for example, is used for slaughtering, if one was to slaughter a chicken, he would not be susceptible to any kind of punishment. However, if it was used as a tool for manslaughter, then it would fall into the domain of committing a grave sin, so much that the Truth likens it to the killing of the whole of humanity. For this reason we cannot say to someone who bought a knife for domestic reasons, that he brought a criminal tool. He only brought a tool that could be used for both permissible and forbidden acts. So even the one who has the freedom of choice, his actions emanate from him being granted such a bounty from Allah Glorified is He. But has The True One Glorified is He obliged such a sinner to commit a sin? No, Allah Glorified is He clarified what He likes, i.e. that which is permissible and impermissible. However, the one who has been forbidden from these acts ultimately has the choice to do that which will bring him benefit or that which will bring him harm.

'He is Allah: there is no god but Him. He will gather you all together on the Day of Resurrection…' (an-Nisa': 87); this is a statement made by Almighty Allah. The human credibility of statements is likely to be questioned; however the divine statement is upright. Yet, likely is still the correctness of the discourse in general. For this reason the Truth appends the verse as follows: '….and whose word could be truer than the word of Allah?' (an-Nisa': 87) But is truth gradable? There are no degrees or levels in truth; the truth is the correspondence between discourse and objective reality. Being a rational creature, before man speaks he ponders over that which he plans to talk about, and then verbalises it as a result. Thus discourse has three dimensions: the mental dimension, the wording and phrasing of the discourse and finally the relation between the discourse and the actuality to which it refers. When someone says: Zayd is a hard worker, the thought of Zayd being a hard worker must have occurred to his mind; this is the mental and intellectual dimension of the discourse. The person then utters the statement; this is the wording and phrasing of it. Yet the question remains: is there really a person whose name is Zayd who is a hard worker? If actuality corresponds to both the wording of the discourse and the mental or ideal dimension of it, then the discourse is deemed true. In contrast if there is no one by the name Zayd who is not a hard worker, then there is not objective actuality that corresponds to the ideal thought and wording of the discourse. So the discourse is said to be untrue and is deemed false. Truth implies an identical correspondence between the thinking-phrasing of the discourse and the objective actuality with which it is claimed to correspond to.

Why does the liar, lie then? He lies so that a certain benefit is attained or harm eschewed, seemingly, by not saying the truth. Here is an example: A child may break something in the house such as a table. When this happens, the father may ask his son: 'Have you broken the table?' At this point, the son may reply: 'No; I have not.' In saying so, the child thinks that he is attaining a benefit or avoiding a harm and loss, namely, the punishment because he knows that saying the truth may cause him to be punished. Hence his interest in avoiding a detriment that might befall him if he says the truth, is the main cause for lying. He resorts to wording that contradicts reality.

Needless to say, a man chooses to lie because he wants to achieve a particular benefit or alternatively safeguard himself against an impending harm. The thing that benefits man has to be stronger than him; the same holds for that which may harm him. But no entity is capable of either benefiting or harming Allah. If Allah Glorified is He is to speak, then it is an absolute truth. Allah is Most Exalted and Transcendent to all reasons that may cause one to lie.

Since Allah is the sole key speaker who tactfully briefs us on the reality of life, who gives detailed accounts of what goes beyond the actuality of our lives and clarifies to us the unknown that does not fall within the ambit of what we experience and see, this means that he speaks to us frequently. When Allah says: '…and whose word could be truer than the word of Allah?' (an-Nisa': 87) We accept His account as a non-negotiable fact. The comparative form—in truer—is not used to actually distinguish between a true and much truer discourse. It is rather functionally intended to show us that Allah's discourse to us is plentiful; the intensification in this context is used to refer to the frequency and amount of discourse instead of referring to a distinction between a true and a much truer discourse.

The disparity may be related to the degree of truth as well; how? Let us assume that someone witnessed an accident wherein someone killed another. He may then be a witness, and testify that he saw the victim bleeding due to the fight he had with the killer. However, another witness may relate all the details that preceded the beginning of the altercation between the murderer and victim until the former actually killed the latter. Consequently we realise that the second witness was more comprehensive in his account of the truth than the first witness. It is true that the first witness provided a true testimony nevertheless the testimony of the second witness was more detailed.

Therefore the verse: '…and whose word could be truer than the word of Allah?' (an-Nisa': 87) means that Allah is truest in the sense that His statements are the most comprehensive. It is an absolute truth with no gradations. The comparative form was thereby used to indicate that the amount of the truth that emanates from Allah is infinite and that Allah knows things in themselves in the most comprehensive way possible. The creations, by contrast, may at one point say the truth and at another lie; for instance you may say something thinking that it is true when in fact it is not.

Here is an illustrative example. Someone may for instance say: so and so person visited such and such person last night. The person who made such a statement so thought because he saw the light on in the guest room of that person. Upon inquiring about the identity of the visitor he was told that it was so and so. He thus relates the news of the visit based on what he thought. In this case he cannot be called a liar, even if his inference transpires to be false.

We have to distinguish between a statement and the one who communicates it: the informant; how? If someone says Zayd is a hard worker, we should inquire: is there really someone called Zayd and is he really a hard worker? This is called investigating the objective reality of the statement. Furthermore we should inquire into whether or not the informant actually thinks so. Thus we need to ascertain and verify two things: the certainty of the existence of the subject matter of the statement and its inference. Accordingly the statement would be true and the informant, nonetheless, in both cases is honest as well.

Supposedly you have stated that Zayd is a hard worker based on somebody's account even though Zayd is not really like this. In such a situation you may be considered truthful based on your inference, but the statement you made is not true in reality. So one could infer that there is a kind of disparity between the truth of a statement and that of the informant.' If the inference underlying a statement actually corresponds to reality then the statement would be true and so would the informant. If a statement corresponds to the objective reality to which it refers and is at odds with the inference, then only the statement would be rendered true. This is exemplified in the stance of the hypocrites about whom Allah says: 'When the hypocrites come to you [Prophet Muhammad], they say, 'We bear witness that you are the Messenger of God....' (al-Munafiqun: 1) Their statement is true as they testified the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad, yet Allah Almighty adds: '...and He bears witness that the hypocrites are liars'.

The statement is true but the hypocrites, i.e. the informants are liars because they were not convinced of its truth when they admitted it; they were therefore liars. Accordingly, the scrupulous examination of the statement reflects the difference between the truth of the content of the statement and the falsity of the inner contention of the informants. In this manner the truth of any speaker means that his/her discourse corresponds with his/her inner belief and conviction.

What they lied about is their statement: '…we bear witness…' and not their statement: '…We bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah…' (al-Munafiqun: 1). True testimony necessitates the correspondence between the statement made by the tongue and the contention residing in the heart.

For this reason when some people read the Quran without a proper understanding of the Arabic language, they may superficially understand the following verse in a mistaken way: 'When the hypocrites come to you [Prophet Muhammad], they say, 'We bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah.' Allah knows that you truly are His Messenger and He bears witness that the hypocrites are liars.' (al-Munafiqun: 1)

But how could Allah Almighty bear witness that the hypocrites are liars even though Allah Almighty knows the truth of what the hypocrites have testified for? To this we reply: the statement was not false; Allah Glorified is He did not say anything to falsify it. But He pointed out that although the statement was true, the hypocrites lied in their testimony because they manifested something other than what they concealed in their hearts and truly believed. Allah Glorified is He falsifies their testimony and not the statement about Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him being the Messenger of Allah.

'He is Allah: there is no god but Him. He will gather you all together on the on the Day of Resurrection [the coming of] which is beyond all doubt: and whose word could be truer than Allah's?' (an-Nisa': 87) A believer has an unquestionable faith in the Day of Resurrection; indeed logic necessitates the advent of the Day of Resurrection. If there were any doubts or suspicions about whether or not there is a Day of Resurrection, those who have deviated in their worldly life and offended the honour of other people and usurped their money and spread corruption on earth would be the lucky winners. By contrast the good and the few straight people would be the ones who lived their lives in naivety. Accordingly, logic necessitates that inasmuch as there are people who have wronged others and committed acts of aggression and others who have been wronged, that there must be some kind of reckoning for their accountability. There would not be any reckoning unless death is to be followed by resurrection and summoning in the presence of Almighty Allah on the Day of Judgement. The evidence of this is furnished by those who deny the bounty of Almighty Allah, i.e. atheists themselves. As top lawmakers of non-religious societies are the ones who enact the laws that guarantee the protection of social mobility, they enact these laws so that whoever violates them would be accountable and consequently punished. Since receiving punishment is the only deterrent for people from overtly committing a crime, what would be the situation then? The adept and clever would be the one who succeeds in escaping and avoiding the punishment of the leaders of the society and manages to hide away from them so that they would not be able to penalise him.

Such atheistic societies forge laws to protect themselves. But what would these societies do with those who err and hide? According to their laws, they should have been punished and penalised for their deeds. These societies should thus have said that there is another place for reckoning and punishment even if one escapes the worldly place for it. As an atheist, you have decreed a punishment for anyone who violates your laws. However, you can only apply these laws to those whom you can spot and catch. But what about those whom you could not actually spot violating the law and could not apprehend by your own hands? We, people of faith, thereby say to atheists that our logic complements your inadequate thinking. We also say to all creatures: if you have managed to escape the worldly justice, you will not be able to escape the heavenly one that misses nothing. Accordingly, we deduce the evidence in support of the truth and necessity of the Methodology of Allah Almighty from the disbelievers who as a matter of fact, should be grateful to the people of faith for we have made up for the inadequacy in human legislation. This is a protection of the society against crime, violation and escaping the penalty of the man-made laws.

And '…whose word could be truer than the word of Allah?' (an-Nisa': 87) This means that no one puts forward a truer discourse than Allah. As a comparative form '…truer…' is used not because there are different degrees of truth; truth as a quality is non-gradable because truth is one and the same thing; truth is the correspondence between what is said and the objective reality about which it is said. Rather, '…truer…' is used to indicate the amount of truth that Allah Glorified is He imparts to us about both what we witness in our world and what we are unaware of from the Unknown World. Humans can only make claims in their discourse about the world they perceive with their senses. However, when Allah speaks to us, His discourse also refers to the unknown world. The word of Allah is much truer than any other entity because Allah the Almighty is the one who advanced the greatest amount of true discourses. Subsequently, Allah Almighty is He says:

فَمَا لَكُمۡ فِي ٱلۡمُنَٰفِقِينَ فِئَتَيۡنِ وَٱللَّهُ أَرۡكَسَهُم بِمَا كَسَبُوٓاْۚ أَتُرِيدُونَ أَن
تَهۡدُواْ مَنۡ أَضَلَّ ٱللَّهُۖ وَمَن يُضۡلِلِ ٱللَّهُ فَلَن تَجِدَ لَهُۥ سَبِيلٗا ﴿٨٨﴾

[Believers], why are you divided in two about the hypocrites, when God Himself has rejected them because of what they have done? Do you want to guide those God has left to stray? If God leaves anyone to stray, you [Prophet] will never find the way for him [88] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 88)

Allah Glorified is He always relates cause to effect, and the premise to the result. He the Almighty discussed the reasons justifying the legitimacy of calling the believers for fighting only for a specific goal that is, imparting the Methodology of Allah the Almighty to the people. Beyond this—meaning after receiving the Methodology of Allah —people have the freedom of choice. Thus fighting was not decreed to impose the Methodology of Allah Almighty. Rather, fighting was legislated to impose the freedom to choose the Methodology of Almighty Allah. The evidence is the saying of Allah Glorified is He: 'There shall be no coercion in matters of faith…' (al-Baqara: 256).

Accordingly, Islam does not impose itself as a religion. Rather, Islam came to enact and enforce the freedom of belief and right to choose one's religion. Islam combats the forces that impede one's freedom to choose his/her religion; Islam also stands against all these forces until they cease to coercively dominate their subjects; when the believers take over they would allow them to freely embrace whichever belief they wish. The evidence is that people continue to retain their dogmas and beliefs in the countries conquered by Muslims by force. If fighting was decreed to impose Islam as a religion, we would not have found a single non-Muslim religion in any of the countries that Islam conquered by the sword.

After Allah Almighty had talked about fighting in several places in the chapter of an-Nisa' and said to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him:

'So [Prophet] fight in the way of Allah. You are accountable only for yourself. And encourage the believers on. It may well be that Allah curbs the power of the disbelievers, for He is stronger in might and more terrible in punishment.' (an-Nisa': 84)

Allah Glorified is He puts forward an interrogative issue; it involves both a sense of disapproval as well as condemnation and chastisement. This is quite widespread in all similar styles in the Noble Quran. If you encounter the form: 'How, then, could you be…' indicates that the rational reckoning implies that you should do what follows this form and that it would be strange if you acted otherwise. This style is not used unless it is intended to deplore and condemn something that you ought not to do or something that you ought to have done and you did not.

For instance, a father may say to his son: how, then, could you not be studying even though your exams are approaching? It is as if the logic of reason necessitates that if the son had neglected studying throughout the academic year, he should not have neglected studying before the exam. This is a rationally intuitive matter. It is as if Islamic legislation and the Quran are telling the believers not to initiate an action unless they thoroughly detect its correctness; No believer should take any course of action irrationally. The same applies to quitting an action without a plausible reason. A similar expression to '…how, then, could you be…' was also used by the children of Prophet Jacob—the Arabic word here translated as minds—means group. A group is a number of individuals who have come together despite their differences in interests and passions. Yet when it comes to the expression of faith in religion, they have to unanimously fall under the right methodological course of faith and interest. For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says: 'None of you will be a true believer unless his passion goes in conformity with the message I brought about.'(1)

The cause of difference among people is that their interests and passions are not the same; they are not gathered around the tenants of religion and nor the order of Allah of holding fast to His rope all together. But what about the hypocrites and why were the believers divided in their stance towards them?

The word (Fi'a) —as we learnt—means a group but not in an absolute or generic sense. For instance, you would not call a group of people who sporadically amble down a street without a common purpose or destination a (fi'a). The word (fi'a) more aptly refers to a group of people who unite in their pursuit of a single goal because the word (fi'a) implies that they refer and resort to each other in pursuing and deliberating the matter that unites them. The same holds for the word (ta'ifa) —which also means group—yet it refers to a group of people who orbit and go around the same thing. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'How, then, could you be of two minds about the hypocrites…' (an-Nisa': 88). This is an alert and alarm from Allah so that we keep our minds from being divided on the same issue especially if we agree upon our belief one God and one path. The hypocrites as we know are the ones who apparently purport to be believers and covertly hide their disbelief.

We know that all abstract meanings are referred to by words derived from sensible things. The reason is that sense perception is the first means for conceptualisation and cognition. Meanings follow afterwards. If we trace the etymological root of the word (munafiqun)—the Arabic word for hypocrites—we will realize that it is derived from a sensible phenomenon that the Arabs used to experience in their environment. An animal called (al-yarbu') which looked like the mouse or the lizard and which used to live in the Arabian desert. (Al-yarbu') was known for its cunningness and capacity to dodge things. In order to safeguard itself against the animals that may attack it, it used to dig two or more holes for itself. Thus once it gets attacked it flees away from the predator to one of the holes. The predator then waits for it at the opening of the hole so (al-yarbu') quits that hole to another one. It is as if this animal has planned and prepared for itself outlets to enhance its capacity for manoeuvring. It makes an opening through which it enters the hole in addition to a second and a third one in order that it may escape out of any of these. The same holds for hypocrites.

We know that there are three ways or modes in which one may believe or disbelieve in Islam: one may be a believer who avows faith verbally and believes with his heart; thus his/her organs are completely in harmony. Secondly, one may be a disbeliever who does not believe in Islam and does not verbally avow otherwise; his/her organs are also harmonious with each other even though punishment awaits him/her in the afterlife. His/Her organs are harmonious; yet, they are channelled towards a detrimental purpose, i.e. disbelief. In contrast with these two kinds, a hypocrite is the one who is unswervingly a disbeliever yet his tongue avows the opposite of what his heart believes. That is to say his faculties are not in harmony with each other; his tongue utters things at odds with what maliciously lurks in his heart. For this reason he lives torn apart and constantly in anxiety. He wants to enjoy the benefits of both belief and disbelief. This is the case of the hypocrite.

There is a group in the history of Islam who upon witnessing the victory of the Muslims in the battle of Badr, said to themselves: 'fortune favours the Muslims; however we cannot be certain that after their triumph in Badr and their killing of the fiercest veterans of Quraysh and the spoils of wars they earned, they would still come back to us.' This group of people resorted to hypocrisy and purported to be Muslims while they were in Mecca in order to protect themselves when the Muslims conquer Mecca. Alternatively they may be the group that went to Medina as emigrants and could not stand the bitterness of living in exile and away from their homes, families and wealth and so, upon deliberating matters, decided to abjure Islam in order to be able to go back to Mecca. They thereby said to the believers in Medina: 'we have fortunes and wealth in Mecca and we will go to take it and come back.'

The news then reached the Muslims who were divided between two groups: a group of them contended that they should fight the hypocrites while another group argued that they should not. Those who contended that they should fight the hypocrites were mainly driven by their passion to defend faith. Those who argued against fighting maintained that the hypocrites are a group of people which purported to have faith yet we cannot tell what is hidden in their hearts. They may have said so out of sympathy towards the hypocrites as some of the hypocrites may have been their relatives.

Consequently the Quran came forth to put an end to the division of Muslims and decisively overcome the dispute amongst them. Considering that the Quran interferes to decisively conclude a matter, it indicates that the Lord of the Quran is the One Who fashioned and guided the believers; therefore once He spots a defect in them, He the Almighty decides to put an end to this matter. In this vein Almighty Allah says: ‘How, then, could you be of two minds about the hypocrites…’ (an-Nisa’: 88).

The speech is addressed to the Muslim camp. His saying: ‘How, then, could you…’ means that you are united in pursuing the same goal. His saying ‘two minds’ indicates that there is a difference among them. The expression ‘…two minds…’ is in opposition to the ‘…how then could you be…’ with which the True Lord the Exalted commenced His discourse. It is as if Allah Almighty wants the one who is receiving the Quran to understand the meaning as follows: how could you then divide into groups on your stance towards the hypocrites? This is in a sense a chastising and threatening style; it also indicates that such a thing should not have happened. But does this discourse apply to all those who are addressed by it? Let us investigate the matter. Is the Quran on the side of those who maintain that they ought to fight the hypocrites or is it rather, on the side of those who argue otherwise? If the Quran is on the side of the former it will not blame this group; it will rather ennoble and honour it. The Quran advocates those who call for fighting the hypocrites and not the second group. For this reason it blames and chastises the latter. When the style of the Quran blames and chastises a group that holds a specific opinion, it subliminally honours those who hold the opposite stance. In this manner, we must immediately consider the latter, namely the one who holds the opposite, honoured point of view, excluded from blame because the fact that he/she aligns himself with the truth gives him/her a reason to be proud.

Allah Almighty says: ‘How, then, could you be of two minds about the hypocrites…’ (an-Nisa’: 88). This means that He is saying: what reason do you have to dispute and disagree amongst yourselves on the issue of the hypocrites. Logic and analogy requires that we study the matter both from the perspective of reason and faith. If you do so, you will arrive at the conclusion that you must be of the same mind. Chastisement and condemnation is intended to imply that you believers have no ground to be divided in disagreement.

Allah Almighty then says: ‘…seeing that Allah [Himself] has disowned them because of their guilt...’ (an-Nisa’: 88). Once you encounter the word

'…disown…' what should we infer even if we are not sure about its meaning in the context? We ought to infer that Allah the Exalted has doomed them to an inappropriate status. The style makes us feel that Allah the Almighty has doomed them and made their front their back and vice versa in the sense that they have turned against each other. Even if we do not understand the exact meaning of the word or its etymological root, we can infer the overall meaning from the suggestions of the style of the Quran or its words or even the harmony among the letters constituting the word'…seeing that Allah [Himself] has disowned them because of their guilt...' (an-Nisa': 88).

(Arkasahum) —the Arabic root here translated as disowned—is derived from (rakasahum) which means that Allah Almighty has returned them to a past state. It is as if they were in one particular state, quitted it and then Allah Almighty returned them to that original state. They were originally disbelievers, then they believed and then Almighty Allah caused them to relapse back into disbelief. But did Almighty Allah do so indiscriminately or coercively? No; Allah Glorified is He did so because of their guilt. This is the case so that no one would push us into confusion and wonder: why does Allah the Almighty punish and chastise them if He is the One Who did so to them? For this reason Allah the Almighty says: '…seeing that Allah [Himself] has disowned them because of their guilt?...' (an-Nisa': 88) (Raqasahum) is etymologically derived from the word (rakas) —with a high accented (ra'). This means reversing something. From the same root, the word (riks) —with a lower accent (ra') —is also derived; this word denotes the secretions produced by the stomach of the human being before it receives food. We may say that someone is feeling sick or that someone vomited.

Upon considering this process we notice that the food man enjoys, desires, eats, for which his eyes yearn, his hands cut and his teeth chew joyfully, once chewed, it goes down to the stomach where it is mixed with digestive juices secreted by the stomach, and takes a completely different form. If one throws up what is in his stomach, one cannot stand the food or its smell in such a form. Rather, man digests the food in order to extract the useful materials and excretes the rest; indeed the smell of natural wastes is not worse than the smell of food if it is thrown up. If one sees someone throwing up food and another excreting food out of his stomach, one will be more disgusted and abominated by the scene of the one who is throwing up more than by the sight of the one who is excreting the food. The reason is that vomiting causes food that has moved from the stage wherein it is desired, enjoyably chewed and has not as of yet been utilised.

For this reason there is a proverb that says: ‘whatever departs from the tongue becomes rotten.’ (Riks) is the vomit that one throws up before he avails himself of it. Food after it is consumed and excreted through the proper outlet becomes organic excrement and waste. In this fashion Allah the Almighty used the word that best befits them: ‘ Allah [Himself] has disowned them because of their guilt...’ (an-Nisa’: 88). This means that they committed apostasy before they could even avail themselves of faith.

This is the expression of the Quran that uses the most suitable word for conveying the meaning. Furthermore this expression makes us stay away from them; hence (riks) is repelling and rejecting; but is it so in an absolute sense or in a qualified manner? It is so by way of humiliation; how? Here is an example; if something is supposed to stand uprightly in a vertical position, (riks) in this case would mean to keep him upside down, i.e to reverse his position. For this reason, the rejection is not ordinary; it is a rejection that humiliates the one that is being rejected and disowned.

As much as any object must be placed in a horizontal position on its base in order to be upright, (riks) is to place what ought to be in the front in the back and vice versa. That is to say we change the structure of the thing and its original state. The Quran describes both the disbelievers and the hypocrites; ‘But then they relapsed into their former way of thinking…’ (al-Anbiya’: 65). The Arabic word here translated as relapsed is (nukisu) which means to invert upside down. This word is used because the head is naturally erected on the body. However, such inversion makes the head in place of the feet and the feet in place of the head. Thus His saying: ‘… Allah [Himself] has disowned them...’ (an-Nisa’: 88) means that Allah the Almighty did not merely disown and repudiate them; rather, He did so in a humiliating manner that subverts their state.

‘…Allah [Himself] has disowned them because of their guilt...’ (an-Nisa’: 88). Accordingly no one may say: if Allah the Almighty is the One Who disowned them what sin did they commit? Allah Almighty has disowned them only because of their guilt. They were active subjects rather than passive objects.

Here is an example-and to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection. Schools and universities set a grading scale to determine the criterion of success and failure in each subject; for instance in a particular subject a student may need to score at least sixty percent in order to pass, while in a different subject a student may need to score at least seventy percent in order to pass. When students, then, sit for an exam and one of them fails, no one should say that the school was the cause of his/her failure. It is true that the school failed this student, but it did so according to the rules it has set and of which the student was aware before taking the exam. The real cause of the student's failure is that he/she did not exert enough effort; in such a manner the student is the one responsible for his/her own failure.

In the same realm, Allah the Exalted did not arbitrarily disown the hypocrites. Rather, it was the hypocrites who acted in a way that made the universal laws lead them to (riks) —disowning by Allah Glorified is He. They are like the student who did not study and so could not answer the questions in the exam. We are not to assume that the school failed the student, rather, the student is the one who caused his own failure.

For this reason if someone says: ' Allah is the One Who misled them; so what sin did they commit?' Strangely enough this very same person tends to follow the mainstream version of those who went astray due to their excessive self-indulgence. Consequently the following verse puts an end to their argument for '… Allah [Himself] disowned them because of their guilt...' (an-Nisa': 88). Allah Almighty misleads those who went astray due to their own sin; but how does Allah do so?

We learnt before that guidance may imply one of two meanings: either Allah Glorified is He revealed guidance through prophets, messengers and books or Allah Glorified is He revealed guidance exclusively to those He selected through extending His own aid and support. But those who indulge themselves in sinning wish that the religion would—God forbid—transpire to be false. This is because if the religion turns out to be true, this will imply that they are doomed to a terrible demise and a destiny which they will not be able to endure. For this reason they tend to discredit the religion through engaging in criticism brought about by their superficial understanding of the religion. This is why their arguments are always like the arguments of those who indulge themselves in sinning: they say as long as God has decreed and preordained everything I do; why would He torture me if He is the One Who decreed sinning upon me?

To those who promote such a flimsy argument, we pose the following question: why did you choose to believe that Allah the Almighty is the One Who enacts everything specifically only in this particular situation? As long as Allah the Exalted is the One Who decreed everything, why do you not believe in and accept the rulings of the Methodology He prescribed for life? Nonetheless, they take an irrational stance; the rational standpoint requires that one considers the opposite question, that is to say: why would Allah reward a servant of His for his disobedience if he has decreed that he should be obedient? Why did they overlook the case of obedience and the reward for it? The reason is that they know in such a case that the end is good; they therefore only focus on the other scenario that leads to an evil end. Only the one who indulges himself in sinning would say such a thing; no one who truly adheres to the Methodology of Allah Glorified is He would ever say it. A believer will always want things to happen in accordance with the prescription of Allah Glorified is He. For this reason—till today—I wonder about the scholars of the past who turned this question into a matter of dispute and divided into Mu'tazilites and Sunnites thereupon.

Upon addressing any matter one must always bear in the back of his mind that Islam was revealed to address the instinctive natural human disposition in general. It was not exclusively revealed to philosophers; rather, it was revealed to be understood by any mind driven by common sense. Islam is based on egalitarianism; the shepherd is equal to the philosopher; the sweeper of the streets or shoe polisher is viewed and treated equally to the philosopher or lawyer. Religion is not revealed exclusively to a special sect or group. Rather, the Methodology of Allah the Almighty was revealed to all; so the evidence in support of its truth and veracity has to be clear to everyone. In addition, when informed that Allah the Almighty knows best of all, the believers have to humanely submit for He the Almighty says to you: 'How could it be that He who has created [all] should not know [all]? Of course, He alone is unfathomable [in His wisdom], all-aware!' (al-Mulk: 14)

The craftsman who made a chair and Allah Glorified is He to Whom belongs the utmost example of perfection, knows that it is made of wood. Furthermore, he knows what kind of wood it was made from—whether it is beech, arrow or mahogany. He knows what kind of nails and bolts connect between the different parts of the chair and of what metal they are made of. In addition, the chair maker knows the type of adhesive he used to glue together the different parts of the chair as well as the paint used.

Therefore interpreting the verse: 'How could it be that He who has created [all] should not know [all]? Of course, He alone is unfathomable [in His wisdom], all-aware!' (al-Mulk: 14) should not spur any arguments. Similarly, a carpenter who wants to show his skill and craft to his customers often says to the latter: 'I will make you a chair of so and so kind of wood; but you will have to pass by me regularly to see the different stages of production.' He then starts to produce the chair under the supervision of the customer.

Similarly, a nomad would know how to travel in the desert and what should be furnished on the back of the camel he rides in order to be able to ride it properly. Furthermore an Arab would know how to make Fustat, a house of hair. Allah the Almighty has put forward a statement that refutes all disputes and eliminates the need to plunge into any sophistry or polemics with premises and conclusions. Allah Glorified is He advanced the following decisive statement: 'How could it be that He who has created [all] should not know [all]? Of course, He alone is unfathomable [in His wisdom], all-aware!' (al-Mulk: 14) He knows and this is an easy matter for Him. For this reason I wonder why those old scholars went adrift in such a philosophical maze for Islam is the religion of natural disposition.

For this reason, scholars who debated this matter—may Allah Glorified is He reward them well for their deeds—ultimately said:

Daring minds are doomed

Perishing through the inquisitive seekers

Lifelong laborious quests

Waning of nothing but
The tales of so and so

I wonder what good theoretical philosophy did bring about to the world. Material and physical philosophy was sprung out of it and led to variegated innovations and inventions of which creations of Allah Almighty availed themselves; the question is: what did theoretical philosophy accomplish? The answer is nothing. We say Islam brought about a creed based on common sense; this implies that all people are equal according to this creed. Rational evidence and clues must be clear and evident for both the educated and the non-educated.

Philosophers are the ones who distinguished among proofs of purpose, proofs of providence and proofs of intention. However, a simple nomad wandering in the desert may conclude upon finding some droppings of a camel and some footsteps in the sand that indicate that a camel passed and someone was walking in this area; does all of this not indicate that one can infer the existence of The Subtle and The Aware. The nomad did not need to forge himself in the entanglement of philosophy or its debates as some philosophers were cast adrift in rational argumentation that the nomad solved in one sentence. Accordingly when a man once asked one of those who was well guided by Allah Glorified is He: do you not long for meeting Allah Glorified is He? The latter answered: one misses the one who is absent. But when was Allah Glorified is He ever absent?

This is why we say to those who disputed whether or not it was just on the part of Allah the Almighty to disown and reject the hypocrites: we want to respect your minds and see why you disagreed on this matter although Allah the Almighty says: '… Allah [Himself] has disowned them because of their guilt...' (an-Nisa': 88).

Presumingly those disagreeing parties were well intentioned; each of them was still in favour of one attribute of Allah Glorified is He. For instance one of them claimed that: Allah Glorified is He is the creator of everything. To such a person we say: you are biased towards the attribute of capability and the infinite possession of it by The True Lord. Another person claimed: Allah Glorified is He is the All-Just. Accordingly, Allah the Almighty would not create or preordain that someone would be a disbeliever and then torture that person for being a disbeliever. This person is in favour of the attribute of justice. That is to say each of these two people is thinking of only one attribute of the True Lord. Both of them forgot that these are attributes of His own essence—Allah Glorified is He is both The All Capable and The All-Just. The existence of one of these attributes does not rule out the other.

We say to the one who says that Allah the Almighty is the Creator of everything and every action; what is an action? It is essentially the orientation of an organ to perform a specific task. For instance the one who rubs his face with his hands directs his hands towards his face. Such an act of directing or orienting may not be performed by the one to whom the final action is ascribed. The evidence in support of this is the case of the robot; we may press more than one button in order for a robot to carry out a specific activity. By contrast if a human being wills to rub his face with his hands he may do so immediately. No one who wants to rub his face would press a button in order to perform such an activity.

Once a human being wills for an action to happen, he/she can immediately execute it. A driver of a loader may need to move a number of iron sticks in order to move the loader downwards. He may then need to move them again in order to let the dust out. Furthermore, he needs to move the sticks another time in order to hold together the dust pebbles and another time in order to lift them. All of these procedures are thus needed to move the sand and dust from one place to another whereas when one wants to rub his face he does so even if he does not know what muscles he needs to move. So who did all of this on behalf of the human being? It is Allah the Glorified and Exalted.

Therefore we say the following to anyone who is biased towards and thinks of Allah Glorified is He only in terms of His Capability. Allah the Almighty is the One Who actually performed the action, while the servant of Allah the Almighty is the one who channelled the energy that was originally created by Allah Glorified is He. If the servant of Allah Glorified is He navigates his power in a course that goes at odds with the prescriptions of Allah Glorified is He, he would be sinful, yet steering it in the righteous direction of the divine guidance, he would be obedient and pious; similarly he is to be rewarded. For instance, a murderer is not the ultimate cause of the act of killing and murder for he did not tell the one he murdered: be dead and so he died. A killer plans for his misdeed; he brings a knife, a sword or a gun and uses any of which to perpetrate the crime. The tool used is in this manner the actual agent that accomplished the act of murder. The murderer only took the appropriate tool required for performing the act of killing and directed it towards the task. Accurately enough for the just seeker to realise the fact that what Allah the Almighty torments a person for, is the sin itself since he used a tool that can be used for many actions. However, such a sinner chose to use such a tool for an action that goes at odds to what Allah the Almighty intended and would not like. Despite this Allah the Exalted is still the Ultimate Doer of everything.

Let us revert to the verse about which we are putting forward out thoughts: ‘How, then, could you be of two minds about the hypocrites, seeing that Allah [Himself] has disowned them because of their guilt…’ (an-Nisa’: 88). As long Allah Glorified is He is the One Who disowned them because of their guilt and as long as you believe in Allah, you must hold the same opinion about the hypocrites. For this reason Allah the Almighty wonders: '…Do you, perchance, seek to guide those whom Allah has let go astray…' (an-Nisa’: 88). Allah Glorified is He does not want to give them an excuse; rather, Allah Glorified is He wants to show them His guidance which they are incapable of reaching on their own. Indeed had Allah Glorified is He misguided them they would have been able to find guidance; but why do some of the believers support them? When Allah Almighty wills, He guides whomever He wants to the righteous path and leads astray whomever He wills according to the rules He has set for guidance and misguidance.

When we encounter the expression ‘Allah has guided’; we may understand it in two senses. The first is in the sense that He led and showed the way to a specific end; the second is that He enabled and supported. Thus ‘to guide’ may either mean lead or show the path or it may mean provide support and assistance to the guided one. We have previously given the following example. Assume that someone is walking in the street and wants to head to Alexandria and does not know the way. He may ask a traffic man for directions and the traffic man may direct him to the road leading to Alexandria. The traffic man guided the man and directed him towards the road to Alexandria; however, he did not force this man to choose the road. So if the traveller believed what the traffic officer told him he would tell him: 'thank you; may Allah Glorified is He make a lot of people like you; I am elated that I found you otherwise I would have suffered.' The traffic officer must respond as follows: He should say you are a good man, but you need to bear in mind that there is a bump and an obstacle on the road to Alexandria; I will thereby ride with you in order to direct you to the place of such an obstacle. In this manner the role of the traffic officer transcends the stage of guidance to that of support. Allah Glorified is He explained: I will guide all people, lead and support them; hence I will support whoever takes the initiative and believes in Me.

For this reason Allah Almighty says: 'and as for [the tribe of] Thamud, We offered them guidance, but they chose blindness in preference to guidance…' (Fussilat: 17) Guidance in this context is meant only in the sense of leading to and showing the way. Those who were guided in this sense have the choice to either pursue the path of guidance or not. Guidance in this manner may occur in the sense of leading and directing someone to the way to his destination or in the sense of supporting and providing assistance to someone. But who does the True Lord support and assist? He supports those who believe in Him; conversely, Allah the Almighty does not support those who abjure faith in Him, '…since Allah does not grace with His guidance people who refuse to acknowledge the truth.' (at-Tawba: 37) In addition Allah the Almighty says: '…and [know that] Allah does not grace iniquitous folk with His guidance.' (at-Tawba: 24)

Conclusively Allah Glorified is He provides two kinds of guidance: a guidance that He conferred upon all people, namely, guidance by way of leading to the righteous Methodology and the guidance with which He singled out those who believe in him, namely the guidance of support. For this reason Allah Glorified is He said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Verily, you cannot guide aright everyone whom you love....' (al-Qasas: 56) This statement negates the capability of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him to guide whomever he wishes. However, Allah Almighty also said: '…and, verily, [on the strength thereof] you, too, shall guide [men] onto the straightway–' (ash-Shura: 52). It is inconceivable that Allah Almighty would deny that His Messenger is capable of extending guidance to whoever he wants and then affirms this capability in another place. We infer that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him may guide people to the truth by way of leading people and directing them to the way. However, he peace and blessings be upon him cannot guide by way of providing assistance and support. Allah Glorified is He has guided all people and led them to the path towards the good; in this vein Allah the Almighty makes things easier for whoever believes in and orients himself towards Him.

Hence we can fully comprehend the meaning of the verse: '…Allah [Himself] has disowned them because of their guilt. Do you, perchance, seek to guide those whom Allah has let go astray – when for him whom Allah lets go astray you can never find any way?' (an-Nisa': 88) Allah the Almighty only lets go astray the one who deserves it due to his guilt; therefore, you will not be able to find any way to guide him/her. Allah the Almighty could have said: do you want to guide the one whom Allah lets go astray? You cannot guide those who Allah has let go astray. But it is more eloquent when Allah the Almighty explains to us: you can not guide the one who earned and deserved to be led astray. The reason is that there is no way to which you can guide him/her. Thus what is impossible is the avenue of guidance and not only guidance itself.

The way to guide someone is only through the path of knowledge. Consequently you cannot guide anyone unless you know the way. You will not find any way out for the one whom Allah Glorified is He has let astray because it is impossible to reverse or even suspend the decree of Allah Almighty to let him/her go astray. This means that there will not be a pretext or ground at all upon which he/she can suspend the will of Allah Almighty. For this reason we have taken those concerned here. The hypocrites keep up their faith pretence for a period of time and then give it up to disbelief for another. Deep inside their hearts, they deny belief even though they avow their faith in Islam with their tongues, as for true faith, it never took a strong grip of their hearts.

What is dearer to man? What resides in his heart or what does he verbally utters with his tongue? That which is dearer is whatever takes a strong grip deep in the heart. As long as they do not wholeheartedly believe and they just verbally purport to have faith, their creed is essentially disbelief. As long as their creed is disbelief, they would not want to side with faith. Rather, they want to push and drag the believers towards the camp of the disbelievers. For this reason, Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

وَدُّواْ لَوۡ تَكۡفُرُونَ كَمَا كَفَرُواْ فَتَكُونُونَ سَوَآءٗۖ فَلَا تَتَّخِذُواْ مِنۡهُمۡ
أَوۡلِيَآءَ حَتَّىٰ يُهَاجِرُواْ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِۚ فَإِن تَوَلَّوۡاْ فَخُذُوهُمۡ وَٱقۡتُلُوهُمۡ
حَيۡثُ وَجَدتُّمُوهُمۡۖ وَلَا تَتَّخِذُواْ مِنۡهُمۡ وَلِيّٗا وَلَا نَصِيرًا ٨٩

They would dearly like you to reject faith, as they themselves have done, to be like them. So do not take them as allies until they migrate [to Medina] for God's cause. If they turn [on you], then seize and kill them wherever you encounter them. Take none of them as an ally or supporter [89] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 89)

The pronoun 'They…' in 'They would love to…' refers to the hypocrites about whom the Muslims disagreed. Allah Almighty then ruled in favour of the group that wanted to take a strict and punitive stance towards them. He therefore revealed the verse (an-Nisa': 89) —disbelief here translated as 'denying the truth'—means a cover; further the verb (kafra) means to cover up. Allah Almighty can never be effaced by his enemies due to the greatness of the faith in Islam and the Greatness of Allah Glorified is He Himself. In this manner the term that was used to determine the opposite of the presence of Allah Almighty is itself the evidence in support of veracity of having faith and belief in the presence of Allah Glorified is He. When someone says 'I deny the truth' in the sense of veiling and concealing its existence, this means that what he covered up was already there before he denied its being. For this reason the word (kufr) —denying the truth—is itself evidence in support of having faith in the presence of Allah Glorified is He. The word (kufr) itself means that faith already exists and that the one who has it is forcing himself to veil and conceal it.

'They would love to see you deny the truth even as they have denied it…' (an-Nisa': 89). This saying followed after Allah Almighty had said: 'How, then, could you be of two minds about the hypocrites?…' (an-Nisa': 88) This indicates that they are described in one instance as hypocrites and in another as disbelievers. Allah Almighty called them hypocrites in a verse and described them in this verse as disbelievers: ‘They would love to see you deny the truth even as they have denied it…’ (an-Nisa’: 89).

Disbelief or the denial of truth in this context reveals what they hide in their hearts. Their hypocrisy caused them to only conform to the superficial aspects of Islam; but they failed to embrace the essential fundamentals of the religions. For this reason they are doomed to the lowest part of hell in the Hereafter even if they are treated as Muslims owing to their false profession that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is His messenger. By contrast Allah Almighty will treat them in the Hereafter as disbelievers and will add to their suffering a condemnation to the lowest part of hell.

In addition, if the proponents of falsehood are strong enough, they will align their hearts with their tongues and explicitly reveal the falsehood in which they believe. However, if they are weak, they will hide their falsehood in their hearts and profess the truth with their tongues. Yet both processes are uncomfortable to them. What will truly give them peace is the annihilation of the believers. For this reason Allah Almighty says: ‘They would love to see you deny the truth even as they have denied it so that you should be like them…’ (an-Nisa’: 89). They wish to eradicate and uproot the proponents and advocates of the truth so that no one would be better than another as we say in colloquial Arabic: ‘no one is better than another.’

Here is an example. Think of a group of employees in a governmental department. There may be a deceiver or someone who does not work properly among them. For this reason, he does not want his colleagues to do their work carefully and wish they would be corrupt like him. He thereby entices them to be corrupt so that they would be equal to each other; in such a case he would not feel ashamed or abhor himself. Furthermore, he would not feel like odd among them.

It is quite astounding to find those dishonest people respectful of the honest. We often hear that when a thief learns that he is spotted or so, he looks for an honest man to entrust him with his loot. So Allah the Almighty says that the hearts of the hypocritical disbelievers wish that the believers would be like them so that they would all be equal. This is a testimony that teaches us that the proponents of falsehood always want the proponents of the truth to join them in advocating and adopting falsehood. The reason is that when the former find the latter adopting the truth they despise and feel belittled before themselves. In this vein, a lot of strange things happened to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; people denied the truth of his message and abjured it. In addition, they tortured his companions. Despite all this they all acknowledged that he was the most honest amongst them. Indeed when the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him emigrated from Mecca he left behind 'Ali to return the things and deposits with which people entrusted him to keep.

Although they denied his message, they all recognized that he was the most honest among them. For this reason they entrusted him with their property and belongings. As a matter of fact, the moral and virtuous person is respected even by the non-virtuous and immoral one. In order to fully apprehend this principle let us consider the following example. Assume that someone is in trouble. He verbally affronted another person and the latter sued him. The defendant then calls upon a dear friend of his and asks him to testify before court. This friend of his then goes to court and says: my friend would not ever utter such an offence. In this case, the friend of the defendant has given a false testimony about him. Let us also assume that the defendant repented and regretted what he did and became pious. People then start asking him to arbitrate among them. Subsequently, his friend who put forward a false testimony in his favour came to testify before him. Do you think they would accept the testimony of the former? No; of course they would not.

The virtuous are thereby always respected even by the immoral. When an immoral person wants to drag another virtuous person into sin, he tries to misguide him. This applies to the saying of the True Lord Glorified is He: 'They would dearly like you to reject faith, as they themselves have done, to be like them...' (an-Nisa': 89). Their constant aim and target is to stand in the way of the believers and their faith in order to drag them right into the camp of the disbelievers. In so doing, they are like hypocrites, who are disbelievers in their hearts and are thus disloyal to the camp of the believers.

They do not maintain a neutral stance towards faith; rather, their stance is more likely one of stubbornness and antagonism against faith. Allah Almighty says: 'They would dearly like you to reject faith, as they themselves have done, to be like them...' (an-Nisa': 89) which is a direct warning to all believers should they entrust the hypocrites with anything related to their interests or faith. Allah Glorified is He clearly passes His ruling on this matter: '…So do not take them as allies…' (an-Nisa': 89) meaning not to take the hypocrites as advocates or confidants because Allah Glorified is He revealed to you what they concealed within their hearts. However, this should not be taken as an ultimate or personal stance towards the hypocrites. If any of them repents and regrets his sins and reverts to the camp of faith, then Allah Glorified is He will never reject his repentance. Allah the Glorified and Exalted does not persecute anyone because of a sin; as the True Lord Glorified is He is All-Merciful and All-Forgiving. As long as they return to the True Lord and shun falsehood, the believers are obliged to accept the ones who have sincerely reverted. No one should be antagonised simply because he sinned; hatred ought to be directed at the wrong deed rather than the "person" who was created to worship Allah. Once sinners quit sinning and wrongdoing, they should to be accepted by the believers.

Within this context, when the murderer of Zayd ibn Al-Khattab passed in front of ''Umar ibn Al-Khattab, Allah be pleased with him, some people said to ''Umar: "Here is the murderer of your brother Zayd." So ''Umar may Allah be pleased with him answered: "What do you expect me to do to him when Allah the Exalted has guided him to Islam?!"

Thus, we learn that hatred must not extend outside the circle of the action committed to reach the doer. Rather, hatred must be channelled towards the action itself. Accordingly, if someone quits committing sinful acts, people should start adjusting their attitude towards him, since the "being" supersedes the deed. For this reason our Lord decrees His ruling: '…So do not take them as allies until they emigrate for Allah's cause…'(an-Nisa': 89).

Emigration for the cause of Allah Almighty enlisted people to sacrifice portions of their wealth and to abandon their homes and families in return for pursuing severe life of toil and exertion. In this manner, it would be a sort of repentance for their sins and the believers would be confident that they returned to Allah Glorified is He and repented and that Allah Almighty accepted their repentance and it was time for them to re-enter the realm of faith. So, if a believer does this he is back on the track of faith and belief. For this reason, people must learn to distinguish between the doer of a sin as a person and the deed that was committed; why? That is because the person, in himself, deserves no hatred. Rather, we should condemn the actions only if they were repugnant and bad.

In reading the Quran we notice that it addresses this matter. When the command of Allah Glorified is He was revealed to Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him to build a ship and he started to construct it, people used to pass by and ridicule him. Prophet Nuh peace be upon him would then answer them: I will mock you tomorrow as much as you mock me today. Afterwards, Nuh peace be upon him had a son who did not follow his path. Thereupon, Nuh called upon his son to follow the path of Allah Glorified is He but his son refused and said: No. Nuh then embarked upon the ship saying to Allah Almighty: You have promised to save me along with my family. Here the True Lord Glorified is He says: Yes; I did promise to save you and your family but who told you to consider your son as a part of your family? The posterity of Prophets is not defined in terms of people or bloodlines; rather, the posterity of Prophets is defined in terms of who follows their path of teachings and actions. As for those who do not follow the path of the Prophets, Allah Almighty describes them as people whose work is “anything but righteous” (Hud: 46).

It is only the deeds which are evaluated and assessed. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…So do not take them as allies until they emigrate for the cause of Allah…' (an-Nisa': 89) The word (Al-Hijra) is etymologically derived from the noun (hajr) which is the root of (yuhajiru) —the Arabic word literally meaning “abandon or desert” which means moving from one place to another, or from a valley to another, or changing one character attribute to another. The one who deserts or abandons something often attributes false accusations to whatever he abandoned. We ought to notice that Allah Glorified is He discusses the act itself (hajar) not the outcome (hajr). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not abandon Mecca; rather, he imigrated from it. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says in the Hadith: ‘Mecca! By Allah you are the most endeared land of Allah to my heart and you are indeed the most beloved land of Allah to Allah. By Allah, had I not been expelled from you, I would never have left.’(1)

(1) Narrated in Sunan Ibn Majah

Accordingly, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him imigrated because the people of Mecca initially abandoned and deserted him; so he had no option but to emigrate. Furthermore, the word (hajar) incorporates movement—following the grammatical scale (fa'il), which often indicates the subject rather than the object of the verb. In this vein Al-Mutanabby—a great Abbasid poet— says:

If you depart a land whose people are capable of hosting you,

Then know that they are in fact the ones who departed; not you.

For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He mentioned the word "emigration" as an object or effect rather than a subject or cause. The people of Mecca hated what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him advocated and to that he responded by emigrating from Mecca.

Allah Glorified is He explains that the thing which can absolve the hypocrites from the ruling and condemnation of Allah Almighty, (which is not to take them as allies or supporters), is if the believers would let them emigrate for the cause of Allah Glorified is He. Emigration will be a stark proof to the truth and honesty of their faith because the emigrant pursues a difficult and harsh life. The believers know well how they lived off the sustenance Allah Almighty provided them through the aid and bounties of the Ansar—the Muslims from Medina; they could hardly lead a proper life. Hence, any hypocrite joining the believers in this endeavour would be exchanging his hypocrisy for faith and atoning for what he did in the past. Accordingly, emigration is not just a matter of abandoning one place and relocating in another; it must be for the Cause of Allah Glorified is He.

Against this background, we may understand the axiom of faith set by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the renowned Hadith: 'The reward of deeds depends upon the intentions and every person will get the reward according to what he has intended. So, whoever emigrated for worldly benefits or for a woman to marry, his emigration was for what he emigrated for.'(1)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

This is the principle that guides how the believers should deal with the hypocrites once they proclaim that they will renounce disbelief and return to the path of faith. But what should the believers do if the hypocrites regressed to their enmity? Allah Glorified is He answers: '…If they turn on you, then seize and kill them wherever you encounter them. Take none of them as an ally or supporter.'(an-Nisa': 89) When "seize" comes within the context of conflict, then it means to capture and captivate. Furthermore, the verse makes it clear that killing the hypocrites upon confronting them in the battlefield is a must. In addition, believers must never take the hypocrites as allies or supporters; for there is always the likelihood that a hypocrite may infiltrate the ranks of the believers to spy on them and expose their secrets to the enemies of Islam so they can breach the defences of the Muslims. Obviously, a hypocrite infiltrating the ranks of the Muslims will most likely try to know what the Muslims are plotting against the infidels.

Taking someone, whom we know does not like faith and does not follow the doctrine of Islam, as an ally or supporter brings much suspicion on the character of such a person who chose to ally himself with a hypocrite rather than a sincere Muslim. When someone who does not like and maliciously conspires against you sees that you trust and treat him well, he will immediately take you for a person who does not have any sort of shrewdness. He would say: If he knew what I harbour for him, he would not trust me that way. Accordingly, if the believers take the hypocrites as allies or supporters even though the hypocrites continue to adhere to their hypocritical ways, the hypocrites would say: these Muslims are not really astute or sharp; they do not know what we harbour in our hearts for them. For this reason the True Lord Glorified is He triggers the vision of the believers lest they should follow an opinion put forward by any of the hypocrites and harm themselves.

The hypocrites may also say: those Muslims do not have a Lord to guide and warn them. So why do they claim that they have a God? If they had a God, He would alert them on what we harbour in our hearts. In this vein, the True Lord Glorified is He exposes their innermost intentions and tells us what they try to conceal so much within their hearts: Why is God not punishing us for what we say?' (al-Mujadala: 8)

The fact that the True Lord Glorified is He did not punish them when they committed their disbelief conceals within it a big benefit and mercy, which they will recognise later. Some of them will use their fighting skills, one day, to serve Islam and promote it after they had been using it to fight against it. Allah Glorified is He thus spared some of them because He knew that their swords would serve Islam. For instance figures like Khalid ibn Al-Walid, ‘Amr ibn Al-‘Aas and ‘Ikrima ibn Abu Jahl Allah be pleased with them all embraced Islam after they fought against it. Hence, let none of you think that he can conceal a secret from Allah Glorified is He and remember that He knows what you whisper to yourself deep within your heart. (al-Mujadala: 8)

This saying addresses two issues: the first is that there is a Lord Who knows what the eye strays to in secret and what the bosoms of men harbour. The second is that Allah Glorified is He did not punish them because He knew that faith will dominate the hearts of some of them and that they will use their swords to serve Islam. He also knew that from among their offspring there will be leaders who will undertake the call of spreading Islam. For this reason, Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said to him: Allah has heard the response of your people to you, and what they have replied to you, Allah has sent the Angel of the Mountains to you so that you may order him to do whatever you wish to these people. The Angel of the Mountains called and greeted Prophet Muhammad, and then said: O Muhammad! Order what you wish. If you like, I will let Al-Akh-Shabain (i.e. two huge mountains) fall on them. The Prophet said: No but I hope that Allah will let them beget children who will worship Him Alone, and will worship None besides Him.(1)

This was actually what happened later on! Allah Almighty thus determines the method of dealing with the hypocrites in this verse as follows: disbelief dwells in the hearts of these people even though they overtly claim to be Muslims and wish that the believers would be like them. For this reason, a Muslim should not take a hypocrite as an ally or supporter.

But if a hypocrite emigrates, then the vastness of faith will surely embrace him. However, if a hypocrite objects to obey this clear and overt order, then

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

Allah the Glorified and Exalted ordains that the method of treatment ought to be as follows: '…If they turn on you, then seize and kill them wherever you encounter them. Take none of them as an ally or supporter.” (an-Nisa': 89) Yet, after issuing this decree, there remains a significant hurdle towards implementing it, namely, the alliances, vows and covenants which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him pledged to some of the tribes. These covenants, in brief, comprised all the terms of agreement that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had settled with some tribes to the effect that they would not assault the Muslims if the Muslims do not assault them. Thus, the True Lord respects theses covenants and alliances.

Allah Glorified is He explains to us: do not take this as an absolute decree, Muslims. The reason is that Islam is essentially a religion that calls for keeping and honouring promises. You have pledged to some tribes that if any of you took refuge in them, then they must grant you their protection and that if any of them took refuge in the Muslims then they must grant them their protection and stand in the way of any persecution intended against them. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He brings afterwards the following exception:

إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ يَصِلُونَ إِلَىٰ قَوۡمِۭ بَيۡنَكُمۡ وَبَيۡنَهُم مِّيثَٰقٌ أَوۡ جَآءُوكُمۡ حَصِرَتۡ صُدُورُهُمۡ أَن
يُقَٰتِلُوكُمۡ أَوۡ يُقَٰتِلُواْ قَوۡمَهُمۡۚ وَلَوۡ شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ لَسَلَّطَهُمۡ عَلَيۡكُمۡ فَلَقَٰتَلُوكُمۡۚ فَإِنِ ٱعۡتَزَلُوكُمۡ فَلَمۡ
يُقَٰتِلُوكُمۡ وَأَلۡقَوۡاْ إِلَيۡكُمُ ٱلسَّلَمَ فَمَا جَعَلَ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمۡ عَلَيۡهِمۡ سَبِيلٗا ٩٠

But as for those who seek refuge with people with whom you have a treaty, or who come over to you because their hearts shrink from fighting against you or against their own people, God could have given them power over you, and they would have fought you. So if they withdraw and do not fight you, and offer you peace, then God gives you no way against them [90] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 90)

The verse starts with a conditional statement not to enrage those with whom Islam and the Muslims have concluded agreements and covenants. The seizing and killing mentioned in the verse which precedes this one does not apply to those who have concluded covenants or alliances with the Muslims.

What happened between the Muslims and Hilal ibn ‘Uwaymir Al-Aslami serves as a good example to illustrate this point? The Muslims pledged not to advocate either him or his enemies in battle and that whoever resorts to Hilal and takes refuge in him is entitled to the right of neighbourhood; same as Hilal. The exception also includes those who take refuge in the Muslims. Whoever among the hypocrites then takes refuge in those who have concluded covenants with the Muslims is entitled to sanctuary. In addition, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gives protection to whoever takes refuge in him from among the hypocrites. Thus, despite their disbelief, Islam secures and protects the hypocrites. '…or (those) who come over to you because their hearts shrink from fighting against you or against their own people…' (an-Nisa': 90) This is the case similar to when one of them for instance says: I cannot fight you or my own people; so forgive me and accept me among you. Those who do so are accepted by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because they acknowledged their own distress. They can neither declare their faith, nor join the Muslims nor can they join the camp of the disbelievers. They cannot take a decisive stance either towards the Muslims or the disbelievers. In other words, they acknowledge their weakness and admit it.

'… Allah could have given them power over you and they would have fought you…' (an-Nisa': 90) what then occasions them to take refuge in a people who ally themselves with Muslims based on a covenant so that the Muslims would protect them? Either that or they acknowledge that they were incapable of handling this kind of pressure, declaring outright: we can neither fight you nor our people! The True Lord Glorified is He explains: It is I Who has done this and thrown fear and awe in their hearts. If I willed, I would have made them stronger and emboldened them to fight you. Thus, through dread and awe, Allah the Almighty granted us victory and kept them from fighting us; '…So, if they withdraw and do not fight you and offer you peace, then Allah gives you no way against them.' (an-Nisa': 90) If they let you be, offer you peace and admit that they are unable to choose between fighting Muslims and fighting their own people then you, Muslims, do not have any reason to attack them. In which case, Allah Almighty forbids you from attacking them.

The Eye of the True Lord Glorified is He sees far beyond what our knowledge can encompass; it transcends the latter's fetters to comprise the subtlest details. It is an eye that does not only see what we know, but uncovers all what obscures the things which we are not aware. Allah Glorified is He thereby says:

سَتَجِدُونَ ءَاخَرِينَ يُرِيدُونَ أَن يَأۡمَنُوكُمۡ وَيَأۡمَنُواْ قَوۡمَهُمۡ كُلَّ مَا رُدُّوٓاْ إِلَى ٱلۡفِتۡنَةِ
أُرۡكِسُواْ فِيهَاۚ فَإِن لَّمۡ يَعۡتَزِلُوكُمۡ وَيُلۡقُوٓاْ إِلَيۡكُمُ ٱلسَّلَمَ وَيَكُفُّوٓاْ أَيۡدِيَهُمۡ فَخُذُوهُمۡ
وَٱقۡتُلُوهُمۡ حَيۡثُ ثَقِفۡتُمُوهُمۡۚ وَأُوْلَٰٓئِكُمۡ جَعَلۡنَا لَكُمۡ عَلَيۡهِمۡ سُلۡطَٰنٗا مُّبِينٗا ﴿٩١﴾

You will find others who wish to be safe from you, and from their own people, but whenever they are back in a situation where they are tempted [to fight you], they succumb to it. So if they neither withdraw, nor offer you peace, nor restrain themselves from fighting you, seize and kill them wherever you encounter them: We give you clear authority against such people [91] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 91)

This verse starts with a verb in the future tense. 'You will find [that there are] others who would like to be safe from you as well as safe from their own folk…' (an-Nisa': 91) which indicates that, by the time this verse was revealed, the Muslims had not yet found or identified the people about whom the True Lord Glorified is He was speaking. But what would those who witnessed the revelation of the Quran, say about such news if they could not find the people it pin-points? Surely, they would have suspected the integrity and authenticity of the Quran. Allah Glorified is He explains that He has one Eye watching over the believers' reality and another watching over what is yet to come: I have told you about what happened in the past and used to be a subject of dispute among you. I have also told you about what your knowledge or minds did not see coming yet so you would not dispute over it. This is stark evidence that you are within My care and safekeeping.

'You will find [that there are] others who would like to be safe from you as well as safe from their own folk…' (an-Nisa': 91). These other people were the tribes of Banu S'ad and Ghatafan that used to live on the outskirts of Medina. Whenever they met Muslims, they used to say: we are with you and whenever they met the disbelievers they used to say: we are with you. The truth was that they were incapable of confronting any of the two camps. For this reason, the Quran describes them as follows: 'You will find [that there are] others who would like to be safe from you as well as safe from their own folk, [but who,] whenever they are faced anew with temptation to evil, plunge into it headlong…' (an-Nisa': 91). When these people were put to the test of temptation they would plunge into sinning headlong. This means that they flunked their tests because the groundwork of their faith was not yet solid enough and they are still drifting in their perplexity. Upon facing temptations, they unravelled their deep, innermost convictions and inclinations; as a result their perplexity increased. Having the capacity to be tempted is not in itself a deplorable thing. When it is said that someone is being put to the test of temptation, the believers should pray for this person to pass the test successfully. Temptation is not in itself a calamity that befalls man; rather, calamity befalls man if he fails to overcome this temptation.

We know that the word (fitna) —the Arabic word for trial/temptation(1) — originally has a sensory and material connotation. An inflection of the very same word, in Arabic, is also used to denote other meanings like "molten" gold or iron. Molten gold is what we get when we melt the ore in blast furnaces to allow all the impurities to surface. The same goes with iron; it is melted to the point where all its atoms are disintegrated and the impurities surface to the top.

We know that there are different kinds of iron: cast iron, for instance, is an alloy of iron ore that is high in various impurities which makes it rather brittle. By contrast, steel iron is free from impurities which makes it so tough. So molten iron and gold (in this sense; fitna) expel the impurities mixed with them. Thus, the word (fitna) —temptation—was used to refer to abstract rather than concrete things. Temptation is hence the main test in which one may succeed or fail; it is not harmful in itself. It is only harmful to the one who falls as its victim.

This was how the Quran foretold the Muslims about the intention of a group of people who lived on their borders. Temptations made them incapable of embracing faith. So, whenever their people called them to polytheism and to fight the Muslims, they quickly regressed in the most abject and abysmal way and became the worst of all their enemies. The Quran describes the attitude of the believers towards those who plunge into evil headlong and fail to overcome it as: '…Hence, if they do not let you be and do not offer you peace and do not restrain their hands, seize them and slay them whenever you come upon them… ' (an-Nisa': 91). We notice that the True Lord Glorified is He decreed that those who resort to either the Muslims or the allies of Muslims for protection due to their weakness, should be secured even if they were hypocrites. This is obvious in the previous verse: '…then Allah gives you no way against them.' (an-Nisa': 90) This is a divine and fair alert as much as it is a form of advocacy from the True Lord Glorified is He lest someone succumbs to his inclinations and usurps the weak. As for those who try to rebel and succumb to the voice of disbelief to harm the Muslims and those who do not greet the Muslims nor keep their hands off them, the divine command came forth to state: '…seize them and slay them whenever you come upon them…' (an-Nisa': 91). Allah Glorified is He has granted the believers a salient dominance over those hypocrites. Dominance as we know is power. Power, in turn, may assume one of two forms: it may be coercived in forcing a man to act in a certain way as when someone powerful orders a weak person to stand up or orders him to prostrate to him and so the weaker person obeys. This is the hegemonic kind of power that subjugates the matter or the body but can never subdue the heart or the spirit. The other form of power is the power of reason and the capacity to convince and persuade. Under this form of power, we may also subsume presentational abilities and the usage of irrefutable evidences to convince man to act.

(1) Among other meanings for the same word (and within the same context), we also have: strife and adversity.

The difference between the dominance of power and the dominance of reason is that the former may coerce one to prostrate, but the latter is what will make him prostrate out of conviction and belief. The outstanding power and dominance that Allah Glorified is He granted to the believers over those who fight them empowers you, Muslims, to do what you want with those hypocrites, so long as they have tried to hurt and kill you. Prudence and justice necessitate being severe and rigorous with them.

If we want to properly understand the meaning of dominance and power, then let us contemplate the dispute that will take place in the afterlife between Satan and his followers. We will find Satan telling his followers: 'I have tempted you; this is true. You have also chosen to follow me. So, you bear full responsibility for your actions. I did not have either the power of coercion or the power of reason and persuasion over you. I only called you and you responded to my call.' (Ibrahim: 22)

After the True Lord Glorified is He had talked about fighting and its legitimacy, especially fighting the hypocrites and others, the divine discourse moves to the issue of murder. Allah Almighty explains to His servants: In brief, I create this human body; I further grant life to all beings. It is thereby not reasonable for the One Who created an entity to entice others to destroy it! I only incite you to destroy those who fight you to safeguard the unity of humanity. So, do not dare to assault others; whoever destroys the creation of Allah Glorified is He is cursed. Do not touch this "body" that Allah Almighty created except under the conditions ordained by Allah Glorified is He such as, if this person transgressed the limits ordained by Allah Almighty. The reason is that Allah Glorified is He is the One Who creates life and hence is the One Who takes it. The lives of other people are thus not ours; even our very own lives are not ours to destroy or give away. For this reason, we prescribe a punishment on whoever kills another person by way of transgression and without a rightful cause. Yet, if someone kills another by mistake (manslaughter), he is only obliged to pay the prescribed blood money "diya." By contrast, the one who kills himself is denied admittance to paradise.

Therefore, before Allah Glorified is He teaches us not to kill others, He teaches us not to kill ourselves. Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He is not only concerned about the harm you may cause to others, but He is also concerned about the harm you may cause to yourself. For this reason, you need to bear in mind that when Allah Almighty decreed retribution in the case of murder, He did so to protect you and not to assist or embolden you to kill someone else. But when Allah Almighty decrees that, "whoever kills should also be killed'", He does so to establish justice and fairness. The purpose of this is the preservation of two lives; if you meditated to kill someone and then realised that if you killed them then, you would be killed, you might likely refrain from committing this murder. Once you refrain from killing, you have preserved two lives: the life of the one you were planning to kill and your own life by saving it from punitive retribution. This is how "the law of just retribution" ensues "life" (al-Baqara: 179).

Thus, whoever tries to lecture you about how retribution is an atrocity or an abominable thing, just tell him this: How can the one decreeing retribution be seeking your death? In fact, he wants to save your life because if a killer knew beforehand that he would be killed, were he to commit murder he would abstain from killing. This way he ends up preserving two lives; his life and the life of the one he could have killed. So, when Allah Glorified is He tells us that the “law of just retribution” ensues “life” (al-Baqara: 179), we realize how truthful this statement is.

When the True Lord Glorified is He talks about fighting and killing, he draws our attention to an important concept: never be pre-emptive in destroying lives or spilling blood whatever the pretext is. Next, Allah Glorified is He talks about the forbidden-killing based on the basics of Islam and faith. He says:

وَمَا كَانَ لِمُؤْمِنٍ أَن يَقْتُلَ مُؤْمِنًا إِلَّا خَطَـًٔا ۚ وَمَن قَتَلَ مُؤْمِنًا خَطَـًٔا فَتَحْرِيرُ رَقَبَةٍ
مُّؤْمِنَةٍ وَدِيَةٌ مُّسَلَّمَةٌ إِلَىٰٓ أَهْلِهِۦٓ إِلَّآ أَن يَصَّدَّقُوا۟ ۚ فَإِن كَانَ مِن قَوْمٍ عَدُوٍّ لَّكُمْ وَهُوَ
مُؤْمِنٌ فَتَحْرِيرُ رَقَبَةٍ مُّؤْمِنَةٍ ۖ وَإِن كَانَ مِن قَوْمٍۭ بَيْنَكُمْ وَبَيْنَهُم مِّيثَٰقٌ
فَدِيَةٌ مُّسَلَّمَةٌ إِلَىٰٓ أَهْلِهِۦ وَتَحْرِيرُ رَقَبَةٍ مُّؤْمِنَةٍ ۖ فَمَن لَّمْ يَجِدْ فَصِيَامُ
شَهْرَيْنِ مُتَتَابِعَيْنِ تَوْبَةً مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ ۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلِيمًا حَكِيمًا ﴿٩٢﴾

Never should a believer kill another believer, except by mistake. If anyone kills a believer by mistake he must free one Muslim slave and pay compensation to the victim’s relatives, unless they charitably forgo it; if the victim belonged to a people at war with you but is a believer, then the compensation is only to free a believing slave; if he belonged to a people with whom you have a treaty, then compensation should be handed over to his relatives, and a believing slave set free. Anyone who lacks the means to do this must fast for two consecutive months by way of repentance to God: God is all knowing, all wise [92] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 92)

This verse comes after Allah Glorified is He had talked about fighting for the cause of defending and instilling Islam. Since such type of fighting entails the killing of an infidel soul at the hands of a faithful one, the True Lord Glorified is He aptly put forward a discourse about murder. Murder—as we know—is the attempt to put an end to the life of someone alive by destroying his body. But any soul is bound to die when its time has come, whether someone attempts to put an end to its life or not. Thus, the destruction of the human body is an act intended to end human life. So, let no one think that the killer who destroys the body of the killed is the one who actually controls either ending or extending his life. If someone kills another, we should know that the timing of the murder only coincided with the timing preordained for this person’s death. The One Who truly ends lives is the True Lord Glorified is He. For this reason, we said that a killer deserves to be punished not because he caused the death of someone but because he was trying to be pre-emptive in an act that only Allah Almighty decides; the victim would have died any way in his preordained time. We know from the Quran that the True Lord Glorified is He chose man as His vicegerent in this Universe, and He ordained that the role of man is to “inhabit it” (Hud: 61).

Allah Glorified is He made man His vicegerent on earth to inhabit it and thrive thereon. Inhabiting the earth is accomplished through realising all what is good in the universe and bettering and improving all what is bad. As for the good, we either leave it as it is or we can further improve it as we should do.

For instance, plants sprout from the earth; they grow even if man did not plant or care for them. But the True Lord Glorified is He wants man to add to this potentiality in the earth; through seeding, ploughing, sowing and growing crops. This makes the earth even better and is a fundamental part of life itself.

Thus, inasmuch as man is the vicegerent of Allah Almighty on earth, every human being must respect and preserve the life of other fellow humans. As far as maintaining life is a necessity, no human being, especially a vicegerent of Allah Almighty, should kill another and so obstruct the capacity of the latter to revive the earth and inhabit it. Fighting has been permitted for the believers against the disbelievers because the actions and deeds of the disbelievers are corruptive and we know that deterring corruption always takes precedence over bringing benefit. Hence, the believers must fight those who corrupt life to end their evil and rid life from this impediment to it.

Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He wants this life for the man who makes it his life’s mission to promote life and make it liveable. Yet, the disbelievers spread corruption on earth and do not live in accordance with the path set by Allah Almighty; they usurp the fruits of labour of the weak to make themselves stronger. Allah Almighty thus decreed fighting them either to make them believe and submit to His path or to rid life entirely from their evil. Conversely, if someone tries to kill a believer who is apt to inhabit the earth and improve life on it he would be wronging life at large. Furthermore, if a man kills himself, he would also be committing an act of injustice against life at large; why? Because he incurred a loss on life; he could have inhabited earth and improved life through his contribution to it. So, if someone has the audacity to impinge on his life or the life of another, we should discipline and straighten him; and that is why Allah Almighty tells us that those who commit evil deeds, their punishment shall be in proportion. (Yunus: 27)

Islamic legislation has decreed that the one who deliberately meditates and commits murder should be punished by death. In this manner, Islamic legislation protects life and discourages murder instead of fostering it. Thus, the Islamic penal code has been enacted to expand and enhance the fundamentals of life and not the other way around. When the True Lord the Glorified and Exalted talked about legitimate fighting, He wanted to explain to us that we should not exploit the legitimacy of fighting as a pretext for transgression and doing things that Allah Almighty did not permit. So, what should be the case if someone chooses to end his life in a context other than that of a legitimate struggle for the cause of faith? Islamic legislation rules that such a person should be put to death. He should have borne in mind not to end someone else's life unless by mistake. But what if you do something and the result was manslaughter? This means causing someone to die even though you did not intend to kill him. There are two aspects involved here: first, not intending to kill someone and second, the death of someone by mistake.

In this respect, Islamic legislation hinges on the fact that a man "unintentionally" ended the life of another and that the life of the dead person was intricately and in manifold connected within the circle of believers in general and his family specifically. He may, for instance, be the breadwinner of the family or the closest to it or its main member. How many circles of relations and ties got affected here? We have the circle of the community of believers in general, the circle of the big family at large and the circle of the family-tree on a more intimate level in terms of ancestors and offspring. When the life of a human being comes to an end in the context of the general community of believers, this circle will be affected by the loss of a believer who submitted to the path of Allah Almighty and benefited others in his life. The reason is that the members of the community of believers always try to be beneficial to themselves and others.

However, the family circle is concerned with a more specific form of benefit; the closeness and value of anyone to this particular circle is in a way more special than his closeness to the community of believers. If we proceed further, we will notice that one's closeness to his family, especially when it comes to direct relatives or offspring, is even more important and special. Thus, the death of such a person is a terrorisation of several circles; the general, the big family and the smaller more direct family. For this reason, I would like you to note something which we often miss, though it happens frequently in our day-to-day life. Sometimes, as a group of people sit together, they find someone saying: so and so person died. Among the attendants there may be someone who knew the person who died remotely, on the level of acquaintance and another who knew him in a special and more intimate way. There may also be members of his family, like his father or his son. So, consider the different impact on each of these people's faces! Each one will show an effect proportionate to the relation he had with the deceased. One may say, "May Allah have mercy on his soul", and another may retort frantically, "how did this happen?" A third person may sob bitterly and a fourth may just cry and rush to see the deceased. Here we witness one single piece of news and a whole set of different reactions; so why did the reactions vary in this flagrant way? Why were the reactions not identical?

We say: reactions vary randomly and instinctively in accordance with the degree of closeness the deceased represents to each person manifesting these reactions. The one who used to meet him intermittently may be the one who said, "may Allah have mercy on his soul." By contrast the one who used to meet him on every good occasion will reminisce over the memories they shared together. If we turn to his children, we will see that the reactions will also vary; the one who has a family will have a reaction different from the one who recently graduated or the one who is still studying, whether boy or girl. Each of the children will receive the sad news and react towards it in a different way. The son who has a family and a house will receive the news in a way different from the one who still goes to school. Similarly, the reaction of the married daughter who has a family will differ from that of her sister who still needed her father to provide her with the requirements she needed to get married.

Therefore, the reaction of anyone to the loss of another is always proportionate to the level of the latter's closeness to each person. For this reason, we may mourn and grieve for the loss of a friend more than we would for the loss of a brother. If people thus ponder who is dearer to you: your brother or your friend, the true answer ought to be: the more beneficial, the dearer he will be. This is how a single piece of news about the death of someone could produce different reactions; you mourn and grieve proportionately with the benefit and goodness the deceased used to have in the society.

If you find the entire society grieving for the loss of someone, then know that such a person was useful and beneficial to all members of the society, whereas the one who is only mourned and missed by his family was most likely only useful to his family and offspring; and others might die without anyone missing or mourning them. That is why they say that everyone has a homeland and that your homeland is proportionate to your usefulness to others. Someone's homeland may thus only be his own ego thinking that everything was made for him and that he was made for nothing or anyone, even his very own children. Another person's homeland may only be his big family that benefits from his work. Another person's homeland may be his family and village; another's homeland may be his nation and another's may be the whole world. So, when the death of a single person grips the entire society, this indicates the size and scope of his actual homeland.

As for the issue of manslaughter, when we get the shocking news of someone being killed by mistake, the killer should be excused. Yet, being excused does not mean that he did not commit an act of transgression and that another person got killed because of such transgression. The effect of his action has already taken place and the aftermath has befallen those who are closest to him in terms of closeness. However, because the murder happened by mistake, the killer will not be subject to retribution. Still, he should pay what we call "blood money" -in Arabic "diya." This blood money is divided between those who were seriously affected by the death of the victim. This is in accordance with the following simple principle: spreading benefit and containing harm.

Once you see something that you think may benefit you, you rejoice. When you see something that may potentially harm you, you feel taken aback and uncomfortable. When the news of the death of a dear one reaches another, he immediately grieves and mourns the death of his beloved on. By contrast, we try to alleviate the effect of this bad news by telling this person that he will get the prescribed blood-money wherein he finds some relief and comfort. This way, the effect ensuing from manslaughter is remedied.

The blood money for manslaughter according to the rulings of Islamic law, must be paid by the distantly related kin "aqila-usba" and on the condition that it is not to be paid by the direct or closest kin of the killer. The reason is that Islamic law does not want the family to suffer the calamity of having one of their own kill someone by mistake—which is something dreadful—and at the same time having to go through the pain of paying an indemnity for such an atrocity. It is as if Islamic legislation wants to remedy the shock caused by deviation from the righteous path using an antidote against any negative reactions that could result from the loss of someone dear; in doing so it achieves stability and order in the society. Thus, the society should not seek retribution from the one who commits manslaughter; suffice for him to pay the proper blood money. To share the responsibility, the killer is not the only one who pays the indemnity; the extended kinship all participate in it. So, inasmuch as every family knows that if any of its members kills by mistake, it will incur a considerable fine by way of sharing responsibility, it will instil in its members the perception of protecting the rights of others. Thus, if every member of the family knows that he will bear some of the responsibility by being obliged to share in the blood money, stability and balance will be maintained in the society.

The True Lord Glorified is He teaches us to dismiss the possibility of a believer killing another except by mistake; it is inconceivable that such a thing could happen deliberately. Thus Allah, Glorified be He says: 'Never should a believer kill another believer, except by mistake...' (an-Nisa': 92). The meaning of this is that no one can conceive of such an act because the intimacy of the relation between the believers precludes this possibility. But what would be the proper remedy if something like this happens?' Never should a believer kill another believer, except by mistake. If anyone kills a believer by mistake, he must free one Muslim slave and pay compensation to the victim's relatives…' (an-Nisa': 92). Allah Glorified is He does not mention retribution in this context because He speaks about retribution in an earlier chapter telling us that retribution (in case of premeditated crime) is to kill a free man in retribution for killing a free man, a slave for killing a slave and a woman for killing a woman… (al-Baqara: 178).

Only the guardian or custodian is entitled to judge on the issue of blood money; he reserves the right to either pardon the killer or accept the blood money. He may thus say to the killer that he accepted the blood money as retribution. We have also to distinguish between the prohibitions "hudud" set by Allah Almighty and retribution. The guardian or the one in charge may surrender his right to retribution, but no one may surrender or compromise the prohibitions of Allah Almighty because this is only the exclusive right of Allah Glorified is He. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says about manslaughter: '…then the compensation is only to free a believing slave…' (an-Nisa': 92). However, someone may wonder: what benefit will accrue to the family of the victim from freeing a believing slave from slavery? Will such an act benefit the family of the victim? Freeing a believing slave from slavery may not directly benefit them in anything, yet it may benefit the society because the one in slavery is owned exclusively by one person, his master. This limits and restricts the impact of the slave, but if he becomes free, his impact on life will be unrestricted and his freedom from slavery will put his motion under the direct service of the society.

Thus, the constriction that was caused by killing a person by mistake will be nullified by an opposite act of "release" accomplished by setting another person free. As if we are saying to the person in slavery: you are now free to work and benefit the entire society. In so doing the True Lord Glorified is He sets another venue for freeing slaves besides the various other venues Islam decreed. After putting forward this statement, Allah Glorified is He says: '…and pay compensation to the victim's relatives, unless they charitably forgo it;…' (an-Nisa': 92) Such a statement bears a release and comfort to the family following the constriction they suffered with the news of the murder of a beloved one. So, if a family suffered the calamity of losing one of their own due to an accident and lived in grief for days, they should then use the proper documents to obtain the blood money or compensation for their loss. This shows that Islam guarantees at least a decent and practical sort of conciliation and if this was something people usually had no need for, they would have simply declined it; but this never happens.

When someone loses a beloved person and permanently dwells on his grief, he could lose his own life out of agony; but this is not the norm of life. Each person mourns the deceased proportionately with the benefit he lost due to his death. The one in grief grieves because the victim used to add to his life. Thus, with the victim's death, this person lost all the enrichment the victim used to add to his life.

But, just imagine someone grieving over the loss of a beloved one and we tell him something like: keep the corpse with you for a week or so until you settle your longing to the one who died; afterwards we will take the corpse to bury it. Would this person accept? Certainly no! Who can accept something like that? Now, suppose we tell the same person: We will not give you any food for a week or so because sad and grieving people have no appetite to eat. No one will accept something like that! We see wives crying floods over their husband, but still, at the end of the day, they eat, drink and partake to all other necessities of life. Bottom line is: life has to go on and for that to happen our basic needs must be secured regardless of our grief which will heel by time.

This issue must be clear in order to properly and openly accept the fate preordained by the True Lord Glorified is He. Such preordained fate never violates the universal laws of Allah Almighty. The True Lord Glorified is He wants to spread sympathy among people. Assume the family of the victim says to the family of the killer: we do not want any blood money because the loss that befell you due to this act is no less drastic than ours and we are all brothers in faith. What would then happen in the society? This act will accrue exponential benefit compared to what will be accrued from paying the blood money. This is even an improvement to the indemnity. If a child knows that his family was bound to pay blood money because his father committed manslaughter and that the family of the victim forgave his family and gave up their right to take the blood money, this child will know when he grows up and becomes capable of reasoning that every good thing his family has or enjoys was due to this act of forgiveness and generosity. If this same act is repeated, amiability and affection will prevail in the society.

The True Lord Glorified is He thereby wants to spread and propagate affection, amiability and mutual benefit in the society. So, if someone grieves for losing a dear person in manslaughter, he may avail himself of the blood money. Alternatively, if he does not take it, he would benefit even more. For this reason, the True Lord says: '…and pay compensation to the victim's relatives, unless they charitably forgo it…' (an-Nisa’: 92).

This is what happens when a believer kills another believer by mistake within a solid and competent community of believers. But what should be the right course of action if a believer kills someone who belongs with a people whom he is at war with and it so happened that the victim was a believer living among the disbelievers? Here, we also see clearly the justice of divine legislation and we become more confident that Allah Almighty is the True Lord of all. Here the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…if the victim belonged to a people at war with you but is a believer, then the compensation is only to free a believing slave…' (an-Nisa’: 92). This means that if the victim was living among people who antagonise Muslims he would not deserve blood money because he chose to live among the disbelievers.

Thus, we have three criteria for the rulings set forth by Islamic legislation: 1) the case of the victim being a member of the community of believers, 2) the victim being a believer living among and fighting beside a group of people who antagonise the believers or 3) the victim being a member of a group of people who have a treaty with the Muslims. Each case has its specific ruling; if the victim is a believer living among a group at war with the Muslims, the indemnity is freeing a believing soul from slavery. This is intended as a sort of compensation with the purpose of promoting faith and for the benefit of the community of believers. This action sets the movement of another believer free to make up for the one who met his demise and whose deeds and endeavours in life ended abruptly. In other words, it compensates the society for the loss of one of its believing members. But should blood money be paid in this case? No; people among whom the deceased used to live are not entitled to take any blood money since it will be conveyed through inheritance and these people are disbelievers. The Muslims and the disbelievers cannot share inheritance amongst each other. Hence, no blood money is to be paid in this case.

When we consider the saying of the True Lord Glorified is He: '…if the victim belonged to a people at war with you but is a believer…' (an-Nisa': 92). We notice that the word ('adw) —the Arabic expression literally means (an enemy) at war with you. The word is in the singular form though it denotes all people who share the characteristic of animosity with the Muslims because when the sources of enmity are united they become a single enemy. The True Lord Glorified is He says: '…if the victim belonged to a people at war with you but is a believer, then the compensation is only to free a believing slave…' (an-Nisa': 92). He did not mention blood money in this context because the enemies of Islam are not entitled to blood money since they are prohibited from inheriting the Muslims.

The True Lord Glorified is He then says: '…if he belonged to a people with whom you have a treaty then compensation should be handed over to his relatives and a believing slave set free.…' (an-Nisa': 92). If Muslims have a treaty with any other people, then they must abide by it. This abidance calls for delivering the blood money to the people of the victim in respect to the treaty. The blood money as we know is paid by the extended kinship. In explaining the proper course of action in case of manslaughter, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…and a believing slave set free. Anyone who lacks the means to do this, must fast for two consecutive months…' (an-Nisa': 92). This means that whoever could not find or afford freeing a believing slave ought to fast for two consecutive months without any breaks in between unless there is a legitimate cause such as sickness or travelling. But once he recovers from his sickness or reaches his destination, he must resume fasting.

Why were these rulings presented in this sequential order? The reason is that the True Lord Glorified and Exalted be He wants the killer to be fixated on his action and to ponder on it the entire time. For this to happen, the fasting must be consecutive and without breaks. Had the fasting been intermittent, the killer would be out of focus: '…Anyone who lacks the means to do this must fast for two consecutive months by way of repentance to Allah…' (an-Nisa': 92).

Why did the True Lord, Glorified is He say: 'by way of repentance to Allah…' (an-Nisa': 92)? Repentance—as we know—emanates from the servant to Allah Glorified is He. We thus say: a servant of Allah repented to Him. Yet, when repentance is ascribed to the True Lord Glorified is He, it means that Allah Almighty has "forgiven" his servant. Hence, repentance involves three phases: First, Allah Almighty ordains it; we thus say that Allah Glorified is He absolved His servant and allowed him to repent. No one repents unless Allah Glorified is He ordains his repentance. If Allah Glorified is He does not ordain that a person's repentance is legitimate, his sins and bad deeds would amass on his shoulders. Ordaining repentance restrains the lowly whims and inclinations; otherwise anyone who commits a sin would have spread corruption on earth. Since Allah Glorified is He ordains repentance, He thus accepts the repentance of those who repent to Him and this is the first phase. The second phase is established when the person himself repents (subsequent to the first phase). So, Allah Almighty ordains repentance, the believer repents and then Allah Almighty accepts his repentance, which is the third phase.

We thus realise the precision of the Quranic discourse when we are told that Allah Glorified is He turns to the believers in mercy so that they might repent… (at-Tawba: 118), and after they repent, Allah Glorified is He accepts their repentance. Hence, the first phase of the forgiveness of Allah Almighty and accepting repentance is ordaining repentance as such. The third and final phase is accepting the repentance and between these two phases the human being repents.

The True Lord Glorified is He then appends the verse as follows: '…by way of repentance to Allah: Allah is all knowing, all wise.' (an-Nisa': 92) Allah Glorified is He decrees legislations that let the human soul live in a sound environment and in accordance with its natural constitution. Indeed, if we imagine that someone was killed by mistake and his family was left without any compensation, then the society of believers would not benefit from his death.

Owing to the knowledge of Allah Almighty of the human psyche, victims of manslaughter will accrue benefit and closeness to the community of believers inasmuch as they become a cause of freeing a believing soul from slavery to making sure that something good is done after all. The one to be freed should not be a disbeliever. In fact, when a disbeliever is owned by a master, his evil is contained and freeing him might spread this evil. In addition to freeing a believer there is also the blood money which will reach everyone impaired by the vacuum of benefit left behind by the victim. As we said before, the blood money is to be paid only by the extended relatives of the killer. This is intended in order not to double the suffering endured by the killer's family—the distress which will fill them because of the murder committed by one of their members—and the calamity of paying blood money to atone for what the killer did; and this is the wisdom beyond the decree. Since the Creator is in fact the One Who sets the proper rules of conduct, then no other rules or principles could possibly govern and regulate these matters better than the ones considered here.

Let us look at a machine—for instance—that is made up of fifty parts and each part is joined to the other using bolts, screws or other joints. As long as each part stays in its proper place, the machine functions well. But, if the machine dysfunctions, we get a mechanic to restore each part to its proper place. With everything set in its proper place, the machine will function again. This in many ways is similar to the realm of human beings. Every kind of movement based on wisdom should not undergo any form of degeneration. Degeneration only occurs when things are not based on wisdom or knowledge. Furthermore, wisdom is not absolute; it is questionable. That is why some people are wiser than others. In the past—for instance—electric wires did not have any insulation and because of that short circuits used to happen. Later, when insulators were discovered, we modified our methods of producing electric wires. The next problem we had was that the colours of the wires (like in cars for instance) used to all be the same; which caused a lot of confusion when attempting to fix cars. But when each wire was assigned a different colour, the repair process became much easier. Hence, we see the wisdom beyond assigning everything to its proper place. So how about when the One Who puts things in their proper place is in fact our Creator? There could be nothing better than this.

Consequently, if we spot any defect in the society, we must realise that something is done at odds with the wisdom Allah Almighty intended. In such a case, we will find the defect if we followed exactly the course we use to identify a defect in any machine then find a mechanic to fix it. Likewise, we must refer everything to the Creator and search for the remedy of our social problems in the rulings of Allah Glorified is He. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He admonished us to refer any subject of dispute to Himself and His messenger in order to end our suffering.

Subsequently, the True Lord Glorified is He tells us about premeditated murder. Someone may wonder: should Allah have talked about premeditated murder first? To this question, we respond as follows: Had the True Lord Glorified is He talked about premeditated murder first, this might have suggested that such form of murder is bound to have precedence in the sequence of the believer’s thought. But the True Lord Glorified is He explains that this should not occur to the mind or imagination of the believer.

Someone may also wonder: Why did Allah not start the verse with, “Never should a Muslim…” —instead of “…a believer…”? To this question, we respond by saying: we must realise that the True Lord Glorified is He addresses the believers because faith is an act of the heart. For this reason, the discourse addresses the believers in particular rather than the Muslims in general because Islam can be solely an ostensible appearance. Someone who purports to be a Muslim may thus kill a believer. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He uses the discourse that encompasses both the outer appearance and the essence such as faith. But when the True Lord Glorified is He legislates, He put forward the proper requital for the one who deliberately perpetrates murder. In this vein, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَن يَقْتُلْ مُؤْمِنًا مُّتَعَمِّدًا فَجَزَآؤُهُۥ جَهَنَّمُ خَٰلِدًا فِيهَا
وَغَضِبَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَلَعَنَهُۥ وَأَعَدَّ لَهُۥ عَذَابًا عَظِيمًا ﴿٩٣﴾

If anyone kills a believer deliberately, the punishment for him is Hell, and there he will remain: God is angry with him, and rejects him, and has prepared a tremendous torment for him [93] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 93)

Murder in this context refers to the act of deliberately killing a believer. This is a diametrically different case than that of killing by mistake wherein the killer realises that he killed only after the act of killing actually took place. The requital for deliberately killing a believer is damnation to hell; there is no atonement for such an atrocity. This way, Allah Almighty reveals how abominable and despicable the crime of deliberately murdering a believer is. The reason is that deliberate murder means that the murderer dwelt upon the thought of killing and murdering another. In legal jargon this is called: a premeditated crime. This means that the killer or murderer planned the murder in his imagination and then committed it. While planning and plotting the murder, the killer's religious commitment was supposed to have deterred him from the atrocity he was about to commit. Thus, committing a deliberate murder demonstrates that the trait of "fearing Allah" was absent from the mind of the murderer throughout the period in which he planned the crime. Indeed, had Allah Almighty occurred to him, he would have desisted from committing the crime? But since Allah did not occur to the mind of the murderer, likewise he will not "occur" in Allah's mercy.

Scholars suggested that the following incident was the reason for the revelation of this verse. The man named Maqis ibn Dababah who had a brother called Hisham, found his brother murdered in the region of Banu an-Najjar who belonged to Al-Ansar (Medinan Helpers). Thereupon, Maqis went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and told him about this incident. Then, Prophet Muhammad sent with him a person from Banu Fehr and instructed them to bring the murderer of Maqis' brother to Maqis. However, Banu An-Najjar claimed that they did not know who had murdered Hisham and expressed their willingness to pay Diyah (blood money) which was a hundred camels and went back to Medina. Then, Maqis killed the person who belonged to Banu Fehr to avenge his brother's murder, took the camels and headed to Mecca, abjuring Islam. During his journey to Mecca, he chanted the following verses:

I have killed in revenge a man from Fehr and have taken his Diyah (blood money),

And let Banu Al-Najjar bear the responsibility of paying his Diyah (blood money),

I have taken revenge by killing him and vented my rage,

And I have converted to worshipping idols.

When the news reached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, he declared that killing Maqis was permissible; this means that whoever killed Maqis would not be punished. On the day of the Liberation of Mecca, Maqis was found clinging to the curtains of the Ka'ba seeking refuge in it, but Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ordered that he must be killed. 'If anyone kills a believer deliberately, the punishment for him is hell and there he will remain: Allah is angry with him and rejects him and has prepared a tremendous torment for him.' (an-Nisa': 93)

In this context, we notice that there are multiple levels of torment: the fire of hell, eternal suffering in hell, the Wrath and Rejection of Allah Almighty and Allah's preparation of tremendous torment. This means that torment is not only limited to hell, as there are the aforementioned forms of torment from which we seek refuge with Allah Almighty. Some people think that hell is the only form of torment; however, torment has many other forms. For instance, when someone is imprisoned, we may think that imprisonment is the only suffering he has to endure, but after knowing what happens inside prisons, we have realised that there are other things that are more evil than imprisonment.

Scholars have pondered over the following question: Is it possible for such a murderer to repent? Scholars were not of the same opinion in this regard; some scholars have said that it is not possible for such a murderer to repent, whereas other scholars have said that it is possible for him to repent. Ibn Al-'Abbas was once sitting with a group of people and someone asked him: Is it permissible for the one who deliberately killed another believer to repent? Ibn Al-Abbas said: No. After a period of time a person asked Ibn Al-'Abbas: Is it permissible for the one who deliberately killed another believer to repent? Ibn Al-'Abbas said: Yes. Then, the attendants wondered: Why did you answer yes now when you previously said no? Ibn Al-'Abbas said: the one who asked me first wanted to deliberately commit a murder, but the one who asked me in the second time had already killed someone deliberately. Therefore, I was terrified and deterred the first and did not let the second lose hope in the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He. But how did Ibn Al-'Abbas distinguish between the two cases? He did so by means of the faith-inspired acuity and insight that Allah Glorified is He bestows upon the Mufti (a Muslim scholar qualified to issue legal opinions). Once a person asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, while he was sitting among his Companions: ‘What (sort of) deeds in Islam are the best?’ He replied, ‘To feed (the poor) and greet those whom you know and those whom you do not know.’(1) Another person asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the same question and he answered: ‘A (true) Muslim is the one from whose tongue and hand the Muslims are safe.’ Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to answer whoever asked him in a manner that was most suitable and useful for him. When 'Abdullah ibn Mas’ud may Allah be pleased with him asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Which is the best deed?’ He answered, ‘Offering Prayers on time. Then, 'Abdullah ibn Mas’ud may Allah be pleased with him asked, ‘What is next, O Messenger of Allah?’ He said, ‘To avoid harming people with his tongue.’(2)

But the text of the verse concerning deliberate killing requires further reflection, as Allah Almighty says: '…the punishment for him is Hell and there he will remain…' (an-Nisa’: 93). Does the word ‘Khalidan’ mentioned in the Arabic text of the Verse indicate dwelling in hell for a long time or remaining in it eternally? If the word had indicated remaining eternally, Allah Glorified is He would not have said: '“And so they will remain…' (Al-‘Imran: 88) and then in another verse, He says: '… Hell, where they will remain for ever…' (an-Nisa’: 169) This saying indicates that the word ‘Abada’ which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse adds the meaning of eternity to mere remaining in hell. If the word ‘Khalidin’ (remaining) and ‘Abada’ (forever) have the same meaning, then the word ‘Abada’ (forever) will not add anything to the meaning. But the Quran is the saying of Allah Glorified is He which is free of any redundancy or absurdity. Thus, if we reflect on this verse, we will find that the word ‘Khalidin’ means remaining for a long time and ‘Khalidin Abada’ means remaining forever. Each word of the Quran is precise and has a specific meaning. Furthermore, the word ‘Khalidin’ is mentioned in the following sense when it refers to remaining in hell. Allah Almighty says: 'The Day it comes no soul will speak except by His permission. And among them will be the wretched and the prosperous. As for those who were [destined to be] wretched, they will be in Hell. For them therein is [violent] exhaling and inhaling. [They will be] abiding therein as long as the heavens and the earth endure, except what your Lord should will. Indeed, your Lord is an effector of what He intends.' (Hud: 105-107)

This means that Allah Almighty has excluded whomever He wills from abiding in hell. But such exclusion is bound to a specific time and the word 'Khulud' does not mean infinite perpetuation; rather, it refers to a long period of time. Allah Almighty uses the same meaning of 'Khulud' when He refers to abiding in heaven when He says: 'And as for those who were [destined to be] prosperous, they will be in paradise, abiding therein as long as the heavens and the earth endure, except what your Lord should will – a bestowal uninterrupted.' (Hud: 108)

The saying of Allah Almighty: '…except what your Lord should will…' (Hud: 107) indicates that the Arabic word 'Khalidin' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means that this abidance is not eternal. In addition, the exception mentioned in the verse must be limited to a time constraint. But time is finite, whereas eternity is infinite; therefore, 'Khulud' does not mean abiding eternally.

We have to tackle the verses in this sense. In this regard, we should consider the approach of one of the key scholars of Islamic creed during the Abbasid era: 'Amr ibn 'Ubayd. He was among the scholars who were well-known for their keenness to maintain the dignity of knowledge and scholars to the extent that the caliph of this era said about him in the presence of some people who purported to be scholars, 'All of these alleged scholars are hunting after their own interests except for 'Amr ibn 'Ubayd.' He enjoyed a high scientific status and had faith-based dignity that enabled him to rise above all minor things in life. He was also specific and subtle in his opinions. Qays ibn Anas relates the following story about him: Once I was attending the gathering of 'Amr ibn 'Ubayd and heard him saying, 'I will be brought forth on the Day of Judgement and will be asked, 'Why did you say that the one who deliberately commits murder cannot repent? So I recited the verse, '…wherein he will abide eternally….' (an-Nisa': 93) 'Amr ibn 'Ubayd should have noticed that the person who deliberately kills is permitted to repent from the inspiration or the vision that Allah Almighty caused him to see which states that on the Day of Judgement he would be asked why he gave a legal opinion to the effect that the one who kills deliberately cannot repent. This is because being questioned on the Day of Judgement about this matter involves reproach for issuing this legal opinion.

This indicates that Allah the Glorified and Exalted has willed that over every possessor of knowledge does one [more] know…. ‘Amr mentioned the saying of Allah Almighty: '…his recompense is Hell, wherein he will abide eternally…' (an-Nisa’: 93). At this moment, Qays ibn Anas who was the youngest among the attendants said to him, ‘If I were with you, I would say as you said: '…his recompense is Hell, wherein he will abide eternally…' (an-Nisa’: 93). I would also say Allah Almighty's saying: 'Indeed, Allah does not forgive association with Him, but He forgives what is less than that for whom He wills….' (an-Nisa’: 48) Qays then said, ‘By Allah, ‘Amr ibn ‘Ubayd did not reject what I said.’ This means that ‘Amr ibn ‘Ubayd agreed to Qays’ opinion.

The story indicates that the words ‘Khalidin fiha’ (wherein they will abide) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse does not mean infinite perpetuation because Allah Almighty has made an exception to such abidance in another verse.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted has given the ruling on deliberate murder and involuntary murder and the scholars found that there is another type of murder called quasi-deliberate murder as it is neither deliberate nor involuntary. For instance, someone may hit another person with a tool that does not normally cause death. In such a case there is a deliberate intention since the hitter actually picked the tool and hit the other person and accidentally the tool caused death although it does not normally kill. In such a case, scholars say that death accompanied such an action and did not cause it. Accordingly, no Qisas (just retaliation) is due, but Diyah (blood money) must be paid.

Allah Almighty has clarified all the cases in which someone may kill another, such as permissible murder when a Muslim kills a disbeliever in a battle, the deliberate murder, involuntary murder, and quasi-deliberate. Therefore, He the Glorified and Exalted draws the Muslims’ attention to the fact that they should be careful in this regard to ensure that their swords are not going to be used against your brothers. In relation, Allah Almighty says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ إِذَا ضَرَبۡتُمۡ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ فَتَبَيَّنُواْ وَلَا تَقُولُواْ لِمَنۡ أَلۡقَىٰٓ
إِلَيۡكُمُ ٱلسَّلَٰمَ لَسۡتَ مُؤۡمِنٗا تَبۡتَغُونَ عَرَضَ ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنۡيَا فَعِندَ
ٱللَّهِ مَغَانِمُ كَثِيرَةٞۚ كَذَٰلِكَ كُنتُم مِّن قَبۡلُ فَمَنَّ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيۡكُمۡ
فَتَبَيَّنُوٓاْۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ بِمَا تَعۡمَلُونَ خَبِيرٗا ﴿٩٤﴾

So, you who believe, be careful when you go to fight in God’s way, and do not say to someone who offers you a greeting of peace, ‘You are not a believer,’ out of desire for the chance gains of this life – God has plenty of gains for you. You yourself were in the same position [once], but God was gracious to you, so be careful: God is fully aware of what you do [94] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 94)

Allah Almighty commands the believers who go forth to fight in His cause to investigate and not to use their swords, spears or arrows before investigating and checking against whom they use them. He the Exalted also commands them '…and do not say to one who gives you [a greeting of] peace ‘You are not a believer,’ aspiring for the goods of worldly life; for with Allah are many acquisitions. You [yourselves] were like that before; then Allah conferred His favor upon you, so investigate. Indeed Allah is ever, with what you do, Acquainted.' (an-Nisa’: 94)

It is an all-inclusive verse, as it encompasses the ruling, its reason and purpose. Allah Glorified is He starts the verse with His saying: '‘O you who have believed…' (an-Nisa’: 94). The fact that the discourse is addressed to the believers indicates its binding nature; Allah Almighty does not address all the people in this verse. Rather, He says: 'O you who have believed, when you go forth [to fight] in the cause of Allah, investigate…' (an-Nisa’: 94) Allah Almighty orders the believers to abide by His Command as they have believed in Him and should obey Him and follow His Commands. The reason for abiding by every ruling is that the believer has faith in the One Who has enacted this ruling. Accordingly, the believer should not inquire about the wisdom or reason for a certain ruling in order to avoid perplexity and confusion. This matter should be stressed because it frequently occurs to the minds of people to ask about the rationale and wisdom underlying every matter in religion. Therefore, they should know that if they know the rationale underlying a certain ruling, they will abide by it not in obedience to the One Who enacted it, but due to being convinced of the wisdom itself.

There is an attitude among those who have transgressed against themselves by disbelief or those who believe in Allah Glorified is He but commit major sins like perjury, usury or drinking intoxicants. When physicians examine the liver of someone who drinks intoxicants – for instance – they often find them suffering from cirrhosis and any extra dosage of intoxicants may lead to this person's death. In this case, this person may abstain from drinking intoxicants because he has realised the rationale and wisdom behind preventing it. Furthermore, the one who asked him to do so may be a Magus; therefore, in such a case abstention from drinking intoxicants is not in obedience to a Divine Command. However, the believer should refrain from drinking intoxicants because Allah Glorified is He forbids it. Also, the believer should carry out all the commands of Allah Almighty even with regards to harmless matters; Allah Almighty does not forbid only harmful matters as He may forbid things in order to discipline man. As an example – and to Allah Almighty belongs the utmost example of perfection – a husband may ask his wife not to give their son any of the sweets that he brought. In this case, he prevents his son from taking sweets not because it is harmful; rather, he wants to discipline his son.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'For wrongdoing on the part of the Jews, We made unlawful for them [certain] good foods which had been lawful to them…' (an-Nisa': 160). A person should follow the commands of Allah Almighty out of obedience to Him, not because the rationale underlying the command is useful to him because if one follows a Divine Command due to the benefit, he expects to gain or the harm it may enable him to avoid, his faith will be deficient. It is frequently noticed that Allah Almighty imparts His Wisdom in the rulings He enjoins in order for man to realise one of the infinite aspects of His Wisdom that have been concealed. A person may think about the wisdom underlying any incident, but by the passage of time, he realises the truth and usefulness of the Rulings of Allah Glorified is He. This encourages man to take the Rulings of Allah Almighty for granted.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'O you who have believed….' (an-Nisa': 94) Faith is the reason which will cause the people to obey the commands of Allah Almighty: 'O you who have believed, when you go forth [to fight] in the cause of Allah….' (an-Nisa': 94) 'Al-Darb', the Arabic root of the word 'Darabtum' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means a violent reaction against another something. Allah Almighty's saying: 'When you go forth [to fight]…' (an-Nisa': 101) indicates that life abounds of actions and reactions and Allah Almighty says, 'Darabtum fil Ard' because Al-Ard' (land) is where He has placed the sustenance of all His creatures. When humans want to take out its wealth and goodness, they plough the land, sow the seeds, irrigate the land and then fruits sprout. Through this process, the soil yields crops. Therefore, every kind of motion needs effort and strife. Allah Almighty also says: '…and others who travel in the land seeking of the bounty of Allah…' (al-Muzzammil: 20).

The verse suggests that in order to gain the bounties of Allah Almighty that are placed in the land, people should work hard and diligently. Therefore, it is said that the land needs digging and ploughing. The more man exerts effort in handling the land, the more bounties it will yield. The Arabic words 'Al-Darb fi Sabil Allah' means fighting for the cause of Allah Almighty or preparing the requirements needed for fighting for the cause of Allah Almighty. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And prepare against them whatever you are able of power and of steeds of war…' (al-Anfal: 60).

Battles should be preceded by making preparations which are carried out by physical preparation of the bodies that require the basic needs and necessities of life. Furthermore, fighters should also prepare the necessary tools and instruments require excavation and search for different elements needed and examination of different industries in order to choose the most suitable among them. All preparation processes require research and craft; therefore, the following is mentioned in the Athar (narrations from the Companions), 'Allah may forgive four people for the sake of a single arrow unsheathed in His cause.' The reason for this saying is that there is a person who cut the wood of which the arrow is made, a person who installed the tools that enable the arrow to fly forward, a person who placed the darts, and finally a person who uses the bow to shoot the arrows.

Allah Almighty wants the believers to be strong in order for them to be able to strive hard throughout the land. Allah Almighty says: '…O you who have believed, when you go forth [to fight] in the cause of Allah, investigate….' (an-Nisa': 94) We know that going forth in the Cause of Allah the Almighty is not only concerned with Jihad (striving in the Cause of Allah), but it is also concerned with all aspects of life because whatever is required for an obligation to be fulfilled is also considered as an obligation. The word 'Tabayyanu' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means to check matters and investigate thoroughly so that the believers do not harm or wrong other people.

There is an incident relevant to this command pertaining to a man called Muhallim ibn Jathamah who bore animosity towards another person called 'Amer ibn Al-Adbat Al-Ashga'i. Muhallim then joined a brigade that consisted of a small number of soldiers and coincidentally met Amer ibn Al-Adbat Al-Ashga'i who had embraced Islam. Therefore, 'Amer greeted Muhallim who thought that 'Amer converted to Islam in order to escape from him, so Muhallim killed 'Amer. Then, he went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who asked him, 'Why did you not try to investigate the matter? Did he not greet you with the greeting of Islam? On what basis do you claim that he said, 'Peace be upon you' just to save himself from getting killed?' Muhallim then said, 'O Messenger of Allah, please ask Allah to forgive me.' When someone asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask Allah Almighty to forgive him, he immediately recognised the status of the person asking for forgiveness by his faith-inspired insight. He used to say, 'May Allah forgive you,' when he knew that the person seeking forgiveness is exempt from blame, but if Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say so, the one asking him to ask Allah to forgive him, knew that he was sinful. Due to the fact that Muhallim and 'Amer bore animosities and antagonism towards each other, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Muhallim, 'May Allah not forgive you' because he realised that the animosity and antagonism which he bore towards 'Amer was the reason why he did not investigate his matter.

Narrators said that Muhallim died seven days after this incident; and when he was buried, the earth threw his body out. So they went to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and told him about what happened.

Then, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The earth admits inside it those who are more evil than your companion, but Allah wanted to admonish you.' The Companions then threw the corpse of Muhallim between two edges of a mountain and covered it with stones.(1)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not want people to be deluded into false inferences when an event that contradicts the universal laws known to people takes place. For example, when Ibrahim, the son of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him died, a solar eclipse happened. People then said that the sun eclipsed for the sake of the son of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. But as the matter pertains to the essence of creed, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained the truth about it in the following Hadith: 'Al-Mughirah ibn Shu'bah narrated that the sun eclipsed in the lifetime of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on the day when Ibrahim (his son) died. So the people said that the sun had eclipsed because of the death of Ibrahim. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The sun and the moon do not eclipse because of the death or life (i.e. birth) of anyone. When you see the eclipse, pray and invoke Allah.'(2) They said so to honour Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his son Ibrahim, but he wanted to rectify the people's concepts and creeds. Similarly, when the earth expelled the body of Muhallim, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained the matter for the people for them not to be tempted or to conclude that anyone who is not thrown out by earth is a pious person, as there were a lot of disbelievers who were not thrown out by the earth when they were buried. Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The earth admitted people who were more evil than Muhallim, but Allah Almighty wills to admonish the people for them not to do what he did. Had he not said that, a little confusion would have occurred and people would have thought that if the earth did not throw a person's body out, this would indicate the righteousness of this person. This would also imply that Abu Jahl and Walid ibn Al-Mughirah are in a good status, but Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to explain these matters clearly. Therefore, he said, ‘The earth admits into it people who are more evil than Muhallim, but Allah wants to teach the people a lesson and warn them against following his footsteps.(1)

(2) Related by Al-Bukhari

'O you who believe! when you go to war in Allah's way, make investigation, and do not say to anyone who offers you peace: You are not a believer...' (an-Nisa’: 94) .In this regard, I recall that an honourable brother once told me that he was listening to a radio broadcast and the reciter made a mistake during the recitation of the following verse as he said*, ‘Fatathabbatu*’ (investigate) instead of ‘Fatabayyanu’ (investigate*)*: '…if there comes to you a disobedient one with information, investigate…' (al-Hujurat: 6). In response to this complaint, I would like to remark that the recitation he listened to is one of the recitation styles of the Quran which always suggest the same meanings. The Arabic verb ‘Tabayyan’ means to investigate and check something which is also the same meaning of the Arabic verb of ‘Tathabbat.’ It is well-known that the Quran has seven different recitation styles and was written without dots or vocalisation. However, this is not our case, as now the words of the Quran are vocalised with Fat-ha (vowel point that sounds like ‘a’), Kasrah (vowel point that sounds like ‘i’), and Dammah (vowel point that sounds like ‘u’).

It is also well-known that some Arabic letters are similar to each other like ‘Ba’’, ‘Nun’, ‘Ta’’, and ‘Tha’’, and the dots and vocalisation did not exist before the time of Al-Hajjaj ibn Yusuf Ath-Thaqafi. People used to recite the Quran depending on their talent for Arabic Language and the teachings of the Revelation. Therefore, the Arabic word ‘Fatabayyanu’ is composed of the Arabic letter ‘Fa’’ which did not cause any disagreement on the way it is read without dots in the word, and letters ‘Ta’’, ‘Ba’’’, Ya’’, and ‘Nun.’ These letters make it possible for us to read the word as either ‘Tathabbatu’ or ‘Tabayyanu’ depending on the position of the dots. If the dots are omitted, words can be read in different ways, but we must always follow what was revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Therefore, when someone who did not memorise the Quran was given a Mus-haf (copy of the Noble Quran) in order to recite it, he recited a verse as,

(1) Related by Ahmad and Ibn Jarir

'San`atu Allah waman Ahsanu min Allah San'ah.' There was no disagreement over the Arabic letter 'Sad' in the Arabic word 'Sibghah' which is mentioned in the Arabic verse, but there was disagreement over the reading of 'Ba'' in the same word, as it could be read as 'Ba'' or 'Nun.' The same holds for the letter 'Ghin' which can also be read as ''Ayn' if the dots marking the words are not written. According to Hafs recitation style, the verse is read as 'Sibghata Allah waman Ahsanu mina Allah Sibghah.' '[Ours is] the religion of Allah. And who is better than Allah in [ordaining] religion?' (al-Baqara: 138) But when a person who did not properly memorise the Quran read it, he pronounced the Arabic word 'San'ah' instead of 'Sibghah' and the verse in both cases has the same meaning.

Yet, it should be borne in mind that the recitation of the Quran is bound by a religious text and not amenable to personal opinion, and must be read in line with the revelation that Jibril (Gabriel) conveyed from Allah Almighty to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, no one should read the Quran according to his personal opinion even if the morphological form allows such recitation. Accordingly, it is said that there are three pillars of any correct recitation of the Quran:

1. It should be in line with the rules of Arabic Language.
2. It should be in line with the 'Uthmany calligraphy.
3. It should be narrated from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him through an authentic chain of narrators whose agreement upon a lie is impossible, and in a manner that does not include any doubt.

These rules were put in poetic form by the person who composed Tayyibat-un Nashr poem. He said,

Everything that conforms to the rules of Arabic grammar,
And includes a form of the 'Uthmany calligraphy,
And is narrated from Prophet Muhammad through an authentic chain of narrators,
These are the three pillars of accepted recitation style of the Quran.

The following is Hafs' recitation style of Allah's saying (which means): '... [Allah] said, 'My punishment – I afflict with it whom I will...' (al-A'raf: 156).

However, Al-Hasan’s recitation style of the same verse differs from the former one in the word ‘Asha” (will), which is mentioned in Hafs’ recitation style, while it is replaced by Asa’ (commits misdeeds) in Al-Hasan’s recitation style.

Actually, the meaning of the word Asa’’ which derived from ‘Al-Isa’ah’ differs from the meaning of the word ‘Asha’, but the two recitation styles of the same verse do not differ in the overall meaning. Also, the word ‘Fatabayyanu’ stated in one recitation style is read as ‘Fatathabbatu’ in another recitation style whether in the verse under explanation or in the verse in which Allah Almighty says, '…if there comes to you a disobedient one with information, investigate…' (al-Hujurat: 6)

The Arabic word ‘Al-Tabayyun’ means investigation and checking and requires intelligence and acuity so that one can recognise the signs of faith in the one who greets him with the Islamic greeting of peace: '…and do not say to one who gives you [a greeting of] peace ‘You are not a believer...' (an-Nisa’: 94).

Every Muslim should be discerning enough in order not to judge anyone according to mere suspicions. In this regard, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him acted decisively with Usamah ibn Zayd who killed someone after he declared to be a Muslim. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him, ‘What about his declaration that there is no god but Allah? Did you not cut his heart open to find out whether he had done so sincerely or not?’ Usamah replied to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, ‘This person said the Testimony of faith only to escape death. The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Did you not cut his heart open to find out whether he had done so sincerely or not? Did you kill him in spite of his professing La ilaha ill Allah (there is no god but Allah)?’ This Testimony of Faith has sanctity, as it is forbidden to kill anyone who utters it.

Some narrators related that this verse was revealed about Muhallim ibn Jathamah, while others said that it is about Usamah ibn Zayd and others said it is about someone else. Ibn ‘Abbas may Allah be pleased with them both also recited a part of the verse, '…and do not say to one who gives you [a greeting of] peace ‘You are not a believer...' (an-Nisa’: 94) He said, ‘A person who had just collected the spoils of a battle was once caught by the Muslims, then he greeted them with the Islamic greeting of peace. However, the Muslims killed him and took his spoils. Then, Allah Almighty revealed the following verse about this incident: '…and do not say to one who gives you [a greeting of] peace 'You are not a believer...' (an-Nisa': 94).(1)

Scholars who have profound religious knowledge say, 'Survival of a thousand disbelievers is better than killing a single believer wrongfully.' Other narrations state that this verse was revealed about Al-Miqdad ibn Al-Aswad. Al-Bazzar related on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with them both, that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent a group of Muslim fighter including Al-Miqdad ibn Al-Aswad. When they reached the place in which they would fight a group of people, the latter were dispersed and left the place and none remained except a person who possessed a lot of money and declared La ilah illa Allah (there is no god but Allah). However, Al-Miqdad killed him, then one of his Companions said, 'Did you kill a person who declared La ilah illa Allah (there is no god but Allah). By Allah, I will mention that to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.' Upon their return to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they said, 'Al-Miqdad killed a person who declared La ilah illa Allah (there is no god but Allah).' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Bring forth Al-Miqdad.' Then, he asked Al-Miqdad, 'Did you kill a man who professed La ilah illa Allah (there is no god but Allah)? What would you do with regard to (the utterance): La ilaha illa Allah (there is no god but Allah) when it comes (before you) on the Day of Resurrection? Then, Allah Almighty revealed: 'O you who have believed, when you go forth [to fight] in the cause of Allah, investigate…'(2) (an-Nisa': 94).

'O you who have believed, when you go forth [to fight] in the cause of Allah, investigate; and do not say to one who gives you [a greeting of] peace 'You are not a believer,' aspiring for the goods of worldly life…' (an-Nisa': 94).

The saying 'Alqa Ilaykum As-Salam' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse refers to the one who surrendered to the believers or uttered the Islamic greeting of peace. The verse reveals that no one has the right to make accusation of disbelief against any person who has surrendered to him or extended to him the greeting of peace.

(1) [Related by Al-Bukhari]

(2) [Related by Al-Bazzar]

The word A'rad which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse refers to everything that is transitory and temporary. Humans in this sense are also considered as A'rad (plural of A'rad) because they do not exist permanently. It is also said that man is considered as A'rad (having temporary existence) in relation to the universe because it does not depend on human existence. In addition, the universe itself is considered as A'rad (having temporary existence) because on day it will perish.

Man can be considered as A'rad (having temporary existence) in terms of health conditions which may change from healthiness to sickness. The same holds for body shape (slimness and fatness), complexion as it may change from fairness to darkness by exposure to sunlight and economic status which may change from richness to poverty. Everything relevant to the human being is transitory and temporary and the human being becomes a more stable core than it. Also, if the human being is compared to something more permanent than him, the human being will become A'rad (having temporary existence). Accordingly, this is a relative matter and everything but Allah Almighty can be considered as A'rad (having temporary existence), and will perish one day as Allah Almighty says: 'And there will remain the Face of your Lord, Owner of Majesty and Honour.' (ar-Rahman: 27)

And '… do not say to one who gives you [a greeting of] peace 'You are not a believer' aspiring for the goods of worldly life…' (an-Nisa': 94) '…aspiring for the goods of worldly life…' (an-Nisa': 94) refers to the status of the killer who covets the properties of the person who greets him with the Islamic greeting of peace. The word A'rad in the Arabic text of this verse may also refer to the human pride felt when taking revenge from a person towards whom one bears hatred and animosity.

Therefore, when the word A'rad (having temporary existence) is associated with the worldly life, it suggests that seeking a valueless and transitory object. Therefore, a poet wrote the following verse in which he expresses the feelings of a person who grieves for losing a worldly possession even though he himself as a human being is bound to die and perish from the worldly life:

The soul that possesses things is bound to perish,
So how come I grieve for something that is lost.

The same holds for the transitory matters relevant to the worldly life. The word 'Dunya' (i.e. worldly life) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse is derived from the root *'Dunuw' (*inferiority) whose opposite is ''Uluw' (sublimity); thus, the opposite of '*Dunya' (*inferior) is ''Ulya' (sublime). The one who properly evaluates the worldly gains is intelligent, wise and discerning. Therefore, he will not take the properties of the person he wants to kill when he greets him with the Islamic greeting of peace because he uses his faith-inspired insight and receives the worldly gains from the One Who has created the whole world. When the rational person desires the worldly gains, he should ask the One Who possesses the whole world rather than seeking them from a human being. Actually, the worldly life itself will not avail him since he may be killed at any time.

'…aspiring for the goods of worldly life; for with Allah are many acquisitions…' (an-Nisa': 94). As Allah the Glorified and Exalted addresses the human soul that He has created, He knows how it is inclined to the things that have long-term benefits. For example, a person may feel happy if he has the food he needs for lunch and will be happier if he has the food he needs for both lunch and dinner. His happiness will further increase if he has the food he needs for his sustenance for a month or a year. He will even be happier if he owns a piece of land from which he obtains his livelihood and which his children may inherit.

Man loves his life and likes his remembrance to be extended after his death by his offspring. Therefore, man grieves when he does not have children because he knows well that he will inevitably die, so he wishes that his life would be extended and continued through the life of his son. In addition, when he has a son who has his grandson, he rejoices even more because he will be remembered by two generations (his son and grandson). The person who thinks in this manner should understand that even if his name may last for a thousand of generations, he should give attention to his status in the afterlife. In addition, he should bring up his son to be a righteous person in order to supplicate for him after his death.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He confronts the human soul that craves for worldly acquisitions and exposes its reality when He reveals the thoughts and reflections of humans in His Ruling. When Allah Glorified is He has willed to forbid the polytheists from entering the Sacred House of Allah, He has known the people's inner thoughts and secrets and has known that the polytheists used to enter Mecca and the Sacred House of Allah Almighty in order to sell their commodities during the commercial season, as their yields will sustain them for the rest of the year. He has known that forbidding the polytheists from entering Mecca would cause the inhabitants of Mecca to worry about the profits that accrued from their trade. He Glorified is He says: '…indeed the polytheists are unclean, so let them not approach Al-Masjid Al-Haram after this year…' (at-Tawba: 28).

Before the inhabitants of Mecca even wondered how they would live and sell goods, Allah Glorified is He revealed: '…and if you fear poverty then Allah will enrich you out of His grace…' (at-Tawba: 28). Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He reveals to people their inner thoughts and reflections, as He knows best the thoughts that will be stirred up in the mind of those who listen to the ruling. He is their Creator; therefore, no one can say any further comment.

The saying of Allah Almighty: '…aspiring for the goods of worldly life; for with Allah are many acquisitions…' (an-Nisa': 94) applies to every age. Subsequently, He says: '…for with Allah are many acquisitions…' (an-Nisa': 94). Glorified is Allah the All-Sustainer, the All-Giver. Therefore, I like seeing people adorning their houses with artistic arrangements upon which the following verse is written: '…and if you fear poverty then Allah will enrich you out of His grace if He please…' (at-Tawba: 28). The same holds for the saying of Allah Almighty: '…aspiring for the goods of worldly life; for with Allah are many acquisitions…' (an-Nisa': 94).

This may touch the hearts of responsible officials and cause them to turn to Allah Almighty. Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '…You [yourselves] were like that before; then Allah conferred His favour upon you, so investigate. Indeed Allah is ever, with what you do, Acquainted.' (an-Nisa': 94) This is a call for those who witnessed the revelation of the Quran to reconsider and recall their recent past. They should not have accused other Muslim brothers - who greeted them with the Islamic greeting of peace - of disbelief because they might conceal the matter of their conversion to Islam from their families because they were disbelievers. This was the case at the advent of Islam, as earlier Muslims used to hide their acceptance of Islam from their families who were disbelievers, as they were a despised minority that hid their faith. However, Allah Almighty did not send to them anyone to inspect the sincerity of their intentions. Therefore, Allah Almighty instructs the believers concerned with this verse to consider that those people – who greeted them with the Islamic greetings of peace - may undergo the same experience they underwent previously.

'…You [yourselves] were like that before; then Allah has conferred His favour upon you…' (an-Nisa': 94). Allah Glorified is He has conferred upon them the favour of causing them to become exalted and distinguished when they embraced Islam and a Muslim has become dignified and no one can despise him due to embracing Islam. Allah Almighty mentions again the word 'Fatabayyanu' (investigate) in the Arabic text of the verse after He used it at the beginning of the verse. It means that a Muslim should not kill any person who greeted him with the Islamic greeting of peace merely because of a material gain. Allah Almighty has mentioned the word 'Fatabayyanu' (investigate) again; when it is mentioned for the first time, it is used as a preparation for the reason why some believers regarded the person who greeted them with the Islamic greeting of peace as a disbeliever which is expressed in His saying: '…aspiring for the goods of worldly life; for with Allah are many acquisitions…' (an-Nisa': 94). Then the word is mentioned again in order to suggest the result following from such an attitude: '…so investigate. Indeed Allah is ever, with what you do, Acquainted.' (an-Nisa': 94)

The Legislation of Allah Glorified is He has certain grounds, as He knows best that which rectifies the human soul. No one should think that Allah Almighty created and guided us to faith in order to let us down in the system of life; rather, He created and bestowed upon us the righteous path in order for them to be a model for others and so that all people would notice that the worldly life and gains submit to those who follow the path set by Allah Glorified is He. '…Indeed Allah is ever, with what you do, Acquainted.' (an-Nisa': 94)

Allah Almighty instructs the believers to beware of concealing their bad intentions behind false pretension because the One Who sought for reward is the One Who judges and watches over people and knows everything about them. The person who killed another one who greeted him with the Islamic greeting of peace did not do so because the latter did not convert to Islam. Rather, he did so because he and the one whom he killed bore animosity and hatred towards each other. He should have known that Allah Almighty knows the inner thoughts and intentions.

Allah Almighty commands the believer to investigate the matter when he goes forth to fight in His cause before killing someone whom he suspects his belief, especially when the suspected person greets him with the Islamic greeting of peace. Allah Glorified is He reminds the believers that they too used to conceal their faith from people.

If the earlier believers underwent the same experience when they converted to Islam, they had to consider that other Muslims might also resort to concealing their faith. They had to be sure that Allah is Ever-Acquainted with what they do. The hatred and animosity that may cause a Muslim to kill another Muslim is not hidden from Him Glorified is He.

Allah Glorified is He has tackled in the previous verses the fights taking place between the Muslims and disbelievers, and has enjoined that a Muslim is prevented from killing another believer so that the Muslims do not lose a member of the believer’s community. The intention of Allah Almighty behind this ruling is also that the life of each believer involves goodness to faith on earth. Therefore, we should preserve the life of every believer because he will help spread faith on earth. If a believer kills another believer involuntarily, he should follow the ruling which Allah Almighty has clarified in verse number 92 of the chapter of an-Nisa’.

Subsequently, Allah the Glorified and Exalted has willed to clarify the difference between those who hold back from striving in the cause of Allah Almighty and those who fought in His Cause. Allah Glorified is He says:

لَّا يَسْتَوِى ٱلْقَٰعِدُونَ مِنَ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ غَيْرُ أُو۟لِى ٱلضَّرَرِ وَٱلْمُجَٰهِدُونَ فِى سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ
بِأَمْوَٰلِهِمْ وَأَنفُسِهِمْ ۚ فَضَّلَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْمُجَٰهِدِينَ بِأَمْوَٰلِهِمْ وَأَنفُسِهِمْ عَلَى ٱلْقَٰعِدِينَ دَرَجَةً ۚ
وَكُلًّا وَعَدَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْحُسْنَىٰ ۚ وَفَضَّلَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْمُجَٰهِدِينَ عَلَى ٱلْقَٰعِدِينَ أَجْرًا عَظِيمًا ﴿٩٥﴾

Those believers who stay at home, apart from those with an incapacity, are not equal to those who commit themselves and their possessions to striving in God’s way. God has raised such people to a rank above those who stay at home – although He has promised all believers a good reward, those who strive are favoured with a tremendous reward above those who stay at home [95] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 95)

There is an incident relevant to this verse. Deducing reflections from this story requires vigilance and acuity that ought to teach us the manner in which Allah Almighty addresses His creation. Zayd ibn Thabit was entrusted with writing the Quran revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Furthermore, he was entrusted with collecting the Quran from a certain type of white stones, bones and from what the Companions had memorised. Zayd related: ‘I was once sitting beside Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when peace and tranquillity suddenly descended upon him, a state which he often experiences before the descent of the Revelation. At this instant his thigh lent heavily on mine to the extent that I was afraid it would break it. In other words, this means that the thigh of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was heavy.’

When the Revelation descended to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it may have had a material effect on his status to the extent that if he was riding an animal, people would notice that he was receiving the Revelation because the animal he rode would kneel down underneath him. Therefore, if the thigh of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him lent on that of Zayd ibn Thabit, he must feel the weight of the thigh of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he was receiving the Revelation. Zayd said, ‘I was afraid that his thigh would bend or break my leg. When the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was relieved, he told me to write: 'Not equal are those believers remaining [at home] - other than the disabled - and the Mujahidin…' (an-Nisa': 95) Then, Ibn Umm Maktum who was - as known - blind said, 'O Messenger of Allah, what about those who are incapable of striving in the cause of Allah Glorified is He?' The faith-inspired alertness and vigilance of Ibn Umm Maktum made him understand the extent to which the verse was relevant to him, that he was incapable of striving or fighting in the cause of Allah Almighty. He knew that if this was the end of the verse, he would not be equal to those who strive in His cause. Therefore, his attentiveness made him ask Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; 'What about those who are incapable of striving in Allah's Cause? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him entered into a state of tranquillity again and then was relieved. He asked Zayd ibn Thabit, to write: 'Not equal are those believers remaining [at home] - other than the disabled - and the Mujahidin, [who strive and fight] in the cause of Allah…' (an-Nisa': 95). This part of the verse was revealed as a comforting response to those who are incapable of fighting like Ibn Umm Maktum. But someone may say, 'Would the completion of the verse depend on Ibn Umm Maktum's question?

Allah Glorified is He has willed to draw the attention of every believer that once he receives a verse of Allah Almighty, he should ponder on its meaning and think of his status being relevant to any issue mentioned it. This is clarified by the manner in which Ibn Umm Maktum reacted when he heard the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveying the verse Allah Almighty revealed to him. Allah Glorified is He instructs us to ponder on our status pertaining to any ruling or issue mentioned in any verse. When Ibn Umm Maktum heard the verse, he thought of his status in its light, an action which Allah Almighty wants His slaves to adopt when they receive His verses.

Zayd ibn Thabit said, 'I wrote it.' The accurate performance of Zayd ibn Thabit indicates the truth of the narration. If he first wrote: 'Not equal are those believers remaining [at home] and the Mujahidin...' (an-Nisa': 95), would there be a space for him to add '…other than the disabled…' which Allah Almighty has revealed? So where would he write it? This implies that Zayd ibn Thabit had to decrease the font in order to be able to write: '…other than the disabled…' in between. Zayd ibn Thabit said: '…other than the disabled…' was revealed alone and I was looking at the place to write it at the crack of the shoulder bone (at this time the Arabs used to write on the shoulder bones of animals). The shoulder bone on which Zayd ibn Thabit was writing was cracked, which served as a sign on it.

Allah Glorified is He has willed to instruct the believers to receive the verses He has revealed with faith-inspired attentiveness so that their ears would hear only what their minds reflect on, in order for them to understand their status in relation to the verses. The believers should reflect on the verses again with their hearts so that the creed becomes instilled in their souls.

This is the story of Zayd ibn Thabit, Ibn Umm Maktum, and the Revelation with regard to this verse: 'Not equal are those believers remaining [at home] - other than the disabled – and the Mujahidin…' (an-Nisa': 95)

There are instances in language when a single verb requires two subjects rather than a single one. For example, Zayd and 'Amr shared so and so. The same holds for the case when we describe football players, we find that players pass the ball to each other. We say, 'The players pass the ball to each other, one after another.'

When Allah Glorified is He says: 'Not equal', this indicates that there are two unequal things. Therefore, both of them are grammatically the subjects of the verb 'Yastawy' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse. Thus, 'Al-Mujahidun' (those who strive in the cause of Allah) cannot be deemed equal to 'Al-Qa'idin' (those who remain at home and hold back from this striving) yet both words are subject and object of the verb 'Yastawi' respectively.

'Not equal are those believers remaining [at home]…' (an-Nisa': 95), i.e. the 'Al-Qa'idin' (believers remaining at home and holding back from strife). The opposite in the verse is 'Al-Mujahidin' (those who strive in the cause of Allah). However, the opposite of the word 'Al-Qa'idin' (those who are sitting - in colloquial language) is 'Al-Qa'imin' (those who are standing up) and the opposite of the Arabic word 'Al-Mujahidin' (those who strive in the cause of Allah) is *'Ghayr Al-Mujahidin' (*those who do not strive in the cause of Allah). Thus, it is possible to say that 'Al-Qa'idin' (those who are standing up) are not equal to 'Al-Qa'imin' (those who are standing up), or that 'Al-Mujahidin' (those who strive in the cause of Allah) are not equal to ‘Ghayr Mujahidin’ (those who do not strive in the Cause of Allah). So what is the reason for using the word ‘Al-Qa’idin’ (those who remain at home and hold back from fighting) – in the context of this verse) and Al-Mujahidin’ (those who strive in the Cause of Allah)?

Allah Glorified is He reveals that with the advent of Islam every believer regarded himself a soldier in a state of readiness to fight. The early Muslims were never in a relaxed state; rather, they were prepared to fight as if each of them was constantly standing to respond to the call of duty whenever it came. This also implies that the one who passively sits down should not actually be counted among the believers. This point is further elucidated by the following Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘The best of people is a man who is holding his horse's rein in the cause of Allah (in Jihad) and is galloping towards the place whenever he hears a call for war or detects a note of danger; he goes on proceeding, seeking martyrdom wherever it is expected. And a man who retires with some sheep in at the top of a mountain or a valley. He performs prayer regularly and pays the zakat, continues worshiping his Lord till death overtakes him. He does not interfere in the affairs of the people except for betterment.’ (1)

The believer who is not in a state of readiness to fight is considered ‘Qa’id’ (sitting and remaining at home), where as the opposite is ‘Qa’im’ (standing up) as known. Allah Almighty says in another verse: '…remember Allah standing, sitting…' (an-Nisa’: 103).

This verse indicates that the opposite of ‘Qiyam’ (standing up) is ‘Qu’ud’ (sitting down). It should be taken into consideration that each word has a specific meaning; some people think that the Arabic word ‘Qu’ud’ is the same as ‘Julus’ since both mean (sitting). But if the semantics of the two words are considered more scrupulously, it will be noted that the word ‘Qu’ud’ is always used as the opposite of ‘Qiyam’ (standing upor standing), whereas ‘Julus’ is the opposite of ‘Idtija’’ (reclining). Thus, people say that a person was

(1) [Related by Muslim in the chapter on Government, Ibn Majah in the chapter on Tribulations, and Ahmad]… The word “Hi`ah” which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the Hadith, means the sound heard as the enemy comes, “Faz`ah” means proceeding to encounter the enemy and “Sha`fah” means at the top of a mountain.

'Mudtaji'' (reclining) then 'Jalis' (sitting up), or a person was 'Qa'im' (standing up) then 'Qa'id' (sitting down). Allah Almighty says: 'Not equal are those believers remaining [at home] - other than the disabled…' (an-Nisa': 95).

Qu'ud' is always used as the opposite of 'Qiyam' (standing up). This indicates that the 'Mujahidun' (those who strive in Allah's Cause) are constantly standing prepared and attentive, waiting for the call to strive in the cause of Allah. The Hadith cited above expands the sphere of responsibility of the Mujahid (the person who strives in the cause of Allah), as it depicts him as being constantly ready, on the back of his horse and holding its bridle in order that nothing may surprise him.

Is the inequality of the one who holds back from fighting in the cause of Allah and the one who strives in His cause a questionable matter? No; rather, Allah Glorified is He wants to clarify a hidden matter concerning faith in a manner lucid enough for everyone to understand.

Some people may say to a student, 'Whoever studies succeeds and whoever does not study fails.' Although this is a self-evident matter, people may say it to clarify this point to the student so that he keeps attentive to his responsibilities. Similarly, when Allah Almighty says: 'Not equal are those believers remaining [at home] - other than the disabled - and the Mujahidin, [who strive and fight] in the cause of Allah…'' (an-Nisa': 95), this does not mean that a single mind at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would ever think that that those who strive in Allah's Cause were equal to those who remain at home and hold back from fighting. However, Allah Almighty puts it forward as a matter pertinent to faith within the context of a statement on faith. Subsequently, Allah Almighty draws the believers' attention to those who hold back from fighting and cannot be deemed equal to those who strive in His cause. Allah Glorified is He says: '…other than the disabled…' (an-Nisa': 95). The word 'Darar' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means the harm that afflicts something, such as illness which harms a person's health. Allah Almighty clarifies this point when He says: 'There is not upon the weak or upon the ill or upon those who do not find anything to spend any discomfort when they are sincere to Allah and His Messenger. There is not upon the doers of good any cause [for blame]. And Allah is

Forgiving and Merciful. Nor [is there blame] upon those who, when they came to you that you might give them mounts, you said, 'I can find nothing for you to ride upon.' They turned back while their eyes overflowed with tears out of grief that they could not find something to spend [for the cause of Allah].' (at-Tawba: 91-92)

The Arabic word 'Da'f' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means weakness that harms the person's health and well-being. Illness is considered as a type of harm. By the same token, the verse refers to the believers who are not to be blamed for not striving in the cause of Allah Almighty, such as those who did not have enough money to spend and those who went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in order to join the battle, but there were not enough riding animals to carry them. Consequently, they turned back, while their eyes overflowed with tears out of grief that they could not find something to spend for the cause of Allah Almighty. The believers among them would grieve that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not have enough horses or any other riding animals to transport them to the battle field.

'Nor in those who when they came to you that you might carry them, you said: I cannot find that on which to carry you; they went back while their eyes overflowed with tears on account of grief for not finding that which they should spend.' (at-Tawba: 92) They went back, while their eyes were overflowing with tears. The word tawalaw (went back) has a considerable significance. So the True Lord does not say that their eyes overflow with tears and stops without adding "went back"; they do not shed tears in the presence of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Rather, their tears were while they were going back. There emotional response was due to the excessive grief they felt as a result of not being able to participate in fighting. The word tafeed (overflowed) indicates that tears deluged the entire eye. Thus, they were not faking grief; rather, they were overwhelmed by their emotions. The one who fakes crying squeezes his eyes and exerts a lot of effort to attract attention. By contrast, the grief of the believers who failed to participate overwhelmed them and so tears flooded from their eyes.

There is another verse in which Allah Almighty specified the cases in which a believer is not required to fight: 'There is no harm in the blind, nor is there any harm in the lame, nor is there any harm in the sick (if they do not go forth); and whoever obeys Allah and His Messenger, He will cause him to enter gardens beneath which rivers flow, and whoever turns back, He will punish him with a painful punishment.' (al-Fath: 17) Those then are the disabled ones. "'The holders back from among the believers, not having any injury, and those who strive hard in Allah's way with their property and their persons are not equal' (an-Nisa’: 95). As long as they cannot be deemed equal, one wonders who is better. This is explained in the rest of the verse that encompasses the clear, faith-based statement: ' Allah has made those who strive with their property and their persons to excel the holders back a (high) degree and to each (class) Allah has promised the ultimate good.' (an-Nisa’: 95)

Allah Almighty has promised the ultimate good unto both groups because both of them are believers. But the one who strives hard in Allah’s Cause is exalted a degree above those who remain passive. If someone wonders: why did Allah Almighty promise the ultimate good unto both? To this person I respond: We have to be attentive and properly understand and deliberate the Quran upon reading it. Would Allah not reward the one whom He destined to suffer an ailment that kept him from fighting yet tolerated His decree? Such a person is bound to reap a reward for his deed. The True Lord must therefore give a chance to the one who did not receive such a reward to earn another one so that everyone would have equal opportunity in their religious pursuit. For this reason Allah Almighty says: 'and to each (class) Allah has promised the ultimate good.' (an-Nisa’: 95) The ultimate good for the disabled is the reward they receive for their patience and endurance for the calamity that befell them, whereas the one who was not befallen by a detriment takes a reward for fighting in the cause of Allah Almighty. In this manner, everyone receives the ultimate good from Allah Glorified is He: '…and to each (class) Allah has promised the ultimate good.' (an-Nisa’: 95)

Nonetheless, Allah Almighty sets an additional reward for the one who strives in His cause in distinction from the one who holds back. At the beginning of the verse He assigns a “high degree” of exaltation to the one who strives in His cause, then, He speaks about a mighty reward that awaits him. So, what is the meaning of this mighty reward? The following verses respond to this question:

دَرَجَٰتٖ مِّنۡهُ وَمَغۡفِرَةٗ وَرَحۡمَةٗۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ غَفُورٗا رَّحِيمًا ﴿٩٦﴾

high ranks conferred by Him, as well as forgiveness, and mercy: God is most forgiving and merciful [96]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 96)

Allah Glorified is He assigned a degree to those who are disabled, yet, He privileged those who strive in His cause over the disabled by a number of degrees. When we encounter or hear the word daraja (degree) we should know that it refers to status; but status, of itself, is not enough for a comprehensive elucidation of the meaning; it is rather, an ascending status; a status of elevation and exaltation. By contrast, if we want to indicate a change to a lower or more inferior status we use the word 'darakat' (descending degrees) and not darajat (degrees). But are these degrees exclusively for those who strive in the cause of Allah Almighty? No, we must notice the difference between departing from one's home-land and abandoning one's family for the sake of striving and fighting in the cause of Allah Almighty on one hand, and the process of fighting in itself on the other hand. 'Jihad' (fighting in the cause of Allah) itself requires a faith-inspired will. For this reason, The True Lord puts forward the following saying in the chapter of at-Tawba: 'It did not seem the people of Medina and those around about them of the dwellers of the desert to remain behind the Messenger of Allah, nor should they desire (anything) for themselves in preference to him; this is because there afflicts them not thirst or fatigue or hunger in the way of Allah, nor do they tread a path which enrages the disbelievers, nor do they attain from the enemy what they attain, but a good work is written down to them on account of it; surely Allah does not waste the reward of the doers of good;* Nor do they spend anything that may be spent, small or great, nor do they traverse a valley, but it is written down to their credit, that Allah may reward them with the best of what they have done.' (at-Tawba: 120-121)

In this verse, the True Lord explains that it is inappropriate for the people of Medina and the nomads living around them to fall behind and not participate in striving in His cause along with the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They should not be content with relaxation, comfort and luxury, while the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is in asperity. Inasmuch as he went forth to fight in the cause of Allah Almighty, they must also go because the reward is enormous. They will be rewarded for any pain or suffering they may endure in doing a good deed. Similarly, they will be rewarded for any hunger they may suffer or any trouble they go through. They will be rewarded for any step they take that angers the disbelievers, (by taking over a place that the disbelievers wanted to dominate). Allah Almighty will also reward them whenever they defeat an enemy; for Allah Almighty rewards people for more than they actually do.

Scholars have subsumed these divine endowments under seven degrees. Someone may achieve all of the degrees. Another who has only endured thirst gets the reward for such endurance. Another who has suffered exhaustion will only receive the reward for enduring exhaustion. A third may have only suffered a dire necessity; a fourth may have achieved three degrees and a fifth may have attained all these degrees.

The seven degrees could be enumerated as follows: suffering thirst, exhaustion, hunger, stepping in a place that infuriates the disbelievers (taking over a place or a well-defended fortification of theirs), defeating and punishing the enemy, small or big expenses and crossing any valley in the cause of Allah Almighty. These, as scholars explained, are the seven strata deeds for which Allah Almighty rewards its doers more than they did. Whoever attains these seven degrees has attained a great status. Every 'mujahid' (striver) in the cause of Allah Almighty gets rewarded in proportion to the effort and work he exerted. Some striver may attain one degree; others may attain two, three, four, five, six or all of the seven. Let us read the two foregoing verses together:

'The holders back from among the believers, not having any injury and those who strive hard in Allah's way with their property and their persons are not equal; Allah has made the strivers with their property and their persons to excel the holders back a (high) degree, and to each (class) Allah has promised good; and Allah shall grant to the strivers above the holders back a mighty reward: *(High) degrees from Him and protection and mercy, and Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.' (an-Nisa': 95-96)

Reading these verses, we realise that Allah Almighty wants the believers to strive in His cause and exert effort until His word becomes the highest of all. Thus, if man believes, he should never fall behind and stray from the faith-based unity. As long as he has availed himself of faith why would he not become one of those who benefit others with their faith? Allah Almighty wants to call up everyone whose heart has been touched by faith, even if he were in a place dominated by disbelievers, to rid himself of being surrounded by them and alternatively join his brothers in faith. Allah Almighty also induces every believer to spread faith to others and to practically demonstrate that he loves people and desires for them what he desires for himself. But there were some who said: ‘we are weak and incapable of either emigrating or fighting in Allah's Cause. Here the Quran clearly states that no one has an excuse not to participate in fighting in Allah’s Cause and for the cause of advocating the religion of Allah Glorified is He. The True Lord thus says:

قَالُوٓا۟ أَلَمْ تَكُنْ أَرْضُ ٱللَّهِ وَٰسِعَةً فَتُهَاجِرُوا۟ فِيهَا ۚ فَأُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ مَأْوَىٰهُمْ جَهَنَّمُ ۖ وَسَآءَتْ مَصِيرًا ﴿٩٧﴾

When the angels take the souls of those who have wronged themselves, they ask them, ‘What circumstances were you in?’ They reply, ‘We were oppressed in this land,’ and the angels say, ‘But was God’s earth not spacious enough for you to migrate to some other place?’ These people will have Hell as their refuge, an evil destination [97] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 97)

Those are the ones who wrong themselves inasmuch as they do not take part in fighting in Allah’s Cause. This is what happens to them when the angels ‘tawaffahumu’ (seize their souls in death). ‘At-Tawaffi’ means ‘qabd’ (an Arabic word that has several meanings: (grab – get hold of – collect money). For instance, one may say in Arabic: ‘tawfaytu dayni’ meaning I have completely collected or taken back the loan I lent to so and so person. One may also say Allah Glorified is He has collected, to death, this human being, meaning that Allah Almighty fully seized the soul of the human being and took it away. Collecting to death happens upon the orders of higher commander such as the True Lord’s deputy, the Angel of death; it is widely assumed that the Angel of Death whose name is Azra’il follows. After Azra’il comes, the angels then assist him. Death may thereby be attributed to either Allah (Almighty as the higher commander or to the angels as in His saying: "‘…until, when death approaches any of you, Our messengers cause him to die...' (al-An'am: 61). Or it may be attributed to the angel of death: 'Say: The angel of death who is given charge of you shall cause you to die…' (as-Sajda: 11).

When the True Lord employs these three styles in describing the process of death, would this be considered a difference and contradiction in the Quranic style? No; it is rather a clarification of the hierarchy of assignment set by Allah Almighty. He is the highest commander who issues the order to the Angel of death and then the Angel of death orders his assistants. There are analogous examples in our day to day life -and to Allah Glorified is He belongs the supreme and most exalted parables. A student may go to his school after the final examination, then turns back home and say: I have found that I failed and the cause of my failure is the teachers who deliberately caused my failure. His father may then answer him and say: your teachers had no hand in this. Rather, the laws set for grading exams by the ministry of education caused your failure. The student may then say: the headmaster of the school is the one who caused me to fail. This is a true statement because the headmaster of the school applies the laws according to which he makes decisions concerning the passing or failure of students. The student may also claim that the minister of education is the cause of his failure. This is also a true statement because the minister along with his assistants, are all the ones who set the main guidelines according to which the grades of each student are calculated. Accordingly, if the student says: the state has caused me to fail, this would be a true statement too because he understood the hierarchy of law enactment and enforcement from bottom to top. He also realised that any of these levels or echelons may be deemed the actor or cause of his failure. We may thus understand that when the True Lord says: ' Allah takes the souls at the time of their death…' (az-Zumar: 42), this statement is equally true to the following saying: 'Say: The angel of death who is given charge of you shall cause you to die…' (as-Sajda: 11). This is similar to the saying of Allah Glorified is He: 'Our messengers cause him to die....' (al-An'am: 61) All these sayings are true because they related to the hierarchy set by the commander.

'Indeed, those whom the angels take [in death] while wronging themselves...' (an-Nisa': 97). Wronging is to give someone, who has no right, something which you have taken from the one who has the right to this thing. Wronging requires or involves someone who acts as a wrong-doer, another who is wronged and an issue or matter in connection with which the wronging takes place. But how may the angels collect in death a human being in a state of wronging himself? This human being must have done something to deserve such a death. The human being develops the moral of a believing soul after he believes in Allah Almighty and His path; however, his self may tempt him to violate and deviate from the path of Allah Almighty. In such a case, there rises a conflict between two issues: the sense of responsibility inspired by his believing soul with which he accepted the path of Allah Glorified is He and the temptation of the self that pushes him to deviate from that same path. In this vein, a dialogue ensues between the responsibility inspired by the believing soul and the temptation of the self that pushes one to deviate from the path of Allah Almighty. If the believing soul triumphs and wins, one knows that his self has become tranquil and happy. He thus says to himself: ‘had you yielded and succumbed to the temptation to deviate, you would have satisfied a transient desire that would ultimately lead you to be tortured by the fire in the Hereafter. By resisting this desire you did justice and salvaged yourself. Had you succumbed to your transient desire you would have sinned against yourself.’

Analogous things take place in our day-to-day life: If a mother pampers and spoils her son while his father is asking him to study and deters him in order to undertake his responsibility to study, such a mother would be wronging her son. The True Lord gives us an idea about the conflict between the believing soul and the deviant self that only wants to pursue its interest. He therefore says(1): 'And relate to them the story of the two sons of Adam with truth when they both offered an offering, but it was accepted from one of them and was not accepted from the other. He said: I will most certainly slay you. (The other) said: Allah only accepts from those who guard (against evil).' (al-Ma‘ida: 27)

Here Abel says to Caine (the two sons of Adam mentioned in this verse): But why would you kill me? I am not the one who accepted the sacrifice; it is rather, Allah Almighty is the One Who did. What sin did I then commit? Afterwards this dialogue follows: 'If you will stretch forth your hand towards me to slay me, I am not one to stretch forth my hand towards you to slay you surely I fear Allah, the Lord of the worlds' (al-Ma'ida: 28).

(1) The story of Abel and Caine (Adam’s son)

Let us pay attention to the following wise saying of Allah the Glorified and Exalted: 'Then his mind facilitated to him the slaying of his brother…' (al-Ma'ida: 30). It is as if there is a conflict inside Caine between two commands 'kill' and 'do not kill.' The believing soul is telling him: 'do not kill' and the temptation-driven self is saying: 'you have to kill' him. His temptation-driven self ultimately triumphed, led him to kill his brother and facilitated such an atrocity to him. Then, after he had killed his brother, his flaming anger calmed down and he became of the regretful. Then, the signs of such loss started to reveal themselves and become evident. Allah Glorified is He then sent forth a raven to scratch and dig the earth in order to bury another raven. Upon witnessing such a scene, Caine said: "'Woe me, do I lack the strength that I should be like this crow and cover the dead body of my brother?' (al-Ma'ida: 31)

We thus realise that wronging oneself is to violate and oppose what Allah Almighty has decreed for the self to benefit in a complete and eternal manner. Nevertheless, the self may haste after its love for temptations and its desire for immediate benefit and utility that does not last for eternity. When man fulfils this immediate, transient need for an immediate benefit, he is actually wronging himself. 'Indeed, those whom the angels take [in death] while wronging themselves - [the angels] will say, "In what [condition] were you?' (an-Nisa': 97). Thus the angels ask those who sin against themselves: in what condition were you, by reference to your faith. In this context, the interrogative form is used for rebuking and censuring, in the sense of why or how come you wronged yourselves? Why did you not do as your brothers did? Why did you not emigrate and join the parade of faith and the parade of 'jihad' (fighting in Allah's Cause)? Why did you stay in your places, locked up, engulfed and incapable of either moving or escaping? The answer of those who wronged themselves is: '…We were oppressed in the land.' (an-Nisa': 97) By Allah (when Allah Almighty clarifies what happens on the Day of Judgement in such illustration, would we have time to avail ourselves of what Allah Almighty will do) when this day comes? We will definitely not be able to do so. The reason is that we will not be able to reverse our deeds and mistakes at this point. The True Lord depicts to us this scene due to His Subtlety and Kindness. It is also a warning to all of us: beware lest the time comes and what I have already foretold and warned you against happens. In such instance, none of you will be able to redeem his life in order to do good deeds. Rather, each of you should now consider his state.

'Indeed, those whom the angels take [in death] while wronging themselves - [the angels] will say, "In what [condition] were you?" They will say, "We were oppressed in the land.' (an-Nisa': 97) The statement: '…"We were oppressed in the land"…' (an-Nisa': 97) indicates that other people caused them to be weak; this means that they were not capable of going out and emigrating and did not even know the means of doing so. Furthermore, they were worried about their wealth and their homes. Those who caused them to be weak told them: if you go out and depart from your cities do not take anything of your wealth with you. These are some of the aspects of causing someone to be weak. In this context, the angels reply that this discourse is inappropriate and futile. The angels say: '"Was not the earth of Allah spacious [enough] for you to emigrate therein?" (an-Nisa': 97) 'It is as if this is another warning and a declaration that this kind of statement and such kind of pretext is valueless because the one who is concerned about his/her position and wealth more than he is about obeying Allah Almighty, has connected his belief to worldly means. By contrast, the one who places Allah Almighty over and above his position, offspring and everything else is the one who has confidence in Allah Glorified is He because He is the giver and granter of all means.

'Was the earth of Allah not spacious [enough] for you to emigrate therein?…' (an-Nisa': 97) This saying by the angles comes from the higher law. The True Lord created all the creation and made them inhabit the earth. This earth is thus not for someone or some group exclusive of others. Whoever thinks that a place is not wide enough for him to forsake the domain of evil should go to another place.

If a man, due to his injustice, arrogance, and tyranny, has limited and imposed restrictions on places, to the effect that no one is capable of moving from one place to another except after a long series of complications that precludes the transportation from one place to the other, this is something contradictory to the essence of Allah Glorified is He choosing man to be his caliphate (representative) on earth. The reason is that this mission did not distribute people and assign them to certain pieces of land. Rather, every human being is the vicegerent of Allah Almighty on earth in accordance with the saying of the True Lord: 'And the earth, He has set it for living creatures;' (ar-Rahman: 10)

Allah Glorified is He made the earth subservient to man. "The earth" in this context, refers to any part of the earth and "creatures" refers to the totality of terrestrial creatures. If the people do not heed this matter and recognise it as a social and universal principle, the entire world will lapse into corruption and hardship. The thing that really corrupts life on earth is the promulgation of such statements as: the population density prevents so and so country from securing sufficient food for its people. People say so even though there might be other pieces of land that needs labour force to be reclaimed. This is why humanity faces a paradoxical situation: there is land in certain countries that needs labour power and there may be people in a certain country who just need a piece of land.

The earth should be open for roaming so that the land that needs labour may find enough labourers in the countries that have no enough land. All of this fuss spreading in the universe is because there is land without labour and labour without land. If a human being finds that there is a place which is not wide enough for his needs, he should thereby move to another place. If this was the case all of mankind would be in a state of happiness and contentment. Furthermore, whoever breaches this rule ought to know that he does not follow the conditions of being the vicegerent of Allah Almighty on earth. The cause of corruption on earth is that man, the caliphate of Allah Almighty on earth, has become oblivious to the finite bound of his capacity as the vicegerent of Allah Almighty and deemed himself an original, abiding element in the universe. Insofar, as man thinks so of himself, this constitutes corruption on earth: 'Indeed, those whom the angels take [in death] while wronging themselves - [the angels] will say, "In what [condition] were you?" They will say, "We were oppressed in the land." The angels will say, "Was the earth of Allah not spacious [enough] for you to emigrate therein?" For those, their refuge is Hell – and evil it is as a destination.' (an-Nisa': 97)

Thus, if one stays content with injustice and does not apply his thought and reason to reflect upon the universe, realise how the earth is wide enough to contain him, one should know that he risks facing an evil destiny. The reason is that Allah Glorified is He has created the entire universe for man in order for him to serve as His vicegerent in it. As for those who escape punishment and the scolding of the angels, they ought to know that they are bound to reach a moment of death. They are the ones that the True Lord describes in the following verse:

إِلَّا ٱلۡمُسۡتَضۡعَفِينَ مِنَ ٱلرِّجَالِ وَٱلنِّسَآءِ وَٱلۡوِلۡدَٰنِ لَا
يَسۡتَطِيعُونَ حِيلَةٗ وَلَا يَهۡتَدُونَ سَبِيلٗا (٩٨)

but not so the truly helpless men, women, and children who have no means in their power nor any way to leave [98] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 98)

We ought to discern the difference between someone who claims to be weak and another who really is weak. There is someone who may have accepted to be weak even before anyone may have caused him to be so and thus turned himself into a weak person. This is the one who claims and alleges to be weak. As for the one who really is weak, he must be among those whom the True Lord specified: 'Except the weak from among the men and the children who have not, in their power, the means, nor can they find a way (to escape) ' (an-Nisa': 98) Those are the men, women or children who are truly weak due to the nature of their incapacity.

Would a boy among boys be considered weak? The answer is yes; the reason is that weakness may either be accidentally caused by external factors or self-caused and induced. For instance, someone may be weak because they are possessed by others and are incapable of acting or moving around on their own. The same holds for women; a woman ought not to walk alone and be asked to protect herself. Rather, someone must accompany and protect her, whether it be her husband or one of the men whom she is forbidden to marry. The same holds for children because, by nature, they are not obligated to any assignments from Allah Almighty. They are thus excluded from the scope of the angels' scolding because they do not have, in their power, the means nor can they find a way (to escape).

This is the precise articulation of the Quran. Man has been assigned by Allah Glorified is He to depart from the place wherein he is wronged by others even by manoeuvring. Manoeuvring is the application of thought in a way that gives man a bigger opportunity than what is actually available for him. Thus, man may have little or impaired strength; but by manoeuvring one may expand the opportunities of strength. Here is an illustrative example. Someone may try to carry a rock. However he may not be capable of doing so with his own hands. He thus brings forth an iron bar of which he makes a lever under which he places a wheel to roll down the rock. This is a trick or manoeuvre. The same holds for the podiums that we use for construction; they are also a product of mental manoeuvring.

One wonders how the one who built the pyramids placed the last rock on its top. He did so by manoeuvring. The same holds for the one who sculpts from granite an obelisk, that is more than ten meters tall, then moved and erected. He must have done so by way of manoeuvring. Thus, intellectual manoeuvring is a way of thinking that adds to man’s capacity and power over what he needs to achieve. The same applies to knowing the right way to migration. Knowing the immigration roads from Mecca to Medina at the time of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him required expertise so that one may avoid wastelands and intertwined paths. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him immigrated to Medina he used a guide for the road, though this guide was a disbeliever because travelling down this land was not possible without a guide. Let us consider the saying of the True Lord:

فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ عَسَى ٱللَّهُ أَن يَعۡفُوَ عَنۡهُمۡۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَفُوًّا غَفُورٗا ﴿٩٩﴾

God may well pardon these, for He is most pardoning and most forgiving [99] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 99)

The word “these” refers to those who have been mentioned in the verse preceding this one: 'Except the weak from among the men and the children who have not, in their power, the means, nor can they find a way (to escape) ' (an-Nisa’: 98). Despite this, when Allah Glorified is He refers to those who are truly weak in the fullest sense He says: 'So these, it may be, Allah will pardon them.' (an-Nisa': 99) It would have sufficed had the True Lord said: 'so these, Allah pardoned them,' but the True Lord uses, "it may be", to urge them to hope for Allah's forgiveness. Hoping may either be a possibility or impossibility. We know that ('asa) —the Arabic word here translated as "it may be"— expresses hope and that it is often used when what follows is something desirable to us and we would like it to happen. You may indeed hope for something from another person and say: May you well do so and so thing. One may say: May I well do such and such thing. In this context, the speaker is the one who has the power to undertake the action at stake. This is a little bit stronger. But man's power may fail him; for this reason one should better say: May Allah Glorified is He well do so and so; this is a reliance on absolute power. If Allah Glorified is He Himself is the One Who says: 'it may be, Allah will pardon them,' (an-Nisa': 99). This is an enticement and encouragement put forward by the All-Generous and All-Capable.

The True Lord describes for us the condition of the one who dies and the angels collect him to death, when he was wronging him/herself, by staying in a land where he/she suffers injustice, though it was in his/her hands to immigrate to another Muslim land wherein belief and faith prevail. Nevertheless, whoever does so but still takes it upon himself to achieve something for the cause of faith, Allah Glorified is He would support him/her. Allah Almighty says:

وَمَن يُهَاجِرْ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ يَجِدْ فِي ٱلْأَرْضِ مُرَٰغَمًا كَثِيرًا وَسَعَةً ۚ وَمَن يَخْرُجْ مِنۢ بَيْتِهِۦ مُهَاجِرًا
إِلَى ٱللَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِۦ ثُمَّ يُدْرِكْهُ ٱلْمَوْتُ فَقَدْ وَقَعَ أَجْرُهُۥ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ غَفُورًا رَّحِيمًا ﴿١٠٠﴾

Anyone who migrates for God's cause will find many a refuge and great plenty in the earth and if anyone leaves home as a migrant towards God and His Messenger and is then overtaken by death, his reward from God is sure. God is most forgiving and most merciful [100] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 100)

Whoever forsakes the domain of evil and immigrates for the sake of Allah Almighty will find abundant life, if he/she faith purifies his intention. At the beginning, the Muslims immigrated to Abyssinia (Ethiopia) because they did not feel secure about their religion in Mecca. For this reason, it was said that Allah Glorified is He has stretched the universe before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and introduced the issue of migrating in the universe. The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him then refused to let the migrants head anywhere except for Abyssinia (Ethiopia). The True Lord must have informed him that Abyssinia at that time was a land free of any injustice or turmoil.

But someone may wonder: why did the Prophet Muhammad not decide to let the migrants immigrate to any other Arab tribe, whether in the northern or the southern parts of the Arabian Peninsula? The reason is that Quraysh dominated the entire Arabian Peninsula and all its tribes. All tribes used to perform pilgrimage at Quraysh main headquarters. There was not any other Arabian environment capable of opposing the interest of Quraysh. For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him surveyed all other countries and then ordered his companions to immigrate to Abyssinia. The reason for choosing and going to Abyssinia is that the reigning king there did not wrong anyone. Justice was thus the advantage and merit of this king. This is why the believers called Abyssinia the land of security even though it was not a land of faith. As for immigration to Medina it was to a land of faith. We who live in this age must know that there is no immigration after the conquest of Mecca, unless the one who immigrates intends to do so to support and promote obedience to Allah Glorified is He. This is what the saying of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarifies: "The Muslim is the one who spares his other fellow Muslims the evil of his tongue and hand, and the immigrant is the one who emigrates from what Allah forbids."(1)

However, there is still a form of immigration that we may, as Muslims, undertake; it is the pilgrimage or immigrating for the cause of acquiring knowledge or immigrating to a land where there is more room for obedience to Allah Almighty. Let us assume that there is a place where the rulers prohibit people from going to the mosque. People of faith should abandon this place and go to another one wherein man may enjoy the freedom of performing religious enactments; all these are examples of immigration for the sake of Allah Almighty. Intention in immigration cannot be limited to the pursuit of abundance in livelihood; otherwise it cannot be deemed for the sake of Allah

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari, Abu Dawud, and An-Nasa'i

Almighty. For this reason, people, in these days, should not -as actually is the case- be merely concerned with pursuing abundance in livelihood.

Imam Ali may Allah honour his face said: ‘I am astonished at those people who relentlessly pursue what is already guaranteed to them and abandon what they have been asked to do. All people constantly strive for and pursue is their livelihood even though their Creator guaranteed it for them: 'And whoever emigrates in Allah's way, he will find in the earth many a place of refuge and abundant resources, and whoever goes forth from his house flying to Allah and His Messenger, and then death overtakes him, his reward is indeed with Allah and Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.' (an-Nisa': 100)

The migrant who forsakes the land of evil for the sake of Allah Almighty, will find abundance except from Allah Almighty. In this respect, a poet says:

I may indeed swear that land is never too small for its people;

Rather, the conduct and morals of the people becomes too narrow.

Someone may say: I am seeking abundance in livelihood via emigration. We say: you are in fact seeking a job that seemingly assumes the form of serious work, while its essence is laziness because in the course of life where you live, you encounter a lot of suitable jobs.

We also come across some who seek abundance in livelihood but insist on accepting only idle office jobs and vainly taking a salary for it. They do so even though the society is direly searching for technical workers. It is as if those who seek abundance in livelihood want to enjoy such abundance despite their laziness and without exerting effort.

'And whoever emigrates in Allah's way, he will find in the earth many a place of refuge and abundant resources.' (an-Nisa': 100) Upon reading “many a place of refuge”, one ought to realise that it is intended to open up a path before the weak people who have been subjugated by the tyrants. The root of the Arabic word ‘muragham' translated as “many a place of refuge” is composed of the letters ‘r’, ‘gh' and ‘m' and it refers to ‘al-rugham' (soil/earth). It is customary to say: I will do so and cause the nose of so and so person to be ‘raghim’—meaning let the nose of so and so person be buried under earth and soil—I will thus do what I insist on doing. As long as someone is going to do something against the will of another, this means that the latter wanted to subjugate the former and force him to do something, but he refused and did what he wanted.

When one encounters a tyrant, one should preserve his pride and challenge their arrogance. One must thus try to be stubborn, do things against the will of this tyrant and make him feel as if his nose were buried under earth and soil. Popular proverbs say: I want to break the nose of so and so person.

Someone may be weak and humiliated in his own country; however upon immigrating to a different country he may find people or resources that enable him to break, overpower and challenge his enemy. His enemy may then say: though I have impinged on his life he fled to a place better than I could expect. He thus managed to challenge and break the injustice of the tyrant who used to inflict injustice upon him, by emigrating.

The grammatical form of the word 'muragham' is that of the object position in the sentence; it refers to a place that if you reach, you would challenge and break the pride of the one who used to humiliate you. Is there anything better than this?' He who emigrates (from his home) in the cause of Allah will find on earth many dwelling places and plenty to live by.' (an-Nisa': 100). This means that Allah endows the emigrant by making the one who used to make him feel subordinate and humiliated, feel ashamed as if his nose were smeared with mud. The one who is weak in a particular land is often constrained by someone else. However, when he emigrates from this land for the sake of Allah, he will find ease and abundance concerning his livelihood. The True Lord continues: 'And whoever leaves his home as an emigrant to Allah and His Messenger and then death overtakes him - his reward has already become incumbent upon Allah. And Allah is ever forgiving and Merciful.' (an-Nisa': 100) No one knows the time of his death. Accordingly, someone may leave his land for the cause of Allah but does not meet 'those who humiliated him' since death may take him. If this happens, this person will still receive his reward from Allah the Exalted. Allah promised to guide the sincere emigrant to a place where he can take retribution from those who humiliated him, which is a cause. However, dying before reaching this place would mean that he went to the Creator of the Cause Whose Bounty is limitless. We thus realise that an emigrant will profit, whether living or dead.

It is as if the True Lord the Exalted says to His servant, ‘If you emigrate to any one of Allah's vast pieces of land on earth and die before reaching the many lonely roads and the abundant life that I have made available for you, rest assured that you will return to me.’ The lonely roads are one of Allah's Causes, and He is the Cause of all causes.

In order to understand the meaning of 'his reward has already become incumbent upon Allah', we have to contemplate the saying of the True Lord: 'And when the word befalls them' (an-Naml: 82). Interestingly, Allah Glorified is He does so to draw our attention to an important matter. The reward is keener to reach its recipient than the latter is to gain and receive it. If a servant of Allah the Almighty dies, his reward will seek him while he is with his Lord. The reward knows the one to whom it is going to quite well. This is how we ought to understand the meaning of the saying of the True Lord: 'He who emigrates (from his home) in the cause of Allah, will find on earth many dwelling places and plenty to live by. And whoever leaves his home as an emigrant to Allah and His Messenger and then death overtakes him - his reward has already become incumbent upon Allah. And Allah is ever forgiving and Merciful.' (an-Nisa’: 100)

Allah is Most Forgiving and the Dispenser of Mercy towards the one who is careful and patient. In other words, Allah is Most Forgiving and the Dispenser of Mercy so that the one who is careful and patient may meet up with the caravan of faith and make up for what he missed since Allah Glorified is He forgives a servant's past mistakes and sins if he tries to correct them. Emigration requires setting forth on the earth and striving hard in Allah's Cause.

After Allah the Exalted had set the pillars of Islam, He identified what a Muslim must do of these pillars. The pillars of Islam are the following: professing of faith, praying, fasting, giving zakat (obligatory alms) to the poor and pilgrimage to the House, for those who are able. Any Muslim may profess the testimonies of faith and may pray. However, a Muslim may not have any money and for this reason, the True Lord exempts him from the obligation to pay zakat (obligatory charity) to the poor. Another may suffer from an endemic illness that keeps him from fasting and in this case, Allah, the Merciful, exempts him from the obligation of fasting. A third person may not be capable of performing the pilgrimage and in this case Allah the Exalted similarly exempts him from the obligation of performing pilgrimage. In contrast, a Muslim may only profess that there is no deity worthy of worship but Allah and that Muhammad is His Messenger once in his life. As for the remaining pillar, prayer, man is never exempted from doing it except if he is no longer fit to perform it. For this reason, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The most important thing is Islam, and its pillar is praying.'(1) The reason is that prayer is the pillar of which no one is ever exempted since Allah Glorified is He and has incorporated all the other pillars in prayers. During prayer, a Muslim professes that there is no deity worthy of worship but Allah and that Muhammad is His Messenger. During prayer, one refrains from eating and drinking. In addition, one fasts and abstains from speaking while praying. Thus, we find that praying is more comprehensive in abstinence than the pillar of fasting itself. When one prays, he abstains from doing many things that he may do while fasting. For instance, fasting does not prevent one from moving from one place to another. In contrast, praying precludes all forms of action and motion except for standing before Allah the Almighty.

Thus, praying involves a more encompassing form of abstinence and a refraining from mundane worldly activities than the abstinence and refraining involved in fasting. Giving zakat (obligatory charity) to the poor consists in giving away some of one’s wealth which he acquires through his labour and work. Such labour and work consumes time. Praying is giving away one’s time which is for the other activities he does (but he gives them up to pray). To sum it up, prayer involves a more encompassing form of worship than paying zakat (obligatory charity).

Performing pilgrimage to the Sacred House, or Al-Ka‘ba, is also more involved than praying since a Muslim must direct himself towards the Sacred House while praying, and so forth. For this reason, prayer has a different status than that of the rest of the Islamic pillars. It was not enacted through revelation. It was rather decreed in an immediate encounter between the Lord of Muhammad and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself.

(1) Related by Ahmad and At-Tirmidhi

Prayer has such a high status that the True Lord warns us against striving and labouring on earth distracting us from it. Allah Glorified is He even legislated special kind of prayer, called the ‘prayer of war' and the 'prayer of fear’ so that no one could claim that war or fear kept him from praying. During war, a Muslim ought to adhere to the Path of his Lord. The same holds for travelling, The True Lord ordained a shorter prayer:

وَإِذَا ضَرَبۡتُمۡ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ فَلَيۡسَ عَلَيۡكُمۡ جُنَاحٌ أَن تَقۡصُرُواْ مِنَ ٱلصَّلَوٰةِ إِنۡ
خِفۡتُمۡ أَن يَفۡتِنَكُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوٓاْۚ إِنَّ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ كَانُواْ لَكُمۡ عَدُوّٗا مُّبِينٗا ﴿١٠١﴾

When you [believers] are travelling in the land, you will not be blamed for shortening your prayers, if you fear the disbelievers may harm you: they are your sworn enemies [101]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 101)

The phrase ‘Travel throughout the land’ means that a believer walks firmly, resolutely and strongly on the earth. Shortness in prayers refers to the reduction of the number of *rak‘a*s for each prayer. Linguistically, there is a distinction between ikhtisar and iqtisar. The latter refers to taking parts out of something and leaving the rest, whereas the former refers restructuring all parts of this thing in a summarising manner. A good example of the latter is when summarising a book, where we encapsulate its meaning in the smallest possible number of words.

Someone may consider writing a letter. He may then say to himself, in lieu of writing of letter, I shall send a telegraph about the same matter. In such case, one must reduce the number of words in a way that would make a small number of words bear much meaning. Elaboration, however, does not take as much time as a brief summary does. When one wants to summarise, one has to squeeze his mind for a long time until he manages to express all the meanings he wants via a smaller number of words. It is said that Sa‘d Zaghlul, the leader of the 1919 revolution in Egypt, wrote quite a lengthy letter to one of his friends which he sealed with the following words: ‘I apologise for the length. I did not have enough time to summarise.’ Similarly, history tells us about a Muslim Caliphate who wanted to threaten a Roman leader. He thus wrote to him: ‘After extending my greetings, be informed that I will dispatch against you an army whose beginning will reach you while its end still did not depart from my city.’ In this sentence, the Caliphate managed to summarise the size of the impending danger which the King of the Romans would face in case he confronted a gigantic army that could fill the entire earth.

History also records that an Arab leader who was enmeshed in a difficult position in Dwamat Al-Jandal wrote to Khalid ibn Al-Walid only these words: ‘It is you I need.’ He did not say more in order to fully express using this short sentence the extent of painful suffering which he was experiencing.

Shortening the prayers means that a believer performs the noon, afternoon and evening prayers offering two *rak‘a*s instead of four. As for the sunrise and sunset prayers, one performs them as they are: the sunrise prayers consisting of two *rak‘a*s and the sunset consisting of three. The rationale underlying shortening of prayers is that Muslims should not be distracted away from watching the enemies while at war. Similarly, they should not be distracted away from prayer as per the saying of the True Lord: 'Verily, the prayer is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.' (an-Nisa’: 103).

The fact that Allah Glorified is He decreed a special kind of prayer for fear and another for war means that under no circumstance is a believing slave of Allah supposed to forego praying. If praying is obligatory during battle times, one should realise how important prayer since lives are at stake and prayer is still incumbent during war and fighting. The prayers of war or the prayers of fear were decreed in the Quran. The concession to shorten the prayers when one is travelling was enacted in the Sunnah as well. A believer is thus permitted to shorten his prayers while travelling. If disbelievers were to see believers aligned in prayer, they would immediately attack them. For this reason, the True Lord decreed that prayers should be shorter at this time.

The next verse addresses Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him:

وَإِذَا كُنتَ فِيهِمْ فَأَقَمْتَ لَهُمُ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ فَلْتَقُمْ طَآئِفَةٌ مِّنْهُم مَّعَكَ وَلْيَأْخُذُوٓا۟ أَسْلِحَتَهُمْ فَإِذَا
سَجَدُوا۟ فَلْيَكُونُوا۟ مِن وَرَآئِكُمْ وَلْتَأْتِ طَآئِفَةٌ أُخْرَىٰ لَمْ يُصَلُّوا۟ فَلْيُصَلُّوا۟ مَعَكَ
وَلْيَأْخُذُوا۟ حِذْرَهُمْ وَأَسْلِحَتَهُمْ ۗ وَدَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ لَوْ تَغْفُلُونَ عَنْ أَسْلِحَتِكُمْ وَأَمْتِعَتِكُمْ
فَيَمِيلُونَ عَلَيْكُم مَّيْلَةً وَٰحِدَةً ۚ وَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيْكُمْ إِن كَانَ بِكُمْ أَذًى مِّن مَّطَرٍ أَوْ كُنتُم
مَّرْضَىٰٓ أَن تَضَعُوٓا۟ أَسْلِحَتَكُمْ ۖ وَخُذُوا۟ حِذْرَكُمْ ۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ أَعَدَّ لِلْكَٰفِرِينَ عَذَابًا مُّهِينًا ﴿١٠٢﴾

When you [Prophet] are with the believers, leading them in prayer, let a group of them stand up in prayer with you, taking their weapons with them, and when they have finished their prostration, let them take up their positions at the back. Then let the other group, who have not yet prayed, pray with you, also on their guard and armed with their weapons: the disbelievers would dearly like you to be heedless of your weapons and baggage, in order for them to take you in a single assault. You will not be blamed if you lay aside your arms when you are overtaken by heavy rain or illness, but be on your guard. Indeed, God has prepared a humiliating punishment for the disbelievers [102] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 102)

When the True Lord says: 'let a group of them stand [in prayer]', this implies that believers should be divided into two groups: a group praying with the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and another keeping guard watching the enemy. However, how may a group pray behind the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, while another does not, even though all of them are believers seeking the honour of praying with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? The True Lord commands Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to lead each group in prayers once so that each fighter would enjoy the honour of praying behind the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Shortening prayers, as we know applies to the four rak'as prayers, namely, Zhuhr, 'Asr and Al-'Ishaa Prayers. As for Maghrib and Fajr Prayers, they are not shortened, for it is inconceivable that someone prays a rak'a and half. Furthermore, mathematically, we estimate, or round fractions to the highest number.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him prayed the prayer of fear in different forms. There is nothing wrong with quickly describing these ways since teaching how to perform this prayer is the duty of leaders and scholars who lead the armies at battle times. There are several methods and ways for performing the prayer of fear. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to divide the armies into groups: a group praying with him and another in charge of watching the enemy. He then led each of the groups separately in prayers of two rak‘as each.

There is an alternative way of praying, namely, that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him would lead a group in prayers consisting of only one rak‘a. Afterwards, the other group which protected the first joins in the middle of the prayer to pray a rak‘a with the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Afterwards, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ends the prayer.

Subsequently, the first group prays the second rak‘a that it missed and then ends the prayer. Next, the second group prays the rak’a that it missed due to the shortening of prayer and then ends the prayer.

There is a third manner, viz., the first group prays with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him a rak‘a. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him then does not pray the second rak‘a; rather, he continues to stand until this group ends the prayer and calls upon the second group that was confronting the enemy to pray behind him, the ongoing rak‘a, which is the second for Prophet Muhammad, but the first for the second group. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him remains sitting until the second group finishes the second rak‘a, and then he terminates the prayer. In this manner, the first group enjoys the honour of starting the prayer with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, while the second enjoys the honour of terminating the prayer with him peace and blessings be upon him.

In this context, one cannot help but wonder if prayers in such a manner are limited only to the era of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since praying with him is in itself an honour. If this were to be the case, how should Muslim fighters pray after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? Scholars said, ‘If you consider Muslim leader’s successors of Prophet Muhammad in ruling Muslims, the prayer of fear should be performed just as it is legislated in the Quran. However, if every group has its own leader, then each group should pray the shortened version of the prayer fully behind such leader.'

The word ‘arms’ in this context refers to actual weapons like swords, spears or guns. A fighter should take them along with him. As for the one who uses a heavy weapon, naturally he would not take it with him while praying.

'And when they have prostrated, let them be [in position] behind you and have the other group come forward which has not [yet] prayed and let them pray with you, taking precaution and carrying their arms.' (an-Nisa’: 102) The Quranic statement is not composed of words that are merely uttered. It rather consists of words that the Lord of Mankind addresses to His entire creation which bear special significance for them. Those who initially joined the prayers left behind those who will protect them.

However, the second group that will leave its positions to pray behind the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is in charge of protecting both themselves and those who are praying, lest that proceeding to pray with Prophet Muhammad may distract them from the task of protection. For this reason Allah the Exalted said: 'taking precaution and carrying their arms.’ It is clear now the first group is only required to retain its arms, whereas the second is required to take its arms and be fully prepared against danger.

Someone might ask, 'It is true that the weapons could be taken, but how may one take precautions even though it is an intangible process?’ Regarding this, we say that Allah depicts the intangible matters and embodies them as physical so that man would not be oblivious to them. It is as if being on guard and prepared is a tool of warfare. Thus, beware as a fighter lest you miss it. This is matter quite widespread in the styles of the Noble Quran: 'And [also for] those who were settled in Medina and [adopted] the faith before them ' (al-Hashr: 9)

The house, or dwelling, is a place that man can inhabit and reside in. For example, Allah describes Al-Ansar who honoured the arrival of the Al-Muhajirun. A house is a place to which one resorts. Analogously, faith is the framework to which one refers in regards to all matters.

The True Lord described faith as a place in which one dwells. 'And [also for] those who were settled in Medina and [adopted] the faith before them. They love those who emigrated to them and find not any want in their breasts of what the emigrants were given but give [them] preference over themselves, even though they are in privation. And whoever is protected from the stinginess of his soul - it is those who will be the successful.' (al-Hashr: 9).

The True Lord gives physical presence to the abstract ideas in order for us to understand. This is exactly like the saying of the True Lord: 'let them pray with you, taking precaution and carrying their arms. Those who disbelieve wish that you would become neglectful of your weapon and your baggage so they could come down upon you in one [single] attack.' (an-Nisa': 102).

This explains to us why Allah Glorified is He commanded Muslims to retain their arms and be fully prepared against danger. The reason is that a fighter must worry about his arms and equipment. If a fighter loses them, this means that he lost his fighting tool, and losing his fighting tools will become a source of power for his enemies. Indeed, when a fighter takes away a weapon from his enemy, such a weapon turns into a source of power against that enemy.

Allah the Exalted warned them against losing their arms and equipment lest the power of their arms and equipment become an advantage to the force of their enemy. This would be an impairment of a believer and an empowerment of his enemy. Enemies of Islam want Muslims to be careless with their arms and equipment. Every believer ought to be completely immersed in and preoccupied with his presence before Allah the Almighty while praying. However, during battles, one should not become heedless and mindless of his confinements while praying. Thus, one should not forget his arms if prays during battle. Fighting in itself is a kind of standing before Allah, so he should not separate between fighting in Allah's Cause and praying to Allah. 'Those who disbelieve wish that you would become neglectful of your weapons and your baggage.' (an-Nisa': 102) Carelessness, or neglecting, is an accidental forgetting of something that one should not to forget. This involves a clear warning. The reason is that carelessness, or neglecting, during war and at a time of battle is the dream of disbelievers, or something that they want to happen in order to achieve their goal as mentioned in the saying of Allah the Exalted 'so they could come down upon you in one [single] attack.' (an-Nisa': 102). The camp of disbelievers wishes to wage a sudden and quick attack on believers.

Let us subsequently consider the saying of the True Lord: 'But there is no blame upon you, if you are troubled by rain or are ill, for putting down your arms, but take precautions. Indeed, Allah has prepared for the disbelievers a humiliating punishment. 'We notice that 'take precautions' recurred several times. Allah Glorified is He with the might of His Power, readied humiliating punishment for disbelievers. This is a good sign from Allah the Almighty that disbelievers will not be able to destroy believers. However, if this is the case, why did Allah command us to be take precautions? Taking precautions does not mean that Allah has abandoned believers. Rather, it is meant to draw the attention of believers so that they may exhaust all means to achieve victory without being careless to the cause of all these means since Allah the Exalted prepared a humiliating punishment for disbelievers.

This is the way we ought to understand it, and furthermore, one should from understanding it any other way like by deluding himself into believing that the fact that Allah the Almighty stressed the importance of taking precautions means that He has abandoned us. This is not true. Allah Glorified is He explains to us that we ought to pursue all means and causes of attaining victory without neglecting any of them.

Subsequently, the True Lord says:

فَإِذَا قَضَيۡتُمُ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ فَٱذۡكُرُواْ ٱللَّهَ قِيَٰمٗا وَقُعُودٗا وَعَلَىٰ جُنُوبِكُمۡۚ فَإِذَا
ٱطۡمَأۡنَنتُمۡ فَأَقِيمُواْ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَۚ إِنَّ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ كَانَتۡ عَلَى ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ كِتَٰبٗا مَّوۡقُوتٗا ﴿١٠٣﴾

After performing the ritual prayer, continue to remember God – standing, sitting, and lying on your sides – and once you are safe, keep up regular prayer, for prayer is obligatory for the believers at prescribed times [103] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 103)

This saying indicates that a believer must not delay or postpone performing prayers after their time and that every believer should remember Allah Glorified is He while sitting, standing and lying down. The purpose of this saying is to constantly keep the prayers at the centre of every believer's consciousness. A believer is even required to remember Allah the Exalted while engaged in fighting the enemy. Indeed, every believer should continue to wet his tongue with the remembrance of Allah Glorified is He while bearing his sword and saying, 'How perfect Allah is. All praise is for Allah. There is no God worthy of worship but Allah. Allah is great. There is neither might nor power except with Allah.'

When a man exalts Allah the Almighty, even while he is engaged in a battle with the enemy, Allah Glorified is He never forgets him. A believer may be delayed in performing his prayers while he is engaged in a battle with an enemy. However, even in this case, a believer must push his heart and self towards remembering Allah. While praying, a believer should have an attentive heart [standing before] his Lord; he should thus remember him while sitting, standing, lying down and in every state. Once a Muslim is assured about his position in battle, he should perform his prayers. In this manner, a believer never ceases to be in the presence of his Lord even at war. Indeed, a believer must be closest to his Lord at war since he so dearly needs Allah the Exalted in this situation. If a Muslim knows that Allah Glorified is He manifests His Grace and Power in various instances, no one should deprive himself of these manifestations at any time. Remembering Allah renders a servant closer to his Lord. Allah the Almighty is present with His servant in so far as the latter remembers Him. If man is full of tranquillity in time of fear and battle, he should remember Allah Glorified is He in order to establish his stance and support him by the Highest Power.

The saying of the True Lord, 'But when you become secure, re-establish [regular] prayer', (an-Nisa': 103) means that once the engagement in fighting ends, a believer must move from remembering Allah the Exalted while engaging in battle to prayers the time of which occur during fighting. The purpose of remembering Allah Glorified is He while fighting is to ensure that the time of prayers would not pass without ennoblement and exaltation, and furthermore, that the servant of Allah would not be deprived of the honour of being in the presence of his Lord. However, what is the point of all this? The decisive statement comes forth: 'Indeed, prayer has been decreed upon believers a decree of specified times.' (an-Nisa': 103) The True Lord explained to us the prayer of fear. Allah the Almighty also decreed that we should remember him when a prayer commences during the time of fighting. Furthermore, if a prayer is due when one is travelling, the Sunnah of the Prophet of Allah peace and blessings be upon him explained to us how we ought to shorten our prayers in such a case, but what is the reason underlying all these details? The reason is that prayers are an absolutely indispensable enactment: 'Indeed, prayer has been decreed upon believers a decree of specified times.' (an-Nisa': 103) This means that prayers have specific times at which they must be performed.

No one should understand the meaning of this saying, as some actually do, to mean that the time of Zhuhr Prayer extends from noon through afternoon. It is true that one is relieved of his responsibility for performing the Zhuhr Prayer if he performs it before the afternoon. However, what if one dies after he had a sufficient span of time to perform it? In such a case, this person would be sinful; no one guarantees that he would live long enough to perform a late prayer.

Someone may say, 'Sometimes, I hear the call for prayer, while I am involved in a task or job that I cannot leave. For instance, I might be performing a medical operation or boarding a plane.' I say, 'By Allah, if you were taking care of task or job that you do not think you can interrupt and you felt you wanted to use the restroom, what would you do? Would you not go to the restroom? If this is the case, why did you detract some of your time in order to go to the restroom?'

However, when people see you praying, you will see signs of happiness on their faces because of their instinctual servitude to Allah Glorified is He. You may find that amongst them are those who may facilitate things for you and bring you a prayer mat on which you may pray. You may also find amongst them someone who trembles due to his instinctual servitude to Allah the Exalted. So do not ever say that there is not enough time for prayer since Allah the Almighty never enacts anything upon His servant if it surpasses his capacity. The True Lord made the prayer incumbent upon His servants and provided enough time for performing it.

To Allah belong the supreme and most exalted parables. Sometimes we see a head of a number of workers distributing work amongst the members of his team according to the available time each of them has. What about the Lord and Creator of the World? For this reason, the True Lord says: 'And whosoever fears Allah and keeps his duty to Him, He will make a way for him to get out (from every difficulty). And He will provide for him from where he does not expect.' (at-Talaq: 2-3)

Prayers are a bounty to the servant of Allah that liberates you from any fear. Its grace and value is infinite because its enactor is the Creator Who created all of us. So how come you keep yourself from being connected to your Lord? Subsequently, the True Lord says:

وَلَا تَهِنُوا۟ فِى ٱبْتِغَآءِ ٱلْقَوْمِ ۖ إِن تَكُونُوا۟ تَأْلَمُونَ فَإِنَّهُمْ يَأْلَمُونَ كَمَا
تَأْلَمُونَ ۖ وَتَرْجُونَ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ مَا لَا يَرْجُونَ ۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلِيمًا حَكِيمًا ﴿١٠٤﴾

Do not be faint-hearted in pursuing the enemy: if you are suffering hardship, so are they, but you hope to receive something from God for which they cannot hope. God is all knowing and wise [104] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 104)

This verse reminds us of how we may respond to those who claim to be liberal and try to demonstrate that Islam would befit the age in which we live if we were to interpret it in a way that suits the demands of the age. In doing so, they overlook the requirements of Islam. They might say that Allah Glorified is He has decreed war in Islam for the purpose of combating aggression against Muslims. To them we say that it is true that war in Islam has been decreed to combat aggression, but war in Islam is also intended to expand the realm of freedom of belief.

The idea that fighting is an obligation in Islam frightens some because Muslims would find that they need to resist injustice everywhere. This is an attempt on the part of the enemies of Islam to distract Muslims so that they would not resist the coercion and injustice exercised over them. The reason is that the enemies of Islam know very well the strength abiding in Islam and that Islam imparts to anyone who embraces it as a religion. However, some Muslims are deceived by the allegation of the enemies of Islam who claim that Islam only decreed war to combat aggression against Muslims. For this reason, we say to those who promote such claims and to the Muslims who are deluded into believing them, 'No, Islam decreed fighting in order to liberate man's right to believe.'

It is the duty of every Muslim to declare the word of Allah Glorified is He and to confront anyone who resists such declaration. However, this does not mean that Islam imposes its creed by the power and menace of the sword. Rather, it uses the sword to protect the freedom of a believer. The True Lord says: 'And do not weaken in pursuit of the enemy.' (an-Nisa': 104) This means that one should not be weak nor wane in seeking those who antagonise and fight Islam. The word 'pursuit' implies a clear target that one dedicates all his plans and energy towards achieving. It is as if a Muslim is not only required to push back and combat disbelievers when they attack Muslim land, but also he must pursue fighting them in accordance with the saying of Allah: 'If you should be suffering, so are they suffering, just as you are.' Therefore, Muslims should work to elevate and raise the Word of Allah and preach faith in Allah to everyone. Their preaching should not impose the Word of Allah the Almighty; rather, they should raise their swords in the face of tyranny that denies man his freedom to believe. Muslims should work to relieve all forms of injustice on mankind even if this involves an onerous burden on them because the True Lordsaid: 'Fighting is ordained for you, even though it is hateful to you.' (al-Baqara: 216)

Allah Glorified is He has created in every believer the capacity to seek the enemy of Islam to alleviate the injustices that other humans suffer. It is true that humans generally dislike war which is not an easy thought or endeavour, yet it is sometimes necessary. Those who witnessed the Second World War know that Churchill succeeded Chamberlain who was known to be a man of peace during his tenure as the prime minister of England. The latter tried to procrastinate and forge peace with Germany, while England was preparing itself for war. When England became ready, Chamberlain declared that his policy was inept and fruitless, so Churchill took over and steered his country into and through the war. Churchill said to his people, 'Expect black days and expect hunger.' Churchill said that to the British so that if the reality turned out to be better and less severe, they would rejoice and be delighted.

War exhausts the enemy as much as it exhausts you. However, as a believer, you are privileged over disbelievers in terms of the following: 'But you expect from Allah that which they expect not. And Allah is All Knowing and Wise.' (an-Nisa': 104) You are equal in terms of the pain each of you incur. However, the difference is that you hope for what disbelievers do not hope for. Believers know that once they engage in war, Allah the Almighty is on their side and supports them. Whoever dies of them goes to a heaven whose breadth is equivalent to that of the heavens and earth. This is a hope to which disbelievers can never aspire.

The True Lord requires the believing group who chose to have faith in Him as the One Allah Who created them, to Whom they are destined to return and Who made such faith the principle that governs their lives. He the Exalted demanded them to undertake the requisites of such faith. He demands them to defend this creed that proves to all people that there is no one to be worshiped—meaning that there is no one to be obeyed—in any matter or aspect except for the True Lord, Allah Glorified is He.

When such a principle governs people, it unifies their inclinations and prevents their actions from being contradictory. They all become cooperative, supportive and collaborative of each other. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He made the believing group the best ummah, or followers of Islam, to ever emerge in human history since its Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is the best messenger that had ever been sent to mankind. The True Lord required the people of faith to fight disbelievers and hypocrites so that the land of faith would be purified of any element that may disrupt its serenity of life. The True Lord addresses His creation through their humanity. He created them and knows their qualities and tendencies. He does not address them as being angels; rather, He addresses them as humans who constantly change. Due to this changing nature of humans, faith may guide them in certain instances, whereas in other instances their desires, or tendencies may disrupt the purity and harmony of such faith. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He assures them that were they to pursue the path of creed, they should bear in mind that such a path is not furnished with roses and flowers. It is rather full of thorns so that only those who can tolerate calamities and crises may bear the message of truth on earth. If having faith was easy to handle with no difficulty in attaining it or any pain or trouble involved in achieving it, every one may allege to having faith. If this happens frequently, those who are not trustworthy may falsely bear the responsibility of creed.

For this reason Allah the Exalted did not grant victory to Islam in its early stages. Rather Allah decreed that Muslims would be weak and persecuted at the beginning. He made its followers defenceless so that only those who tasted the sweetness of faith could tolerate such persecution. The sweetness of faith protects the one who tastes it from feeling the bitter pain of persecution and the severity of torture. The order, 'And do not weaken in pursuit of the enemy' indicates that the Muslim Ummah, or the followers of Islam are not only required to defend themselves against aggression but are required to seek out and pursue those who impede the path of Islamic preaching by disciplining them so that they would let people freely choose their creed.

Thus Allah Glorified is He demands the following: do not be faint of heart or wane when you seek out and pursue those who impede the path of Islamic preaching. Allah the Almighty then said: 'If you should be suffering, so are they suffering, just as you are.' This means that if you incurred and suffered pain when you engage in war, or while preparing for it, you ought to bear in mind that you are fighting people who also suffer the pain experienced in war and the preparation for it. You are both equal in terms of the pain, difficulty and exhaustion incurred. However, you should not be blinded to the importance of estimating your power; do not neglect this important matter because it is the force that will give you dominance over your enemies. You have an advantage over them inasmuch as you hope for things from Allah the Exalted which disbelievers cannot hope for. Matters should be evaluated in terms of their purposes and the reward one gets for doing them. No one should say this is equal to that; no one should neglect the reward he gets for undertaking a particular action or task. For this reason, the True Lord says the following in the course of explaining this equation so that the minds of people would be clear about the reward that awaits believers for incurring and enduring the pains involved in preparing for and engaging in war: 'Say: "Do you wait for us (anything) except one of the two best things (martyrdom or victory).”'

(at-Tawba: 52) Disbelievers must know that either of the two best results awaits the believers: either triumph and or dying as a martyr. Winning is the ultimate achievement in the Hereafter. However, what are believers hoping that Allah would do to disbelievers? This is the answer: 'While we wait for you either that Allah will afflict you with a punishment from Himself or at our hands. So wait, we too are waiting with you.' (at-Tawba: 52) Whose side, then, is weightier according to the above equation? It is the side of the believers.

The True Lord ends His encouraging believers to seek out disbelievers and how they are privileged over disbelievers inasmuch as they hope from Allah for what the latter do not hope for by saying: 'And Allah is indeed All Knowing, All-Wise.' (an-Nisa': 102) Allah is the All Knowing since He is ever aware of the pain that befalls believers. So do not think, as a believer, that you will miss a reward; you will be rewarded for every pain that incurs to you, even if it is little as the one a thorn causes when it pricks you. Allah Glorified is He lets you suffer pain as much a disbeliever does for a simple reason, namely so that you go to battle having confidence that your faith will enable you to endure the consequences of embracing and defending religion.

It is related that A'isha Allah be pleased with her said that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'A believer does not receive (the trouble) of being pricked by a thorn or more than that, but Allah elevates him in rank or erases his sins due to that.'(1)

After the True Lord talked about fighting for the cause of advocating His religion, He gave believers instructions that would support them in life. Why did He do this? The reason is that Allah Glorified is He knows that there are people who believe in Him and follow Islam under the leadership of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore Allah the Exalted explains that embracing Islam and advocating it entails a number of consequences. You will be the first upon whom Allah's rulings are applied. So do not think that the simple declaration of believing in Islam and following Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him you have acquired something that gives you privileges over the rest of Allah's creation. As much as We have commanded you to fight disbelievers and hypocrites, We command that you fight and resist the temptations of your inner selves since someone may embrace Islam by thinking that doing so that he will acquire a privilege over others. To such a person we say that this will not happen. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He addresses His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him by saying:

إِنَّآ أَنزَلۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ بِٱلۡحَقِّ لِتَحۡكُمَ بَيۡنَ ٱلنَّاسِ بِمَآ
أَرَىٰكَ ٱللَّهُۚ وَلَا تَكُن لِّلۡخَآئِنِينَ خَصِيمٗا ﴿١٠٥﴾

We have sent down the Scripture to you [Prophet] with the truth so that you can judge between people in accordance with what God has shown you. Do not be an advocate for those who betray trust [105]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 105)

When the True Lord talks about Himself, He uses a glorifying, plural form to refer to His actions. A good example is the following: 'We have revealed to you.' Here, the plural form is used because the bestowal of the Quran requires several powers that are only in the possession of the One Who rules over the entire universe. Let us give an example, and to Allah belongs the supreme and most exalted parables. In issuing an edict, a president or a king may say, ‘we have decreed the such and such edict.' The president or king knows well that he is not the only one who issues the edict; rather, it is all those who collaborate with him and work as his subordinates that participate in issuing the edict with him. However, how should we analogously think of the same situation as it pertains to the True Lord, the Sublime Allah? For example, when the True Lord talks about Himself as far as His Self is concerned He uses a singular pronoun. He thus says: 'Indeed, I am Allah. There is no deity except Me, so worship Me and establish prayer for My remembrance.' (Ta Ha: 14) The plural pronoun is never used in such a context, and nor is the nun particle intended for glorification ever used. However, in this verse, the True Lord says: 'We have revealed the book unto you in truth.' (an-Nisa': 104) The use of the glorifying We is obvious. The Quran is the speech of Allah the Exalted. The revelation of the Quran requires different collaborating attributes. Allah the Almighty also says: 'And thus We have sent down to you the Quran.'

(al-’Ankabut: 47). In another instance, He says: 'That We revealed to you the Book which is recited to them.' (al-’Ankabut: 51).In a third instance, He says: 'We have certainly sent down to you a Book in which is your mention. Then will you not reason?’ (al-Anbiya’: 10)

What is the purpose of bestowing the Quran? The purpose is to make available on earth a path and system that governs life. The Quran was bestowed upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and for those who embraced his Message. When the True Lord says: 'We have revealed to you.' (an-Nisa’: 104) This means that Allah's assignment has been bestowed. When we encounter the expression ‘revealed’, we must know that everything that comes from the True Lord descends to us from Allah Glorified is He. It gives the feeling that it is coming down from high above, unequal to which it is sent, yet not lower than it. It involves a sender who is Allah, a receiver who is Prophet Muhammad and his ummah or the followers of Islam, and an item which is the Book. However, did Allah bestow the Book only, or did He bestow from above everything related to the factors of life beforehand? When we read this noble saying: 'O, children of Adam, We have bestowed upon you clothing to conceal your private parts and as adornment. But the clothing of righteousness, that is best. That is from the signs of Allah that perhaps they will remember.' (al-A‘raf: 26)

It is clothing that came from high above. For this reason, the True Lord used the word 'bestow.’ Furthermore, it is not merely clothing, but it also adorns the person wearing it because it is made of bird feathers which in turn covers and adorns the bird. It not only covers a person's nakedness, but it is also beautiful. What is more beautiful is that it is the clothing of piety. The True Lord brought forth what is necessary for covering nakedness in life. Subsequently, He bestowed piety. The first kind of clothing covers material nakedness, whereas the second covers the nakedness of values and spirit. All of this is a kind of bestowal from above. In another verse, the True Lord says: 'We have already sent Our messengers with clear evidences and sent down with them the Scripture and the balance that the people may maintain [their affairs] in justice. And We sent down iron, wherein is great might.' (al-Hadid: 25)

The phrasal verb ‘sent down' indicates that everything which came down to us from the True Lord the Sublime is bestowed upon us to treat either our material being or our spirit and values.

The True Lord says in the verse at hand: 'We have revealed unto you the Book.' (an-Nisa’: 104) When the word ‘Book’ is used in a generic manner, this means that it refers to the all-embracing and comprehensive Book that dominates all the rest of the divine books, viz. The Quran, even though the word ‘Book’ may be used to refer to any book revealed to any messenger sent by Allah the Exalted.

When the True Lord says, 'in truth', it means that He is eternal and never changes; no other reality may contradict or refute His Essence or Attributes. In day-to-day life, you may recount a true story about something that happened. However, no matter how many times you may recount this story, even if recounted over and over for twenty years, it will never change since your narration is in line with reality. Every time you recount this story, you recollect the real events that took place before you. However, if someone tells a false story that is not substantiated by reality, what would his stance be? He will tell the story in a certain way in one instance, then after a week, he may forget some of what he said in the first instance and thus fabricate new things. The reason is that what he recounts did not really happen. For this reason, he says different things than what he did for the first time. In such a case, the listener would realise that it is a false story.

Allah Glorified is He revealed the Book setting forth the truth. This means that the Book Allah revealed encompasses principles and statements that no falsity may every infiltrate. It is thus a fixed, unchanging Book that no reality may contradict or refute. In our day-to-day life, teachers say to their successful students, 'We have truthfully rated you above all your colleagues.' This means that the student took his right because he deserves this status. The saying of the True Lord, 'We have revealed the Book unto you in truth' (an-Nisa’: 104) means that the bestowal of the Book on the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was inextricably connected and essentially bound to the Will of the True Lord. This means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him deserves the bestowal of the Book. The juxtaposition of different meanings beside each other in the Quran is one of the essences of its elegance and the eloquence of the Words of the Quran; never do they contradict. Rather, they are juxtaposed beside each other due to the Wisdom of the Creator so as to elucidate for us the meanings of His statements.

The same verse shows us that the government of Islam headed by the first Muslim ruler, namely, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not set forth to judge solely and exclusively amongst believers. Rather, it was set forth to judge amongst all mankind. The condition of judging amongst people is to justly adjudicate on the subject matter of their disputes. No believer may thereby say that one is a believer, and another is a disbeliever so that if a disbeliever is the rightful claimant he may be denied his right, and if a Muslim is the rightful claimant, he may be given him his right. You are not only required to judge and establish justice amongst believers, but you are required to do so amongst all mankind. If you judge amongst people in accordance with facts and truth, the one judged will attest to the truth of your religion. If a disbeliever is the rightful claimant in a dispute with a believer, and you arbitrate impartially between them even if this involves meting out punishment to the believer, the disbeliever would regret not being a subscriber to the religion that recognises truth and judges according to it, even if it is against one of its own people. In addition, if a Muslim sees that a judgment has been decreed against him in favour of a non-Muslim, he will realise that being a Muslim is not merely a formal relation, but it is an objective one. No one should think that Islam came about to partially support Muslims at the expense of other people. In contrast, Islam came about to judge everyone in accordance with the logic of truth, to apply justice and truth to all and to teach every Muslim to always adhere to the side of truth.

Allah puts forward this matter in correspondence with an actual event that took place at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Events contemporary to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were a sort of an elicitation and procurement of the rulings of the Heavens. Events took place, and its ruling was sent down accordingly. If rulings were arrayed together and revealed at the same time, an incident may take place, and believers would still search for the proper ruling even though they have it already at hand. In contrast, if a ruling is revealed when the correspondent incident or event takes place, its application is applied immediately. In such case, people will be more likely to comply with a ruling and submit to it since it has been confirmed, constructed and codified through an applied incident. The ruling that was revealed is the following: 'Indeed, We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], the Book in truth so you may judge between the people by that which Allah has taught you. And do not be for the deceitful an advocate.' (an-Nisa': 104)

One should realise that Allah's instruction and teaching is truer than one's human vision. Thus, you should be certain about the existence of whatever Allah the Exalted teaches you, as you would be if you could see it physically with your own eyes. If you were to see something with your eyes, you will not ask where it is.

There was an event that took place long ago. There was a man in Banu Zhafar called Tu'ma ibn Ubayriq. He stole a shield which belonged to Qutada ibn An-Nu'man. Tu'ma was afraid of keeping the shield since he was known to be a thief. He then went to a Jew and left the shield with him. The shield was kept in a bag of flour. When Tu'ma carried it, the flour kept pouring out from a hole in the bag; the dropped flour left a trace on the ground that pointed to the house of the Jew who was called Zayd ibn As-Samin. When they followed the traces of flour, it led them back to Tu'ma's house. However, Tu'ma swore that he did not take it or have any idea about its place. People then left him and followed the flour traces until it led them to the house of the Jew. They then found the shield and declared that Ibn as-Samin was the thief. Thus, Ibn As-Samin said, 'I did not steal the shield. Rather, it was Tu'ma ibn Ubayriq who left it with me.' People then went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said to him, 'If you punish a Muslim in favour of a Jew, the matter will be taken against Muslims and shame will be spread amongst them.'

We know that the True Lord sent His Messenger to set straight the course of human desires. Human desire, due to its rashness and short-sightedness may think that a sentence that involves a decree against a Muslim and an acquittal of a Jew translates to mean an impairment of Muslims. In contrast, the True Lord wills to establish justice irrespective of any relative factor. He thus revealed the following saying to His Messenger: 'Indeed, We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], the Book in truth so you may judge between the people by that which Allah has taught you. And do not be for the deceitful an advocate.' (an-Nisa': 104)

So do not ever say, 'This is a Muslim, so we should not accuse him of a crime that he actually committed lest it should smear him.' Also, do not even fear standing up for a Jew against a thief who emerged amongst Muslims. It is due to the honour of Islam that it punishes anyone who commits a mistake because as long as this person has affiliated himself with Islam, he should ennoble such affiliation. Punishing a Muslim for committing a mistake is a testimony that Islam was not set forth to favour anyone. Every Muslim must know that he embraced Islam for the truth itself.

About the saying of the True Lord: 'do not be for the deceitful an advocate.' (an-Nisa': 104) a number of superficial people said the following: if there is a thief, a traitor or someone who abuses his power, you should leave him alone, do not look at him nor pay him any attention so that he would not cause you any trouble. To such people who would say as such, we give the following reply, 'No, Allah says, '…do not be for the deceitful advocates.' This means that the True Lord commands Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not to stand on the side of the one who is a traitor to his trust. Rather, he should fight whoever betrays the trust for the interest of the truth.

Scholars tried to make things approachable. Thus, they said, 'Some may think that a Muslim is proscribed to take a stance that is beneficial and useful to the one who is traitor to his trust. Rather, the Muslim should be against the one who betrayed his trust, and not be on his side.' The purpose of defending a rival is to support his case, and not to be against him. No Muslim should benefit someone who betrayed his trust just so that the latter would be defeated or humiliated by defeat. For this reason, the Messenger would not support the one who betrayed his trust and would never bring about something that would benefit him. Some people may ask why Allah does not use the most explicit word that enables us to immediately recognise the meaning. To this query, we respond by saying that it was important to do so in order for us to know on which side the Quran and the Messenger who delivers the Message of His Lord stand. An example of this is the saying of the True Lord: 'And when our verses are recited to them as clear evidences, they say, "This is not but a man who wishes to avert you from that which your fathers were worshipping." And they say, "This is not except a lie invented." And those who disbelieve say of the truth when it has come to them, "This is not but obvious magic."' (Saba': 43)

The interlocutor in the above verse is the disbelievers, and the party addressed is the believers. Some people using logic would assume that disbelievers would say, 'You are obvious magic.' It is as if it reads: 'And those who disbelieve say of the truth when it has come to them, "You are but obvious magic."' However, we notice that they did not address Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as much as he was the one who brought forth the truth to them. Rather, they have a contention against the Message of the truth he brought forth. Further, they did not say so to him, rather, they said as such to each other. Thus, truth, in this context, refers to the truth of the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and not his person. Therefore, they said that the truth that was brought forth by Prophet Muhammad was the following, 'This is not but obvious magic.' There is another verse in which the True Lord says: 'And those who disbelieve say of those who believe, "If it had [truly] been good, they would not have preceded us to it." And when they are not guided by it, they will say, "this is an ancient falsehood.' (al-Ahqaf: 11)

The interlocutor in this verse is the disbelievers, and the party addressed is the believers. The intended meaning is that the disbelievers said to the believers, 'If Islam were any good, you would not have beaten us to embrace it prior to us.' However, the True Lord the Most High relates their words by saying: '…If this (message) were any good, these (weak and poor people) would not have preceded us to it!' (al-Ahqaf: 11) This indicates that they exchanged these words amongst themselves, and not in the presence of believers. Otherwise, if the discourse was addressed by disbelievers directly to believers, the wording would have been, 'If Islam were any good, you would not have preceded us to it.' Afterwards, the True Lord, the Glorious and Exalted says:

وَٱسۡتَغۡفِرِ ٱللَّهَۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ غَفُورٗا رَّحِيمٗا ﴿١٠٦﴾

Ask God for forgiveness: He is most forgiving and merciful [106] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 106)

This command is asking Allah's Forgiveness for even a merely momentary, hesitating thought concerning supporting a Muslim against a Jew, and vice versa. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had not yet supported the position of one party against the other. However, the mere possibility of such a thought requires asking Allah for forgiveness. The One issuing this command is the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted. There is nothing objectionable or hurtful about our Lord setting right for us a certain issue.

Alternatively, this discourse is addressed to everyone who used Islam as a means of blackmail and bargaining with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. A similar case occurred with the tribe of Banu Zhafar who wanted to use their affiliation with Islam as a pretext to obstruct Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from meting out a penalty on a person who committed theft amongst them. This is the reason why the True Lord commands those who approached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings upon him about this matter to ask Him for forgiveness or to beg Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask Him for forgiveness on their behalf since they only said so under the pretext of avoiding a scandal that might affect the image of Muslims. Subsequently, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَلَا تُجَٰدِلۡ عَنِ ٱلَّذِينَ يَخۡتَانُونَ أَنفُسَهُمۡۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا
يُحِبُّ مَن كَانَ خَوَّانًا أَثِيمٗا ﴿١٠٧﴾

Do not argue for those who betray their own souls: God does not love anyone given to treachery and sin [107] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 107)

Allah the Most High wants to thoroughly lay out this issue. The previous statement from Allah would have sufficed. However, Allah wants to settle these matters decisively; there can be no argument with those who are false to their own selves. Al-Jadal, the Arabic word for argument and dispute, means, as we know, to intertwine threads together to make a rope. When someone intertwines things together, such as some hair or threads of wool or fibre to make a rope, this person does so in order to strengthen the material he is intertwining so as to keep it from being frail and rendering it more amenable to pulling and stretching. For this reason, people usually describe this intertwining process as 'a way of giving strength to the rope.’ The same holds for any two disputants. Each of them wants to strengthen his position. They may attempt to corroborate it by twisting or embellishing their words or using an eloquent style. Hence, the Divine Command descended to Prophet Muhammad: Do not back the position of any person who is habitually false to himself.

By the Quran using yakhatanun (persistently betray themselves), instead of yakhunun, (betray themselves), it clearly stresses a more significant meaning. Betrayal is to take something unrightfully or possibly unlawfully. Although it is possible that a person betrays another, how is it conceivable that a person should betray himself? This must involve a great deal of pretension. When a person betrays another for the sake of personal interests, to satiate a desire or commit a punishable sin, this constitutes a betrayal of oneself. Since, in such a case, transient pleasures distract a person from future punishment. We thus can see that those who betray people betray themselves simultaneously. It is not easy for a person to betray himself; this involves pretension and artifice. This is the reason why the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And argue not on behalf of those who persistently betray themselves. Verily, Allah does not like anyone who is habitually treacherous and sinful.' (an-Nisa’: 107).

The previous noble verse that addressed this situation did not use the plural form khwwanin; rather, it used the plural form kha’in. There is a difference between kha’in and khawwan; the former betrays only once, whereas the latter betrays several times. Alternatively, the meaning could also be as follows: kha’in is the one who betrays in a small, minor matter, while khawwan betrays in a major, capital matter. The intensive form is sometimes used to indicate the recurrence of the action or, in other times, to magnify the action. It is out of Allah’s Graciousness and Mercy that He did not use khawwan. The word kha’in is used to describe a person who has betrayed only once and never again. Allah does not expose a person’s sin unless it grows into a trait, habit, or profession. A woman came to Caliph ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him because her son was caught stealing, and he wanted to carry out the prescribed penalty for theft on him. His mother, crying, said, 'O, ‘Amir of the Believers, my son stole this time only.' ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him said, 'You have told a lie. By Allah, Allah would never punish a servant for the first time he sins.'

Due to this, some people say that if a person’s misdeed is exposed and it becomes known to people, then it must have antecedents. Allah the Glorious and Exalted would not expose a person’s sin committed the first time only. Allah the Most High loves to cover up and conceal the wrongdoing of His servants. Allah may conceal a sin of His servant once and twice, but if he persists in committing that particular sin, Allah exposes him. 'Verily, Allah does not like anyone who is habitually treacherous and sinful.' (an-Nisa’: 107) Sin is the worst form of disobedience. However, why did the clansmen of Tu`ma ibn Ubayriq go to intercede with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on his behalf, hoping that he would pass a judgment in his favour against the Jew? They did this since they found it scandalous that a Muslim litigant should be exposed and a Jewish litigant be acquitted. They felt ashamed that something like that might happen. Therefore, the Quran directly addressed this issue, bringing to the surface the underlying cause that made them act accordingly in order to banish and uproot such conduct forever. The Quran says:

يَسۡتَخۡفُونَ مِنَ ٱلنَّاسِ وَلَا يَسۡتَخۡفُونَ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ وَهُوَ مَعَهُمۡ إِذۡ
يُبَيِّتُونَ مَا لَا يَرۡضَىٰ مِنَ ٱلۡقَوۡلِۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ بِمَا يَعۡمَلُونَ مُحِيطًا ﴿١٠٨﴾

They try to hide them- selves from people, but they cannot hide from God. He is with them when they plot at night, saying things that do not please
Him: He is fully aware of everything they do [108]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 108)

They wanted to acquit Tu'ma of the theft charge in front of the people, especially in front of non-Muslims. However, who should they have been more concerned: Allah or the people? Doubtlessly, they ought to have feared Allah the Glorious and Exalted more than they feared people. You may try to mislead those who judge you in this world, but be certain that you cannot mislead the judgment of Heaven. This principle must govern the life and actions of every believer. If someone who is affiliated to Islam tends to do something that may anger Allah, they should remember that by doing so, they disgrace themselves, their children, their family, or Muslims. A Muslim should not fear people's opinions when a fellow Muslim does something that may smear the image of Muslims. Rather, a Muslim should blame and turn him away from what he is doing. We need to say to those who hide their wrongdoing from the public, 'You may conceal yourself from the people, but you cannot conceal yourself from Allah. This makes you unworthy of trust.'

'They may hide (their crimes) from the people, but they cannot hide (them) from Allah, for He is with them (by His Knowledge)…' (an-Nisa': 108). The word m`ahum, the Arabic prepositional phrase that means 'with them' is intended to assure believers that nothing whatsoever can be concealed or hidden from Allah. A person may hide from people, but they cannot hide from Allah. Indeed, Allah is with every human being, whether they are alone or in a crowd, and whether they are doing something secretly or publicly. So, if a person manages to conceal a wrongdoing from people, he can conceal nothing from Allah. 'They may hide (their crimes) from the people, but they cannot hide (them) from Allah, for He is with them (by His Knowledge), when they plot by night in words…' (an-Nisa': 108). The word yubayyit, the Arabic verb translated as 'plot by night', means to undertake something at night since people used to retire to their houses at night. The central meaning of yubayyit is to devise a scheme or plot at one's house in the dark of night. Any secret and devious planning is called tabyit, even if it is done in the middle of the day. It would not be done secretly unless the person concerned wants to divert eyes away from him. Yet, he must know that he may only divert mortal eyes away from himself. He can never divert the Ever-Watching Eyes of Allah. 'They may hide (their crimes) from the people, but they cannot hide (them) from God, for He is with them (by His Knowledge), when they plot by night in words that He does not approve. And God ever encompasses what they do.' (an-Nisa': 108)

When hearing the word muhit, we should envision the encompassed thing all surrounded by the One Who encompasses in a perfect way that does not allow any escape from the One Who encompasses Knowledge or Power. Allah the Glorious and Exalted encompasses everything with His Knowledge; nothing is concealed from Him. He also encompasses everything with His Power; nothing is beyond the realm of His Sovereignty. Allah the Most High encompasses with His Knowledge all the parts and details of the universe and has power over all things. Accordingly, if the word muhit is associated with Allah, we should know that it means that the True Lord the Most High completely encompasses everything with His Knowledge. Not a single detail, no matter how great or small, exists beyond Allah’s reach or knowledge. Furthermore, it means that Allah the Most High encompasses everything with His Power – no one can elude or evade Allah’s Just Retribution. Subsequently, the True Lord the Most High says:

هَٰٓأَنتُمْ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ جَٰدَلْتُمْ عَنْهُمْ فِى ٱلْحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنْيَا فَمَن يُجَٰدِلُ
ٱللَّهَ عَنْهُمْ يَوْمَ ٱلْقِيَٰمَةِ أَم مَّن يَكُونُ عَلَيْهِمْ وَكِيلًا ﴿١٠٩﴾

There you [believers] are, arguing on their behalf in this life, but who will argue on their behalf with God on the Day of Resurrection? Who will be their defender? [109] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 109)

Those who argued on behalf of Ibn Ubayriq wanted to vindicate him before the people and convict the Jew. However, would humans arguing for one another and vindicating one another before other humans easily end matters at this point? The answer is a definitive no since the life of this world is not the place of just recompense. Let us assume that Ibn Ubayriq escaped human punishment. Would he escape Allah’s Punishment in the Hereafter? No. Those who argued on behalf of Ibn Ubayriq wanted to blind and blur the perspective of earthly judgment, but he will not be able to blind the Judgment of the True Lord. A person you defend will find no one to argue in defence of his crime on the Day of Judgment. Not only this, but the True Lord the Most High also closes this verse by saying: '…or who will be their defender?’ (an-Nisa’: 109). In other words, who, on the Day of Judgment, can defend those who escaped earthly justice by way of falsehood? We know that a defender could be an eloquent speaker chosen by some people to talk persuasively with individuals in a given situation. Who is capable of undertaking this task before Allah? No one is able to, of course. Afterwards, the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted says:

وَمَن يَعْمَلْ سُوٓءًا أَوْ يَظْلِمْ نَفْسَهُۥ ثُمَّ يَسْتَغْفِرِ ٱللَّهَ يَجِدِ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورًا رَّحِيمًا ﴿١١٠﴾

Yet anyone who does evil or wrongs his own soul and then asks God for forgiveness will find Him most forgiving and merciful [110] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 110)

When Allah the Glorious and Exalted created the creation, He made them all subject to change and alteration. For this reason, Allah does not remove a sinner, due to his sin, from the realm of His Sovereign Power and Mercy. Rather, Allah the Most High allows repentance in order to protect society from the spread of his evil. If everyone who commits a sin is expelled from Allah's Mercy, society will continue to suffer from the evils of the sinners. All of a sinner's deeds will eventually become a curse of widespread evil afflicting society. Therefore, repentance has been decreed as allowable and acceptable by Allah to protect mankind from the ferocity of the one who commits the first sin. Repentance leads to the wiping out of one's sins, so it gives him hope and makes him eager to do good so as to make up for the evil previously done. Were it not for repentance, a sinner would be driven by despair of ever being forgiven to immerse himself more into evildoing, and thus the world would suffer the consequences of his increasing sinfulness.

Those who attempted to acquit Ibn Ubayriq were divided into two groups: the first group was intent on vindicating Ibn Ubayriq, while the second was more concerned with not exposing a Muslim. Each of the two groups sinned. However, does their sin expel them from Allah's Mercy? No. Rather, Allah promises sinners that they '…shall find Allah Much-Forgiving, Most Merciful.' (an-Nisa': 110) The two groups became required to do something good after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained the matter to them, and they understood the purpose of Allah the Glorious and Exalted which was to keep them within faith. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him convicted Ibn Ubayriq and exonerated the Jew. Following this incident, Ibn Ubayriq renounced Islam, went to Mecca and continued the habit of betraying others. He then pierced and hollowed out a man's wall in order to steal his possessions, but the wall ultimately fell on him, causing his death.

The True Lord the Glorious and Exalted sets the criteria. Anyone who commits a sin, or wrongs himself by doing a bad deed, and then asks Allah for forgiveness will find Allah Most Forgiving and Merciful. We notice that some people do not adequately comprehend the saying of the True Lord the Most High: 'Yet, whoever does evil or wrongs himself but afterwards seeks Allah’s Forgiveness shall find Allah Much-Forgiving, Most Merciful.' (an-Nisa’: 110) So, they ask, 'Does the one who commits a bad deed not wrong himself?’ The answer is that the precision of word usage in the Quran clarifies this meaning. ‘Doing evil’ means to do a bad deed that harms others; it is different from the one who sins against himself. Stealing, killing, or assailing any person via verbal or physical abuse are examples of doing evil. The Arabic word Sau’, translated in the verse at hand as evil or bad actions, is any deed that people hate. When Sau’ is used to describe a person, it means that he is evil or has a bad character, and, as such, he does hateful things to people.

A person who drinks alcohol may do so in isolation without causing harm to anyone. However, in doing so, he is indeed wronging himself since every Muslim is required to take responsibility of himself. Allah’s Law protects Muslims even from themselves. It also protects every soul from itself. The evidence is that any human who kills another human must be punished (according to the Islamic law); similarly, Allah deprives the one who commits suicide of paradise.

Thus, we see how Allah’s Law protects humanity and carefully surrounds it from all directions. The human being is part of Allah’s universe. The True Lord obligates every human being to protect himself. If a human does a bad thing that harms another person, this is called Sau’, or evil. On the other hand, when a human being does something that harms only himself, such a deed is called wronging oneself. 'And those who, when they commit an immorality or wrong themselves, remember Allah and seek forgiveness for their sins, for who but Allah can forgive sins? And do not knowingly persist in doing whatever (wrong) they may have done.' (Al-‘Imran: 135)

However, is committing a Fahishah which means an immoral act or shameful deed, any different from wronging or sinning against oneself? Fahishah also constitutes an evil deed whose consequences have harmful effects to the person doing it, along with others, as well. By contrast, wronging or sinning against oneself is the act that harms the person who does it only. For example, someone may do a bad deed to satisfy their passion and enjoy themselves, while completely forgetting the severe punishment that may follow in the Afterlife. Someone else may commit an offence for the sole interest of another, as in the case of perjury in which a person’s right to something may be wasted and assigned to someone else without the person committing perjury having any personal interest or gain. Rather, such a false testimony comprises his faith solely for the worldly benefit of others. To this person, the following Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him applies, 'Hasten to do good works before the advent of tribulations like fragments of a pitch-black night. A person would wake up a believer in the morning and end the day as a disbeliever, or end his day a believer and wake up as a disbeliever the next morning. He would barter his religion for a worldly gain.'(1)

'Yet, whoever does evil or wrongs himself but afterwards seeks Allah’s Forgiveness shall find Allah Much-Forgiving, Most Merciful.' (an-Nisa’: 110) Allah is eternally and continuously Forgiving and Merciful. A repentant servant of Allah recognises and experiences His Forgiveness and Mercy. Subsequently, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَمَن يَكْسِبْ إِثْمًا فَإِنَّمَا يَكْسِبُهُۥ عَلَىٰ نَفْسِهِۦ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلِيمًا حَكِيمًا ﴿١١١﴾

He who commits sin does so against his own soul. God is All Knowing, All-Wise[111] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 111)

The True Lord the Exalted uses the verb 'earn', which is translated from the Arabic origin kasaba and refers to the beneficial earnings obtained by doing good. By contrast, Allah uses the word iktasaba to describe bad or sinful earnings. Why does He do so? This is due to the fact that doing good is a natural instinctive act of which a human can never feel ashamed. Evil is always a shameful experience for humans; therefore, they must do it secretly. It is unnatural, so it requires extra effort and artifice.

(1) Narrated by Muslim, At-Tirmidhi and Ahmad

Let us give an example to illustrate this point, and to Allah belongs the supreme and most exalted description. Take the example of the relationship between a husband and wife. A husband can gaze freely at the beauty of his wife; however, if he wants to steal a look at a woman who is unlawful for him, he must deceive the inward faculties of his soul in order to sneak a look at this woman. This man resorts to trickery and manoeuvring to sneak a gaze at that to which he is not entitled to by his rights. This is the reason why kasab is used in the Quran to describe lawful earnings, while iktasab is used to describe unlawful ones. However, when the Quran uses kasab to describe a sin committed, the verb in the verse is translated to mean 'earn.’ This usage requires more attention. Someone may commit a sin and regret it as soon as he has done it, if he is a good person. Such a person will also castigate himself for his sin and resolutely decide not to do it again. Another person may commit a sin and enjoy his sin, as if it has brought him some benefit. He boasts of his sin, while being oblivious to the immense danger and the bleak end he will face on the Day of Judgment. Taking pride in committing a sin is a manifestation of the corruption of a human’s natural disposition and the deep infiltration of vice into the heart. This type of person is different from the one who falls into a sin only once, and then whenever he remembers it, his body shivers and he asks Allah for forgiveness. 'And whoever earns sin, he earns it only against himself. And Allah is Ever All Knowing, All-Wise.' (an-Nisa’: 111). Therefore, human beings should beware since wronging someone by word or deed does not mean you have won the world. Indeed, if an oppressor were to know what Allah has prepared for the person whom he is oppressing, he would begrudge him such support and refrain from harming him. I will give the following example to elucidate the matter, and to Allah belongs the supreme and most exalted description. Let us assume that a man has two boys. One of them hit his brother and took away something he possessed from him. Their father saw the incident. To which son would the father’s heart be inclined? The father would support his wronged son and try to compensate him. If, for example, the brother who was committing the wrong took from him ten piasters, the father would give the brother who was wronged something worth one hundred piasters, by way of compensation. Surely, the brother who committed the wrong would lament over what he had done. Had he known that his father would compensate his brother whom he had wronged so generously, he would not have ever wronged him. Without doubt, injustice is the epitome of stupidity.

One of the paradoxical sayings regarding this is the following: 'If it is inevitable that you backbite someone, backbite your own parents.' Anyone who would hear this will certainly ask, 'But why would I backbite my own father and mother?' The one who makes this paradoxical statement would say, 'Your parents are more deserving of your good deeds than others. Instead of giving the reward of your good deeds to people whom you dislike, search for those whom you love and give them such a merit and reward.' The underlying viewpoint is that a backbiter should not act so foolishly; one backbites out of enmity. So how come one would hand over the reward for his good deeds to his adversary?

We know well what our master Al-Hasan Al-Basri Allah be pleased with him did on hearing that someone had backbitten him. Al-Hasan Al-Basri Allah be pleased with him sent off his courier with a present of a plate full of dates to his backbiter and the following message: 'It came to the knowledge of my master that you had backbitten him yesterday, and by doing so, you have granted him the reward for your good deeds. Definitely, your good deeds are more precious than these dates.' This sufficiently emphasises the reprehensibility of backbiting.

'And whoever earns sin, he earns it only against himself. And Allah is Ever All Knowing, All-Wise.' (an-Nisa': 111). We already know that when an attribute of the True Lord is preceded with kana which is the past tense of the Arabic verb 'to be', it should not mistakenly be thought that such a tense describes an event in the past. Rather, its connection to the past is for continuity since it means that the event was and still is. How so? Since Allah is Eternal; He is Forgiving and Merciful prior to the coming into being of any of His creation to which He may dispense His Mercy or Forgiveness. Allah Glorified is He is not subject to time and its vicissitudes. His attributes are constant and unchanging. Only constantly changing beings are subject to the vicissitudes of time and circumstance. For instance, a human being may be healthy at a particular time and sick during another.

Therefore, the transitions of time from the future to the past and from the future to the present are only applicable to beings that are subject to change. Since Allah is the One Who changes all things, but He never changes; time cannot affect Allah or apply to Him. He is Forgiving and Merciful since the beginning of time and until the end of time - now and forever. Similarly, Allah's Knowledge is ever eternal, and His Wisdom is boundless. Subsequently, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَمَن يَكْسِبْ خَطِيٓـَٔةً أَوْ إِثْمًا ثُمَّ يَرْمِ بِهِۦ بَرِيٓـًٔا فَقَدِ ٱحْتَمَلَ بُهْتَٰنًا وَإِثْمًا مُّبِينًا ﴿١١٢﴾ and anyone who commits an offence or a sin, and then throws the blame on to some innocent person, has burdened himself with deceit as well as flagrant sin [112] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 112)

Some scholars argue that khati'ah which means 'fault' in the aforementioned verse, is an unintentional error. An example of this is when we teach a student a certain grammatical rule, and then ask him to apply it to some text. We then notice that the student has mistakenly placed the subject of the sentence in the accusative instead of the nominative case, or vice versa. We may then point out his mistake to him because he has not done it deliberately. Rather, he has just forgotten the rule. We continue to correct his mistake until he memorises the grammatical rule. Through training, applying the rules of Arabic grammar becomes an acquired ability of the student, and he no longer makes the mistake. Hence khati'ah is an unintentional error, while sin is an intentional error. However, what is Allah's Judgment on the one who commits a fault or a sin, and then imputes it to someone else?' And whoever earns a fault or a sin and then throws it on to someone innocent, he has indeed burdened himself with astounding falsehood and a manifest sin.' (an-Nisa': 112) Not only did the person involved commit a sin or fault, but he further aggravated his crime by adding another one to it, namely, blaming his sin or fault on an innocent person. In such a case, his sin becomes more complex. Therefore, the True Lord says: '… he has indeed burdened himself with astounding falsehood and a manifest sin.' (an-Nisa': 112)

In this verse, the True Lord the Most High uses the word ihtamal, which is the Arabic word that means 'burdens himself.' Allah does not use hamala which means to carry or bear something; by using the above word instead, He stresses the hardship and suffering that must accompany bearing such a burdensome sin. His crime is twofold: committing a sin and then imputing it to an innocent person. This twofold sin evokes regret for both committing the sin and throwing the blame for it on an innocent person. It thus places a twofold burden on the perpetrator. We know that when one gets pulled into a frenzy of hatred, a sin becomes easy and done without thought. However, once this frenzy dies down, regret ensues. In the chapter of al-Ma'ida: 27, the True Lord the Exalted relates the story of the two brothers Habil (Abel) and Qabil (Cain) saying the following: 'And recite (O, Muhammad) to them the story of Adam's two sons, in truth, when they both offered a sacrifice (to Allah), and it was accepted from one of them but was not accepted from the other. "I will surely kill you," said one. "Allah accepts only from the righteous (who fear Him)," said the other.' (al-Ma'ida: 27)

Habil (Abel) asked Qabil (Cain), 'Why should I be blamed for this. After all, Allah is the One Who accepts sacrifices, not me. So why do you want to kill me?' The True Lord the Most High continues the narrative concerning Habil (Abel) and Qabil (Cain) by saying: 'If you do stretch your hand against me to kill me, I shall never stretch my hand against you to kill you. Indeed, I fear Allah, the Lord of the worlds.' (al-Ma'ida: 28) The True Lord the Glorious and Exalted then says: 'So his Nafs (self) encouraged him and made fair-seeming to him the murder of his brother. He murdered him and became one of the losers.' (al-Ma'ida: 30)

The previous noble verse indicates that the murdering process was difficult and involved, for the killer persuaded himself into committing the crime. For this reason, the Arabic verb taw`at which means 'to make pliant and flexible' is used, but it istranslated in the aforementioned verse as 'encouraged him and made fair-seeming to him.' No one would say, 'I have made the rope pliable or flexible.' However, one may say, 'I have made the iron pliable.' At the time of perpetrating his crime, Qabil (Cain) swept into the madness of anger, became oblivious to all moral scruples. Then, after the crime happened, and the flare of anger that veiled moral and ethical values subsided, these values appeared clearly again before his soul.

Therefore, we sometimes hear of people who commit a crime and then hand themselves in to the police. They may do so because the fury that drove them to commit the crime abated, and the light of moral and ethical values started to emerge brightly. In light of this, we may understand the saying of the True Lord Glorified is He: '…he has indeed burdened himself with astounding falsehood and a manifest sin.' (an-Nisa': 112)

This indicates that whoever commits a crime, and then accuses an innocent person of it weighs himself down with a heavy sin. His soul will be torn apart between regret for committing his crime and guilt about throwing the blame for it on an innocent person. This is the reason why the True Lord the Exalted says: '…he has indeed burdened himself with astounding falsehood and a manifest sin.' (an-Nisa': 112) The word buhtan is derived from the root bahata. Buhtan, translated in the previous verse as astounding falsehood, is the deed, which, due to its enormity, astounds even the one who does it. An example of such a deed is found in the following verse in which the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted relates the encounter between Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and Nimrod: '…Ibrahim said: "Verily, Allah causes the sun to rise from the east, so you cause it to rise from the west"…' (al-Baqara: 258). So what was the reaction of Nimrod?'…At this, the disbeliever was overwhelmed by astonishment…' (al-Baqara: 258). This means that the answer that Nimrod heard from Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was so overwhelming that it rendered him speechless. Our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him faced him with an astounding fact that never crossed his mind and was inescapably compelling. It emphasises that matters which contradict logical truth and moral demands that strike people as odd, constitute buhtan. Evidence of this is the fact that these matters are always concealed and furtive.

If we now consider the circumstances associated with the revelation of the Quranic verse at hand, we will find that it relates to a theft incident. A thief stole and wanted to vindicate himself by implicating an innocent person in the theft crime and imputing it to him. Commission of a crime incurs sin, and responsibility for that crime, while shifting the responsibility for one's crime to an innocent person, indicates the existence of another level of evil that makes that person bear what he has done, which is normally unbearable to the human soul. Someone who would hear this would not be astonished unless what he is hearing is odd and unfamiliar. There is clear and luminous evidence in the dialogue that took place between Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and Nimrod.

When Nimrod said, 'I (too) give life and cause death.' (al-Baqara: 258) By this statement, Nimrod meant his ability to kill or refrain from killing a human being. Our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him quickly responded with an answer that left him dumbfounded and gave no room for any verbal games or disputes. Allah Glorified is He said: '…Ibrahim said: "Verily, Allah causes the sun to rise from the east, so you cause it to rise from the west." At this the disbeliever was overwhelmed by astonishment…' (al-Baqara: 258).

This means that Nimrod heard a wondrous statement and did not possess enough intelligence to answer it back. Similarly, the man who commits a crime and ascribes it to another person needs a capacity to bear such an act. This indicates that sound human instinct abhors such an ugly act. When someone commits such a sin, he burdens himself with the guilt of calumny by going to the extent of imputing his sin unto an innocent person. This denotes that such an act requires an unusual capacity to commit evil.

Accordingly, the saying of the True Lord the Exalted '…he has indeed burdened himself with astounding falsehood and a manifest sin' (an-Nisa': 112) means that anyone who does this burdens himself with an egregious deed that renders those who hear it dumbfounded and leads them to wonder how can this happen. The perpetrator may even wonder how he dared to commit this.

As we have learned, ithim (sin) is a bad deed done deliberately. The True Lord the Glorious and Exalted explains this issue clearly as follows: Allah the Most High surrounds you, O, Muhammad, with His Care, Support, and Grace. Some people who have little faith may try to distract you from this truth and convince you into acquitting a guilty person and convicting an innocent one using the argument that the former is a Muslim, whereas the latter is a non-Muslim. However Allah the Exalted did not send Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to judge between believers only. The beginning of this noble verse makes it clear for us that Allah the Glorious and Exalted sent His Messenger to judge justly: '… so that you may judge between the people in accordance with what Allah has taught you…' (an-Nisa': 105). That is, to judge justly and fairly between all people without exception. So when you judge never use the argument that this one is a Muslim, while this one is a non-Muslim. Nor should you say that this one is a Muslim, while this one is a Christian or a Jew. Rather, all people should be provided with equal justice.

This incident provided Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the boost of faith needed later to give the verdict concerning the woman from the tribe of Makhzum who committed theft. Usama ibn Zayd Allah be pleased with him the most beloved to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him interceded on her behalf. However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who resolved to administer the proper Islamic penalty to her, said as narrated in the following Hadith: 'It was narrated by Mother of the Believers, 'Aishah Allah be pleased with her that the Quraysh were much concerned about the case of the woman from Makhzum who committed theft and wondered who could intercede for her with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. They said, "Who would dare speak to him about such a matter other than Usama ibn Zayd, his beloved one?" Usama then spoke to him about that matter. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said to him, "Do you intercede regarding a punishment prescribed by Allah?" He then stood up and addressed the people, saying, "Verily, the people before you were ruined because when a noble person among them committed theft, they would leave him. However, if a weak person among them were to commit theft, they would execute the prescribed punishment on him. By Allah, were Fatima, the daughter of Muhammad, to commit the theft, I would have cut off her hand."'(1) His statement was derived from the previous case. The True Lord the Glorious and Exalted says:

وَلَوْلَا فَضْلُ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيْكَ وَرَحْمَتُهُۥ لَهَمَّت طَّآئِفَةٌ مِّنْهُمْ أَن يُضِلُّوكَ وَمَا
يُضِلُّونَ إِلَّآ أَنفُسَهُمْ ۖ وَمَا يَضُرُّونَكَ مِن شَىْءٍ ۚ وَأَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيْكَ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ
وَٱلْحِكْمَةَ وَعَلَّمَكَ مَا لَمْ تَكُن تَعْلَمُ ۚ وَكَانَ فَضْلُ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيْكَ عَظِيمًا ﴿١١٣﴾

If it were not for the grace of God and His mercy to you [Prophet], a party of them would have tried to lead you astray; they only lead themselves astray, and cannot harm you in any way, since God has sent down the Scripture and Wisdom to you, and taught you what you did not know. God's bounty to you is great indeed [113]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 113)

We might wonder if anyone intended to misguide Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. We should understand that hamm which literally means to intend or plan and is translated in the aforementioned verse as 'made a decision', is of two kinds. One of them is in the sense of actually executing something, and the other is in the sense of trying to embellish and justify something in order to have it executed. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him refused to execute what they had planned for him to do. Allah warded it off from him since He surrounds His Messenger with His Grace and Mercy. He brought forth events to teach him new rulings. Allah's Grace and Mercy upon His Messenger rendered their endeavour merely an attempt to embellish injustice from which Allah also protected His Messenger. Once learnt, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him started to pass judgments on the cases of everyone according to the new ruling. The sending down of a ruling which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not know before, that specifically dealt with an occurring event, is indeed a favour from Allah. For, through it, Allah expanded the education and edification of His Messenger: '… and taught you that which you knew not…' (an-Nisa': 113).

(1) Narrated by Muslim

Those who defended Ibn Ubayriq wanted to embellish their arguments in order to convince Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to exempt him from punishment. Their endeavours were limited to this extent, without ever getting to actual execution. The purpose behind such embellishment and justification was to harm and mislead Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him - Allah forbid. They wanted to pull him to a path other than that of truth and righteous guidance. This could have harmed the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. Had Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him acquitted the person who knew himself to be guilty, this would have instilled into him the thought that religious rulings were not serious at all. As for the innocent person, whom they wanted Prophet Muhammad to convict, he would have thought that the religion of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was untrue since it punished an innocent person. Thus, their endeavours to beautify their case would have harmed the image and credibility of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in front of both the guilty person, whom they tried to falsely acquit, as well as the innocent person, whom they tried to falsely convict.

Yet Allah, through His Grace and Mercy, protected His Messenger Muhammad also from this harm: '…a party of them would certainly have made a decision to mislead you, but (in fact) they mislead none except their own selves, and no harm can they do to you in the least. Allah has sent down to you the Book (the Quran) and wisdom…' (an-Nisa': 113).

Allah Glorified is He sent down Quranic verses to decide this matter. The revelation of a specific ruling following a particular incident highlights, among other things, the secret underlying the gradual revelation of the Quran in portions (over the course of twenty-three years). The Quran deals with actual subject matters, and so it lets the events occur naturally. Then, the Ruling of Allah, directly concerned with the current events, is revealed from the heaven at the time of their occurrence. Otherwise, how would the Quran address different incidents if it had been revealed all at one time before the actual occurrence of such events? Allah, therefore, decreed that the events should take place first, and then the rulings pertaining to them should be revealed. Furthermore, disbelievers are quoted in the Quran as saying: 'Why is the Quran not revealed to him (Muhammad) all at once?' (al-Furqan: 32) No, for Allah wanted that the Quran to be revealed gradually, in stages and on separate occasions. Why did He choose so?'… Thus, (it is sent down in parts), that We may strengthen your heart thereby. And We have revealed it to you gradually, in stages.' (al-Furqan: 32)

Therefore, Quranic verses were revealed whenever the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would be shaken due to bitter quarrels, animosity and stubbornness shown on the part of disbelievers and their resistance to truth, although they recognised him to be the Messenger of Allah just as they recognised their own children. Also, whenever the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would be shaken due to the tumult and troubles stirred up by the people around him, the Mercy from Heaven would descend to anchor and support his heart. The noble Quranic verses connected Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with Heaven and relieved him of this suffering. Throughout the mission of preaching Islam, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him experienced hardships daily, which required him to be in need of continuous support and comfort from Allah Glorified is He. The revelation of the Quran following the difficulties he faced at the hands of his opponents along with the soothing beauty of Allah's Words had an alleviating effect on him. This made Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him await the sweetness of the Divine Words to be bestowed upon him whenever a distressful event occurred. This is the meaning of the saying of the True Lord Glorified is He: '…Thus (it is sent down in parts) that We may strengthen your heart thereby…' (al-Furqan: 32). This means that Allah revealed the Quran little by little, in portions, to provide you, O, Muhammad, with constant steadfastness. If the Quran had been revealed all at once, the times of communication with Heaven would have been few. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to be in continuous contact with the Lord of the Heavens. The evidence is that when the revelation paused for some time, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him started to gaze yearningly at the sky. Why did he do this? The reason is that at its beginning, receiving Divine Revelation exhausted Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, he said, 'He [Angel Jibril (Gabriel)] seized me and pressed me until I could no longer bear it.'(1) The Mother of the believers, Khadijah Allah be pleased with her saw him during the descent of Divine Revelation and said, 'His forehead was intensely sweating.' Thus, the contact between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a human being, and Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him an angel, had to cause a chemical change in the soul of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

In this regard, A'isha, the Mother of the believers Allah be pleased with her narrated that Al-Harith ibn Hisham Allah be pleased with him asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'O, Messenger of Allah, how does the revelation come to you?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'Sometimes, it comes to me like the ringing of a bell, and that is the hardest for me. When it leaves me, I remember what it has said. Sometimes, the angel appears to me in the likeness of a man and talks to me, and I remember what he says.' A'isha Allah be pleased with her added, 'I saw the

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in Bid' Al-Wahy (The Beginning of Receiving Divine Revelation)

Messenger of Allah while the revelation was descending upon him on an extremely cold day. When it ceased, his forehead was flooded with sweat.'(1)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him experienced hardships. Allah the Exalted intended by the pause of revelation to make Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him feel the sweetness of the revelation that was bestowed upon him and long for it. Such longing helped Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him endure the difficulty he experienced while receiving Divine Revelations. Therefore, this sweating experience did not last for long because the True Lord the Exalted says: 'And indeed the Hereafter is better for you than the present (life of this world).' (ad-Duha: 4) This shows that the True Lord the Exalted explained to His Messenger that he would feel sweetness, yearning and enjoyment in receiving Divine Revelations '…Thus (it is sent down in parts) so that We may strengthen your heart thereby…' (al-Furqan: 32).

The Quran was sent down in portions over different periods of time. The Companions used to hear a number of Quranic verses, memorise them, and then the scribes of the revelations would write them down. Then another miracle of the Quran would descend in support of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and an entire chapter of the Quran would be revealed to him. After being relieved of the exhausting state experienced while receiving Divine Revelation, he would command the writers of it to record it. Afterwards, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would arrange the Quranic verses in their proper places within each chapter. Then, he would recite the chapter that was revealed to him during prayers, and those praying behind him would hear his recitation of each verse in its proper order. This evidently indicates that the manner in which the Quran was revealed had been accurately planned, and that whatever Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stated or narrated must be true. Otherwise, I bid you tell me how an entire chapter of the Quran could be revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who would then dictate it to his scribes, recite it in the prayers exactly in the form and order in which it was revealed to him and have his Companions write it down, unless what was revealed to him was the truth from Allah. Sometimes, a person may talk non-stop for a quarter of an hour; we may then ask him to repeat what he said. However, this person would never be able to repeat the exact words he uttered. By contrast, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was capable of repeating the Quranic verses exactly as they were originally revealed to him. This indicates that he was reciting Allah’s Preserved Book which falsehood cannot approach, neither from before it or behind it. It is sent down by the All-Wise, worthy of all praise. For this reason, the True Lord the Most High says: 'And no example or similitude do they bring (to oppose or to find fault in you or in this Quran), but We reveal to you the truth (against that similitude or example) and the better explanation thereof.' (al-Furqan: 33) This means that Allah would always reveal to you, O Muhammad, the truth about any event or incident that deniers might mention to you.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in Bid' Al-Wahy (The Beginning of Receiving Divine Revelation)

Accordingly, the Quran was gradually revealed to constantly strengthen the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and safeguard it against the tribulations that it would experience. Allah willed that communication between His Messenger Muhammad and Heaven should extend over the twenty-three years of preaching and delivering the Message of Islam.

The Arabic word tartil signifies the revelation of the Quran to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him descended in parts, and not all at once. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would then recite what was revealed to him in the prayers without any change or omission. Regarding this, the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted also says: 'We will make you recite (the Quran), so you shall not forget.' (al-A‘la: 6)

Each and every part of the Quran was revealed at the time most relevant to the events taking place, as with the incident of the theft committed by Ibn Ubaryq. A ruling was revealed about it in which the True Lord the Exalted says: '… and taught you that which you knew not. And Ever Great is the Grace of Allah unto you.' (an-Nisa’: 113)

If Allah the Glorious and Exalted has imparted knowledge to you, O, Prophet Muhammad, through sending down the Quran to you, does this imply that only you are authorised to enact and implement the rulings and legislations already revealed to you in Allah’s Book? No, this is not the case since the Book is a miracle in itself, and it contains the principles of faith. However, Allah has also authorised His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to legislate and decree rulings. This is a privilege and honour that was not granted to any Messenger before him. The evidence is the saying of the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted: '…whatsoever the Messenger (Muhammad) gives you, take it, and whatsoever he forbids you, abstain (from it)...' (al-Hashr: 7). The Messengers before Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only delivered to the people and judged between them based on what was revealed to them by Allah. Allah the Most High endowed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the special privilege of having the authorisation to pass rulings and legislations. The True Lord the Glorious and Exalted explained that he taught His Messenger both the Book and Wisdom. Wisdom refers to the Sunnah. Allah the Exalted says: 'And remember that which is recited in your houses of the Verses of Allah and the wisdom…' (al-Ahzab: 34).

Allah is the Bestower of grace and bounties on His Messenger Muhammad and all His creation: '… Allah has sent down to you the Book (the Quran), wisdom and taught you that which you knew not. And Ever Great is the Grace of Allah unto you (O, Muhammad).' (an-Nisa': 113) We should notice that Allah's Grace and Favour occurred twice in this glorious verse. Allah's first favour in this verse is the protection of His Messenger Muhammad from any sect or group that may misguide and lead him away from the truth. The second favour that Allah conferred upon His Messenger Muhammad was that He revealed to him His Book which contained all the rulings and bestowed upon him wisdom, namely, the authorisation by Allah to legislate. Thus, Allah made the Sunnah of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him an extension to His Revelations. Therefore, some people who cast doubts on the authority and authenticity of the Sunnah can be responded to by asking them where in the Quran it mentions the description of the five daily obligatory prayers. For example, we may ask one of them, 'Do you perform your daily prayers or not?' One of them may answer, 'Yes, I do. 'We may then respond to him: 'How many times do you pray?' He may then say, 'Five times.' We may then ask him to locate the place in the Quran where the five obligatory prayers are described. At this point, he will get pale and confused while trying to find the verse that states that one must perform two rak`as (units of prayer) in the Morning Prayer, four rak`as in the Noon and Afternoon Prayers, three rak`as in the Sunset Prayer and four Rak`as in the Evening Prayer. Eventually, he will admit that he prays in accordance with the saying of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'Pray as you have seen me praying.'⑴ This is part of the Sunnah.

Regarding the part of the verse saying: '… and taught you that which you knew not. And Ever Great is the Grace of Allah unto you (O, Muhammad) ' (an-Nisa': 113), some of those who tend to argue may say, 'The Quran repeats the same words in different places. Why does it mention Allah's Grace and Favour upon Prophet Muhammad at the beginning and end of the same verse?' We answer this by saying, 'You did not grasp the meaning of Allah's Favour in the first part. In this context, it meant that Allah protected His Messenger from being affected by false representation of facts with the intent of convicting an innocent Jew. The second occurrence of Allah's Grace and Favour upon His Messenger Muhammad refers to Allah's bestowal of Knowledge and Wisdom upon His Messenger which, on its own, is a truly great bounty.

Furthermore, did those people who went to talk to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him regarding Tu`ma ibn Ubayriq, not sit together and deliberate the way in which they could let Tu`ma ibn Ubayriq escape punishment for his crime? They deliberated the case of Tu`ma amongst themselves and agreed to go to Prophet Muhammad. This deliberation was a secret and confidential conversation. For this reason, Islamic manners and code of conduct are keen to respect the dignity of any third party sitting with two persons. It is thus considered inappropriate for any two people to talk confidentially or secretly with each other in the presence of a third person since this causes feelings of annoyance and alienation.

However, a private conversation between two people is permissible when four people are sitting together. In this case, two may have a confidential conversation, while the other two may talk to each other. Thus, najwa means a private, secret conversation or discourse. Such discourse is often about a matter which the interlocutors do not wish to share or divulge. These people had done so before they went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to talk about the situation of Tu`ma ibn Ubayriq. The True Lord the Most High exposed their secret conversation. The following saying of the True Lord was revealed in association with this incident:

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Al-Bayhaqi in As-Sunnan Al-Kubra

لَّا خَيۡرَ فِي كَثِيرٖ مِّن نَّجۡوَىٰهُمۡ إِلَّا مَنۡ أَمَرَ بِصَدَقَةٍ أَوۡ مَعۡرُوفٍ أَوۡ إِصۡلَٰحِۭ بَيۡنَ
ٱلنَّاسِۚ وَمَن يَفۡعَلۡ ذَٰلِكَ ٱبۡتِغَآءَ مَرۡضَاتِ ٱللَّهِ فَسَوۡفَ نُؤۡتِيهِ أَجۡرًا عَظِيمٗا ﴿١١٤﴾

There is no good in most of their secret talk, only in commanding charity, or good, or reconciliation between people.
To anyone who does these things, seeking to please God, We shall give a rich reward [114] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 114)

Allah the Most High exposes the secret plan behind their private conversation that harboured the ill intention of misleading the judgement of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, what would be the ruling if secret conversations were intended to help achieve a truthful cause? Allah the Glorious and Exalted excluded this kind of secret conversations from blame; therefore, Allah did not pronounce an absolute judgement against all kinds of private conversations. Furthermore, not only does Allah exclude private conversations intended to encourage charity, doing good works or conciliating between people, but He also greatly rewards those who engage in them for such purposes. Therefore, Allah says: 'And whoever does this, seeking the good Pleasure of Allah, We shall in time grant him a great reward.' (an-Nisa’: 114) In this context, the True Lord the Most High uses the Arabic future tense sawfa which is in the previous verse and means 'shall in time', even though He could have said, ‘We shall immediately grant him a great reward.’ However, due to the perfect precision of the Quran, the word sawfa was used to indicate the furthest possible future.

When the time span, separating the action in the subordinate clause and its result in the main clause is relatively short, the verb in the main clause is affixed by the letter 's' (a prefix that denotes the future), and if this time span is longer, the verb is preceded by sawfa (which means 'will'). However, if there is a time lag between the former and the latter, the word sawfa is used in place of the particle (sin). In this verse, the True Lord the Exalted uses the word sawfa since the place of reward is the Afterlife. Therefore, no believing servant of Allah should say, 'Why has Allah not rewarded me for my good deed in the worldly life?’ The reason is that the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted did not say, ‘We shall immediately grant him a great reward’, instead He said: '… We shall in time grant him a great reward.' (an-Nisa’: 114) This indicates that all favours and bounties are from Allah. However, if they were bestowed immediately, this would not be the true reward for such good deeds since the reward which the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted shall give to his believing servants will be quite great. The only word that can indicate that such reward will follow in the Afterlife is sawfa. In this connection, we also know that whenever Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him promised his followers something, he would always refer to the Afterlife. Let us consider, for example, Al-‘Aqaba Pledge, which was when the Ansar came from Medina to pledge their allegiance and loyalty to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him surrounded by a group of his Companions on the night of the `Aqabah Pledge, said, 'Give me your pledge of allegiance that you will not associate anything with Allah, that you will not steal, that you will not commit zina (sexual intercourse outside marriage), that you will not kill your children, that you will not bring forth a slander you fabricate by lying about who has fathered your children and that you will not disobey what is right. Whoever among you fulfills this (pledge), his reward is due from Allah. Whoever commits anything of this and is punished in this world, it shall be considered expiation for him. And whoever commits anything of this, and Allah shields him (i.e. covers his sin), his matter will rest with Allah. If He so wills, He will pardon him; and if He so wills, He will punish him.'(1)

The people replied, 'O, Messenger of Allah, you have asked for yourself, and we want to ask for ourselves. What shall we have if we fulfil this pledge?’ Let us hear the great, divinely inspired reply that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave, 'You shall have Paradise.'

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in the Book of Iman (Faith)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him could have told them that they would triumph and prevail over the earth, from the east to the west, and that they would enjoy the bounties of all the countries that would convert to Islam. However, due to his wisdom, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never promised them such things since some of them might be killed while fighting in support of the Religion of Allah. In such case, some might wonder what reward did he get in the worldly life? He would not get his share of honour in the worldly life, but he would be rewarded in the Afterlife. This is the reason why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him mentioned the reward that applies to all, namely, entering paradise, in order to make Muslims realise that this world is too immaterial for Allah to limit the reward He promised to those who obey Him to only it, rather, he encourages believers to seek Allah’s Reward in the Afterlife. We all know the following story. A man once said to his friend, 'Do you love me?’ His friend replied, 'Yes, I love you.' He asked, 'How much?’ His friend replied, 'I love you as much as I love this worldly life.' The man said, 'How insignificant I must be to you!'

The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And whoever does this, seeking the good Pleasure of Allah, We shall in time grant him a great reward.' (an-Nisa’: 114). However, to whom does the pronoun 'We' in this verse refer? Who will grant such a great reward? It is the True Lord the Most High ho described His Reward as great. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is telling us, 'O, believers, adhere to the path of Prophet Muhammad and cling to it until your life becomes unified to it. Beware of having any opinion different from his law. He is the one who speaks on behalf of Allah. Thus, whoever believes in him must adhere to his path. When our master Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him was told about the story of Isra' (Night Journey) and Mi`raj (Ascension to Heaven), he just asked those who told him, ‘Did the Messenger of Allah say what you are telling me now?’ They answered, ‘Yes.’ So, Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him answered, ‘If he said so, it must be true.’ Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him did not need evidence to verify the truth of what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said. The True Lord the Exalted then puts forward the opposite case:

وَمَن يُشَاقِقِ ٱلرَّسُولَ مِنۢ بَعۡدِ مَا تَبَيَّنَ لَهُ ٱلۡهُدَىٰ وَيَتَّبِعۡ غَيۡرَ سَبِيلِ
ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ نُوَلِّهِۦ مَا تَوَلَّىٰ وَنُصۡلِهِۦ جَهَنَّمَۖ وَسَآءَتۡ مَصِيرًا ﴿١١٥﴾

if anyone opposes the Messenger, after guidance has been made clear to him, and follows a path other than that of the believers, We shall leave him on his chosen path – We shall burn him in Hell, an evil destination [115] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 115)

The word yushaqiq which is the Arabic word in the previous verse that translates as 'contradicts and opposes', indicates that a cleavage or chasm has been engendered in something that used to be cohesively held together as one unit. This is analogous to the case when we cut a piece of wood into two. Similarly, if believers adhere to and have faith in the path set by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and recognise him as the Messenger conveying the true Message of Allah, they do not ever break such unity with and adherence to the path of Allah’s Messenger. Thus, if a ruling was decreed and a believer tried to violate it, in doing so this person would, Allah forbid, be inciting disobedience against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Alternatively, the verse at hand might be referring to those who pursue a path other than that of Prophet Muhammad, and thus, end up following a path other than that set by Allah’s Law: 'And whoever contradicts and opposes the Messenger (Muhammad) after the right path has been shown clearly to him…' (an-Nisa’: 115). Guidance has indeed become clear to every Muslim once they believe in Allah as their Creator and Lord and believe in Prophet Muhammad as the conveyor of Allah’s Message. By doing so, they are submitting themselves to Allah. As we have previously stated, the function of reason is to contemplate the signs and evidence of the existence of the Supreme Creator. After one believes in the existence of the One Supreme Lord, another step must follow: belief in the Messenger of God as the conveyer of God’s Message and Words. The reason is that the ultimate piece of evidence that one's logic seeks as a ground to believe in the existence of God is the one proving the existence of an Able, All-Wise and All Knowing Power that underlies the existence of humanity along with this entire universe.

However, human reason cannot, on its own, identify the name of such a power. Furthermore, human reason cannot know the demands of such a power from its created beings. Therefore, human reason must be informed of the nature of this power. Once compelling evidence of the existence of a Higher Being is revealed to humans, with a message sent from Him through a messenger, the humans must adhere to the path preached by this Messenger. The humans must then fulfil the obligations that this Supreme Power has placed on them since they are God's Commands that the Messenger of God delivered them, performed them himself or ordered that they be performed. However, to those who want to engage in contentious arguments we say, 'First, reconsider your faith in Allah, and second, reconsider your belief in the Messenger of Allah. This is the reason why the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted says: 'And whoever contradicts and opposes the Messenger (Muhammad) after the right path has been shown clearly to him, and follows other than the believers' way. We shall keep him in the path he has chosen, and burn him in Hell - what an evil destination' (an-Nisa': 115).

Guidance, as we know, is the path leading to a specific aim and purpose. Every action of a human being must have a purpose. Society considers anyone who does a purposeless act as inept and lacking direction. By contrast, if one has an aim for his actions, then he knows well the importance and significance of his aim and will search for the shortest way to accomplish it. This way is what we call guidance. Thus, whoever learns the way of guidance and then pursues a path other than that of the believers has opposed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has dissociated himself from the path of faith and has proceeded contrary to it. Furthermore, whoever opposes Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has, in fact, renounced his faith.

Thus, we know that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has set a particular way and path and that believers follow him closely, adhering to this path. Furthermore, we also recognise that whoever deviates from the path set by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him dissociates himself from him as well as from the believers. Moreover, Allah Glorified is He commands us to follow His Path and not to follow other ways: 'And say, "This is my straight path. So follow it; and follow no other ways, lest they lead you away from His way. That is what He enjoins upon you, that you may be able to guard against evils. '(al-An'am: 153)

Allah Glorified is He has set only one Path. However, what happens to the one who deviates from it? Allah Glorified is He answers that question by stating that He will leave such a person on his chosen path and burn him in Hell, an evil destination. Sometimes the Arabic word mn, meaning 'whoever', could be used as a conditional particle or as a relative pronoun. For instance, when we say that whoever studies succeeds, the last syllable of the two verbs following mn, or 'however', are pronounced with a u-sound accent, and in that case it is a relative pronoun. The sentence would mean that the one who studies is the one who succeeds. However, if the last syllable of the two verbs has a silent accent, nm, or 'however', would be a conditional particle. If the word mn, or 'whoever', is a relative pronoun, we find that the sentence proceeds normally with two verbs pronounced with u sound accent. However, if it is a conditional particle, the last syllable of the two verbs is pronounced with a silent accent, and the second verb would be the outcome of the condition. The Arabic word mn (whoever) can be either a relative pronoun or a conditional particle; this is normally known from what follows it. We have an illustrative example in this verse when Allah Glorified is He says, 'Yattabi' (to follow).' Thus, we notice that the verb yattabi' (to follow) has a silent accent. This means that mn (whoever) is conditional in this context. The recitation would be different if we deem mn (whoever) a relative pronoun because in such a case the verb yushaqiq (to oppose), as well as the verb yattabi' (to follow), will be both considered normal present tense verbs with u-sounding accents on the last syllable of each. In such a case, the rest of the verse would be recited as nuwallihi ma tawalla wanuslihi. By contrast, if mn (whoever) is considered a conditional particle, as it actually is in this verse, this implies that the last syllable of the verb yushaqiq (to oppose) must have a silent accent; in such a case this verse is to be recited normally. Subsequently, the last syllable of the verb connected with the verb yushaqiq (to oppose) via the conjunction, viz. yattabi' (to follow) must also have a silent accent. The same also applies to nuwallihi (to leave) and nuslihi (to burn) since both of them are connected with yattabi' (to follow) via a conjunction. However, in the case of the two latter verbs, adding a silent accent to their last syllable assumes the form of omitting the vowel Al-Yaa' (i) at the end of each. Another semantic point to consider is the meaning of tawalla which is to come close to someone.

Thus, when we say that so and so tawalla (to come closer to) so and so, this means that this person has become close to that other person. Allah Glorified is He does not want whoever does not follow the path of the believers, and thus He abandons him to the disbelievers. In this respect, Allah Glorified is He says, 'I am the One, One Who does not stand in need of a partner. If anyone does anything in which he associates anyone else with Me, I shall abandon him with one whom he associates with Allah.'(1)

The one who needs a partner is the one who suffers a point of weakness that makes him in need of another partner for support. To Allah Glorified is He belong the supreme and most Glorified parables. An example illustrating the above point is that no one would ever have a business partner unless he does not have enough money to manage his business or lacks the ability to manage it. Thus, Allah Glorified is He teaches us, 'I am the One, One Who does not stand in need of a partner. If anyone does anything in which he associates anyone else with Me, I shall abandon him with one whom he associates with Allah.'(2)

This means that Allah Glorified is He has the absolute, effective Power that is not in need of any support or partnership, as partnership primarily indicates that one of the partners is weak and, therefore, needs the support of another partner. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He punishes whoever opposes Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him regarding any religious matter by making him closer to disbelievers, and also closer to his aim. Allah Glorified is He knows that no benefit will accrue to anyone who opposes Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Rather, the punishment of the one who opposes him and follows other than the way of the believers is that Allah Glorified is He brings him closer to the disbelievers and the sinners by making him join their side and resurrecting him among their group. This does not mean that Allah Glorified is He deprives this servant of his provision, instead, He grants provisions to both believers and disbelievers. He has also commanded all worldly causes to serve His servants if they pursue them. Indeed, it is due to the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He that He does not deprive such a disobedient servant of His Bounties; His sun provides him with light and warmth, the air continues to blow for him and the earth continues to supply him with his sustenance. Allah Glorified is He says that He increases the harvest of whoever desires the harvest of the Hereafter and gives whoever desires the harvest of this worldly life a share of it, but he will have no share in the Hereafter: 'Who so desires the harvest of the Hereafter, We give him increase in his harvest; and whoso desires the harvest of this world, We give him his portion thereof, but in the Hereafter, he will have no share.' (ash-Shura: 20)

(1) [Narrated by Muslim]
(2) [Narrated by Muslim]

In this respect, He also states that to each category He gives from His Bounty which never has been restricted: 'To all We render aid - to those as well as to these - a gift from your Lord. And the gift of your Lord is not restricted.' (al-Isra': 20) Thus, Divine Grace and Bounty are not exclusively restricted to believers; rather, they are equally bestowed upon both believers and disbelievers. Indeed, if this had been the only sign of Allah's Compassion and Mercy, it would have sufficed to make us all love Him and follow His Path. Allah Glorified is He states that whoever follows a path other than that of the believers, He will leave such a person on his chosen path and burn him in hell, an evil destination. The path leading to hell must indeed be extremely evil. Subsequently, the discourse of Allah's addresses the capital form of treason one could ever commit against faith; it is Allah's saying:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَغۡفِرُ أَن يُشۡرَكَ بِهِۦ وَيَغۡفِرُ مَا دُونَ ذَٰلِكَ لِمَن
يَشَآءُۚ وَمَن يُشۡرِكۡ بِٱللَّهِ فَقَدۡ ضَلَّ ضَلَٰلَۢا بَعِيدًا ﴿١١٦﴾

God does not forgive the worship of others beside Him – though He does forgive whoever He will for lesser sins – for who- ever does this has gone far, far astray [116] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 116)

In this context, Allah Glorified is He speaks about the person who did not repent from his act of associating others in divinity with Allah Glorified is He so he can not be a believer. Believing in Islam wipes out what precedes it, which means that it wipes out all acts of disbelief and the sins that preceded it, provided that such acts and sins were not related to the rights of others as is the case of one of Allah's servants wronging another. A sign of the greatness of believing in Islam is that if someone who devoutly embraced faith in Allah Glorified is He with a pure intention and then dies, He rewards this person with satisfaction and pleasure more than the one who lives for a long time as a believer and yet commits a number of sins for which he deserves to be punished.

The story of Mukhayriq Allah be pleased with him illustrates this point. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings of Allah be upon him departed from Medina on his way to the battle of 'Uhud, Mukhayriq Allah be pleased with him asked the Jews, 'Why do you not advocate Muhammad's cause and support him even though you know that it is incumbent on you to do so?' The Jews then answered, 'Today is a Saturday.' Mukhayriq Allah be pleased with him then said, 'No Saturday will keep me from fulfilling my obligation.' He then picked up his sword and set out to join Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings of Allah be upon him. He then fought until he was injured and his injury was too severe for him to continue fighting. When he was about to die, he said, 'I give my wealth to Muhammad to do with it as he wishes.' Thus, even though Mukhayriq Allah be pleased with him did not pray even a single unit of prayer to Allah Glorified is He during his life, he attained the status of a martyr. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings of Allah be upon him said, 'Mukhayriq is the good leader of the Jews, Salman is the good leader of the Persians and Bilal is the good leader of the Abyssinians.'

Allah Glorified is He tells us here that he does not forgive association with Him, but He forgives what is less than that for whom He wills. To Allah Glorified is He belong the supreme and most Glorified parables – and an example of the above point in everyday life is that we may come across a society wherein a revolution or a coup erupts. We may then notice that the leaders of this revolution or coup let someone do as he wills until the point when he starts to criticise the revolution or try to incite another coup. Upon doing so, they may take him to court and try him for high treason. So what should be the punishment of the one who completely gets out of the fold of faith and associates anyone with Allah? Allah Glorified is He never forgives such a major sin; however, He forgives all acts and deeds other than it. It is indeed due to Allah's Mercy towards His creation that He has reserved the will to forgive exclusively to Himself so that people would not consider it easy to commit a given sin. However, any servant of Allah Glorified is He who commits a sin should first repent in order for Allah Glorified is He to forgive him. In this respect, we know that Allah Glorified is He never excludes any of His servants from the realm of His Mercy simply because he has committed a sin. We know that there is a difference between a servant of Allah Glorified is He who commits a sin while recognising that it is a sin, acknowledging his sinfulness and realising that His Ruling is correct, but he was too weak to resist the temptation; while another servant may simply reject His Ruling. In this respect, we sometimes come across a servant who seeks to find an aspect of permissibility to commit a sin as is the case when one says that usury is not unlawful. This is a form of rejecting Allah's Ruling. By contrast, the servant who says, 'I know that usury is unlawful, but I am undergoing difficult conditions, and I have pressing needs to meet. Therefore, I slipped into eating usury' is only a disobedient one since he does not reject Allah's Ruling. Whoever rejects Allah's Ruling is, Allah forbid, a disbeliever.

Allah Glorified is He does not forgive association with Him, but He forgives what is less than that for whomever He wills. We should also bear in mind that some orientalists who want to spread corruption on earth, ultimately spread the virtues of Islam. Their case is similar to what a poet described in the following verses:

Whenever Allah wills to spread a virtue that has disappeared,

He appoints for this mission the tongue of an envious person.

When the orientalists talk about certain matters, they drive those who have faith to seek answers using the miraculous aspects of the Quran and its eloquence. The orientalists say, 'Muhammad told his people that Allah does not forgive association with Him, but He forgives what is less than that for whomever He wills. However, it seems that he was quite unaware of this when he said in another verse that Allah forgives all the sins of His servants who transgressed against themselves by their very sinning.' Allah says: 'Say, `O, my servants who have sinned against their souls, despair not of the mercy of Allah. Surely, Allah forgives all sins. Verily, He is Most Forgiving, Ever Merciful.' (az-Zumar: 53) They try to attribute the discourse of the Quran to Muhammad peace and blessings of Allah be upon him instead of Allah Glorified is He and to find a contradiction between the two noble verses. We say to orientalists that they are all ignorant, along with lacking the mastery of the Arabic language.

Had they mastered the Arabic language and grasped it naturally, they would have understood the saying of Allah Glorified is He that He forgives all sins. Indeed, it is He Who is 'Most Forgiving, Ever Merciful.' (az-Zumar: 53)

These orientalists should have understood that associating anyone with Allah Glorified is He is much more severe than sinning. Sinning occurs when someone recognises a religious ruling but then violates it. However, the one who associates anyone with Allah Glorified is He does not fall under the category of people whom Allah Glorified is He may forgive all kinds of their sins, as he is a disbeliever in the first place. For this reason, there is no contradiction or discrepancy between the two noble verses. Thus, it is evident that orientalists do not understand the real meanings of the Quran.

Allah Glorified is He states that He does not forgive the worship of others beside Him, but forgives what is lesser than that, as the one who worships others beside Him has gone far astray. No matter how satisfying a life a polytheist may enjoy, he will ultimately live for a limited time. Therefore, even if all such pleasure and satisfaction remain, he will leave them when he dies. Alternatively, pleasure and satisfaction may abandon and leave him during his life. Therefore, he will either abandon all pleasures upon dying, or all pleasures and satisfaction will abandon him inasmuch as everything in this worldly life is susceptible to change. Thus, as far as pleasure and satisfaction in life are concerned, one has either of two conditions: he may either abandon them upon dying, or the pleasures and satisfaction will themselves abandon him during his life. Furthermore, a polytheist will ultimately return to Allah Glorified is He to be judged in the Afterlife, and since it is eternal, his suffering due to his crime(s) will be infinitely long. Committing such an act is thereby an extreme form of drifting far astray. By contrast, the one who drifts astray a little bit may restore his senses and return to the righteous path. Accordingly, polytheists may be classified into two group: one group who deny the Divinity of Allah and these are disbelievers, and a group who believe in Allah, but associate partners with Him in Divinity.

For this reason, we find the polytheists at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings of Allah be upon him said that they only worship idols, believing that they may bring them nearer to Allah: 'And those who take as protectors others beside Him say, "We serve them only that they may bring us near to Allah in station.' (az-Zumar: 3)

For instance, had they said that they only sacrifice to them to bring them nearer to Allah, it would have been possible for them to fall among the sphere of those who worship Him Glorified is He. However, they admitted that they worship the idols; for this reason, they definitely fall within the realm of polytheism. In this respect, our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him says that the idols are enemies to him, but not (to) the Lord of the worlds: 'They are all enemies to me...' (ash-Shu'ara': 77).

He specifies the exception in his declaration so that he may decisively and clearly tell his people that all the idols that they worship are his enemies, but Allah is not his enemy. It is as if the people of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him used to believe in Allah Glorified is He, but associated partners with Him. For this reason, he said that it is Allah Glorified is He Who created him and guided him, and it is He Who gave him food and drink: '(It is Allah) Who has created me, and it is He Who guides me and Who gives me food and gives me drink.' (ash-Shu'ara': 78,79)

Accordingly, polytheism may assume the form of denying the existence of Allah, or it may take the form of associating others in Divinity with Him. Let us then see who the polytheists worship and pray to when calamities befall them:

إِن يَدْعُونَ مِن دُونِهِۦٓ إِلَّآ إِنَٰثًا وَإِن يَدْعُونَ إِلَّا شَيْطَٰنًا مَّرِيدًا ﴿١١٧﴾

In His place the idolaters invoke only females, and Satan, the rebel [117] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 117)

The Arabic word 'in (not) in this context means 'not.' In some instances, the word 'in is used as a conditional particle, and in others instances, it is used as a negative article as is the case of His saying in another verse that their mothers are none but those who gave birth to them: 'Those among you who put away their wives by calling them mothers - they do not thereby become their mothers; their mothers are only those who gave birth to them.' (al-Mujadala: 2)

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He means that their mothers are only those who gave birth to them. The same applies to the word 'in (not) when Allah Glorified is He says that they call only upon female deities instead of Him. The Arabs before Islam used to attribute everything that is base and weak to women. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says that they are brought up wearing adornments and during arguments are unable to speak plainly: 'Do they assign to Allah one who is brought up in adornments and who is not able to give clear expression to an argument in disputation?' (az-Zukhruf: 18) Women in the Arabic tradition are incapable of achieving victory or defending themselves. For this reason, an Arab poet said:

I do not know and I do not imagine I would know
If the tribe of Hisnis truly a people or merely women

The word 'people' in the above line refers to men since they are the ones who always handle confronting problems. So why do you claim that there are female partners with Allah Glorified is He? Is it because females are weak? Or is it because you claim that the angels are the daughters of Allah and so you used to worship them? If this is the case, why do you attribute the females to Allah Glorified is He even though He has created both males and females? For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says: 'That, indeed is an unfair division.' (an-Najm: 22). This means that it is an unfair division and distribution, wherein justice was not observed.

In this respect, when we consider the idols, we notice that they all have female names like al-Lat, al-Uzza, and Manat (an-Najm: 19-20). Similarly, there is an idol called 'Isaf, and another called Na'ila. Accordingly, are these idols really females? If so, how come that you worship females even though you consider them incapable of supporting and benefiting anyone? Furthermore, the idols that you worship besides Allah and that have female names, are they women or angels?

The saying of Allah Glorified is He that they worship instead of Him only female false deities is a style used to imply exclusion. This means that they do not worship apart from Allah except females, or another way to say it is that they worship only females and not Allah. This style of saying it this way is similar to the statement that only Zayd was treated generously. This is a negation of anybody being generous to anyone besides Zayd, and it is an affirmation of its occurrence to Zayd. Therefore, once Allah Glorified is He says that they call upon instead of Him none but female false deities, we should understand that they do not worship or invoke anyone except females. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He conjoins it with: '…They do not call on anything but a rebellious Satan.'

At the beginning of the verse, Allah Glorified is He has used a style for exclusion. This style indicates that the action is limited to the one who carried it out and is not extended to anyone else. Their worshipping of females only is the first exclusion in the verse. The other one is the saying of Allah that they do not call on anything but a rebellious Satan. The servants of the idols used to allege that there it is something inside every idol that speaks to them. For this reason, they also alleged that there was a Satan in every idol that spoke to them. This was a kind of deception since devils could either be humans or Jinn.

Therefore, there were servants who used to take care of these false deities and wanted to attribute power to them so that people would make sacrifices and bring gifts to these deities, and these servants would relish that chance. For this reason, they used to hire someone who had a rough voice to stand behind the idols and tell people, 'Sacrifice such and such for me or bring me such and such thing.' Such practice is identical to what the modern magicians do in order to convince people of their power. Therefore, the entity that used to talk from inside these idols is either a Satan from among humans or a Satan from among genies. Etymologically, the Arabic word shaytan (Satan) is derived from shatan which means distance and remoteness.

In order to understand why Satan is described as marid (rebellious), we toned to understand the meaning of the words mared and marid. To do so, we have to bear in mind that abstract things are explained in terms of tangible things. The linguistic root of both words is constituted of three Arabic letters: al-mim, ar-ra' and ad-dal. From this root, several words are derived like the following: 'amrad, mumarad, marda' and marid. All the words derived from this root refer to a kind of smooth texture, as 'amrad means smooth. Thus, when it is used to describe a specific kind of hair, it means that the roots of this hair are smooth. Furthermore, if a palace is described as being mumarad (smooth) as in the case of the palace of Sulaiman (Solomon), this means that such palace has been polished in a way that made it so smooth that Bilqis, the queen of Sheba, mistakenly mistook it for water. For this reason, the queen raised her dress fearing it could become wet. Similarly, if a tree is described as being marda', this implies that it is too smooth for one to climb, like the palm tree since it does not have any branches on it, which explains why people hammer big nails in the stem of this tree to help them climb it.

Similarly, Satan is described as being marid (rebellious) to indicate that he is constantly rebelling and revolting to such an extent that one cannot catch him or control him. Thus, 'amrad, mumarad, marda' and marid all refer to the smoothness of texture. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says that they actually call upon none but a rebellious Satan.

When a sinful person tries to blame Satan in the Afterlife, the latter will tell them that he had no authority over them except that he called them, and they responded to his call: 'I had no power over you, except that I called you and you obeyed me. So blame me not, but blame your ownselves.' (Ibrahim: 22)

Thus, he evades and betrays those who followed him because he did not solely possess the power to either persuade or coerce them. He only called upon, abetted and distracted some of Allah's created beings. Thus, they followed him due to their stupidity. Allah Glorified is He then says that Satan has been banished from His Mercy. Allah Glorified is He says:

لَّعَنَهُ ٱللَّهُ وَقَالَ لَأَتَّخِذَنَّ مِنْ عِبَادِكَ نَصِيبًا مَّفْرُوضًا ﴿١١٨﴾

God rejected, who said, I will certainly take my due share of Your servants [118] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 118)

But why was he cursed? Satan sinned and disobeyed Allah Glorified is He. Similarly, Adam peace be upon him sinned and disobeyed Allah Glorified is He. So, why has Allah Glorified is He cursed Satan but forgiven Adam? We find the answer in the Quran when it says that Adam received from Allah Glorified is He some words of prayer and He accepted his repentance: 'Then Adam learnt from his Lord certain words of prayer. So He turned towards him with Mercy. Surely He is Oft-Returning with compassion and is Merciful.' (al-Baqara: 37) Based on this statement, we know that there is a difference between created beings of Allah Glorified is He that rejects one of His Rulings, and another who obliviously commits a sin. When Allah Glorified is He ordered Satan to prostrate to Adam peace be upon him, Satan answered that he was better than Adam since Allah Glorified is He had created him from fire, whereas He created Adam from clay: '…He said, "I am better than he. You have created me from fire while him you have created from clay."' (al-A'raf: 12)

This is a rejection of Allah's Ruling. This is different from the case of Adam and Hawwa (Eve) who admitted wronging themselves by committing a sin: `"Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You forgive us not and have not mercy on us, we shall surely be of the losers."' (al-A'raf: 23)

Thus, Adam peace be upon him recognised Allah's Ruling and admitted that he was too weak to resist the temptation. For this reason, every one of us should beware of approaching anything that Allah Glorified is He has made unlawful and furthering saying that it is not unlawful. Rather, if one is incapable of controlling himself, he should acknowledge his incapacity and say, 'Whatever Allah has made unlawful is proscribed, but I am not able to control himself.' By doing so, he avoids slipping into disbelief and is merely considered a disobedient believer. In such a case, repentance and asking Allah Glorified is He for forgiveness may remove the sins he incurred due to his deeds. However, the one who claims that what Allah Glorified is He has proscribed is lawful is the one who insists on disbelief. Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He has veiled and blurred his insight due to what he did.

Allah Glorified is He describes Satan as accursed which means He has banished him from the realm of His Mercy, which is one reason why man should beware of giving in to the enticements of Satan.

If our master Adam peace be upon him had exerted his mind, he would have discerned the intention of Satan and his plot, for the plot of Satan is weak. However, Adam peace be upon him did not imagine that anyone one could falsely swear by Allah's Name, which is what Satan did when he swore that he was a sincere advisor to Adam and Hawwa (Eve): '… Surely I am a sincere counsellor unto you.' (al-A'raf: 21)

The carelessness of Adam peace be upon him was intended for a purpose that Allah Glorified is He has willed. The purpose was to make Adam His vicegerent in the world. This is why it was easy for Satan to entice Adam peace be upon him and his wife in order to expose their nakedness. He said to them that Allah had forbidden them that tree to prevent them from becoming angels or immortal:… "Your Lord has only forbidden you this tree, lest you become angels or lest you become of the immortals."' (al-A'raf: 20) Satan tempted Adam and Hawwa (Eve) when he told them that Allah Glorified is He kept them from eating from the tree so that they would not become angels or immortal. Had Adam peace be upon him carefully deliberated the matter, he could have told Satan that he should eat from the tree in order to become an eternal angel since he is the one who fearfully asked Allah Glorified is He to reprieve him until the Day of Resurrection: 'He said, "My Lord, then grant me respite till the day when they shall be raised."' (al-Hijr: 36)

Allah Glorified is He wants us to learn from the carelessness of Adam peace be upon him; for this reason, a believer should always be attentive and vigilant. Allah Glorified is He says that He has cursed the Satan, for he had said that he would take from among Allah's servants an appointed portion.

When the noble Quran addresses a certain issue, this means that such an issue merits our deliberation and careful consideration. We notice that Satan talked about the matter at the time when there were only two human beings: Adam and Hawwa (Eve). However, how did he know that he will have more human followers in the future? Furthermore, on what basis did he say that he would surely take from among Allah's servants an appointed portion?

He knew that since he was capable of tempting Adam and Hawwa (Eve), he would be capable of tempting some of their posterity and winning them to his side. Thus, he made such an assertion based on the fact that he was able to tempt Adam and Hawwa (Eve). Those who follow Satan from amongst humans have, therefore, vindicated his claim to take from amongst Allah's servants an appointed portion.

Satan thereby made this hypothetical claim because he was able to tempt Adam and Hawwa (Eve), even though they received their assignments directly from Allah Glorified is He. Therefore, he thought that it would be easier to tempt their posterity who did not receive their assignments directly from Allah Glorified is He but through messengers. Thus, the line of thinking of Satan was based on a piece of evidence. A supposition is, as we know, a probability and an uncertain claim. Its antithesis is an illusion, which is based on a less likely possibility. Allah Glorified is He says that Satan had already confirmed through them his assumption: 'And Iblis (Satan), indeed, found true his judgment concerning them, so they followed him, all except a party of true believers.' (Saba': 20) For this reason, Satan also said that if Allah Glorified is He delayed his death until the Day of Resurrection, he would surely destroy Adam's descendants, except for a few: 'If You will grant me respite till the Day of Resurrection, I will most surely bring his descendants under my sway except a few.' (al-Isra': 62) He also swore by Allah's Might to mislead them all: `So by Your Might, I will surely lead them all astray' (Sad: 82). The pledge of Satan to take from amongst Allah's servants an appointed portion is a confession on his part that he will not be able to tempt all the children of Adam and Hawwa (Eve). The Arabic word Al-fard (an appointed portion), as we know, is a certain matter. Thus, it is what is certain and indisputable. However, what are the means whereby Satan would take an appointed portion of the posterity of Adam? Allah Glorified is He explains to us the means of Satan through his own words:

وَلَأُضِلَّنَّهُمْ وَلَأُمَنِّيَنَّهُمْ وَلَآمُرَنَّهُمْ فَلَيُبَتِّكُنَّ ءَاذَانَ ٱلْأَنْعَٰمِ
وَلَآمُرَنَّهُمْ فَلَيُغَيِّرُنَّ خَلْقَ ٱللَّهِ ۚ وَمَن يَتَّخِذِ ٱلشَّيْطَٰنَ وَلِيًّا مِّن
دُونِ ٱللَّهِ فَقَدْ خَسِرَ خُسْرَانًا مُّبِينًا ﴿١١٩﴾

I will mislead them and incite vain desires in them; I will command them to slit the ears of cattle; I will command them to tamper with God's creation.' Whoever chooses Satan as a patron instead of God is utterly ruined [119] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 119)

In this verse, there is a detailed account of the means whereby Satan would tempt and take an appointed portion of the posterity of Adam peace be upon him. Satan, as the Quran recounts, said: 'I will assuredly lie in wait for them on Your straight path.' (al-A'raf: 16) We learnt before that Satan only intends and tries to tempt those who pursue the path of righteousness. The reason is that the one who chose an evil path does not need Satan to tempt him since he is already a Satan. For this reason, Satan would not go, for instance, to a bar in order to tempt people. Rather, he waits in front of mosques to identify the people who do good things and tries to tempt them by whispering to them. This answers those who complain that they suffer from whispering while praying. Praying, as we know, is the noblest activity that any servant of Allah Glorified is He does; while praying, he stands before Allah Glorified is He. For this reason, Satan tries to distract him in order to preclude him from reaping the reward for his prayers. These temptations are thereby a healthy phenomenon since they are an indication of faith; however, those with faith should perform cautiously. When Satan prompts a person to do something, he should recall the saying of Allah that if the Satan prompts the person, he should seek refuge with Allah. He is All-Hearing and All Knowing: 'And if an evil suggestion of Satan assails thee, then seek refuge in Allah; surely, He is All-Hearing, All Knowing.' (al-A'raf: 200)

When we seek refuge with Allah Glorified is He Satan realises that we are aware of his existence. Therefore, if Satan tries to tempt you, you must immediately seek refuge with Allah Glorified is He even if you are reciting the Quran while praying. Subsequently, you may resume reciting the Quran during your prayer. When Satan realises that you are aware of his temptations once, twice and thrice, he will keep away from you and will never seek to approach you unless he feels that you are in a state of carelessness.

Allah Glorified is He explains to us the means whereby Satan takes a specific portion from amongst His servants. He says that Satan will mislead them, which means that he takes the man to a path that does not lead to a good end. If someone chooses the shortest path leading to the targeted end, this means that he is guided. However, if one drifts away from the path leading to the end that he has set, this means that one is misguided. By setting the path of righteous guidance, Allah Glorified is He directs us to the shortest way to our proper end and purpose in life. Therefore, if we deviate from it, here or there, such deviation will expand until we eventually fail to reach the proper end.

Previously, we have given an example to illustrate this point. We said that at the middle of each circle, there is a point that we call the centre. If someone aiming at this point deviates from the straight line that connects him with it by one thousandth of a millimetre, the distance between him and the point would increase proportionally as he proceeds, even though this person assumes that every step he takes brings him closer to his destination.

We have also put forth another illustrative example. Consider the control booth located before every train station. The worker in the booth regulates the directions of all trains running on the different railways and allows each train to stop at a specific platform so that it would not collide with other trains. In order for him to undertake his job successfully, the control-booth worker moves a stick shift whose thickness does not often sometimes exceed a few millimetres. Moving this stick enables the worker to align two railways over each other and so allows the wheels of the train to move from one of them to the other.

Going astray thereby means that one pursues a path that does not lead one to the end and purpose he has set. Every step one takes on this path distances him from his destination and end instead of bringing him closer to it. Such drifting away is the most extreme form of going and straying farther away. Satan is the one who leads man astray inasmuch as he beautifies committing evil and ugly deeds to divert one off the path leading to goodness and virtue.

Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says that Satan pledged to rouse in man sinful desires. Objects of desire are the goals that one sets and enjoys in his imagination but never takes an actual step to approach the stage of achieving them. For instance, a person may be sitting down and wishing that he would have such and such things even though he does not take any actual step towards acquiring what he wishes to have. In this respect a poet says the following couplet to amuse himself:

The best wishes are those that come true
Otherwise, they make us enjoy our lives

The poet means that one takes pleasure in his wishes by daydreaming regardless if these dreams were about possessing a palace, a car or something else. Every wish that does not motivate one to actually do something to fulfil it is a false wish. For this reason, it is said that wishes are the commodities of the fools. Satan tempts man with the wish that there is no resurrection or recompensing for one’s deeds.

Subsequently, Satan says, that he will command people to slit the ears of the cattle. Al-batk (to cut) means to slit, and Al-an'am (the cattle) are the camels, cows and sheep. In this context, Al-batk means slitting the ears of these animals. The Quran says that Al-An'am (the cattle) are eight azwaj (mates): two of the sheep, two of goats, two of camels and two of cows: 'And of the cattle He has created eight mates - of the sheep two, and of the goats two. Say, "Is it the two males He has forbidden or the two females or that which the wombs of the two females contain? Inform me with knowledge if you are truthful." And of the camels two, and of the oxen two. Say, "Is it the two males that He has forbidden or the two females or that which the wombs of the two females contain? Were you present when Allah enjoined this on you? "' (al-An'am: 143, 144) Had the Arabic word zawj (mate) referred to two, this would have meant that the aforementioned verses refer to four only. But the expression of the Quran demonstrates that we ought to use our discretion to understand that the word zawj (mate) does not refer to two things. Rather, it refers to one member of certain species that is always associated with a like member of its species. For instance, we refer to one part of the pair of shoes as zawj (mate) because it must have another one to complement it. Another example is the Arabic word *taw'am (*twin) which we commonly think that it refers to each set of twins, while it really refers to only one of them. Therefore, if we want to refer to both of them, we ought to use the dual form taw'aman (twins).

There is a story underlying why Allah Glorified is He has mentioned that one among the plans of Satan is to order of people to slit the ears of the cattle. We know that those who take advantage of the ways in which people go astray attribute false temporal powers to themselves in order to keep others dependent on them only. In this respect, those who took care of idols used to serve them; however, no one noticed that it is quite asinine to accept the idea that humans take care of gods. The 'God' by definition sustains his creatures, looks after them and provides them with the means required to support their existence. Thus, the people who laid such a claim took advantage of the carelessness of other humans; they only served these idols to take advantage of this position. Normally, devils from amongst humans and Jinn also took advantage of the carelessness of people; they, therefore, used to sit inside idols and speak so that these servants may use such an incident as proof to promote idol-worshipping. Accordingly, the fools would then bring camels, cows and sheep to sacrifice them not knowing that these servants ultimately eat their sacrifices. This is why those servants were mostly fat and had big bellies. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, 'Allah hates the fat rabbi.'(1) Such a rabbi finds it easy to usurp and take advantage of the wealth of other people. Thus, he takes advantage of the misled people, and furthermore, he wants this state of carelessness in the people to continue and perpetuates it into continuing. He is similar to the drug dealer who wants as many people as possible to take drugs and gets upset whenever the police wage campaigns against the drug dealing trade.

The same applies to any trader in the black market; he would be upset if the supply of commodities suffices the need of the people. There are always people who benefit from a given form of corruption. This is why those who take advantage of corruption panic and get upset when they see any kind of a reformation initiative and do their best to make corruption persist. For this reason, the servants of idols used to stand behind the idols and produce sounds so that they can make the fools who believe them acquiesce to their demands. Similarly, magicians sometimes say to the family of a patient that the patient is possessed by a genie and this genie wants them to sacrifice a she camel, or any other animal, and spill its blood.

The servants of the ka'ba used to do the same thing. They used every mean of deception and trickery to take camels, cows and sheep from the oblivious and naïve people. At that time when an owner of a camel, cow or sheep cut the ear of any of his animals, this meant that he had dedicated such a sacrifice to the idols even though only the servants of the idols, and not the idols themselves, ate the meat he sacrificed.

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says that in time He bestows upon us sustenance we randomly divide it into two kinds lawful and unlawful: 'Say, "Have you ever considered that Allah has sent down provision for you, then you make some of it unlawful and some lawful?" Say, "Has Allah permitted you that, or do you invent lies against Allah?"' (Yunus: 59) Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He also says the following: 'And of the cattle He has created eight mates - of the sheep two, and of the goats two. Say, "Is it the two males He has forbidden or the two females or that which the wombs of the two females contain? Inform me with knowledge if you are truthful."' (al-An'am: 143)

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Wahidi -weak Hadith

So what is proscribed: will it be either pair of males, or pair of females or what the wombs of a pair of females contain?

None of the foregoing is proscribed; they are all created by the Almighty Allah and provided by Him as an admissible form of livelihood. Furthermore, every bounty of Allah the Almighty knows its function and benefits that come from it. For instance, in the Egyptian countryside, we observe that when a cow, a buffalo or a sheep is strangled with a rope or gets sick, the animal sleeps and extends its neck. When the animal does so, people say, 'It asks to serve the admissible purpose for which the Almighty Allah created it.' It is as if the animal is telling its owner, 'Go ahead and slaughter me so that you may benefit yourself from my meat.' For instance, we may wonder why a donkey would not do the same thing. Is it not because its meat is not permissible to eat. By contrast, a cow knows the uses it represents for human beings; it thus extends forwards its neck as demanding to be slaughtered. We also know that it serves man during its lifetime by carrying heavy weights or producing milk, fibre, wool and hair. Therefore, once it senses an impending danger, it extends its neck forwards as if it is asking to be slaughtered so that man can benefit himself from its meat. It is subservient to man; the animal knows this fact by nature and through inspiration.

As long as Allah Glorified is He has made all these beings subservient to us, why then should we proscribe what Allah the Almighty did not proscribe and consider inadmissible what He proscribed? However, the servants of the Ka'ba used to do everything they could to control people. In this regard, if a she-camel had given birth to four generations and then its fifth infant were male, the servants would say that was enough and they would then cut its ear. If someone subsequently found such a she-camel, he would, according to custom, know that such an animal should not be used for any purpose whether suckling, carrying weight or producing milk. However, such an animal is not kept from drinking water or eating grass. This animal is called Al-bahira and could then be taken by the servants of the Ka'ba at any time for the latter did not want to store meat. Rather, they wanted to keep the animal alive so that they can slaughter at any time they wish. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says that He has not appointed such innovations bahira, sa'ibah, wasilah or ham. (al-Ma'ida: 103)

Al-bahira then is the she-camel whose ear has been slit. This means that it has given birth to four generations and then a male at the fifth. Her owner then presents her as a gift to the idols. Al-bahira is a kind of sa'iba, yet there could also be a sa'iba, or a she-camel that did not give birth neither to four generations nor a male on the fifth time, but her owner chose to give her as a vow or a gift to the one of the idols. Such an animal is also called sa'iba since no one is allowed to take care of it. Nonetheless, it is allowed to graze in any land it likes and to drink from any source of water it desires. Furthermore, no one is allowed to take the milk it produces or even to ride it. Only the servants of the Ka'ba are allowed to take it and slaughter it whenever they need fresh meat. In addition, in case of the animal being a sheep, if it gives birth to a female, they take it to themselves, and if it gives birth to a male, they give it as a gift to their gods. However, if the sheep gives birth to both a male and a female, they do not slaughter the male; in such a case they say that such a female sheep has been good to its brother. Thus, they call her Al-wasilah since people used to keep the female animals for reproduction. It was therefore easier to give the male rather than the female as a gift to the servants of the Ka'ba. In this respect, a poet once said:

The mothers of people are self-renewing containing vessel
Whereas the fathers only provide the family lineage

We notice that the female cattle in ranches only need one male. Similarly, there may only be one or two male animals that impregnate all the females of the same species in a certain village. Children in the countryside often rejoice when cattle give birth to a male because they know that he will be fed for a little while, and then slaughtered and eaten. By contrast, children are disappointed upon learning that the offspring is a female because they know that it will be nurtured and bred, and they will not get to eat its meat.

In the past, when a cow or buffalo gave birth to both a male and a female at the same time, they used not to slaughter the male and would say that the newly born female has redeemed its brother. Thus, the male guarantees his life and is afterwards used to impregnate the rest of the females. The female that redeems its brother is called Al-wasilah.

We thus learn that Al-bahira is the she-camel that gives birth five times with the last being a male offspring, while As-sa'iba is the animal that has been given as a vow to the idols from its owner's own accord from the very beginning. Al-wasilah is the female animal that was born at the same time with a male brother; it is said to have redeemed its brother since it provided it with protection. Al-ham is the male animal that begot ten generations; no one is allowed to ride it or use it for carrying weight. Furthermore, it cannot be kept from any source of water or eating from any grazing field. Thus, people say that this animal's back has become protected.

In our age some presumptuously claim that they are vegetarians and do not eat meat even though they may be willing to slaughter a human being and purport to be anguished when a chicken is slaughtered. To these people we say the following: 'Beware. Allah the Almighty has created these animals to be subservient to man. These animals, by their very nature, like people to utilise them.'

Among the several means of temptation that Satan uses is what Allah Glorified is He states that Satan shall say: "And assuredly I will lead them astray and assuredly I will arouse in them vain desires, and assuredly I will incite them and they will cut the ears of cattle; and assuredly I will incite them and they will alter Allah's creation." And whoever takes Satan for a friend instead of Allah, he certainly suffers a manifest loss.' (an-Nisa': 119) We have learnt that the old Arabs used to do so to please the servants of the idols. These servants had a vested interest in retaining these idols and continuing to make people sacrifice to them. For this reason, I always say, 'The worst thing that could happen to a religious man is for him to get attached to worldly interests. In such a case, there is fear that he would forge religion to serve his interests.'

Among the other means of temptation that Satan employs is what the Almighty Allah Glorified is He states that Satan shall say: 'I will incite them and they will alter Allah's creation.' (an-Nisa': 119) Allah Glorified is He has revealed to us the way in which Satan acquired power over these people despite the fact that all power is exclusively Allah's. However, we still wonder how they changed Allah's creation even though He created everything.

Creation, as we know, is bringing something into existence out of nothing. The Almighty Allah created everything and assigned a specific function to every being since He undertook such a creation for a wise purpose. This purpose eternally exists in the knowledge of Allah the Almighty, and to Him belongs the highest attribute. We may come across new industrial innovations in the market like washing machines. We know that the one who designed them did so for the purpose of comforting people. In all likelihood, he thought about this goal before he designed and manufactured the machine that could fulfil the task of sparing people the effort of manually washing their laundry. The same holds for the one who invented the loudspeaker. He aimed at a specific target at the beginning, viz. to make the sound reach those standing at a distance from the source that emitted it. Afterwards he embarked on his research and experiments in order to attain his purpose and goal. Allah Glorified is He created every creature of His for a specific purpose. If we thus use every creature to fulfil the purpose for which it has been created, we will not slip into the hazard of changing Allah's creation. By contrast, if we use a creature for a purpose other than that for which Allah created it, we will be changing His creation. To further understand what Allah means by creation in this verse; let us seek the analogous uses of the same word in the Quran. We may indeed realise that the Quran is self-explanatory. Allah Glorified is He here says that Satan shall say: 'Assuredly I will incite them and they will alter Allah's creation.' (an-Nisa': 119) However, He says the following in a different place: '… verily, His is all creation and all command…' (al-A'raf: 54).

We see the process of creation in all beings around us, but there are other forms of creation that we do not see. The command in the previously mentioned verse refers to the saying of Allah Glorified is He: '…"Be" – and it is."' (Ya Sin: 82)

Another verse further elucidates this point Allah the Almighty says that it is a fitrah (natural inclination) upon which He has created all people. No change should there be in the creation of Allah: 'So set your face to the service of religion with single-minded devotion. And follow the nature made by Allah, the nature according to which He has fashioned mankind. There is no altering the creation of Allah. That is the right religion - but most men know not.' (ar-Rum: 30)

This means that Allah Glorified is He has endowed all creation with fitrah, or a natural inclination. If someone tries to change this inclination, he would be changing Allah's creation. So what is natural inclination? It is the primordial purity of the human nature and soul. For instance, if someone grows up in an environment that does not lie, this person will never know what lying is. Similarly, if someone is raised in an environment wherein no one steals, this person will not know what stealing is. Man learns misdemeanours from social deficiency and corruption. The evidence of this is that the phenomenon of stealing vanished in the countries that implemented the Islamic law since cutting the hands of those who stole was carried out. This made a new generation that did not know stealing emerged in these countries. Thus, if you are in any of these countries and you leave something, you will come back and find it where you left it. This is a sign of sound natural inclination. The proof that natural inclination is originally good is that we find that those who do something and are at odds with it, they always try to hide it and secretly sneak to do it since they know that this is not right.

I have set the example of a man who gazes at his wife. This man may allow all his desires to rejoice at the view of his wife. However, Allah forbid, if this same man wants to sneak a glance at a woman that Allah forbade him to look at, he shies away from other people. Thus, man always tends to be pretentious whenever he commits a deed that he is at odds with and one that is contrary to his natural inclination. Pretension is to do something outside the realm of natural inclination; altering anything related to natural inclination is in its own right an alteration of Allah's creation.

This is often the cause of corruption. How is this so? We see that Allah Glorified is He created male and female pairs. Some men behave like women, which means that one tries to be like a woman. He thus acts like a woman and puts on women's makeup. Such a person wants to change Allah's creation. Similarly, a woman may want to become a man. This woman also wants to change Allah's creation. For this reason, a great scientist who is both a poet and colleague of mine, Dr. Hassan Gad may Allah the Almighty endow him good health noted the phenomenon of those who try to change Allah's creation and composed a famous poem in which he said:

The effeminate men have caused me so much confusion
That I can no longer distinguish between a girl and a boy

In this verse, the poet declares his confusion because he cannot identify the difference between a boy and a girl. Both of them pass for either a woman or an effeminate man; the cause of such confusion is that boys act like girls, and vice versa, even though each of them possesses the characteristics typical of his gender and sets him apart from the other kind. Some women have operations to change the way they look, like pulling out some of the eyebrow hair and re-drawing it using a coloured pen. However, this attempt is often ruined when new hair grows. As much as she does this, such a woman turns herself into an ugly creature, completely forgetting that beauty consists in the harmony of the facial features. For instance, the secret of a woman's beauty may reside in the thickness of her eyebrow. Alternatively, the secret of her beauty may consist in the width of her mouth or the length of her nose.

We have indeed heard that if the nose of Cleopatra had been short, history would have changed. Allah Glorified is He has endowed his servants with diverse tastes in proportion to the difference in creation. In daily life, we may come across a young man who proposes to a girl, and then either he does not find her appealing or he does not appeal to her. Subsequently, another young man may propose to the same girl, and both of them may like each other. Allah the Almighty is the One Who creates the flux of emotional harmony and makes it a cause for attraction among people. Thus in trying to change the way Allah created her, a girl may disturb the emotional harmony that He created. A woman may want the colour of her cheeks to be like that of roses; thus, she puts on a number of makeup powders to achieve this purpose. However, does not this woman realise that her husband and relatives are fully aware that she acquired such a colour through the use of external materials? What would be her stance when her husband finds out in the morning that the colours she used have ruined the colour of her complexion? Furthermore, why did not she consider the way she would look as she grows older and how these powders continue to block the pores on her skin, keeping them from breathing? Such a woman gradually starts to look like a monkey due to her bad actions, Allah forbid! This is her punishment because she changed Allah's creation through her bad actions.

The same holds for the women who coat their nails with layers of coloured plastic they add on them. However, does any of these women really think that any man would possibly think that this is the natural colour of her fingernails? Since Allah created them, fingernails have had a certain colour that He decreed due to His wisdom. Therefore, these fingernails follow a specific order. So, why would a woman deprive her own fingernails from natural life and from breathing since nails also breathe. Someone may claim that it is permissible for women to perform ablution after polishing their nails. To such a person I say to fear Allah for these are not dyes. If they were dyes, they would have permeated the skin or the fingernail. Furthermore, such colour would not be removed unless the skin or the fingernail is itself removed, as in the case of henna. In such cases, water can reach the skin. By contrast, polish forms a plastic layer on the fingernail that cannot be removed except with a chemical substance. Therefore, polish is a kind of painting and not merely a dye. Using it keeps water from reaching the skin while washing or performing ablution.

The woman who does so deceives herself and the one who may admire or is attracted to her. We have to know that Allah Glorified is He wants to adjust people's temperament in the world by giving man both shelter and pleasure in an emotionally and rationally balanced way. If Allah the Almighty wanted the cheeks of females to be aflame with redness to rouse the desires of men, He would have created them this way. However, Allah Glorified is He wanted cheeks to look natural so that it would rouse the desire of men in proportion to the strength they possess. Furthermore, when a woman grows old, her beauty starts to fade away in proportion to the diminishing of the power of man. Allah gives each person what is commensurate with his capacity so that the matter would not degenerate into a mere process of rousing desires.

There is a difference between creating an outlet for desires and exciting and kindling these desires. Makeup and all other accessories are aimed at changing Allah's creation. This also holds true for the woman or the man who makes a tattoo; he or she changes the creation of Allah. If Allah Glorified is He knew that such things would increase beauty, he would have done them. So, they will change the creation of Allah just like what Satan says in (an-Nisa': 119). Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says that he who takes Satan as supporter instead of Allah, has certainly sustained a clear loss: 'And whoever takes Satan for a friend instead of Allah, he certainly suffers a manifest loss.' (an-Nisa': 119) The one who takes Satan as his master is the one who follows him and tries to get closer to him. However, whoever does so chooses the weaker over and above the better one, even though the former leads him to perdition and makes him inevitably incur a clear and comprehensive loss from all levels. Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

يَعِدُهُمْ وَيُمَنِّيهِمْ وَمَا يَعِدُهُمُ ٱلشَّيْطَٰنُ إِلَّا غُرُورًا ﴿١٢٠﴾ he makes them promises and raises false hopes, but Satan's promises are nothing but delusion [120]

(The Quran, an-Nisa': 120)

This means that Satan pledges false promises to his allies by telling those things that make them happy. A promise, by definition, is telling someone something that he would be pleased to find.

We can find an example illustrative of this in day-to-day life. Each one of us cherishes the wealth he accumulates through his labour and exertion. On the apparent level, giving alms to the poor detracts from this wealth. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says that Satan threatens you with the prospect of poverty: 'Satan threatens you with poverty and enjoins upon you what is foul, whereas Allah promises you forgiveness from Himself and bounty…' (al-Baqara: 268). Why is this so? The reason is that Satan whispers to the owner of the wealth by saying, 'If you give part of your wealth as alms to the poor, your wealth will be diminished.' However, whoever succumbs to the whispers of Satan is doomed because the latter leads him to perdition. In addition Satan whispers to man with false wishes and fills them with vain desires: 'Satan promises them and rouses desire in them. But Satan does not promise them except delusion.' (an-Nisa': 120) A good example is what a proud man once sarcastically said to his brother, Allah forbid, 'I do not think that the Hour will occur. And even if

I should be brought back to my Lord, I will surely find better than this as a return.' (al-Kahf: 36)

The boastful man says, ‘If Allah has chosen to give me in this worldly life, and if Allah’s mission is to give constantly, then, He, my Lord, will certainly multiply what He has given me in this world many times over in the Afterlife.’ The underlying rationale is that the one who is happy in the worldly life will surely be happy in the Afterlife. So how did Allah recompense this man?

The boastful man witnessed the collapse of his garden and realised the dismal fate that arrogance can ultimately lead to. This is due to the fact that he acceded to the false promises of Satan. The promises of Satan are all delusive: 'But Satan does not promise them except delusion.' (an-Nisa’: 120) However, what is Al-ghurur (deluding the mind) in this context? There are two morphologically similar words: ghurur and gharur. The former is the thing that is presented to you as if it were real even though it is, in fact, an illusion, while the latter refers to the one who actually presents an illusion as if it were real. For this reason Al-ghurur is Satan himself because he beautifies an illusion for man and misguides him as much as a mirage does. When man sees the phenomenon of light bending, he illusively thinks that he sees water on the horizon. In this respect, the True Lord says: 'like a mirage in a low land which a thirsty one thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing but finds Allah before Him, and He will pay him in full his due; and Allah is swift in account.' (an-Nur: 39)

The same holds for Al-ghurur when the devil beautifies something for man and deludes him into believing that he will take pleasure in it. However, when man pursues it, he realises that it is not true. He might actually discover that it is opposite of what he had expected. For this reason, the True Lord decisively explains to us the deeds of disbelievers when he says: 'But those who disbelieved - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland which a thirsty one thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing but finds Allah before Him, and He will pay him in full his due; and Allah is swift in account.' (an-Nur: 39) The disbeliever is thus astounded by the real existence of Allah Glorified is He in whom he had no faith. In turn, he faces two calamities: the calamity of his disappointment after heading towards water that does not exist and the calamity of finding out that the One God, Allah, is real and will judge him for his denial and infidelity. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And We will proceed to what they have done of deeds, so We shall render them as scattered floating dust.' (al-Furqan: 23)

Someone might claim to be a humanist and feel that he speaks logically, and he would say accordingly, ‘Is it possible that all those who contributed to humanity with such useful inventions are doomed to torment?’ To such a person we give the following reply, ‘They are going to be recompensed for their infidelity since each of them had lived and acted without bearing Allah in his mind. Each of them accomplished all these great feats using his mind, genius and creativity to serve humanity; he is thus honoured by humanity. He should thus seek his reward from the one for whom he worked, and no one else.' The following Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him applies to them: It has been related by Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him that he heard the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him say, 'The first one to be tried on the Day of Judgment is a man who ostensibly died as a martyr. He will be brought forth and shown the bounties Allah conferred upon him, which he in turn recognises them. Allah will then ask him, "What did you do with Allah’s bounties? " He will answer, "I fought in Your cause until I died as a martyr." The True Lord will then tell him, "You lie. You fought so that people would say that you are bold, and so they did say this about you." The True Lord will then order him to be dragged on his face until he is thrown in the Fire. Afterwards, a man who acquired knowledge taught it and read the Quran will then be brought forth. He will be shown the bounties Allah bestowed upon him. Upon recognising these bounties, Allah will ask him, "What did you do with these bounties? "He will then answer, "I acquired knowledge, dispensed it and read the Quran for Allah’s cause." The True Lord will say, "You lie. You sought knowledge so that people would say that you are a scholar and that you read the Quran, and so they did say this about you." Allah will order him to be dragged on his face until he is thrown in the fire. Afterward, a man upon whom Allah generously dispensed his bounties and wealth will then be brought forth. He will then be shown all the bounties that Allah had bestowed upon him, which he in turn will recognise. He will be asked by Allah, "What did you do with these bounties? "He will answer, "I spent them in every possible way You like for Your cause." The True Lord will then say, "You lie. You spent this money so that people would say that you are generous, and so they did say this about you." The True Lord will then order him to be dragged on his face until he is thrown in the Fire.'(1)

Thus Allah the Exalted did not deny them the reward for what they did in the worldly life. They were honoured in this worldly life. Allah Glorified is He then distributed the fruits of their talents amongst those who are concerned with Allah. For this reason, one may find an illiterate Muslim taking a plane to perform pilgrimage to the House of Allah the Almighty. He also records speeches and talks on matters related to faith on tapes so that those who did not attend this event could listen to these speeches. Thus, disbelievers are subservient to believers since through their inventions, they allow believers to benefit from their scientific discoveries. Yet, believers are also required to pursue all worldly causes and means to deserve Allah’s generosity regarding specifically the bounty of gaining knowledge. Indeed, this is their duty, and they would be sinful if they do not undertake it so that they would not be dependent on others and as a result, be abjectly subordinate to them. 'But Satan does not promise them except delusion.' (an-Nisa’: 120) So what is the fate of those who are deluded by Satan in the Afterlife? Allah the Exalted says:

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ مَأْوَىٰهُمْ جَهَنَّمُ وَلَا يَجِدُونَ عَنْهَا مَحِيصًا ﴿١٢١﴾

Such people will have Hell for their home and will find no escape from it [121] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 121)

The word ma’wa (abode) means the place to which one is compelled, or drawn to resort in. Will this compulsion be by way of pulling or pushing? Allah Glorified is He says that the Fire will say: 'Are there any more?’ (Qaf: 30). It is as if the fire will pull in its inhabitants, and they will find no way to escape from it. This means that there is no way to escape, avoid or bypass the fire. It is as though any of them, like in our world of change (everything in our worldly life is in a state of change), can escape from another created being.

(1) The Hadith is related by Imaam Muslim in his book on Jihad and is also related by An-Nasa’i, At-Tirmidhi and Ibn Majah.

However, when the matter is all up to Allah’s decree, this means that there is no escape: 'To whom belongs [all] sovereignty this Day? To Allah, the One, the Subduer (of all).' (Ghafir: 16)

The True Lord also describes the opposite of this case:

وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ سَنُدۡخِلُهُمۡ جَنَّٰتٖ تَجۡرِي مِن تَحۡتِهَا
ٱلۡأَنۡهَٰرُ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَآ أَبَدٗاۖ وَعۡدَ ٱللَّهِ حَقّٗاۚ وَمَنۡ أَصۡدَقُ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ قِيلٗا ﴿١٢٢﴾

but We shall admit those who believe and do good deeds into Gardens graced with flowing streams, there to remain for ever – a true promise from God. Who speaks more truly than God? [122]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 122)

When Allah Glorified is He tells us about disbelievers and their punishment, our minds prepare to learn about the opposite case. If the punishment of disbelievers repels man from becoming one, the soul of the listener is then attracted to the opposite case, viz. the reward of believers who do good things. Allah Glorified is He says in a previous verse: 'We will give him a mighty reward.' (an-Nisa’: 114)

In this context, Allah the Exalted says: 'We will admit them to gardens beneath which rivers flow.' (an-Nisa’: 122) The one who has faith and confidence in Allah knows that no distance can preclude him from His bounty. A good example of this is when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him once asked one of the Companions named Al-Harith ibn Malik Al-Ansari Allah be pleased with him the following question, 'In what state do you find yourself when you woke up today?’ So Al-Harith Allah be pleased with him replied, ‘I have found myself to be a true believer.’ The companion thus made a strong claim, namely having true faith. For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Think well over what you say then. Everything has a truth. So what is the truth of faith?’ The Companion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then answered, ‘My soul has become disinterested in the world. I thus stay awake to pray all night and keep thirsty all day (by fasting). It is as if I see the Throne of the Lord in front of me and that I actually see the dwellers of heaven visiting each other and those of fire clamouring in it.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then said, 'O, Harith, you have attained true knowledge so stick to it.' He repeated the statement three times.(1)

In some places, the True Lord uses sa (shall), and sometimes says sawfa (shall) before the verb. So, we have to recognise that each particle and proposition that qualifies a verb has a certain meaning and implication and that everything that Allah the Exalted gives is beautiful. In this verse, He uses sa in the word sanudkhiluhum (We will admit them to): 'But the ones who believe and do righteous deeds. We will admit them to gardens beneath which rivers flow' (an-Nisa': 122).

When the word janna is used in a generic sense, this means, as we said before, that it refers to the heaven in the Afterlife, the true heaven. By contrast, the plants and trees of the worldly janna, or garden, may fade away and grow dry; furthermore, worldly gardens may be affected by droughts. However, the plants in paradise (the garden of the Afterlife) eternally bear fruits. Yet, if the word janna is not used in an absolute generic sense but was qualified and limited by some factor, then it means something else as is the case for the following saying of the True Lord: 'Indeed, We have tried them as We tried the owners of the garden, when they swore to cut its fruit in the [early] morning.' (al-Qalam: 17) The same holds for the saying of Allah Glorified is He: '… is as the parable of a garden on an elevated ground, upon which heavy rain falls…' (al-Baqara: 265). The garden on an elevated ground is a garden located on higher land. It has certain qualities that go beyond the knowledge attained by modern science. The reason is that if the land on which the garden is located is high, underground water cannot ruin the roots of the plants grown in it. The plants in this garden thus continue to be green. Allah Glorified is He says the following about such a garden: '… and thereupon it brings forth its fruit twofold…' (al-Baqara: 265).

Furthermore, the True Lord adds that it is located on high land and that it is watered by rainstorms from above or from soft rain. Therefore, it takes the water it needs from the rain directly to the roots and uses water from soft rain to wash the leaves. All of this is said about such a garden.

(1) Related by At-Tabarani in (Al-kabir) and Abu Na'im in (al-hilya)... But the Hadith has been considered weak by Ad-Darqatni and Ibn Habban

However, in this verse, the True Lord says: 'gardens beneath which rivers flow' (an-Nisa': 122). Allah the Almighty assures us that such a garden will keep its greenness and freshness, for the main factor that affects the greenness of a garden is the shortage of water that ultimately causes green plants to fade.

We find that in some instances the Quran says, 'gardens with flowing streams for them' (at-Tawba: 100) which indicates that the source of water is distant. In other instances, the Quran says, 'gardens beneath which rivers flow' (an-Nisa': 122) which indicates that no one is capable of blocking the source of water since rivers run and emanate underneath them. The True Lord promises eternity in heaven to believers who do good deeds; eternity exists for a long time. Therefore, when Allah Glorified is He says, 'wherein they will abide forever' (an-Nisa': 122), this means that abiding in heaven is not only long but completely permanent.

Who pledges this promise?'[It is] the promise of Allah, [which is] truth, and who is more truthful than Allah in statement.' (an-Nisa': 122) When the True Lord promises you, bear in mind that you are pledged a promise by the One Who no one can prevent Him from keeping His promise. However, if a fellow human promises you something, this promise may not actually happen because the said person may change his mind when it is time for him to deliver his promise. Alternatively, the one who gives you a promise may not have the capacity, ability or affluence to keep the promise he pledged to you, or his feelings may change towards you. However, Allah Glorified is He is not subject to change, and nothing falls beyond the realm of His ability. Furthermore, there is no other god beside Him that may keep Him from doing what He wills. Thus, His promise is not subject to retraction or nullification; it is certain that it will be fulfilled. In this context when Allah Glorified is He says, '[It is] the promise of Allah, [which is] truth, and who is more truthful than Allah in statement' (an-Nisa': 122), He tells every one of us, 'I do not intend to ask you about anything.' The interrogative form was used in order to encourage the answer from Allah's creation by way of asserting the truth of what Allah the Exalted says; for ultimately whose word could be truer than that of His?

The answer elicited from Allah's creation will be, 'It is impossible. Allah is exalted over this.' No one's statement could be truer than Allah's since whoever lies does so in order to get something that he would not be able to receive were he to speak the truth. Alternatively, one may lie because he fears the one to whom he lies. However, Allah Glorified is He transcends all this. Thus, if He says anything, it must be true. Subsequently, the True Lord says:

لَّيْسَ بِأَمَانِيِّكُمْ وَلَآ أَمَانِيِّ أَهْلِ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ ۗ مَن يَعْمَلْ سُوٓءًا
يُجْزَ بِهِۦ وَلَا يَجِدْ لَهُۥ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ وَلِيًّا وَلَا نَصِيرًا ﴿١٢٣﴾

It will not be according to your hopes or those of the People of the Book: anyone who does wrong will be requited for it and will find no one to protect or help him against God [123] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 123)

A wish, as we learnt, means that one aspires to something that is pleasurable and joyful without actually working for attaining it. When the True Lord Glorified is He appointed man as His vicegerent on earth, He commanded him to preserve every good aspect of being; accordingly, man must not corrupt what is actually already good. If someone aspires to something that brings him happiness, he must thereby make what is good even better.

Let us put forth an example to illustrate this point. Assume that there is a well of water whereof people drink. This well has sides, ends and edges. If someone approaches the well and throws the dust accumulated around the edges of it into it for the purpose of filling it up, it will be ruined. On the contrast, the one who wants the well to continue to be useful leaves it as it is. Thus, he lets what is useful continue to be so. However, if someone aspires to do something useful for both himself and others, he must make what is already useful even more so. For instance, he may erect walls of brick on the sides of the well to keep dust from falling into the water or at least cover the well. If someone aspires to do more good and is really concerned about the comfort of the people, he may try to save them the trip to the well for the purpose of filling their buckets with water. He may think of installing a pump to raise the water to a high tank. He may then extend pipes from this tank to deliver water to the houses. Every member of the community may then take his share of water in the comfort of his own home. The person who does any of these makes what is good even better.

However, if one aspires to accomplish something pleasurable without exerting any effort, then his wishes are delusive. Furthermore, if someone continues to dream about his wishes without actually devising a plan to achieve them, then the fruit of these wishes will only be disappointment and retrogression. So, a wish means to aspire to a pleasurable goal without actually working towards achieving such a goal. We know that the True Lord provided us with the means for achieving every goal we may pursue in our worldly life; we should also bear in mind that the True Lord says: 'So, he followed a course.' (al-Kahf: 85)

This means that man is required to make things that enable him to improve the conditions of his life on earth. Allah the Almighty guaranteed for man, His vicegerent on earth, all the necessities of life. Therefore, when man seeks luxury and pleasure, he should work for them. For instance, the True Lord lets rain fall from the sky, the water from the rain then flows in certain channels, which the rain has dug for itself. However, these channels may contain dust or mud; for this reason, man distils the water and then pumps it into tanks so that it reaches him in his home. Thus, instead of drinking water directly from a river, man prepares for himself a beautiful glass of water. First, man made this cup out of pottery and then out of other materials like copper and then glass. We thereby see that any form of luxury needs work that leads to it; wishing is never enough.

The same holds for the case of being affiliated with the religion. Being affiliated with the religion does not simply mean being so in a merely formal way. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to judge amongst all mankind. No one may merely affiliate himself just outwardly in Islam simply to enjoy its privileges and distinguish himself from the rest of Allah's creation who follow other religions. This is not the case, for man is controlled by the religion which he embraces, and a Muslim is the first to be controlled by his religion.

This is why Allah the Exalted says: '(This) shall not be in accordance with your vain desires…' (an-Nisa': 123). To whom is this statement addressing?

If this statement is addressing believers, the True Lord thus explains to them, 'Believers, do not think that every matter of your concern will be in accordance with your vain desires. Rather, you should work to realise your desires. Your affiliation with Islam does not exempt you from having to work.' Indeed, there are many people who go through life without doing a single good deed. When they are then asked, why they live without doing any work, they give the following reply, 'We think well of Allah.' To those who think like this, Al-Hasan Al-Basri Allah be pleased with him says, 'Faith does not consist of wishing and vain desires. Rather, faith is based on what is truly embraced by one's heart and vindicated through his actions. There are people who are indeed so deluded by the wish that Allah will forgive them to the extent that they left life without having a single good deed recorded for them. They just say, We think well of Allah, but they have lied about this claim, for if they had thought well of Allah, they would have worked well for His cause.'

Allah Glorified is He says about these people: '(This) shall not be in accordance with your vain desires…' (an-Nisa': 123). On the contrast, if this statement were addressing non-believers, then it would indicate that the True Lord did not deny the bounties of this world to those who exploit the causes and means to achieve their goals even if they do not have faith. Recompensing in the Afterlife is the promise by Allah the Almighty pledged to believers who do good deeds; it is a true promise to admit them into heaven. Qualifying for this promise cannot be achieved by mere wishing; rather, attaining will only be achieved through work and exertion.

Therefore, the audience addressed by the statement '(This) shall not be in accordance with your vain desires…' (an-Nisa': 123) could also encompass the disbelievers, the hypocrites and the people of the Book. The disbelievers used to have wishes as well. For example, those who denied resurrection used to say: 'And I do not think the hour will come, and even if I am returned to my Lord I will most certainly find a returning place better than this.' (al-Kahf: 36) These are the wishes of disbelievers. Furthermore, this promise of being admitted to heaven does not include the people of the Book. The True Lord informed us about their wishes: 'And they say: "None shall enter paradise except he who is a Jew or a Christian."' (al-Baqara: 111)

They also said: 'And they say: Fire shall not touch us but for a few days.' (al-Baqara: 80) All of these are vain desires since the path set by Allah the Exalted is one and applies to all people. Whoever is affiliated with Islam, the seal of all religions, must work. The principle according to which Allah the Almighty rules all His creation is clearly explained in His saying: 'whoever does evil, he shall be requited with it, and besides Allah he will find for himself neither a guardian nor a helper.' (an-Nisa': 123)

Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him says, 'When this verse was revealed, the Muslims found it rather burdensome. So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told them, "Follow the right path strictly and do good deeds properly, sincerely and moderately, for every affliction that befalls a Muslim is an expiation for him, even the pricking of a thorn or stumbling on the path."'(1)

Some scholars said that 'evil' in this aforementioned verse refers to ascribing divinity to others beside Allah because He has pledged to forgive some sins. They attributed their argument to the saying of the True Lord: 'Thus do we recompense every ungrateful one.' (Fatir: 36). It is as if painful punishment applies only for disbelievers, whereas believers are elevated by their faith to a high status so that Allah the Almighty accepts their repentance and forgives them. The True Lord Glorified is He made the time span between every two consecutive prayers an atonement for any sin committed during this time. Furthermore Allah the Exalted has also decreed that the time span between every two consecutive Friday Prayers would be a chance to atone for whatever sins committed during this period of time. In addition, Allah Glorified is He made pilgrimage the atonement for all the sins committed prior to it. All of these are privileges that Allah the Exalted grants to believers. By contrast, the punishment of disbelievers is conveyed through the following: 'whoever does evil, he shall be requited with it, and besides Allah he will find for himself neither a guardian nor a helper.' (an-Nisa': 123) It is not said about someone who could not find something, unless he actually searched for it and then could not find it. No human is by himself self-sufficient. Therefore, let whoever does evil search for someone to succour or help him; he will find none.

(1) Related by Muslim, Ahmad, At-Tirmidhi and An-Nasa'i based on what was related by Sufyan ibn Ayina

Al-waly, or guardian, is the one who is both close to a person and protects him; similarly, an-nasir, or helper, is the supporter or advocate of another person. No one gets close to person unless he loves him. When a strong person loves another who is weak, then he is capable of defending and supporting the latter.

However, why did the True Lord mention both Al-waly and an-nasir? Al-waly, as we learnt, is the one who is both close to another person and protects him. However, the word nasir indicates that there are fights and antagonism between those who believe and those who do not. Furthermore, it indicates that there is a grand power that man may think is not concerned for him as long as he lives in peace and prosperity; however, when such power knows that a believer has enemies, it comes forth to support him. On the other hand, a disbeliever will never find a supporter or an advocate, and he will not find anyone willing to come close to him or to support him even if events turn against him. When events turn against a person, people tend to sympathise with this person and hasten to support him. However, no one is capable of supporting another person against Allah the Exalted. Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَن يَعۡمَلۡ مِنَ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ مِن ذَكَرٍ أَوۡ أُنثَىٰ وَهُوَ مُؤۡمِنٞ
فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ يَدۡخُلُونَ ٱلۡجَنَّةَ وَلَا يُظۡلَمُونَ نَقِيرٗا ﴿١٢٤﴾

anyone, male or female, who does good deeds and is a believer, will enter Paradise and will not be wronged by as much as the dip in a date stone [124] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 124)

The two words 'man' and 'woman' were used here so that no one would assume that since the verb assumed a male declension, then women would be exempt from it. In many cases, rulings that apply to women are subsumed under rulings decreed for men. This indicates that matters related to women are basically concealed.

Yet, Allah Glorified is He explicitly refers to women whenever there is a need for it: 'and whoever does [whatever he can] of righteous deeds, whether male or female…' (an-Nisa': 124). Allah the Almighty used the preposition min, or 'of', to indicate that it is a portion of the whole set of righteous deeds. Thus, He says, 'And whoever does [whatever he can] of righteous deeds…' (an-Nisa': 124) and did not say, 'who does righteous deeds' since He knows His creation well. No human being is capable of doing every righteous deed; each one does as many good deeds as he can. Every believer is thus required to do as many righteous deeds as his capabilities and talents would enable him to do.

The first of good deeds is to let the good things continue to be good. Letting a good continue to be good means that a believer must not corrupt anything good; this is the first rank of righteous deeds. Subsequently, one may elevate to higher levels of good deeds that go in accordance with his mission as Allah's vicegerent on earth. Every deed that positively assists man to undertake his mission as Allah's vicegerent on earth is a righteous deed. For instance, the one who paves a road to relieve people of exhaustion does a righteous, or good, deed. Preparing means of transportation that carry people to their destinations is also a good deed. Furthermore, those who work so that people's thought would not be constantly preoccupied with securing the necessities of life also do a good deed.

Everything that facilitates life is similarly a good deed. Man may thus do good deeds even if he does not have faith in Allah Glorified is He like many scientists of advanced countries who do not believe in one God, Allah. Similarly, atheistic scientists may do things that are beneficial for man like paving roads and manufacturing machines that benefit people. These scientists may have been driven to accomplish these feats out of their aspiration for scientific discovery; each of them of wants to prove that he has served humanity by making such and such discoveries and such and such inventions. Thus, they do good deeds even though they are not believers. For this reason, these scientists will be rewarded by the humanity they served, but they will not be rewarded by Allah.

In contrast, any believer who does a good deed is explicitly promised a reward which is stated by the following: 'And whoever does [whatever he can] of righteous deeds, whether male or female, while being a believer - those will enter Paradise and will not be wronged, [even as much as] the speck on a date seed.' (an-Nisa': 124)

Some may say that ‘not wronging’, concerning the part of Allah, applies to those who do good deeds and those who do evil deeds. Therefore, there are some who argue that those who do evil deeds are the ones who deserve to be punished and punishment, in this case, does not evolve any wronging or injustice. The True Lord says: 'the punishment of an evil is the like of it.' (Yunus: 27)

Whoever does a good deed receives a tenfold reward for it. The reward may even be seven hundred folds; this is Allah’s Grace which is unconstrained and infinite. So, how come does Allah Glorified is He say in this context, 'and will not be wronged, [even as much as] the speck on a date seed' (an-Nisa’: 124) when the good reward they were granted was multiplied and redoubled? In this respect, we say the following, 'Gracious giving is not incumbent on any of Allah’s created beings.' For example, someone may hire a worker and agree to give him a hundred pounds as a monthly salary. He may then give him fifty or hundred pounds as a bonus in addition to his salary in a certain month and then only give him his salary in another month. Giving such a bonus is a gracious endowment on the part of the employer. People may retract their endowments, but the case is diametrically different when it comes to Allah’s Grace, for it is unalterable. This is the meaning of 'and will not be wronged, [even as much as] the speck on a date seed.' (an-Nisa’: 124) Allah Glorified is He does not merely extend the reward in strict proportionality to the good deed performed; rather, He may multiply the reward tenfold or may even raise it to seven hundred fold. In addition Allah the Exalted never retracts His Grace; such a retraction, on His part, would be a form of wronging His servants. Therefore, Allah’s Grace and bounties cannot be compared to human's grace and bounties. Humans may retract or change their mind about what they were planning to generously give, but Allah the Exalted would not ever retract His Grace. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say: In the grace of Allah and in His mercy- in that they should rejoice; it is better than that which they gather.' (Yunus: 58)

Those who do righteous deeds while they believe, are admitted into heaven in accordance with the saying of Allah Glorified is He: 'those will enter Paradise and will not be wronged, [even as much as] the speck on a date seed.' (an-Nisa’: 124). An-Naqir is the speck in the back of a date-stone; it is something very small. There is another thing called Al-fatil which is a substance that looks like a thread and is located inside the groove in a date-stone. There is a third thing which looks like a paper that covers the date stone and is called Al-qitmir.

Allah the Almighty has put forth all these parables so that we would recognise the Grace that has been bestowed on believers by the Almighty. Subsequently, the True Lord says:

وَمَنْ أَحْسَنُ دِينًا مِّمَّنْ أَسْلَمَ وَجْهَهُۥ لِلَّهِ وَهُوَ مُحْسِنٌ
وَٱتَّبَعَ مِلَّةَ إِبْرَٰهِيمَ حَنِيفًا ۗ وَٱتَّخَذَ ٱللَّهُ إِبْرَٰهِيمَ خَلِيلًا ﴿١٢٥﴾

Who could be better in religion than those who direct themselves wholly to God, do good, and follow the religion of Abraham, who was true in faith? God took Abraham as a friend [125] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 125)

When we encounter an interrogative form as in the saying of the True Lord, 'And who is better in religion than one who submits his face (entire self) to Allah while being a doer of good…' (an-Nisa': 125), proper inferring leads us to understand that whoever submits his face (or whole being) to Allah the Almighty is the one who has better faith. In our everyday conversations, we may sometimes say, 'Who could be more generous than Zayd (A male Arabic name)?' This interrogative form indicates that the interlocutor does not want to explicitly state that Zayd is the most generous person ever; he rather choses to let the listener derive this conclusion. Such an interrogative form is only used when the object of interrogation is well specified and determined. The interlocutor is thus assured that the one who hears his question will not be able to advance any other answer than the specific matter inquired about which is well specified and determined. It is as if people will only derive the answer specified by the interlocutor when they seek to answer his question. 'And who is better in religion than one who submits his entire self to Allah' (an-Nisa': 125). The answer to this query ought to be, 'No one has better faith than the one who submits his face (entire self) to Allah.' Thus, we see that Allah Glorified is He puts forth an assertive statement in the form of a question even though it would have been equally as true to use the affirmative form: '… and who is truer of word than Allah?' (an-Nisa': 122) Allah the Exalted poses the question to let us answer freely. It is as if Allah Glorified is He says: 'I am posing the question to you, human, and leave you to answer based on your consciousness and judgment.' So tell me who has better faith than the one who submits his face (entire self) to Allah the Exalted? You may try to seek an answer, but you will not find one any better than the one who submits his face (entire self) to Allah the Almighty. We should thus respond: No one is better than he who submits his entire self to Allah Glorified is He. The answer of the one addressed by the question therefore assumes the form of both an acknowledgment and confession, and confession, as we know, is the master of all evidence.

'And who is better in religion than one who submits his face (entire self) to Allah' (an-Nisa': 125). We know that if a word is used in separate contexts then it does not convey a single meaning. Rather, the context of the discourse determines the meaning of the word in each instance. Therefore, if Allah Glorified is He says: 'On the Day [some] faces will turn white and [some] faces will turn black.' (Al-'Imran: 106)

He used face because it is the first organ encountered when a human is seen, and it contains the features that gives each person his unique appearance. Indeed, we do not recognise anyone from his shoulder or his leg; rather, we recognise a person by his facial features. When we hear the saying of the True Lord, 'Everything is bound to perish, save His face' (al-Qasas: 88), we immediately wonder what Al-wajh (face) refers to in this context? If we think that it means a face like our faces, then we have slipped into a forbidden realm. Anything related to Allah Exalted and Glorified is He should be understood in light of the principle 'there is nothing like unto Him' (ash-Shura: 11). We say this so that no one would use the following argument, 'If everything will perish on Judgment Day except His face, does this imply that His hand or anything similar of His would perish?' No, this is not implied, so therefore, not a correct assumption. When the True Lord says, '...Everything is bound to perish, save His face' (al-Qasas: 88), He means His Self; Allah the Exalted transcends all forms of semblance. Allah Glorified is He also says: 'and wherever you turn, there is the face of Allah.' (al-Baqara: 115)

In this verse, wajh (face) of Allah is the direction with which He is pleased. Man orients his face towards the Ka'ba when offering his prayer. However, do not ever think that in orienting your face towards the Ka'ba, you are orienting your face towards Allah's face or countenance. Allah the Exalted is omnipresent in all being. Thus, however man orients himself, he will find Allah the Almighty. The evidence is that when we pray around the Ka'ba, the face of each of us points in a different direction from the other: one points east, another west, a third north and a fourth south. People orient themselves towards all possible directions while going around the Ka'ba and during prayers. The Ka'ba has been put in this position so that we may circumambulate it and so that it becomes the destination we use to orient ourselves towards Allah Glorified is He from all directions. 'And wherever you turn, there is the face of Allah.' (al-Baqara: 115) Face refers to the orientation with which Allah the Almighty is pleased.

In this verse, we encounter Allah's saying: 'And who is better in religion than one who submits his face (entire self) to Allah' (an-Nisa': 125). Submitting one's face (entire self) to Allah the Almighty means orienting oneself; when someone pursues an aim, goal or purpose, he orients himself towards it since man does not walk backwards. Thus, Al-wajh in this context refers to this orientation. Why did the True Lord only use Al-wajh even though a believer orients all his faculties and extremities along with his face towards Allah the Exalted? The reason is that the face is the noblest of all organs. For this reason, Allah made prostration the noblest position any of his servants can assume. The reason is that in this position man makes both his upright back and face (that he is always keen to keep clean) prostrate to Allah the Exalted. Therefore, submitting one's face to Allah Glorified is He means orienting oneself towards Him while making Him his destination.

The verb islam is derived from 'Al-islam; islam thus means relinquishing one's control of his matters over to another. When someone relinquishes control to another who is an equal to him, this is a testimony on part of the former that the latter knows better than he. One often does not relinquish control of his matters over to an equal of his unless he feels certain that the latter is a man who possesses more wisdom, knowledge and awareness than he. If one does not sense this, he will not relinquish control of his matters over to another. However, if this is the case, should not one surrender his whole being unto his Creator? Would this not be the best thing to do?

A human being may relinquish control of his own matters over to another human being whom he thinks is wise. However, is the former guaranteed that the latter will continue to be wise? Since the latter is human, he is subject to change and alteration; his heart may change or he may fail to solve an issue in which he was thought to have expertise. Relinquishing control of my own matters over to the One Who created me is the ultimate form of wisdom. For this reason, we say that Islam consists of surrendering control of your matters over to, as well as your whole being unto the One in Whom you believe to be the Strong, the fully Capable, the Wise and All Knowing Allah and Who is capable of giving sustenance at every time and place. When man submits his face to Allah Glorified is He, he will not do anything that is not oriented towards and devoted to Him: 'And who is better in religion than one who submits his face (entire self) to Allah while being a doer of good…' (an-Nisa': 125).

However, why is the word muhsin (doer of good) used in this context? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him talked about ihsan (doing good). We know that we believe in Allah the Almighty, while He is unseen to us; but the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him teaches us that when our faith elevates to the state of ihsan, then we have attained the level at which we worship Allah Glorified is He as if we see Him; however we do not see Him, yet we know that He sees us. The conversation between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and one of his Companions, Al-Harith illustrates the meaning of this point. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked Al-Harith, 'In what state did you find yourself when you woke up?' Al-Harith answered, 'I woke up as a true believer.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then said, 'Think well about what you say. Everything has a truth so what is the truth of your belief?' Al-Harith answered, 'My soul has lost interest in the world. Thus, I stay awake praying at night and spend the day thirsty because of fasting for Allah. Furthermore, I constantly feel as if I look up to the Throne of our Lord and as if I watch the inhabitants of heaven visiting each other and the people of the fire clamouring in it.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then said, 'You know the truth, Harith, so adhere to it.' He repeated this statement three times.(1)

Any good person knows that he is perpetually in the presence of Allah. For this reason, he sets a programme for himself; the summary of this programme is that he knows that Allah the Almighty never ceases to see what he does: 'He is with you wherever you are.' (al-Hadid: 4) Accordingly, he constantly remembers that he is never absent from Allah's sight, not for even a blink of an eye, so he must, therefore, be shy and feel ashamed of disobeying Him. The subject is demonstrated in a Hadith that our master 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him related when Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'Tell me about ihsan?' So, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'It means to worship Allah as if you see Him and know that if you cannot see Him, but He sees you.'(2) If you truly believe that Allah Glorified is He sees you, how could you disobey Him? You would not dare do so with another servant of Allah's who is equal to you. Then, how could you do it with Allah the Almighty?

Greatness is manifested when the True Lord says: 'And who is better in religion than one who submits his face (entire self) to Allah while being a doer of good and follows the creed of Ibrahim (Abraham), inclining towards truth? And Allah took Ibrahim (Abraham) as an intimate friend.' (an-Nisa': 125) Why does He mention the religion of Ibrahim (Abraham) specifically? The reason is that Allah says the following about Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: 'Indeed, Ibrahim (Abraham) was a nation in himself, devoutly obedient to Allah, inclining towards truth,' (an-Nahl: 120). The meaning of Ibrahim (Abraham) being an ummah, or 'a nation in himself' is that he was combined within himself all the good virtues that are rarely found altogether in one person; rather, such good qualities are often distributed amongst an entire nation. There is someone who is courageous, another who is temperate, a third who is knowledgeable and a fourth who is strong. All these qualities are rarely found in a single person; they often reflect the totality of virtues of a given nation. The True Lord Glorified is He wanted for Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him to be a consolidation of much goodness. Therefore, He describes him with His saying: 'Indeed, in fact Ibrahim (Abraham) was a nation in himself, devoutly obedient to Allah, inclining towards truth' (an-Nahl: 120).

(2) An excerpt from a long Hadith related by Imam Muslim.

In this verse Allah the Exalted says the following about the creed of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: 'and follows the religion of Ibrahim (Abraham), inclining towards truth?' (an-Nisa': 125) Creed, in this context, means religion and hanif means that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was drawn away from all that is false and inclined towards the truth. The linguistic meaning of hanif is 'to be inclined.' Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was inclined, or drawn, away from all that is false. Messengers are always sent to nations when corruption spreads and prevails amongst them. When people's societies are capable of reforming their internal corruption, the True Lord Glorified is He gives its members time and a chance to do good, but when corruption reaches its apex for a given society, the True Lord sends a messenger. When a Messenger is sent to a nation that is suffering from widespread corruption, the Messenger inclines, or draws, away from all that is false and inclines towards the truth. In such a case, being inclined itself becomes a way of being upright. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: 'and follows the creed of Ibrahim (Abraham), inclining toward truth' (an-Nisa': 125). Subsequently, the True Lord puts forth the clear purpose of following Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: 'And Allah took Ibrahim (Abraham) as an intimate friend.' (an-Nisa': 125) What factors made Ibrahim (Abraham) deserve Allah's intimate friendship, then? It is due to the fact that he followed the best religion, submitted his face (surrendered his whole being) to Allah, was a doer of good, followed the religion and inclined, or was drawn, away from all that is false. These are the factors deserving of Allah's intimate friendship, and all of them were qualities of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him.

We are told that Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him came to our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when his people threw him in the fire. Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him said, 'Ibrahim (Abraham), do you need anything?' Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said, 'If it is from you, then no, I do not need anything.’ Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him said, ‘Then, ask your Lord.’ So, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said, ‘His knowledge of my state makes it unnecessary for me to ask Him for anything.’ So, Allah Glorified is He said: 'O fire, be a means of coolness and safety for Ibrahim (Abraham).'(1) (al-Anbiya’: 69) This indicates that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him refused to ask Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him anything for himself; this is the highest form of surrendering one’s whole self-unto Allah Glorified is He.

We know that people love their children immensely. We also know that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was given Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him towards the end of his life. The True Lord made it clear to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him that He would test and try him. The test was, nonetheless, very difficult. His son neither died nor did any one kill him. Rather, his father, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was ordered by Allah the Almighty to slay him. So how many stages of ibtila (testing) did Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him go through? Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him hastened and did not hesitate to execute the command of his Lord. For this reason, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said, 'O, my son, indeed I have seen in a dream that I [must] sacrifice you, so see what you think.' (as-Saffat: 102)

Allah Glorified is He communicated this command to Ibrahim (Abraham) through a vision seen during his sleep, and not through direct revelation. Let us then consider what Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him said. He did not say, ‘O, father, do whatever you wish.’ Rather, he said: 'O, my father, do as you are commanded. You will find me, if Allah wills, of the steadfast.' (as-Saffat: 102) This means that Ismail (Ishmael) and Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them, both yielded to the command of Allah the Almighty. So what did Allah the Exalted then do?’ We called to him, "O, Ibrahim (Abraham), You have fulfilled the vision." Indeed, We thus reward the doers of good. Indeed, this was the clear trial. And We ransomed him with a great sacrifice, And We left for him [favourable mention] among later generations: Peace upon Ibrahim (Abraham). Indeed, We thus reward the doers of good. Indeed, he was of Our believing servants. And We gave him good tidings of Ishaq (Isaac), a prophet from among the righteous.' (as-Saffat: 104-112)

(1) Taken from (Al-Jami‘ Li-Ahkam Al-Quran) by Al-Qurtubi… Similar narrations in the commentary of Ibn Kathir and in (Al-Kashshaf) by Az-Zamakhshari

The True Lord not only gave Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him and then ransomed him, but He also conferred upon Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him another son, Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him. 'And Allah took Ibrahim (Abraham) as an intimate friend.' (an-Nisa’: 125)

Scholars dwelt upon investigating the meaning of the word khalil (intimate friend), mainly the qualities it implies and the expressions in which it is used. The root of the word is composed of the letters: Al-kha, Al-lam and another lam. The word Al-khal with a higher accent on Al-kha letter means a road dug in the sand; we commonly call such a road maddaq which is also usually narrow. Therefore, when two people walk on it, they do so shoulder to shoulder if they like each other very much. However, if they are not intimate, they walk in a line with one of them behind the other. For this reason, they call a couple who walk shoulder to shoulder khalil because they are in the sense infused or bound together. Khalil is also the one who completes the deficiency in his companion. Furthermore, the word khalil may also mean the one who unties and aligns himself with his friend’s characteristics, qualities and ethics. In addition, the word khalil is used to refer to the one who reveals his secrets to his friend, and conversely, his friend reveals his secrets to him. One may thus receive one of his friends in any room in his house whether in his study, salon or bedroom; such an intimate friend is called khalil. However, there may be another less intimate friend whom he would only receive in the salon or his study.

'And Allah took Ibrahim (Abraham) as an intimate friend.' (an-Nisa’: 125) This means that the True Lord eclectically selected him. Love could be shared; Allah Glorified is He loves someone, and then loves another, a third and a fourth and all the believers. He is the one who said: 'Indeed, Allah loves those who turn unto Him in repentance…' (al-Baqara: 222). Allah Glorified is He says: 'Verily, Allah loves those who are conscious of Him.' (Al-‘Imran: 76). He also teaches us: 'And Allah loves those who are patient in adversity.' (Al-‘Imran: 146) Furthermore, He tells us: 'And Allah loves the doers of good.' (Al-‘Imran: 148) Allah the Exalted also says: 'Indeed, Allah loves those who act equitably.' (al-Mumtahana: 8)

Yet Allah the Exalted has distinguished Ibrahim (Abraham) with His friendship; this means that no one shares with Ibrahim (Abraham) this exalted rank. Love could be shared, but Al-Khilla (intimate friendship) cannot be shared. For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him once went out to his people and said, 'Henceforth, know, O, people, that if I were to take a khalil (intimate friend) from among the inhabitants of the earth, I would take Abu Bakr ibn Abu Quhafa as one. Also know that your companion is the khalil of Allah.' Companion, in this text, refers to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself.(1)

Ismail Sabri*,* the Egyptian poet, who preceded the poet Ahmed Shawqi and was the head of judges in Egypt, derived this meaning from the Quran and from the words with which it was associated by saying:

When we met, longing did its best to bring into intimacy
Two friends who were increasingly craving for and blaming each other
It is as if there is a friend who permeated his friend,
Diffused and vanished in him as they hugged each other

Another poet says:

Longing made us hold each other so closely
In a way that makes us become one

Yet, Ismail Sabri said something that surpasses this meaning: we have permeated each other as if each one of us disappeared in the other.

Subsequently, the True Lord says:

وَلِلَّهِ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ بِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ مُّحِيطًا ﴿١٢٦﴾

It is to God that everything in the heavens and earth belongs: God is fully aware of all things [126]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 126)

Allah the Exalted explained in a previous verse that disbelievers and hypocrites have no intercessors or supporters. He asserts this meaning in this context:

---

(1) Related by Muslim and Ahmad based on a narration by Ibn Mass'ud... Al-Bukhari related the same Hadith with a different wording: {If I were to take a friend (khalil) other than my Lord I would take Abu Bakr with whom I share affinity and brotherhood in Islam}.

‘Do not think that there is a way out, a refuge, a retreat or an escapade. Allah the Almighty possesses everything in the heavens and the earth. Thus, no heaven will offer refuge to someone who tries to escape from Allah the Exalted. Furthermore, there is no one in the heavens who will help someone who tries to escape from Allah. Allah Glorified is He encompasses everything with His knowledge and is Capable of doing everything.

Afterward the True Lord says:

وَيَسْتَفْتُونَكَ فِى ٱلنِّسَآءِۖ قُلِ ٱللَّهُ يُفْتِيكُمْ فِيهِنَّ وَمَا يُتْلَىٰ عَلَيْكُمْ
فِى ٱلْكِتَٰبِ فِى يَتَٰمَى ٱلنِّسَآءِ ٱلَّٰتِى لَا تُؤْتُونَهُنَّ مَا كُتِبَ لَهُنَّ وَتَرْغَبُونَ
أَن تَنكِحُوهُنَّ وَٱلْمُسْتَضْعَفِينَ مِنَ ٱلْوِلْدَٰنِ وَأَن تَقُومُواْ لِلْيَتَٰمَىٰ
بِٱلْقِسْطِۚ وَمَا تَفْعَلُواْ مِنْ خَيْرٍ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ بِهِۦ عَلِيمًا ﴿١٢٧﴾

They ask you [Prophet] for a ruling about women. Say, ‘God Himself gives you a ruling about them. You already have what has been recited to you in the Scripture about orphan girls [in your charge] from whom you withhold the prescribed shares [of their inheritance] and whom you wish to marry, and also about helpless children – God instructs you to treat orphans fairly: He is well aware of whatever good you do’ [127] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 127)

Yastaftunak means that they seek your legal opinion. We know that people’s reception of Islam went through a number of stages. One of these stages was marked and described by the saying of the True Lord, yas’alunak which is an expression indicating believers’ inquiries in several instances. There is a second stage marked by the word yastaftunak. What is the difference between the two?

They asked about intoxicants, new moons, women’s monthly courses and spending money. The question is addressed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him even though he said, 'Do not ask me about the matters I have chosen not to address. Those who preceded you were led to perdition due to their excessive questioning and disagreement with their prophets. If I command you to do something, you must do it as much as you are able, and if I forbid you to do something, abandon it.'[1] Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked them not to ask about or investigate matters that may bring upon them more assignments. Nonetheless, they asked him out of their desire to know any ruling that may determine man’s actions in life. Had they not wanted to determine their actions in life, why then would they ask him? Questioning was evidence that inquirers loved the path of Allah the Exalted and wanted to let it surpass all their deeds. Allah likes that His servants enquire about anything He mentions briefly or in general. In addition, Islam came upon a time that Arabs had their established habits and traditions, along with setting their own rules. Islam did not change any of these rules and traditions. The Arabs who accepted faith and became believers did not want to go on following the same traditions and rules just for the sake of following the example of their ancestors. Instead, they wanted that every action they did to undoubtedly conform to the core of the Islamic religion.

By contrast, istifta’ is often a matter about which there is an ambiguous ruling. For this reason, one may say, ‘Let us seek the opinion of a scholar on this matter.’ Searching for an opinion reflects the inability of the seeker, whether an individual or a group of people, to deduce or derive a relevant ruling. For this reason, the inquirer refers the matter to the people of knowledge. Allah Glorified is He says: 'whereas, if they had referred it back to the Messenger or to those of authority among them, then the ones who [can] draw correct conclusions from it would have known about it.' (an-Nisa’: 83)

Al-istifta’ is an inquiry about a ruling that already exists; yet the inquirer is unable to deduce it. For this reason, as Muslim societies, we often establish institutions for providing legal opinions since not every believer is required to encompass all the particulars of the religion. A believer may indeed live his entire life without ever coming across or having to deal with Islamic rulings that organise the use and distribution of the profits accruing from the property that has been donated by the rich for the Cause of Allah Glorified is He, the rulings pertaining to investments in the stock market or the rulings concerning inheritance. A believer typically resorts to scholars for advice when something new happens to him. A question is often about something monotonous and recurrent, whereas seeking opinions is often about something the knowledge of which is not required to be general. For this reason, the inquirer in the latter case often seeks the opinion of the people of knowledge.

The True Lord says: 'And they request from you, [O Muhammad], a [legal] ruling concerning women.' (an-Nisa': 127). It is as if they said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'We want to know Allah's ruling concerning women, i.e. what is admissible in connection with them, what is proscribed and how to deal with all of this. So what was the answer? The answer was the following: 'Say, "Allah gives you a ruling about them" (an-Nisa': 127). Allah Glorified is He did not delay enlightening them since He had already done so before. Notwithstanding this, He had enlightened them before on this matter; thus, Allah Glorified is He enlightened them anew. It may be that the ruling that was initially revealed did not occur to them, or they failed to recall it.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'And they request from you, [O Muhammad], a [legal] ruling concerning women. Say, " Allah gives you a ruling about them and [about] what has been recited to you in the Book concerning the orphan girls…"' (an-Nisa': 127). This means that the True Lord will enlighten them on the laws concerning women even though He has previously revealed in the Quran a verse in the same chapter of an-Nisa' wherein He says: 'And if you fear that you will not deal justly with the orphan girls, then marry those that please you of [other] women, two or three or four.' (an-Nisa': 3)

Verses on the laws concerning women followed afterwards. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, " Allah gives you a ruling about them and [about] what has been recited to you in the Book…"' (an-Nisa': 127). In this verse, Allah teaches man that he must not hasten to inquire about any matter unless he first reviews the knowledge he possesses, for he may find the answer that eliminates his need to ask.

However, though the inquiry was about women in general, whether young or elderly, orphans or not, the answer given focused on orphan women. The reason is that elderly women have the capacity to investigate their own matters and are not weak. On the other hand, orphan women are the weakest of the weak. We have learnt the meaning of being an orphan; one is considered an orphan until he reaches puberty and becomes independent. Thus no adult, whether man or woman, ought to be called an orphan. For this reason, the answer was specifically concerned with orphan women since they are the ones who are always under the custody of guardians. Nowadays, these types of guardians are called custodians.

There used to be two kinds of custodians. If a girl was beautiful and wealthy, her custodian would marry her to enjoy her beauty and usurp her wealth. If a girl was ugly, her custodian would not want to marry her. However, he would try to preclude her from getting married due to the fact that if she did, her husband would take over her money. The matter needed clear analysis. Our master ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him was consistently insightful (he was known for his keen insights). One day someone asked him about a matter concerning a girl under his custody. Our master ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him then said, ‘If she were beautiful, let her take a better man than you as a husband, and were she ugly, take her as a wife and let her wealth make up for her ugliness.’

The True Lord says: '…and [about] what has been recited to you in the Book concerning the orphan girls to whom you do not give what is decreed for them…' (an-Nisa’: 127). The phrase '…what is decreed for them' (an-Nisa’: 127) refers to either their dowries or their inherited fortune. The saying of the All-Wise came forth to safeguard orphan women against the arbitrariness of their custodians. The command was brought down in this supreme style which indicates that it is the statement of an All-Generous Lord. The root raghab means 'to desire.’ Thus, if the situation is favourable, it should be described to be desired, or rughaba fih, and if it is unfavourable, then it should be described to be as 'not desired', or rughaba anhu. This is why the True Lord says: 'And who would be averse to the religion of Ibrahim (Abraham) except one who makes a fool of himself.' (al-Baqara: 130)

Since an thus occurred in this verse 'wa man yarghabu an millati Ibrahima', 'And who would be averse to the religion of Abraham…' (al-Baqara: 130), then what follows is the thing that is undesired and consequently abandoned. If the statement contained rughaba fih (desired), then it is about something favourable. The preposition that indicates whether the word targhabun is favourable or not has been omitted since it refers to those involved. If the object of desire is women, it becomes rughaba fih, and if the woman is ugly and not desired, then it becomes rughaba anhu. No one other than Allah the Exalted can bring forth an expression that combines two contrary situations. The True Lord thus decrees laws for both situations.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He speaks of another type of vulnerable category, which is the young orphans: 'and concerning the oppressed among children and that you maintain for orphans [their rights] with equity. And whatever you do of good - indeed, Allah has indeed full knowledge of it.' (an-Nisa': 127) When Allah Glorified is He talks about guardianship and custodianship over these vulnerable categories of people, His address comes in two different styles. If one is not qualified enough to understand the language and eloquence of the Quran, he may say that both styles are contradictory. However, if one is qualified enough to understand such language and eloquence, then he will be certain that such great style cannot be stated unless it is by the All-Generous Lord. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do not entrust your property to the feeble-minded…' (an-Nisa': 5). As stated, He the Almighty orders people not to give their property to the feeble-minded people even though they are the actual owners of the property. Yet, it shall not be given to them until they have sound judgment. Islam makes the brotherhood based on faith amongst Muslims the basis of cooperation and solidarity. Therefore, when Muslims discover that there is someone amongst them who has weak judgment; his guardian should take charge of his property in order to preserve it for him. Preservation of property is one of the purposes of Shari'a, and therefore, Allah entrusts a guardian with this responsibility.

Then Allah Glorified is He orders people to test young orphans since the feeble-minded or prodigal person should not be given the right to dispose of his property while in that state. Instead, this right is transferred to his guardian, and it is said that during this time it is the guardian's property. This does not mean that ownership is transferred to the guardian; rather, he becomes the one who has the right to dispose it. However, once a young person reaches puberty and is proven to be able to duly dispose, or take care, of his property, the guardian must hand over the property to him.

This Quranic verse under discussion sets out the rules which govern the treatment of the orphan women and helpless young children. It states that they should be treated with Al-Qist: 'and concerning the oppressed among children and that you maintain for orphans [their rights] with equity.' (an-Nisa': 127) However, what does treating orphans with Al-Qist mean? Al-Qist is an Arabic word that indicates the meaning of 'justice' or 'equity.' It differs from Al-Qast which means 'injustice.'

However, some who lack knowledge may criticise the usage of words in the Quran, saying that the Quran mentions Al-Qist meaning justice in several verses and afterwards states that Al-Qasitun are the fuel for the fire of Hell. (al-Jinn: 15)We say to these people that Al-Qasitun is the plural of Al-Qasit which is the verbal noun of the verb Qasta. In Arabic, this particular verb Qasta is used to refer to both 'justice' and 'injustice.' When it signifies justice, its verbal noun becomes Muqsit as Allah tells us that He the Exalted loves - Al-Muqsiteen meaning just people: 'Surely, Allah loves those who are just.' (al-Ma'ida: 42) On the contrary, when it refers to injustice, its verbal noun is Al-Qasit as Allah tells us in the Quran that Al-Qasitun (the wrongdoing people) will be the fuel of Hellfire: 'And those who deviate from the right course, they are the fuel of Hell.' (al-Jinn: 15) In Arabic, there is another verb in the same context which is 'aqasta; it means that there had been an injustice, but it has since been eliminated. Accordingly, we find that Al-Qist is to be just from the very beginning, while Al-Muqsit is the one who encounters injustice and eliminates it. It is among the merits of the Arabic language that a single word may be used to convey different meanings in different contexts. Therefore, one shall learn how to understand the language and eloquence of speech and to properly understand the sense of every word in light of the context in which it is used.

In the past, the style of writing was a talent, and not a craft, as is the case in our particular time. The early Arabs used not to use diacritical marks. If someone added such diacritical marks in a letter he sent to another person, the recipient would be enraged and send the letter back to the sender, telling him, 'Do you doubt my capacity to read your letter correctly without these diacritical marks?!' Placing such diacritical marks, during those eras, was thus perceived as a sign of having misgivings about the recipient of the letter. By contrast, in our age a recipient often asks the sender to place these marks to the letters so that he can pronounce it correctly.

Allah Glorified is He talks about orphans' dowries and property. He the Almighty makes the proper disposition of the property of the orphans an act of worship and faith. An orphan woman may neither have wealth nor beauty. In this case, no one will have a desire to marry her. Therefore, it is incumbent upon the guardian to look after her and observe Allah's Rulings in dealing with her.

In this verse, Allah commands believers to treat orphans justly. An orphan girl may be living with her guardian and his family, and she may be beautiful. The guardian may provide her with more care and tenderness than what he shows to his children. However, Allah Glorified is He draws our attention to the fact that looking after an orphan girl should be based on justice, and without extravagance. He tells us that one does not get rewarded or punished for merely undertaking an action, rather, it is the intention behind an action which determines the way one is recompensed for it. Thus, beware, O, believer, not to merely say, 'I did such and such', but should say instead, 'I did such and such with the following intention.' Allah, the All Knowing, knows all your deeds and intentions: 'And whatever you do of good - indeed, Allah has indeed full knowledge of it.' (an-Nisa': 127)

The one who wipes an orphan's head is bound to have a huge reward. Similarly, the one who supports and provides for an orphan will join Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in paradise. The One Who decided to give such a reward is Allah Whose knowledge encompasses the deepest secrets of the intention of a person undertaking this particular good deed. For instance, someone may approach an orphan, support him and provide him with care and tenderness for the sole purpose of getting close to his mother. For this reason, reward and punishment are ultimately determined by the intention underlying and motivating the action. It is not enough for someone to just say, 'My intention is good' and then abstain from doing good deeds. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says, 'Actions are to be judged solely by intentions, and a man will have only what he intended. When one emigrates for the sake of Allah and His Messenger, then his emigration is to Allah and His Messenger. However, when one emigrates for the sake of gaining a worldly benefit or marrying a woman, then his emigration is to that for which he emigrated.'(1) This indicates that intention must always be associated with and vindicated by actions. This is due to the fact that Allah encourages us to do good deeds in order to benefit others, as well. One's intention to do the good is not sufficient enough unless it is followed through with the action itself. However, when one carries out an action without having an intention, then he is benefitting others without gaining any personal benefit; he will only incur the exhaustion of undertaking it. Thus, if one wants to be rewarded, he should have a good intention when performing any good deed.

Allah the Exalted asserts that He knows all what we do even before the creation of the universe, as He is the Most Powerful and the Most Omnipotent: 'And whatever you do of good - indeed, Allah has indeed full knowledge of it.' (an-Nisa': 127) Accordingly, He the Almighty does not need to wait until man carries out a deed in order to have knowledge of it. Rather, He has eternal knowledge of everything. Therefore, He says: 'And whatever you do of good - indeed, Allah has indeed full knowledge of it.' (an-Nisa': 127) This is due to the fact that all that is happening in this world is known to Allah even before the creation of all that existed, exists and will exist.

Let us illustrate this by reference to an example from daily life. An owner of a piece of land may ask an engineer to build a house for him and tell him: Design a house for me on such and such area and have it be composed of the following number of rooms and bathrooms. The engineer then comes up with a design based on the instructions of the landowner. The landowner may be a person who leans towards accuracy and precision and so he, therefore, says the engineer, 'I want you to build a small scale replica of the house before we start building it so that I can see a small but realistic representation of the house. The replica should accurately show the rooms, their designs and colours.'

Similarly, the world with all its minute details and dimensions was known to its Creator, Allah, before it ever came to being. The replicas made by people may be deficient due to lack of raw materials. For instance, a carpenter may run out of rosewood, thus finding himself confined to resorting to a different kind of wood in order to finish constructing a bedroom. This defect is due to the incomprehensive knowledge and limited capacity of the carpenter. However, Allah’s Creation is highly perfect since He Glorified is He is the Best Creator. We should reflect over all these meanings when we read Allah’s saying: 'And whatever you do of good - indeed, Allah has indeed full knowledge of it.' (an-Nisa’: 127) Subsequently, Allah the Almighty discusses some issues relating to women. He says:

---

(1) [Narrated by Al-Bukhahri]

وَإِنِ ٱمۡرَأَةٌ خَافَتۡ مِنۢ بَعۡلِهَا نُشُوزًا أَوۡ إِعۡرَاضٗا فَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيۡهِمَآ أَن
يُصۡلِحَا بَيۡنَهُمَا صُلۡحٗاۚ وَٱلصُّلۡحُ خَيۡرٞۗ وَأُحۡضِرَتِ ٱلۡأَنفُسُ ٱلشُّحَّۚ وَإِن
تُحۡسِنُواْ وَتَتَّقُواْ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ بِمَا تَعۡمَلُونَ خَبِيرٗا ﴿١٢٨﴾

If a wife fears high-handedness or alienation from her husband, neither of them will be blamed if they come to a peaceful settlement, for peace is best. Although human souls are prone to selfishness, if you do good and are mindful of God, He is well aware of all that you do [128] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 128)

When the Arabic article ’inna, translated in this verse as 'if', is followed by a noun in the nominative case, we must note that it is followed with a hidden verb; this means that the original word order in this case should have been as such that the verb comes immediately after ’inna. This applies to this verse along with many other verses such as the following: 'And if anyone of the idolaters seeks protection of thee, grant him protection so that he may hear the Word of Allah.' (at-Tawba: 6) However, what is the meaning of fear in the verse under discussion? Fear is the feeling you get when you are afraid or worried that something bad or sad might happen. This means that one fears when he expects that a difficult or troublesome matter might, or is going to happen. In this Quranic verse, high-handedness has not yet shown, but the woman fears or expects that it may happen. Allah Glorified is He bases the ruling on the mere fear of high-handedness or ill-treatment, and not on its actual occurrence. This is a note for every one of us not to wait until the things he fears actually happen. Instead, one must prevent the causes which may lead to their occurrence since, in the event that they may happen, handling them might be extremely difficult. In the same manner, if a woman senses signs of ill-treatment on the part of her husband, she must try to remedy the problem from the very beginning.

We notice that Allah Glorified is He talks here about an-Noshouz, or 'ill-treatment' on the part of the husband as He previously talked about ill-treatment on the part of the wife: 'And as for those on whose part you fear disobedience, admonish them and keep away from them in their beds and chastise them. Then if they obey you, seek not a way against them. Surely, Allah is high and great.' (an-Nisa': 34)

So, what is the meaning of an-Nushouz? When listening to music, someone may make the following comment: 'This tune is Nashaz.' This means that it does not resonate with the sequence of the melody and its rhythm. This word is originally derived from an-nashz which refers to the elevated place of a ground.

The ideal case of the matrimonial relationship is that a man-the husband-takes the woman-hiswife- to be his source of relief, affection and mercy and reveals to her all his secrets inasmuch as she does with him. Therefore, Muslim Jurists state that Al-Kafaa'ah, or 'equality' or the proximity between spouses, is a condition for marriage. Allah Glorified is He explains that corrupt women are for corrupt men, and corrupt men are for corrupt women, and likewise, good women are for good men and good men are for good women: 'Corrupt women are for corrupt men, and corrupt men are for corrupt women; good women are for good men and good men are for good women. The good are innocent of what has been said against them; they will have forgiveness and a generous provision.' (an-Nur: 26)

Equality should thus be observed even regarding such things as good character and bad character. A corrupt woman should not be married to a good man; otherwise she would make him suffer. Similarly, a corrupt man should not be married to a good woman, lest he should make her suffer. This is due to the fact that when a good man marries a good woman, they will comfort and appreciate each other. Likewise, when a corrupt man marries a corrupt woman, their behaviours and manners resonate with each other. This actually establishes a balance in their relationship. Both a corrupt man and a woman do not feel ashamed when they commit immoral acts. On the other hand, a good man and a good woman take care of each other's feelings and preserve each other's dignity. In the context of matrimonial life, if a woman fears that her husband might display ill-treatment towards her, abstain from spending over her, despise her or no longer love her, she should correct her behaviour and with the way she treats him. Similarly, when affection and compassion upon which the relationship between spouses ought to be based collapse, despite each of them pledging a solemn promise to the other, this is considered another form of Nushuz. Furthermore, when a woman fears that her husband looks down on or despises her because he financially supports her, then this is considered another form of Nushuz. An intelligent wife needs to pay attention to herself and remedy the causes that may lead to an escalation of the situation, i.e. she should work on her relationship with her husband. If the husband is the cause of the problem, she should try to regain his affection.

Turning away means that the husband has not yet started to display ill treatment towards her. However, he does not show affection towards his wife, talk to her or even approach her, even though he may give her all of her rights. An intelligent woman should also fix this problem. The problem is ultimately between a husband and wife about the relationship between them. Allah states that they, the married couple are very close to each other: 'And how can you take it when one of you may have consorted with the other, and they (women) have taken from you a strong covenant?' (an-Nisa': 21) Another example is the following verse: 'They are a sort of garment for you and you are a sort of garment for them.' (al-Baqara: 187) This means that every husband is both a shield and a cover for his wife, while every wife is both a shield and a cover for her husband. Indeed, we know that if a woman is sitting in her room and her brother or father walk in, she will quickly cover any exposed part of her body. On the other hand, if her husband walks in, she will not conceal or cover her body.

Every husband and wife knows that there is a very private and sensitive affair between both of them; Allah permits both a husband and wife to be exposed to the other in a way that they are not permitted to be exposed to any other one in the world. Therefore, a husband must not curse or disrespect his wife in any way. Similarly, every wife is required to take care of her husband. They both should remember that they have been exposed to each other in a very unique and special way.

Allah Glorified is He wants to put an end to any dispute that may flare up between a husband and a wife. For this purpose, He encourages every wife to investigate the cause of her husband's ill-treatment and turning away from her; she may, for instance, have grown old or become ill while her husband is still at the prime of his life. Another woman may have enticed him or he may, for some reason, want to marry another woman. In this case, the wife must rationally treat the problem and concede some of her share in him. For example, if she is not very beautiful and her husband wants to marry another, she may allow him to do so. She may also give up some of her dowry to him. What matters is that they should reconcile. This is a duty of the husband as much as it is a duty of the wife.

In this verse, Allah asserts that reconciliation is the duty of both the husband and wife: 'If a wife fears high-handedness or alienation from her husband, neither of them will be blamed if they come to a peaceful settlement, for peace is best.' (an-Nisa': 128) This is due to the fact that any problem, in which no one else interferes, except the husband and wife, can easily be solved. The resolution of such problems is made difficult by the people who interfere in the relationship between the two spouses. A man may have a dispute with his wife and leave the house, but afterwards he may calm down and return home. His wife may then say to him a word that ends the entire dispute. However, if a relative interferes in the problem, matters may be further complicated since the one who interferes may have neither the reason nor the motive to solve the problem.

This is why we should adhere to Allah's Order to seek reconciliation: 'neither of them will be blamed if they come to a peaceful settlement, for peace is best.' (an-Nisa': 128) The first stage of reconciliation between a husband and wife is that they both should fulfil their obligations and always remember that although they may hate something in the other partner, Allah decrees that this same thing is very good for them: 'it may be that you dislike a thing while it is good for you, and it may be that you like a thing while it is bad for you. Allah knows and you know not.' (al-Baqara: 216) Another verse that illustrates these points is the following: 'if you dislike them, it may be that you dislike a thing wherein Allah has placed much good.' (an-Nisa': 19)

No man should ever believer that there is a single woman who has extraordinary beauty and all good qualities. The good and various qualities required for leading a good marital life may not be available in a beautiful woman. However, such qualities may exist in a woman who is not very beautiful. This is for this is that an extraordinary attractive woman may mainly depend on her beauty and not develop other qualities. On the other hand, a woman who is not very beautiful tries to be honest, obedient, clean (keep house well) and well-behaved with her husband's family since she wants to create bridges with them in order to encourage her husband to keep her. For this reason, we find that the women who are not beautiful constitute the majority who seriously shoulder the responsibilities of supporting their families. Consequently, a man should not only consider the aspect of physical beauty. Rather, one should consider all aspects and aspects of beauty. Men's minds may be overwhelmed by physical beauty. However, every man should bear in mind that such form of beauty is short lived. There are many of other aspects of beauty that last to the end of one's life.

We were told of a good and righteous man who was married to a troublesome and authoritative woman. One day he told her, 'O, I wish you could see me while I am giving religious lectures with people leaning forwards to listen to me.' He thought that if she would see him giving a lecture, she would be change and start to treat him more kindly. His wife then went to attend his lectures. He thought that this scene would inspire deep reverence for him in her heart. When he returned to her at the end of the day, he said to her, 'You saw me today!' She replied, 'Yes, I saw you, and it was frustrating. I saw all the people sitting calmly except for you. You were the only one screaming.' It is said that Allah used to extend His Grace and Support to this man for tolerating the misbehaviour of his wife. His students used to see divine illumination in his actions. When his wife died, his students went to see him, but they could not sense any of the illumination they were used to experiencing with him before. They then asked him what had happened to cause this change. He said, 'The one for whom was responsible for Allah treating me gracefully has died.' Thus, as much as women are required to endure the misbehaviour of their husbands, men are also required to endure the misbehaviour of their wives. Allah rewards the one who endures ill-treatment from his wife. An interesting story has been related in this respect. ‘Imran ibn Hittann was one of the Khawarij [a group which claimed that both sides in the battle of Siffin (which occurred between ‘Ali ibn Abi Taleb and Mu‘awiyyah ibn Abu Sufyan) were disbelievers] and was married to a beautiful woman even though he was ugly. His wife looked at him one day and said, 'Praise is be to Allah!' He asked her, 'Why are you praising Allah?’ She replied, 'Because both of us will be admitted into paradise.' He then asked, 'Why do you think so?’ She responded, 'Because you were blessed with me (a beautiful wife) and were grateful, and I was tested with you (an unattractive husband) and was patient, and the patient and thankful are both admitted to paradise.'

No one should think that he will find a woman that combines all aspects of beauty and goodness. He should know that if she ranks low in one aspect, she might be quite superior in another. Therefore, do not miss one clear advantage due to a deficiency she may have in another aspect of her character; in life, there are several aspects of character. We said before that Allah has no children. Rather, we are all His servants. Allah has equally given us the means to be graceful. Therefore, if someone was privileged in one aspect, another will have an advantage over him in a different one. The coexistence of excellence in one aspect and deficiency in another was intended by Allah to make the total result of the merits and qualities of every human being equal to their opposites, thus establishing a balance in the world.

Therefore, when one finds something that he does not like in his wife, and conversely, when a woman finds something that she does not like in her husband, the man should consider all the good aspects in his wife in order to have a more clear, integrated vision of her. Similarly, a woman should consider all the good aspects in her husband in order to have a clearer, integrated view of him. If a man considers all the aspects of his wife’s character, he will live contently with her because, from his perspective, the good aspects will always outnumber the bad. The one who is content is the one who looks at the positive aspects, while the discontent person is the one who only looks at the negative aspects. The one who is fair in both his anger and contentment is the one who considers the totality of all the positive aspects and negative aspects. Allah Glorified is He wants the family to be based on safe foundations.

He Glorified is He thus tells us that neither the husband nor the wife should wait until disputes erupt. Rather, each of them should try to resolve potential problems once they detect their signs. No one, apart from both husband and wife, is more capable of solving a given problem that may arise between them since the bonds and relationship common between a husband and wife do not exist between any other people. For this reason, Allah encourages both of them to seek reconciliation: 'neither of them will be blamed if they come to a peaceful settlement, for peace is best.' (an-Nisa': 128)

Sometimes, we find that people are more concerned with the formal aspect of reconciliation, without paying close attention to and trying to find a solution for the underlying causes of alienation and psychological animosities between the two spouses. Such focus on formalities without tackling the real causes of disputes which may lead to other problems, does not help to achiever true reconciliation. Therefore, reconciliation shall tackle the essential problems and their underlying causes so that spouses can become content, and thus, goodness can be achieved between both of them and in the whole community.

Afterward, Allah the Almighty says: 'Although human souls are prone to selfishness, if you do the good and are mindful of Allah, He is well aware of all that you do.' (an-Nisa': 128) In this verse, Allah Glorified is He tells us that He is Our Creator so He knows our nature and dispositions; He also knows that it is very difficult for a wife to give up a portion of money that is rightfully hers, like her dowry, to give up an engagement present or to give up her right to a night with her husband to allow him to spend it with another wife, if he is married to more than one. Similarly, it is very difficult for a man to give up some of the standards he has set for his life. Therefore, Allah warns us against letting selfishness take control of our attitudes towards each other. In order to encourage both spouses to be lenient to each other, Allah reminds them of their special relationship: 'And how can you take it when one of you may have consorted with the other, and they (the women) have taken from you a strong covenant?' (an-Nisa': 21)

The verse being explored differentiates between the rights which any of the two spouses may stand up for and insist on and what either of them may relinquish out of benevolence towards the other. We are told of a fair judge who once said to two litigants, 'Should I judge amongst you based on justice or do you know something that is better than justice?’ One of them asked, 'Is there anything better than justice?’ The judge answered, 'Yes, it is benevolence. Justice only signifies giving one his due rights, while benevolence means that one benevolently relinquishes one’s due rights to the interest of the other.' In this verse, Allah Glorified is He wants to solve a psychological problem that many families may face, in which neither the husband nor the wife have strong faith or creed. Had these families had stronger faith and followed the Rulings of Allah, such a problem would not have occurred. This problem is that of polygamy.

A superficial investigation suggests that a polygamist is a fortunate person as he is allowed, in Islam, to marry up to four wives simultaneously. In the same respect, a woman is thought to be wronged because she is restricted to only one husband. However, careful investigation shows that not all wives are wronged; the second wife feels happy. Furthermore, a husband may tell his wife that he is going to have a second wife. She may, after investigating all alternatives, accept to preserve her matrimonial life with this husband and decide it being the best alternative for her.

It is related that a husband wanted to divorce his wife because he was no longer attracted to her. Since they had a son, she said to him, 'Do not divorce me and let me look after my son. All what I want is that you just give me my due share.' Her husband then said, ‘If this would work with you, it is more amenable to me.' Accordingly, we find that polygamy is not a source for frustration and distress to all women; as much as it causes the first wife frustration and distress, it pleases the second wife. However, women are justified in being frustrated since men took advantage of Allah’s Ruling that permits polygamy but failed to obey Allah’s Decree to treat their multiple wives justly. A man wrongs a woman when he follows only the ruling that is in his interest, namely, the allowance of polygamy, yet does not follow the Decree of Allah, the One Who allows him polygamy, in the sense that he should treat his wives fairly.

People used to deny polygamy because they noticed that when a man has a new wife, he only cares for her and completely neglects his first one along with his children from her. For this reason, women have their excuse for being angry at the legitimacy of polygamy. If men followed Allah’s Decree that a husband should treat his multiple wives justly as much as they took advantage of Allah’s Allowance of practicing polygamy, social balance would then be established. When the first wife knows that her rights, whether concerning herself, her house or looking after her children, would not be neglected by her husband, she would say, 'It is better for him to be publicly married instead of encroaching upon other people’s honour, meaning having illegal relationships with other women.'

Therefore, the cause of the problems associated with polygamy is that man partially follows some of the Divine Orders and ignores the rest of them. Those who take advantage of Allah’s license to practise polygamy must observe the principles that He has set out in order for such lifestyle to be undertaken within the framework of justice.

For example, when a man has two wives, each one is entitled to have her husband spend a night at her house; so each wife is entitled to spend the same number of nights with her husband as does the other wife. Mu‘adh Ibn Jabal Allah be pleased with him had two wives, and he was accustomed not to perform his ablution in a house of one of his wives if it was the other’s night even though ablution is an act of worship. What is more interesting is that when the two wives died of plague, he ordered them both to be buried in one grave.

Allah Glorified is He is the One Who created the creation and also commanded people to be just as much as they are able. Therefore, a husband has to be fair in everything: the time he spends with each wife, his expenditure, his smiles and his company. A man can observe justice in all these aspects. Yet, he cannot be fair as far as the inclination of his heart is concerned as it is related to one’s own feelings. Therefore, Allah tells us that we can not observe justice regarding love, even if we do our best. Therefore, He Glorified is He orders husband not to show his greater inclination to a certain wife.

وَلَن تَسْتَطِيعُوٓا۟ أَن تَعْدِلُوا۟ بَيْنَ ٱلنِّسَآءِ وَلَوْ حَرَصْتُمْ ۖ فَلَا تَمِيلُوا۟ كُلَّ ٱلْمَيْلِ
فَتَذَرُوهَا كَٱلْمُعَلَّقَةِ ۚ وَإِن تُصْلِحُوا۟ وَتَتَّقُوا۟ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ غَفُورًا رَّحِيمًا ﴿١٢٩﴾

You will never be able to treat your wives with equal fairness, however much you may desire to do so, but do not ignore one wife altogether, leaving her suspended [between marriage and divorce]. If you make amends and remain conscious of God, He is most forgiving and merciful [129] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 129)

This proves that justice in love is impossible. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to make the following supplication to Allah, 'O, Allah, this is my division concerning what I control, so do not blame me concerning what You control, and I do not' (Meaning the heart). (1) Thus, there is a difference between a heart's inclination which signifies psychological affection and tendencies, and rational inclination. No one has control over his heart's inclinations. Therefore, there is not a legislation or law which orders someone to love so and so girl unless it refers to rational love, not the emotional one. Someone may, for instance, like a bitter medicine; he does so intellectually, not emotionally. Therefore, this person may rejoice when someone brings him the medicine because he knows that the medicine will cure him— Allah willing.

The Quranic verse speaks of Al-Mayl, or inclination. So, what does Al-Mayl mean? Allah Glorified is He clearly explains this when He orders us not to leave a wife in a state as if she is married and unmarried at the same time. This refers to a woman who is neither 'aym which means she has no husband and seeks marriage, and nor married, but cannot take pleasure in having a husband. Instead, she is a woman kept by a man who does not fulfil his responsibilities towards her. Allah Glorified is He demonstrates that He does not want a husband of multiple wives to forcefully, or uncontrollably, incline his heart in one direction or another since he has no control over this matter. However, He wants him to observe justice in all his dealings with his wives. One should observe equality amongst one's wives regarding the time he spends in each wife's house, the money he spends on each, the amount of care he gives to his children and even the company he gives to one's wives. As for a heart's inclination, Allah does not enact any rulings concerning it.

(1) [Narrated by Ahmad]

Allah Glorified is He decrees laws for His creation since He knows them best. Allah created passions for each of us that make us have inclinations. Furthermore, He created desires within us and gave us a variety of choices concerning our reactions. If Allah Glorified is He wanted to restrict our inclination, He would not have created it. However, He unleashes human inclinations so that they may achieve the combined interests of all mankind. Therefore Allah the Exalted allows a heart to love since He knows that inhabitancy of the universe is established on love. For example, if a scientist did not love discovering Allah' secrets in concerning the universe, he would not endure the effort involved in research, reading and experimentation along with all the toil involved in these tasks.

If people do not like perfecting their works, there will not be a single well-done piece of work. Similarly, if a man does not love his children, he will not take pains in bringing them up. Therefore, love has a mission. Allah Glorified is He does not want us to preclude love; instead, He wants us to exalt love by channelling it morally, rather than unscrupulously unleashing it in a way that may encroach upon the honour of others.

When you direct your love towards a good purpose, it will never make you or other people incur an evil result. Consider, for instance, the motive and desire for knowing; we will find that Allah created it for man to enable him to develop useful inventions in life. If the desire to know did not exist, no scientist would be able to innovate, invent or discover anything conducive to the comfort and enhancement of human life man, for example, would not have thought of using steam power to ease the toil of travelling and carrying heavy weight and thereby, would not have invented steam boats and trains.

However, Allah the Almighty wanted to exalt the desire for knowing and inventing by channelling it towards legitimate endeavours and keeping it from being a tool used to spy on other's people's secrets, for example. Similarly, He has implanted the desire for amassing wealth in man since it motivates him to work and benefit others by this work, whether his intention is to benefit others or not. The same also holds true for the desire for sex; Allah implanted it in man with its vigour to preserve the human species. He does not want us to unleash it to infringe on people's honour. Therefore, He created desires for special functions. Thus, religious laws have been decreed to maintain human desires to their respective functions and prevent them from declining away from the path of Allah.

Therefore, inclination is a human instinct. An interpretation of the words of The True Lord Glorified is He on this issue may be: 'I have created this inclination to serve the purpose of life on earth. However, I want you to exalt and elevate your inclinations. This principle should be observed when you acquire multiple wives. I do not want you to completely ignore your inclination since this is not something that is practical. However, I would like you to discipline this inclination and keep it within only your hearts' limits. It is not appropriate to let your inclination go beyond your hearts and affect your actions.

Therefore, you, believers, are free to love whomever you wish. However, do not let this love negatively affect your entire behaviour and thus unfairly give the one you love the good to which another person is entitled. Similarly, you are free to dislike whomever you want. No legislator can command your heart to love or dislike, but do not let your dislike extend beyond your heart, and influence your behaviour and cause you to wrong the one you dislike.

'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him set an ideal example concerning this issue. When the murderer of his brother passed by him, a man sitting with him said: 'This is the murderer of your brother.' 'Umar Allah be pleased with him said, 'Now that Allah has guided him to Islam, what could I do to him?' The killer's embracing of Islam ended the matter for 'Umar Allah be pleased with him. When the killer came to 'Umar's session, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him said to him, 'When you attend my session, turn your face away from me for my heart is not comfortable in your presence.' The man then asked, 'Does the fact that you do not love me deny me any of my rights?' 'Umar Allah be pleased with him said: 'No.' The man then said, 'Only women lament love.' 'Umar Allah be pleased with him was then the Caliphate and that man was one of his subjects. However, 'Umar the Caliphate feared committing an injustice. Thus, this man, though he was under the reign and command of the Caliphate 'Umar Allah be pleased with him possessed the ability to reject ‘Umar's feelings of love and hatred as long as they did not preclude him from his rights as a citizen.

The True Lord Glorified is He has created the heart's inclinations and set the following rule for them: Beware, believer, not to let your hearts inclinations influence your actions. Let your heart's inclination be as you wish. In this respect, if you marry one woman, and then marry another, the path of God does not require you to achieve absolute justice in treating your two wives, especially concerning your heart's inclination. For, if this were the case, this would imply that the path of God requires you to control something that is not under your control, viz. the inclination of your heart. Rather, the path of Allah sets for you the rules that your limb's actions should follow. You have to be fair in distributing your time for each of your wives, the clothes you buy for them, your smiles and the gentleness of your speech. Therefore, you should not to let your heart's inclination influence your actions; beyond this, you are free to have whatever feelings you desire in your heart.

We have noticed that some of those who pretend understanding the Quran and being Mujadidin (those who renew the Islamic faith) support the new campaign against polygamy. In this respect, we say that before joining this campaign against polygamy under the pretext of understanding the texts of the Quran, you should first investigate the causes of this resentment of polygamy; it is not a resentment of polygamy in itself. Rather, it is a resentment of a Muslim who takes advantage of Allah's allowance of polygamy and neglects his command to observe justice. If a Muslim observed equal justice while practising polygamy, such a crisis would not have existed. For this reason, they say, The True Lord Glorified is He has decreed that the man should restrict himself to one wife if he fears he cannot be just if he were married to have multiple wives. He thus says: '…but if you have reason to fear that you might not be able to treat them with equal fairness, then [only] one…' (an-Nisa': 3). He also says in a different verse: 'And it will not be within your power to treat your wives with equal fairness, however much you may desire it…' (an-Nisa': 129). To these people, we say that if you really wanted to understand the Quran, you should know that the True Lord Glorified is He did not stop at His saying, '…however much you may desire it…' (an-Nisa': 129); rather, He supplemented a command to his statement on the incapacity of fair treatment. He thus says: '… and so, do not allow yourselves to incline towards one…' (an-Nisa': 129).

Allah the Exalted supplemented His statement mentioning the inability of fair treatment with the command not for a man to be inclined towards one of the wives. This manifests the Wisdom of the First Legislator Who knows His creation and knows how He created them. If the True Lord Glorified is He did not supplement 'And it will not be within your power…' (an-Nisa': 129), it may have given those who are against polygamy a right to say what they have said. For this reason, we tell them to pay attention to the fact the True Lord the Almighty explained that men's inability to observe justice between their wives is a matter that He knows. Therefore, He asks them not to be entirely inclined, and this is within their power. Thus, Allah Glorified is He has left the ruling as it is and did not negate it. 'And so, do not allow yourselves to incline towards one to the exclusion of the other leaving her in a state, as it were, of having and not having a husband…' (an-Nisa': 129). This statement involves a command for every man not to leave his wife in '… a state, as it were, of having and not having a husband…' (an-Nisa': 129). The destiny and path of life of such a woman would be undetermined. She is neither without a husband, making her eligible for marriage, and nor is she married; thus, she may take her due share from her husband in terms of living with her in their house, supporting her by expenditures, clothing her, along with giving her kind reception, smiles, intimacy and sympathy.

Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says: '…But if you put things to right and are conscious of Him – behold, God is indeed much-forgiving, a dispenser of mercy.' (an-Nisa': 129) His saying '…if you put things to right…' indicates that a form of corruption exists and that every Muslim man is required to investigate the causes that led him to corrupt his marital relation with the intention to fix them. Furthermore, every Muslim man should be conscious of Allah in dealing with his wife in the light of Allah's Laws. When a Muslim husband stops the corruption of leaving his wife in a state as if she were not yet having a husband by giving her due rights in terms of the time he spends in her house, expenditure support, taking care of her family and showing interest in her and her children in a good manner, Allah will forgive him and dispense His Grace upon him. Furthermore, a Muslim cannot correct what he corrupted unless he genuinely intends to do all actions being conscious of Allah. If he does so, he will find Allah immensely forgiving and a dispenser of mercy.

If a man is incapable of being just and a woman did not agree to give up a portion of her rights to satisfy him, then separation will be a must in such a situation. It is inconceivable to try to govern the marital and family life by force. We cannot force spouses to stay with each other if their hearts repel. Similarly, we cannot be certain that any woman could live safely under these conditions.

To the one who contends that it is not appropriate for us to separate spouses, we ask, 'do you want to keep marital life going by force?' The marriage bond is based on tranquillity, affection and compassion. If these basics are absent, how could a marriage possibly continue? How could you force a husband to live with a wife whom he does not like or accept? Similarly, how could you compel a wife to live with a husband whom she does not like? Separation, in such cases, is a means that Allah Glorified is He intended so that a husband may search to find another, more suitable wife, and the same applies for a wife.

We have frequently encountered examples of this in real life. A divorced husband may live happily with his new wife; similarly, a divorced wife may live happily with her new husband. As for those who took the idea of separating a married couple in the case where married life is impossible as a pretext to attack Islam, they basically repeat the western view that holds that no married couple should ever separate.

Nowadays, we see that the entire world, including Christians, Jews and others who belong to different religions and sects, resort to divorce since events and conditions force them to legitimize it. It is as if they are having recourse to Islam not in itself but as the only solution to their problem. Therefore, if it has been proved that those who attack a specific part of religion are ultimately compelled, under the pressure of events or conditions, to resort to it, we have to remind them not to rush to judge matters pertaining to Islam as invalid. The True Lord Glorified is He has compelled the non-Muslims to follow a Muslim principle. He is the One Who said:

وَإِن يَتَفَرَّقَا يُغْنِ ٱللَّهُ كُلًّا مِّن سَعَتِهِۦ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ وَٰسِعًا حَكِيمًا ﴿١٣٠﴾

but if husband and wife do separate, God will provide for each out of His plenty: He is infinite in plenty, and all wise [130] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 130)

Allah Glorified is He has infinite grace. He is truly capable of conferring upon a divorced husband a good wife who satisfies his needs. Similarly, He is capable of conferring upon a divorced wife a husband who satisfies her needs and accepts her ugliness if she were ugly by making him see other aspects of beauty and goodness in her. A man may have been infatuated by the beauty of his wife even though she drove him crazy, made him confused and disturbed his thoughts. Subsequently, Allah may bestow upon him a woman who is fond of him. He may bless him with an honest woman whom he can trust; when he leaves her to go to work, he would have no misgivings about her in his heart since he has confidence in her even if she was not very beautiful. 'And if husband and wife do separate, Allah shall provide for each of them out of His abundance, for Allah is indeed Bountiful, Wise' (an-Nisa': 130). Do not begin to think that Allah does not possess what will comfort every person. Allah Glorified is He has what can comfort each person. The pharmacy of His path abounds with remedies. Some people just do not know how to use these remedies to treat their diseases.

It is due to His Wisdom that Allah the Exalted does not force a couple to continue living with each other since they dislike each other, especially if it were a case where affection and compassion no longer existed between them. Afterward, the True Lord puts forth the following verse:

وَلِلَّهِ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلْأَرْضِ ۗ وَلَقَدْ وَصَّيْنَا ٱلَّذِينَ أُوتُوا۟ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ مِن قَبْلِكُمْ وَإِيَّاكُمْ أَنِ
ٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ ۚ وَإِن تَكْفُرُوا۟ فَإِنَّ لِلَّهِ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ غَنِيًّا حَمِيدًا ﴿١٣١﴾

Everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to God. We have commanded those who were given the Scripture before you, and We command you, to be mindful of God. Even if you do ignore Him, everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Him, and He is self-sufficient, worthy of all praise [131] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 131)

Allah Glorified is He is the One who satisfies the man when he divorces his wife and similarly satisfies the woman if she separates from her husband. It is not difficult for Allah Glorified is He Who created the entire world to satisfy the needs of a man and a woman after they divorce. He possesses the heavens and the earth and is capable of bestowing upon a man a better woman than one he divorced and bestowing upon a woman a better man than that one she divorced or got a divorce from. Thus, nothing falls outside the reign of Allah Who gives abundantly and infinitely.

We frequently hear of a man who married a woman who does not have children and about whom rumours of being barren become widespread. The couple, thus, goes to medical labs to get tested. Sometimes, it is said that the woman is the cause of not having children, while other times, it is said that the man is the cause of not having children. Accordingly, they get divorced, and each of them acquires a new spouse. The woman may then have a child from her new husband; similarly, the man may have a child from his new wife. The reason behind this is Allah's Will. Things in life do not happen solely because all their causes took place as if they were autonomous and not ultimately caused by Allah; rather, He is always the cause leading to all causes. He is the One Who said: ' Allah's alone is the dominion over the heavens and the earth. He creates whatever He wills. He bestows the gift of female offspring on whomever He wills, and the gift of male offspring on whomever He wills; or He gives both male and female [to whomever He wills], and causes to be barren whomever He wills, for, verily, He is All Knowing, infinite in His Power.' (ash-Shura: 49-50)

How many possible alternatives do we have? Allah may bestow upon whomever He wills female offspring. He may bestow upon whomever He wills male offspring. He may also bestow upon whomever He wills both male and female offspring. Finally, He may cause to be barren whomever He wills. There are four possible destinies for any married man and woman as far as the question of having children is concerned. When Allah bestows upon a family offspring consisting of only males, the wife will long to have a daughter. Conversely, if the True Lord Glorified is He bestows upon a family only female offspring, both the man and the woman would long to have a son. If Allah gives a family both male and female offspring, such a family often experiences feelings of contentment; but such a state of contentment came last.

Allah Glorified is He puts the blessings whom man would want the least firstly. Thus, Allah Glorified is He first says: '…He creates whatever He wills…' (ash-Shura: 49). Subsequently, He the Exalted says: '… He bestows the gift of female offspring on whomever He wills…' (ash-Shura: 49). Afterwards, Allah mentions the bestowal of male offspring and then puts forth the state at which His bounty reaches its apex: 'or He gives both male and female [to whomever He wills]…' (ash-Shura: 50). Finally Allah the Exalted mentions the fourth possible destiny which He may enjoin on some of His creatures: '…and causes to be barren whomever He wills...' (ash-Shura: 50).

However, why is one happy with Allah's fate when He bestows upon him either male or female offspring? And why does happiness increase when He bestows upon him both male and female offspring? Furthermore, why is man discontent with His fate when He causes him to be barren? Does man think that he will be destined to the fate he likes and avoid the fate he does not like? The four possibilities are all fates from Allah. If man considers each of the four possibilities, he would be content with them.

Allah Glorified is He creates whomever He wills and causes whomever He wills to be barren. If man says this statement while contently accepting Allah's fate, He may please him as much as He pleased others with a male offspring, a female offspring or both a male and a female offspring. I swear to you, if someone, or a married couple accepted Allah's fate of being barren contently as much as they do in other situations, He will not bestow upon them an offspring of boys and girls who will make them suffer in pregnancy and in raising them; rather, He will bestow upon them people who will serve them, but who have been raised by others.

The main reason why the spouses who do not have children live unhappily is that they do not accept the fate Allah decreed, Allah forbid. Therefore, He makes them live in grief. Allah the Exalted is the One Who said in a Qudsi Hadith that has been related by Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him saying that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Allah says, "I always meet my servant’s expectation about me. I am with him if he remembers me. If he remembers me in his self, I remember him in Myself. If he remembers me in public, I also remember him in public.; if he gets closer to me by an inch more, I get closer to him by an arm's length; if he gets closer to me by an arm's length, I get closer to him by the span of an outstretched arm, and if he approaches me walking, I approach him running."'(1)

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'and unto Allah belong all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth....' (an-Nisa': 131) So do not say that the universe of Allah will be too narrow to encompass the livelihood of a divorced man and a divorced woman. Just as much as Allah Glorified is He has decreed divorce as a solution to their inability to live peacefully together. He bestows upon every married couple infinite grace. As a Muslim, you have to follow the path of the True Lord as much as all that is in the heavens and that is on earth do. You should then ask yourself this question, 'Who takes care of all your interests?'

It is the True Lord Glorified is He Who made things beyond your power subservient to you. Have you forced the sun to rise and provide you with light and warmth? Have you forced water to evaporate and then fall again in the form of rain? Furthermore, have you forced the wind to blow? Also, have you forced the soil by commanding it to supply the seed you implanted therein with the necessary nutritive elements the plant needs to grow? All of this is not within the realm of your will; rather, it has been made subservient to you by Allah. If you want to be righteous, you should be subservient to Him in the matters that He has left up to you. Also, you should say, 'I love the path you have set my Lord. I will thus obey You as much as possible.' You should embrace the commands and proscription of the path of Allah with all your heart and every action. If you do so, the entire universe will be obedient and amenable to you as much as the subservient part of the universe is.

'And unto Allah belong all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth....' (an-Nisa': 131) This is a reminder for us that everything is owned by Allah and obeys Him. So, as Allah's vicegerent in the universe, you should not be an exception; everything in it serves you. You should also ask yourself, 'Do I live in the light of the path of Allah or not?' The universe is harmonious inasmuch as it is subservient to Allah; in this manner there is no defect in universal laws. Allah the Almighty says: 'And the skies has He raised high, and has devised [for all things] a measure so that you [too, O men,] might never transgress the measure [of what is right]. Weigh, therefore, [your deeds] with equity, and cut not the measure short!' (ar-Rahman: 7-9)

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari in (At-Tawhid) and Muslim in his (Sahih) based on three relations

The True Lord Glorified is He explains that if you want the matters that can be controlled by your choice to be straightened then contemplate well the reality of the universe surrounding you. You will realise that the things that are subservient to man by nature are never the cause of any defect or problems; rather, man's voluntary choice is what is at odds with the path of Allah and is often the cause of all defects and problems.

'…And, indeed, We have enjoined upon those who were granted revelation before your time, as well as upon yourselves, to remain conscious of Allah…' (an-Nisa': 131). Allah Glorified is He explains that He has enjoined upon those to whom He has revealed His path before us, the Muslims, as much as He has enjoined upon us, the sealing nation, to adhere to the commands and proscriptions of His path. Thus, we have to make our choices submissive to the Will of Allah in order to be in harmony with the universe in which we live. He says that if we do so, everything in our life will be well ordered. The True Lord the Exalted did not say that this statement is exclusively applied to Muslims; it is rather, a universal matter that every messenger called for: '…And, indeed, We have enjoined upon those who were granted revelation before your time, as well as upon yourselves, to remain conscious of God…' (an-Nisa': 131).

Allah Glorified is He did not say, 'We have legislated' to those who were granted revelation before your time, and nor did He say: 'We have enacted.' Rather, He said wasyyna, which is the Arabic word in the aforementioned verse translated as 'enjoined.' The word wasyyna makes the listener feel the love the one who enjoins bears for him. '… And, indeed, we have enjoined upon those who were granted revelation before your time, as well as upon yourselves, to remain conscious of Allah…' (an-Nisa': 131). Being conscious of Allah means to follow His commands and avoid His prohibitions; we must govern our choices according to the path of Allah. If we govern our choices according to His path, we will get along and everything in our lives will be organized.

Subsequently, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '… And if you deny Him – behold, unto Allah belongs all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth, and Allah is indeed Self-Sufficient, ever to be praised.' (an-Nisa': 131) The opposite of denying Allah is to have faith in Him. He is Self-Sufficient and is in no need of anyone who abjures His faith. So, do not ever think that Allah is in need of your faith because He has granted His path to you. Rather, He only wants you to be a healthy, happy society. Even if you deny Allah, all that is will still be His and even you, who rebelliously denied Him, will continue to be subject to the Will of your Lord.

You, who deny Allah, will never control the birth, death or destiny of anyone. The universe is constant and intact as it is. The Quran drew our attention to the order of the universe in the saying of the True Lord: 'Do they not look at the sky above them – how We have built it and made it beautiful and free of all faults? And the earth – We have spread it wide, and set upon it mountains firm, and caused it to bring forth plants of all beautiful kinds, thus offering an insight and a reminder unto every human being who willingly turns unto Allah. And We send down from the skies water rich in blessings, and cause thereby gardens to grow, and fields of grain, and tall palm-trees with their thickly-clustered dates, as sustenance apportioned to men; and by [all] this We bring dead land to life: [and] even so will be [man's] coming-forth from death.' (Qaf: 6-11)

At any moment, Allah may command one of the universes He has created to be unbalanced. The earth we see stable and firm may suddenly shake, and about that Allah says in the Quran: 'He has made mountains stand firm on the earth, to prevent it shaking under you…' (an-Nahl: 15). Allah is the Creator of the earth and the One Who holds control over it. By His Will and Might, the system of the earth may be troubled at any moment, occasioning an earthquake in part of it, and causing everything in it to lose balance or even collapse.

By such catastrophes, Allah means to let us understand that the world is not mechanically governed; rather, its system is maintained based on particular means and causes that Allah has made and that He can suspend at any time. He may order tiny particles of dust to accumulate, creating a huge storm sufficient to block vision, as if it swallowed the world in its whirl! Allah thus directs our attention to this truth: He has created the universe and set laws to govern it according to His Will, but He can suspend these laws since they are never beyond the reach of His Might.

A land may be wholly dependent on rain. With rain falling throughout the year, fertility, greenness and abundance can be seen everywhere. Is this system run mechanically? No, it is Allah, Who has created rain and orders it to fall by His Will and Might, and Who may stop it, turning greenery into aridity, making people, cattle and plants die of thirst. The world is not merely mechanical, but it functions according to the Will of the Creator.

On another part of the earth, we may find a quiet land on which a beautiful mountain stands still. Suddenly, the summit of the mountain turns into a volcano that throws lava and fire. The land that was once splendid scenery becomes a scary place from which any living thing wants to escape. The glory of the human mind is not in trying to defy the Creator, but in aligning his choices with the Will of Allah. The mind, as miraculous as it is, is limited.

'Everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Allah. We have commanded those who were given the Scripture before you, and We command you, to be mindful of Allah. Even if you do ignore Him, everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Him, and He is Self-Sufficient, worthy of all praise' (an-Nisa': 131). As we see, Allah starts and concludes the verse with the same statement: '… Everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Allah,' and each of the two occurrences has a different meaning to convey. The first implies a command that we must obey Allah in order to be in harmony with the universe that belongs to Him. The statement is then repeated another time at the end of the verse to emphasise that Allah is Self-Sufficient—He holds control over the heavens and earth; everyone is dependent on Him; and He is in need to no one. Now, does the repetition look like a redundancy? This is the Book of Allah the Exalted above all imperfections. He declares at the beginning of the verse that '…Everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Allah,' which means we have to obey Him, and at the end, '…Everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Allah…' which means that He is the Self-Sufficient Who is in no need of His servants— their belief does not benefit Him; their disbelief does not harm Him. Let whoever wishes embrace faith, and let whoever wishes reject it, and each will receive their fair recompense: 'Say, "Now the truth has come from your Lord: let those who wish to believe in it do so, and let those who wish to reject it do so." We have prepared a Fire for the wrongdoers…' (al-Kahf: 29).

After making that declaration twice in the aforesaid verse, the same statement is repeated for a third time in the following verse:

وَلِلَّهِ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ وَكَفَىٰ بِٱللَّهِ وَكِيلًا ﴿١٣٢﴾

Yes, indeed, every- thing in the heavens and the earth belongs to God, and He is enough for those who trust in Him [132] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 132)

This time, it is a reassurance that Allah guarantees and protects the fundamentals of life for His servants. The sun, for instance, would never rebel and decide not to rise one day. The air would never decide not to blow. The earth would never cease to provide nutrients to living things. All of them function regularly by the Will of Allah Who has created humankind and nature and decreed that it has to contain our livelihood. By this, Allah means to explain to us that He is our Guardian Who takes care of our affairs and spares us the difficulty of disposing them. When any of us delegates a guardian to take care of some affairs, this spares him a lot of trouble, even though that guardian may commit a mistake, falter, accept bribes, commit an act of betrayal, etc. Allah the Exalted has infinite Power, so He assures His servants that the fundamentals of their existence are totally secured. Allah controls the sun and makes it in the service of His servants, so it will never deviate off the course of subservience. He controls water, wind and all the elements on earth. He is the Ultimate Sovereign and the Guardian over all creatures; He is the Best Guardian to Whom all praise is due and Who never cuts the means of life from His servants. Let us ponder this Hadith (saying of Prophet Muhammad): It has been reported that a Bedouin arrived at Medina, rested his camel and tied it, then stood up to observe the salat (the prayer) behind Prophet Muhammad. When the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him finished praying, the Bedouin untied his camel, embarked on it and then said: 'O Allah, have mercy on me and Muhammad and do not let anyone else have a share of Your mercy!' Hearing that, Prophet Muhammad commented: 'Who do you think is more ignorant of the truth, the man or his camel? Did you not hear what he said?’ People answered: ‘Yes.’ The Messenger of Allah explained to the man: ‘You have restricted something that is absolutely infinite! Allah’s Mercy is of a hundred parts. He has sent down to us one of them, and it is by this part that all creatures, including men, jinn and animals, have mercy on each other, and He kept with him ninety nine parts. Who do you think is more ignorant of the truth, the man or his camel?’(1)

Allah is indeed the Best Guardian. He is the Self-Sufficient, All-Sustaining Lord of all creation Who provides for them. You do your best and exhaust all possible means to earn your living, and when you are tired you just go to rest and sleep, and who disposes your affairs then? Who sends to you the outcomes of your struggle? It is Allah Who is never overtaken by sleep or slumber. So is there a better guardian than Allah?’… and He is enough for those who trust in Him’ (an-Nisa’: 132).

Allah does not only assure us that He is Self-Sufficient and in no need of His creatures. He does not just tell us that He has created all that is in the heavens and the earth, and that those who choose to disbelieve will be punished, and those who choose to believe will attain His Mercy. Allah also draws our attention to the fact that He possesses control over His creation and can replace them all with others. He says:

إِن يَشَأْ يُذْهِبْكُمْ أَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ وَيَأْتِ بِـَٔاخَرِينَ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ ذَٰلِكَ قَدِيرًا ﴿١٣٣﴾

If He so willed, He could remove you altogether and replace you with new people: He has full power to do so [133] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 133)

Some philosophers claim that it is true there is a Creator, but once He created the universe, he left it operating by itself, and He does not interfere with the affairs of His creation! Besides being illogical, this is also refuted by the revelations of Allah Who emphasises that He has created us and has full control over us, and that He can even remove us from existence and create others instead.

(1) Cited by Ahmad and Abu Dawud

The original Arabic text of the verse uses a past verb form in the last sentence: ‘… He has full power to do so’ (an-Nisa’: 133). When the past is used in reference to humans, it means that the state expressed was, but it is no more; however, when used by Allah, it does not confine the description ascribed to Him to the past; all creatures are subject to change, but He is the Creator Who has eternally existed with no beginning and no end and has eternally possessed all His Attributes. Allah is the One Who causes all things to change and He never changes. He has always been Fully Capable to do whatever He wills, even before the existence of all things. Allah has not started to have this Attribute when He created humankind; rather, He has created humankind out of His Might. He has always existed and has always been capable of all things. Allah says in the following verse:

مَّن كَانَ يُرِيدُ ثَوَابَ ٱلدُّنۡيَا فَعِندَ ٱللَّهِ ثَوَابُ ٱلدُّنۡيَا
وَٱلۡأٓخِرَةِۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ سَمِيعَۢا بَصِيرٗا ١٣٤

If some want the rewards of this world, the rewards of this world and the next are both God’s to give: He hears and sees everything [134]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 134)

But why do people persist in their heedlessness even though the Prophets of Allah have informed mankind that rewards both in this worldly life and in the Afterlife are in His Hand? Why do most people crave worldly gains and disregard the eternal good of the Hereafter? People act mindlessly of Allah even though if they obey Him, they will reap the rewards in this worldly life, like health, wealth, etc., for it is only in the Hand of Allah that our efforts and endeavours can be fruitful. Moreover, the obedient wins matchless rewards in the afterlife. Allah says: ‘If anyone desires a harvest in the life to come, We shall increase it for him; if anyone desires a harvest in this world, We shall give him a share of it, but in the Hereafter he will have no share’ (ash-Shura: 20).

Allah teaches us that winning the Afterlife does not mean sacrificing this worldly life. It is a faulty understanding that whoever seeks the reward of this life will not get the reward of the afterlife or vice versa. Rather, Allah wants

His servants to win the reward of both lives. Do not deprive yourself from the pleasures of this life that Allah has made lawful to you, but meanwhile focus on the Afterlife; that is the true life we should aspire to. Now, what does ‘reward’ convey? There are things that are done for you even though you do not ask for them to be done; such is not really a ‘reward.’ Other things happen as a result of your action; if you take the necessary action and exhaust the possible means, you will eventually reap the fruit, and that is what ‘reward’ means.

A good example is farming. You must sow seeds for plants to grow. The differences among people in this world—in terms of their progress versus backwardness, civilization versus barbarism, strength versus weakness—are all dependent on their efforts to employ the components of the universe Allah has created for us, not on those things already made subservient to humankind and already functioning without our interference. Some nations have established great civilizations after achieving breakthroughs in science. All humans are equal in terms of the resources Allah has made for our service without any effort on our part. As for the progress that defines each nation and makes the difference, this requires actions.

A higher stage of progress is achieved when one thinks even how to make use of the resources that already function without our interference. For example, the sun already provides us with light and heat, but we can also use its rays with a convex lens to produce fire. Rain falls naturally from the sky and fills water bodies and valleys. People have not stopped there, but they thought how to use that water to operate huge turbines and produce electricity.

Therefore, civilization is made through three stages. The first stage is based on the natural benefits we effortlessly receive from the natural resources that are already made subservient to us. The second stage consists in utilizing the other components with which Allah has endowed the world—so humankind should discover them and devise ways to make use of them. The third stage is to think how to employ even the natural resources we already use and develop new ways to get extra benefits from them. A good example of the latter is the production of solar energy gathered using machines that have been invented through human labour. We could have stopped at the common benefits we naturally receive from the sun, but effort has been made and fruits have, therefore, been reaped.

Think of the laser technology that works miracles in the field of medicine nowadays. The word LASER stands for 'light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation.' Spontaneous emission of radiation through the sun is a natural source of energy made subservient to humankind; we receive light and heat from the sun without having to work for it. The stimulated emission, on the other hand, is produced when light is amplified when directed through a particular medium that scientists have designed to produce massive energy. The acronym LASER was then invented to sum up and stand for the innovative process.

Accordingly, prosperity is achieved when we are able—through diligent effort and work of the mind—to use what naturally offers benefits to generate more benefits other than that we receive spontaneously.

This is what 'harvest' is meant to convey in the words of Allah: 'If anyone desires a harvest in the life to come…' (ash-Shura: 20). It refers to the fruits, the recompense received for a deed that has been done. If you seek the harvest of this world, you have to work for it. No pain, no gain. Allah, out of His Bounty and Mercy, has made the rewards of this worldly life attainable for anyone who works for it, whether he is a believer or a disbeliever. As for the rewards of the Afterlife, Allah has restricted them to those who believe in Him.

Indeed, the life of this world is but a fleeting comfort compared with the Life to come. Allah concludes the verse by saying: '…with Allah are the rewards of [both] this world and the life to come: and Allah is indeed All-Hearing, All-Seeing' (an-Nisa': 134). Would it not be foolish then to limit one's efforts and aspirations to winning only the rewards of this life when Allah offers us prosperity and success both in this life and in the Hereafter?

It is also worth noting that when Allah mentions rewards, He tells us that effort is essential for us to win rewards of this life, but He does not particularly mention the reward of the Afterlife to tell us that a believer is already rewarded in the Hereafter for whatever he does in this life if his intention is to please Allah, so he wins both here and there as a result of his struggle. The life of this world is, in essence, a transition, a passage to the Hereafter. Seek to please Allah by your deeds, and you will see the fruits of your devotion in this life and the Life to come.

Allah concludes the verse by saying: '…and Allah is indeed All-Hearing, All-Seeing' (an-Nisa': 134). We understand from the verse that the rewards of this life and the Afterlife are only attained through working and striving and by doing righteous deeds. A deed is whatever ensues from employment of human faculties. In this sense, talking is also a deed for which one is rewarded or punished. Whatever one says is recorded, and he will be held accountable for every word uttered. So there is talking and there is acting. These are two categories under which human conduct usually falls. To clarify this point, let us ponder these words of Allah: 'No indeed! You [people] do not honour orphans, you do not urge one another to feed the poor, you consume inheritance(1) greedily' (al-Fajr: 17-19).

When hearing a noble verse calling for giving to charity, the rich would know what they have to do. The poor, however, would perhaps think to themselves: 'We do not have anything to give!' Allah the Exalted has left no room for such lamentation and guided those, who have nothing, to what they should do: it is by urging others who have money in excess to their needs to give to the poor and needy. Those who can afford should comply with that divine command by giving money to charity, and those who cannot should urge the wealthy to give. To 'urge' is only to 'speak', to say what encourages the wealthy to feed the needy, but they are rewarded for it, too. Thus, good deeds can be by acting or by speaking. Just as a good action is a good deed, a good word is also a good deed.

We find a similar example in the following verse about fighting for the cause of Allah: 'But there is no blame attached to the weak, the sick and those who have no means to spend, provided they are true to Allah and His Messenger– there is no reason to reproach those who do good: Allah is most Forgiving and Merciful' (at-Tawba: 91).

Allah exempts the weak, the sick and those who have no means to equip themselves from participating in battles against enemies, so they will not be held accountable for failure to join those who fight for His cause. Instead, they are commanded to sincerely call for the Straight Path of Allah and His

---

(1) "This could refer to the inheritance of orphans or inheritance generally," Abdel Haleem, The Quran, A New Translation.

Messenger. Therefore, it suffices him, who is incapable of fighting, to spread the word of Allah and remind others of it. At the end of the verse, Allah says to whoever seeks His Good Pleasure, whether through acting or speaking: '…and Allah is indeed All-Hearing, All-Seeing' (an-Nisa': 134). Whatever good deed you do, whether by acting or by speaking, will not be effaced. Allah hears every word said and sees every act done. Therefore, attaining the rewards of this world requires work; that is, employing each faculty in the proper manner to perform its function. It is to let the tongue speak, the hands work and all the other faculties we are endowed with fulfil the purpose they are created for. The heart also has its work, and what is it? The work of the heart is neither heard nor seen. It harbours one's intentions behind everything he does. It is the place of sincerity. Allah says in a Qudsi Hadith: 'Sincerity is one of My secrets that I entrust with the hearts of those I love among My servants.' (1)

The heart bears one's intention behind every deed he does, and whether or not he is sincere to Allah, this knowledge is confined solely to Him the Almighty. Even Raqib and 'Atid, the two angels in charge of recording one's deeds, cannot determine his intentions. For this reason, Allah describes himself in several verses of the Quran as the Knower of Subtleties, the Aware. He knows the deepest and most hidden details of all things and is Aware of everything. Nothing can be concealed from Him and He has Power and Control over all things. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Deeds are judged based on intentions, and everyone ultimately gets recompensed for his intention. Accordingly, whoever emigrates for the cause of Allah and His Messenger will be rewarded accordingly, and whoever emigrates for a worldly interest he pursues or for a woman he wants to marry will be recompensed according to what he has emigrated for.' (2)

As we have explained before, deeds fall under two categories: words and actions because each one employs the faculties Allah has given him. Allah Almighty says in the Quran: 'O you who have attained to faith! Why do you say one thing and do another?' (as-Saff: 2) Words and actions are both counted as deeds, but there is another kind of deeds for which one is held accountable too; namely, the intention that lies in the heart. Allah is the All-Hearing, All-Seeing, Knower of Subtleties and Aware, so He hears whatever we say, sees whatever we do and knows whatever is in our hearts. In the following verse, Allah says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ كُونُوا۟ قَوَّٰمِينَ بِٱلْقِسْطِ شُهَدَآءَ لِلَّهِ وَلَوْ عَلَىٰٓ أَنفُسِكُمْ أَوِ
ٱلْوَٰلِدَيْنِ وَٱلْأَقْرَبِينَ ۚ إِن يَكُنْ غَنِيًّا أَوْ فَقِيرًا فَٱللَّهُ أَوْلَىٰ بِهِمَا ۖ فَلَا تَتَّبِعُوا۟
ٱلْهَوَىٰٓ أَن تَعْدِلُوا۟ ۚ وَإِن تَلْوُۥٓا۟ أَوْ تُعْرِضُوا۟ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ خَبِيرًا ﴿١٣٥﴾

You who believe, uphold justice and bear witness to God, even if it is against yourselves, your parents, or your close relatives. Whether the person is rich or poor, God can best take care of both. Refrain from following your own desire, so that you can act justly–if you distort or neglect justice, God is fully aware of what you do [135] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 135)

When Allah addresses His believing servants saying: 'You, who believe…' know that He establishes the grounds for the ruling that follows this call. Before a judge issues a verdict, he first presents the grounds underlying it. To Allah belongs the Highest Example. The basis on which Allah gives a command is faith in Him, so He always addresses the believers on this basis before prescribing a ruling, as in this noble verse: 'You who believe, fasting is prescribed for you…' (al-Baqara: 183).

Faith establishes the grounds for the divine ordinance. If you are a believer, you must therefore obey the Lord you believe in. Allah honours by His commands only those who have faith in Him. In the verse we are dealing with, He says: 'You, who believe, uphold justice…' (an-Nisa': 135). Faith in Allah is the most sublime form of justice; justice consists in giving everyone the right to which he is entitled. Since it is our duty to believe in Allah as the Only Allah, a believer has already upheld justice in its highest form by embracing faith.

In the verse at hand, Allah commands the believers, who have established justice by attaining faith, to be just in all their deeds as well. Justice is not to be practiced once and abandoned later. No, but we always have to be steadfast in upholding justice, as Allah enjoins on us: 'You who believe, uphold justice…' (an-Nisa': 135).

The Arabic expression used in the original text of the verse is a hyperbole; it does not say 'be just', but 'uphold justice' and maintain this attitude constantly: 'You, who believe, be qawwamina bi-al-qist (uphold justice)…' (an-Nisa': 135). The Arabic word qawwam is an intensive form that denotes steadfastness in the stated action, which is establishing qist (justice). Thus, the divine command to every believer means: maintain justice as a lasting attitude and observe it in all aspects of your life.

The word qist has been subject to some debate among scholars. The matter can be simply resolved as qasata means to commit injustice, and to remove this injustice is 'aqsata. The latter is prefixed by the letter alef (a–the first in Arabic alphabet) which denotes 'removal.' Hence, qist means to establish justice from the beginning, whereas iqsat (prefixed with the letter alef) means to establish justice by removing an injustice that took place at the beginning.

Assume that a first-instance court issued a judgment which it deemed to be just, so this would be qist. One of the litigants then appealed that judgment, and the court of appeal detected a mistake in the application of the law and cancelled the appealed judgment. Hence, the latter would be a case of 'removing' injustice; that is iqsat. This explication puts an end to the debate over the word qist. There are other examples of the aforementioned alef prefix which denotes 'removal.' The word 'ujmah means ambiguity or obscurity in a text. From the same root, 'a'jama- prefixed with the aforesaid alef- means removing that ambiguity or obscurity by offering clarification. The Arabic for 'lexicon' is mu'jam since a lexicon provides definitions and usages of words, removing any ambiguity about them. The same applies for aqsata that means establishing justice by undoing a wrong that had been committed.

So Allah commands the believers: 'You, who believe, uphold justice…' (an-Nisa': 135). As a believer, you have already achieved the noblest form of justice by devoting worship to the One Who is worthy of it; you have embraced faith in Allah, the Creator of the heavens and earth and you must observe justice constantly in everything you do. Still, it is not just about committing to justice because Allah also says: '… uphold justice and bear witness to Allah…' (an-Nisa': 135) It is not enough to do the right thing; we have to do it for the sake of pleasing Allah.

You may find a man who establishes justice among people, yet he does not believe in Allah. A disbeliever being just does not qualify him to attain the reward Allah promises those who have faith in Him. To attain such reward, one must uphold justice while having Allah in mind; it must be done solely to please Him Glorified is He. It is only within the realm of faith that establishing justice would not be intended for any interest, inclination or purpose other than managing life and the universe in the way Allah has ordained. Otherwise, if everyone decided to live based on their own desires and serving only their interests, life on earth would be ruined. Allah says: 'But if the truth were in accordance with their desires, the heavens, the earth and everyone in them would disintegrate…' (al-Mu'minun: 71).

So, a believer must uphold justice with his intention directed to pleasing Allah. A disbeliever or an atheist may be just, but will he receive reward in the Hereafter for his justice? He has established justice with only this worldly life in his mind, so he receives his reward in this life only. History may commemorate him or people may pay tribute to him, but since he has not thought of Allah, he has no right to attain His reward.

'You, who believe, uphold justice and bear witness to Allah, even if it is against yourselves…' (an-Nisa': 135). Normally, a witness is a person who testifies in favour of someone against another. When someone acknowledges a sin he has committed, he is thus testifying against himself. In this manner, a believer always gives testimony that provides evidence for the right judgment to be issued and justice to be established, even if this evidence is against his own self.

When a believer is required to bear witness to the truth, he should speak up and never conceal what should be revealed, even if that would bring afflictions and deleterious repercussions on him. Allah knows what fears or worries His servants may have and, in the Quran, He has presented reassurances to combat them. When a believer bears witness in favour of the truth, he should not fear any person of authority. He should entrust himself, his wealth, family and everything else with the One Who promises to protect them. Detriment has indeed befallen some people and their families just because they said the truth. Some despots even punished those who spoke the truth by torturing their families, knowing that such punishment would be much more painful. Hence, reassurance comes from the Almighty Allah: do not concern yourself with that; do not let the fear for your children or wealth withhold you from giving a just testimony. Rest assured that Allah is there for you and that He provides for His servants.

The frenzied pursuit of one's caprice and interests is often the reason why he prefers to support falsehood instead of the truth. One would refrain from standing up for a poor obscure person who has been wronged by a man of wealth or authority, just fearing that his testimony would cost him personal gains or interests furthered through the latter. This is forbidden in Islam. A true believer whose faith is firmly established in his heart, must comply with Allah's command and commit himself to justice and truth, even if it would bring on them or their families unfavourable outcomes. Richness or poverty of the ones involved in the case must not sway him from telling the truth. Rather, he should bear only Allah in his mind. Addressing such fears, Allah says—reassuring the believers after stating His command: '…Whether the person is rich or poor, Allah can best take care of both. Refrain from following your own desire so that you can act justly…' (an-Nisa': 135).

It is no wonder that one would give a false testimony in favour of a rich person, but Allah mentions both the rich and the poor, so what can induce someone to say other than the truth for the sake of a poor person? Just as greed would sway some, compassion and sympathy would sway others; a witness may think to himself: 'This man is poor and deserves mercy!' For this reason, Allah warns us against bias for anyone—rich or poor.

Testimony should be based only on the truth and not on any other considerations or implications, like richness or poverty of those concerned. We cannot be wiser than Allah or more caring than Him when it comes to the affairs and interests of His servants. He the Exalted says: '… Allah can best take care of both…' (an-Nisa': 135). You have created neither the rich nor the poor; Allah has created both and He is the best Disposer of their affairs. When you are required to give your testimony in any case, do not think of the richness or poverty of any parties concerned. Just say the truth in full, and Allah will take care of everything. He is the best Guardian and Protector.

Following desires and prejudices is the enemy of justice. An Arabic proverb says: ‘Desires and prejudices are the corruptors of judgment.’ Prejudices drive one astray from justice. Islamic history abounds in wonderful stories about justice, one of which is about a virtuous man who once went to the Caliph of his time and told him: ‘Discharge me of my position as a judge!’ The Caliph answered: ‘Who would then be fit for this position if you—whose justice everyone attests—want to leave it?!’ The judge explained: ‘People have learnt, O Prince of the believers, that I love eating dates. While I was in my house, my servant walked up to me with a plate full of dates, and we were still early in the season of dates and it is natural that I would be craving dates since I love them. I asked my servant: ‘Who brought these dates?’ Hearing the servant’s answer, I realized that the sender was someone involved in a dispute brought before me, so I rejected the dates. The day came when I was expected to pass my judgment. The dates’ sender and his opponent appeared before me, and, O Prince of the believers, I felt something in me that was trying to prevent me from looking at the cases of the two litigants on equal basis even though I had rejected the bribe!’ Based on such grounds, the Arab Muslim judge resigned his position.

Allah then says: ‘… if you distort or neglect justice, Allah is fully aware of what you do’ (an-Nisa’: 135). After Allah states His command, soothes any fears that are likely to hinder compliance, He warns the violators saying that if they give a testimony other than the truth, play with words to mislead the judge or refrain from giving testimony altogether, fearing the party against whom testimony should be given, know that Allah is Aware of all that you do.

Prejudices are rooted in the heart, and we have previously learnt that one’s deeds encompass what he says, what he does and what he harbours in his heart. Whatever you think or feel is known to Him Who is Aware of all things and Knower of Subtleties. Therefore, your distortion of the truth can never be concealed from Him.

Allah says in the following verse:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ ءَامِنُواْ بِٱللَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِۦ وَٱلۡكِتَٰبِ ٱلَّذِى نَزَّلَ عَلَىٰ
رَسُولِهِۦ وَٱلۡكِتَٰبِ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنزَلَ مِن قَبۡلُۚ وَمَن يَكۡفُرۡ بِٱللَّهِ وَمَلَٰٓئِكَتِهِۦ
وَكُتُبِهِۦ وَرُسُلِهِۦ وَٱلۡيَوۡمِ ٱلۡأٓخِرِ فَقَدۡ ضَلَّ ضَلَٰلَۢا بَعِيدًا ١٣٦

You who believe, believe in God and His Messenger and in the Scripture He sent down to His Messenger, as well as what He sent down before. Anyone who does not believe in God, His angels, His Scriptures, His messengers, and the Last Day has gone far, far astray [136] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 136)

Someone may say: Allah starts this verse by addressing His servants: 'You who believe…' Then, He commands them to '… believe in Allah and His Messenger…' Are they not already believers, as He calls them, so what is the significance of this command? Let us explain this. One may well profess faith in Allah whereas the creed he holds in his heart contradicts what he professes. The testimony of faith constitutes truth in itself, but it is a lie when uttered by the tongues of those who do not believe in it, for it is completely at odds with what they conceal in their hearts. This is why Allah says: 'When the hypocrites come to you [Prophet], they say, "We bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah." Allah knows that you truly are His Messenger and He bears witness that the hypocrites are liars' (al-Munafiqun: 1). The hypocrites have borne witness that Prophet Muhammad was the Messenger of Allah, which is actually the truth, but what makes them liars? They are liars in the sense that they only claimed to believe in that truth, but they did not really believe. However, Allah knows what they concealed in their hearts, so He exposed them to His Messenger: '… Allah knows that you truly are His Messenger and He bears witness that the hypocrites are liars' (al-Munafiqun: 1). They were not liars in the sense that what they told was itself falsehood, but they deserved the description since they only claimed to believe in that ultimate truth, while in fact they did not. Truthfulness is not confined to telling what is really true, but also holding it as truth yourself. If what one says is at odds with what he believes, he is a liar. Some wrongly believe that there are contradictions in the Quran. In fact, this misunderstanding arises from failure to realize the meanings of the Quranic verses and the messages they are intended to convey. In the verse we are dealing with, some do not realize that hypocrites' falsehood did not consist in their statement that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah. He is indeed! Rather, they lied when they said: "We bear witness…", so their lie consists in declaring faith verbally with their tongues while their hearts do not believe.

By asking the believers to '…believe in Allah and His Messenger…' (an-Nisa': 136), Allah means to call the believers to remain steadfast in their faith. They have already embraced faith, so let them hold fast to it. Another example is found in the following verse where Allah addresses Prophet Muhammad: 'Prophet, be mindful of Allah and do not give in to the disbelievers and the hypocrites: Allah is All Knowing, All Wise' (al-Ahzab: 1). Is not Prophet Muhammad already mindful of Allah? Actually, He is the most mindful of Him among His servants, but Allah means by this command to urge him to remain steadfast in this mindfulness.

When Allah says, 'You, who believe, believe in Allah and His Messenger…' (an-Nisa': 136), He means to call the believers to remain steadfast in their faith, to hold fast to it after receiving this verse as they have been before the verse. He calls on them never to let the bond of faith be severed. O believers, hold fast to the honour bestowed on you from your Lord. When one is addressed by a description that already applies to him and is then asked to fulfil that description, it means maintain it and remain steadfast in it.

Besides the believers, this verse also invites hypocrites and people of the Scripture to embrace faith. As long as one believes in no Allah other than Allah, this necessarily entails that he should endeavour to find out what Allah wants from him. Allah has sent His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad, to deliver His ordinance to us. For this reason, having faith in Allah requires the believer to have faith in His Messenger, the final Messenger who delivered the final, timeless Message. Reason alone may lead one to believe in the existence of the One Allah Who has created the universe—and sustains it—but how do we know Allah? How do we understand what He wants from us? The answer to such questions can only be found when one accepts what the Messenger of Allah has delivered to us.

Allah has sent His Messenger to inform us of His ordinance—what to do, what to avoid, what reward is promised to believers and what punishment is for those who deny the truth? How can we know all these matters without embracing the Message His Prophet calls for? Therefore, your faith in Allah must be associated with your faith in His Messenger and the Book sent down to him—the Noble Quran. This Book tells you that there are creatures of Allah that you cannot see; namely, the angels, and one of these angels communicated the Allah's revelations to Prophet Muhammad. Faith means to believe in the Unseen since Allah tells us it exists. The people of the Scripture have already believed in Allah, His angels, His Messengers and Books, so they are commanded to believe in Prophet Muhammad as the final Messenger and what he communicated as the Book of Allah.

Allah has told us about the existence of creatures we do not see, like the angels. This suggests that we should ponder the creation of the universe and discover what we do not know. Allah leaves to humankind the task of discovering new beings and new aspects of the universe that were not known to them before. He has provided us with evidence that implies the existence of such unknown things and left us the mission of discovery. A good illustrative case is the discovery of microbes in the seventeenth century. Microbes have always been there, but we could not perceive them. With the invention of microscopes, people managed to see microbes and determine their characteristics, species and kinds; and researchers still seek to attain more knowledge about microbes. In this sense, microbes are relatively new to us even though they have existed for a long time.

If people in the dark ages had been told about the existence of microbes, they would not have believed in them. Microbes are living beings made of the same substance we are made of; yet, they are too small for the naked eye to see them. When scientists invented tools to magnify images of things hundreds of times, we managed to see those tiny creatures. Something being imperceptible does not mean it does not exist.

When Allah talks to us about the creation of angels, jinn and Satan, who runs in the human being the way blood runs through him, what prevents some from having faith in what He says?! A disbeliever or an atheist believes that a microbe unconsciously insinuates itself into the human body, and the symptoms of illness start to appear. We have learnt about this when the means of knowledge and perception became available. It is logical then to believe that Allah has created other beings from substances other than that from which He has created man: ‘You who believe, believe in Allah and His Messenger and in Al-kitab (the Scripture) He sent down to His Messenger, as well as Al-kitab (the Scriptures) He sent down before…’ (an-Nisa’: 136).

In the first occurrence of the Arabic word, Al-kitab (the Scripture), in the aforesaid verse, the word is prefixed with al that functions here as a definite article, so the word is a definite Scripture; that is, the Noble Quran. In the second occurrence of the word in this verse, it is also prefixed with al, but it functions here as a generic article. The prefix al in Arabic may be added to a singular noun to refer to the entire kind the stated noun encompasses. Thus, the second occurrence of Al-kitab refers to all the Scriptures that had been sent to Allah’s Messengers before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

There is another example of the generic al in the following verses: ‘By the declining day, al-insan (humankind) is [deep] in loss, except for those who believe, do good deeds…’ (al-’Asr: 1-3). The word insan is singular, yet it is prefixed with the generic article al, so it is understood to refer to all humankind. The words of Allah, ‘… except for those who believe, do good deeds…’ refer to an exception of the referent of the word al-insan, which means it refers to all humankind and not to a single person even though the word comes in its singular form. When an exception is made with reference to a word, it means this word has a generic quality.

The definite al also gives the meaning of uniqueness or prevalence. When it is prefixed to the word kitab, it refers to the Noble Quran—the al article here, plus being a definite article referring to particular book, also bears the connotations of perfection or distinction, so al-kitab is the perfect Book that has not been distorted. For instance, it is said: he is ar-rajul(1) (the one), which means that he is a man singled out for his distinctive qualities, manhood, magnanimity, courage, etc. So, when the word al-kitab is mentioned without any particular modifier or description, it is understood that it refers to the Noble Quran unless the context indicates otherwise.

(1) This means al-rajul, but the /l/ of the definite article al is assimilated into the /r/ of the word rajul since it is a solar letter.

'…Anyone who does not believe in Allah, His angels, His Scriptures, His Messengers and the Last Day has gone far, far astray' (an-Nisa': 136). This means that whoever believes in Allah yet does not believe in all that is mentioned in this verse is also a disbeliever.

Some Jews, like 'Abdullah ibn Salam, his nephews Salam and Salama, Asad and Usayd, sons of Ka'b, Tha'laba ibn Qays and Yamin ibn Yamin went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said: 'We believe in you, the Book revealed to you, Prophet Musa (Moses), the Torah and 'Uzayr (Ezra), but we abjure all other books and messengers.' Prophet Muhammad told them: 'Rather, believe in Allah, His Messenger, Muhammad, His Book, the Quran, and every Book that was revealed before him.' They answered: 'No, we will not do so.' The verse we are dealing with was then revealed, so they all believed in what they had rejected before.(1)

The verse is also addressed to the hypocrites. Allah also calls them to truly embrace the faith that they have only professed with their tongues. He urges them to let the beliefs they harbour in their hearts align with the testimony they have declared. Thus, the verse is addressed to the believers calling them to remain steadfast in faith; it is also addressed to the people of the Scripture calling them to believe in all the Messengers and Books of Allah without any exceptions, and to the hypocrites as well so that they believe with their hearts in what they have professed with their tongues. Therefore, whoever rejects anything Allah mentions in this noble verse is considered a disbeliever, even if he believes in some of what Allah commands. To believe in some and reject some of what Allah commands means faith is not truly ingrained in the heart.

'… Anyone who does not believe in Allah, His angels, His Scriptures, His Messengers, and the Last Day has gone far, far astray' (an-Nisa': 136). Going astray is to proceed without guidance, to lose track of the intended goal. He who persists in disbelief after receiving Allah's admonition has not only gone astray, but very far astray to the extent of losing every sign that leads back to the Straight Path. Those who go astray and those who are rightly guided actually share the same starting point. However, one of them commits himself to the Straight Path Allah has guided us to, always bearing in mind his ultimate goal of pleasing Allah by obeying Him; the other continues to deviate from the way until he loses every clue that can guide him back to it. He gets lost in the whirl of disbelief. Allah says in the following verse:

---

(1) Cited in Al-Khashshaf, by Jarullah Az-Zamakhshari

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ ثُمَّ كَفَرُوا۟ ثُمَّ ءَامَنُوا۟ ثُمَّ كَفَرُوا۟ ثُمَّ ٱزْدَادُوا۟
كُفْرًا لَّمْ يَكُنِ ٱللَّهُ لِيَغْفِرَ لَهُمْ وَلَا لِيَهْدِيَهُمْ سَبِيلًۢا ﴿١٣٧﴾

As for those who believe, then reject the faith, then believe again, then reject the faith again and become increasingly defiant, God will not forgive them, nor will He guide them on any path [137] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 137)

The verse describes the hypocrites who professed faith and concealed in their hearts rejection of it. Allah describes them in another verse, saying: 'Some of the People of the Book[1] say, 'At the beginning of the day, believe in what has been revealed to these believers [the Muslims], then at the end of the day reject it so that they too may turn back' (Al-'Imran: 72).

Hypocrites take the issue of faith lightly; to them it is only a word said, not a creed firmly established in their hearts. They would apparently perform the requirements of Islam, the rituals or acts of worship it enjoins on the believers so that no one would suspect them. In their hearts, however, they harbour disbelief and are more dangerous than the disbelievers who declare their enmity to faith and its adherents. Their way is deception, but Allah has exposed them in the Quran over fourteen centuries ago: 'The Bedouins say, "We have attained to faith." Say [to them, O Muhammad]: "You have not [yet] attained to faith; you should [rather] say, 'We have [outwardly] surrendered'– for [true] faith has not yet entered your hearts."…' (al-Hujurat: 14)

Allah knows what is in the hearts of the hypocrites, so He has exposed those to their own selves and to His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They used to be the first to rush to salat (the prayer). When Prophet Muhammad

---

(1) Refers to Christianity, Judaism and their adherents peace and blessings be upon him exposed them and explained that they did not really believe, but only outwardly surrendered to the commands of Islam; then, they realized that he could reveal what they concealed in their hearts.

They would have gone even more flagrantly astray and ascribed divinity to Prophet Muhammad for knowing these secrets. To give them no chance to do this, Allah commanded His Messenger to let them know that he was informed of their secret by Him the Almighty and he had no supernatural ability to see through their hearts: '… Say [to them, O Muhammad]: "You have not [yet] attained to faith..."…' (al-Hujurat: 14).

Thus, Prophet Muhammad acknowledged that he only knew their secret when Allah revealed it to him. This prevents anyone from going to the extreme of ascribing divinity to Prophet Muhammad instead of believing in him as the Messenger of Allah who received revelations from Him.

What Prophet Muhammad said should make everyone believe that he was a Messenger from Allah Who has sent down those revelations to him; otherwise, he would have never known them. This is absolutely clear in the context of the verse: 'The Bedouins say, "We have attained to faith." Say [to them, O Muhammad]: "You have not [yet] attained to faith; you should [rather] say, 'We have [outwardly] surrendered'– for [true] faith has not yet entered your hearts."…' (al-Hujurat: 14)

This is an embarrassing yet logical exposure of what they concealed in their hearts. Some of the Bedouins who heard this verse commented: 'Thank Allah there is a hope that faith may enter our hearts.' They found this clause particularly expressive of this expectation: '…for [true] faith has not yet entered your hearts.' (al-Hujurat: 14) It has not yet entered it, but may do afterwards, and indeed it did, and they became truly believers.

Allah says in the verse we are dealing with: 'As for those who believe, then reject the faith, then believe again, then reject the faith again and become increasingly defiant…' (an-Nisa': 137). This refers to those who died as disbelievers even after the Truth was revealed to them. It may be meant to allude to the Jews who had faith in Prophet Musa (Moses), but then disbelieved in Prophet 'Isa (Jesus); the Christians believed in Musa (Moses) and 'Isa (Jesus), but then stubbornly rejected belief in Prophet Muhammad.

Disbelief in Prophet Muhammad takes them out of the community of believers since they deny the Message Allah has sent His final Messenger to deliver in its most perfect form.

Allah informs us of their destiny: '… Allah will not forgive them, nor will He guide them on any path' (an-Nisa': 137). They deliberately intended to make the believers doubt their religion by rejecting faith after having embraced it. Some of the believers might think: 'They have embraced faith before, so what can make them reject it now? They must have detected some defects in the new religion which made them shun it!' Allah Almighty depicts this attitude in the Quran by saying: 'Some of the People of the Book say, 'At the beginning of the day, believe in what has been revealed to these believers [the Muslims], then at the end of the day reject it so that they too may turn back' (Al-'Imran: 72).

They wanted to incite doubt in the believers regarding faith by ostensibly embracing it and then declaring disbelief afterwards; they did so in the hope that Muslims would turn sceptical and forsake their faith. Allah reveals their intention in the Quran and also informs us and them of the punishment that awaits them: '… Allah will not forgive them, nor will He guide them on any path' (an-Nisa': 137). What they did was an act of great treachery against Allah and His Messenger, so they deserved the recompense Allah has prepared for them: ' Allah does not forgive the joining of partners with Him: anything less than that He forgives to whomever He wills…' (an-Nisa': 48).

So Allah concludes the verse, saying: '… Allah will not forgive them, nor will He guide them on any path' (an-Nisa': 137). Guidance carries two meanings: the first is leading someone to the Straight Path by only showing them the way so they have the freedom to go along it or not; the second meaning is guidance through providing support and assistance. The first meaning applies to all humankind; that is, Allah guides them all by showing them His Way. The second is confined to those who accept faith, so Allah guides them to what pleases Him by offering assistance, so they would remain steadfast in the faith they have willingly chosen to embrace. See how Allah addresses this issue in the Quran: 'As for Thamud, We gave them guidance but they preferred blindness, so they were struck by a blast of humiliating punishment for their misdeeds' (Fussilat: 17).

Allah has showed them the path of guidance, but since they rejected it altogether and never moved a step in its direction, Allah deprived them of assistance and left them immersed in blindness. Through His Books and Messengers, Allah has made clear to all humankind the path that leads to goodness and righteousness. Only those who choose to follow this path receive help and support from Allah Who says in the Quran: '… They were young men who believed in their Lord, and We gave them more and more guidance' (al-Kahf: 13). Suppose you see someone who is lost, so you offer to guide him to the way that would lead to his destination. If he accepts your help with gratitude and shows willingness to listen to you, you would offer further assistance to help him reach his destination successfully. If he rejects your help upfront and refuses to listen, would you offer him more guidance or help? This is how Allah leads His servants to the Straight Path. Allah helps whoever accepts His ordinance and provides him with further assistance and guidance to facilitate the obedience to him. In this respect, Allah says about observing salat (the prayer): 'Seek help with steadfastness and prayer—though this is hard indeed for anyone but the humble' (al-Baqara: 45). Compliance with the ordinance of Allah is hard except for those who are humbly submissive to Him and willing to receive His guidance.Guidance thus takes place in two phases: the first phase is that of leading to the Right Way, and the second is that of offering further assistance to those who accept faith.

Faith should not be subject to doubt or questioning. The essence of faith has been the same ever since Prophet Adam until Prophet Muhammad was sent with the final Message. They all called for the same creed, but were sent to different people at different times and places and with different circumstances. Islam came as the final, timeless Message that completes and perfects all the previous messages and is fit for all people at all times and places until the end of time. True faith means accepting and believing in all that Allah sends—without exceptions. To believe in some of the Messengers and books and shun others is disbelief in the One Who has sent them all. Those who believe in all the Messengers yet do not believe in Prophet Muhammad, or those who ascribe a son or spouse to Allah—the Exalted above this—have thus disbelieved in Allah. Islam is the final Message; so whoever denies the Truth it has brought will have no other chance to return to faith, for no other Messengers will be sent to people. This is why Allah says at the beginning of the verse: ‘As for those who believe, then reject the faith, then believe again, then reject the faith again…’ (an-Nisa’: 137) and says at the end: ‘…and become increasingly defiant…’ Their defiance is manifested in their denial of the final Message sent down to Prophet Muhammad, so they will have no chance to attain faith anymore.

They will have their just recompense: ‘… Allah will not forgive them…’ (an-Nisa’: 137). Allah will not guide them to the Straight Path since they have deliberately turned away from Him. On the other hand, Allah will not reject those who accept faith and submit to Him; to them, He offers further guidance through assistance to remain steadfast in following the Straight Path. Allah is in no need of us; He does not benefit from our devoutness, but we are in need of Him to guide us, provide for us, dispose our affairs and reward us for our obedience. Whoever Allah rejects will find guidance nowhere else. He is the Lord and Creator and our hearts are in His Hand. Those He does not guide have actually deprived themselves from guidance since they do not pursue the way that can lead them there.

Allah says in other verses: ‘Allah will not forgive those who have disbelieved and do evil, nor will He guide them to any path except that of Hell, where they will remain for ever– this is easy for Allah’ (an-Nisa’: 168-169). The only way paved for them is that leading to eternal torment in Hell fire. Allah says in the following verse:

بَشِّرِ ٱلْمُنَٰفِقِينَ بِأَنَّ لَهُمْ عَذَابًا أَلِيمًا ﴿١٣٨﴾

[Prophet], tell such hypocrites that an agonizing torment awaits them[138] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 138)

Those whose faith is deeply rooted in their hearts will not show signs of doubt or hesitance between faith and disbelief. Such signs are always manifested by those who have twisted faith, so they always sway between faith and disbelief, and their hesitation is most conspicuous whenever they are tested. Allah has commanded Prophet Muhammad to give them this admonition: ‘[Prophet], tell such hypocrites that an agonizing torment awaits them’ (an-Nisa’: 138).

We know that the hypocrite is the one who overtly declares faith and conceals his infidelity. The word ni which refers to the holes a jerboa creates as a faq (the Arabic for 'hypocrisy') is originally derived from the expression nafiqa' camouflage. In order to deceive whoever wants to harm or catch it; a jerboa digs two openings, enters its hole through one of them and gets out through the other one which is concealed, so a hunter would lie in wait for it at the visible opening, unaware that it has actually sneaked out from another invisible one.

'Give glad tidings to the hypocrites.' promising tidings are meant to inform someone about a pleasant or good thing that will happen to him in the future. But are the hypocrites informed of something good that will happen to them? No, promising tidings is always about something good. For this reason, we expect that the hypocrites would be warned against what awaits them rather than being informed of the good that expects them. But Allah Glorified is He uses rhetorical styles to magnify the scale of torment. If He were to say: warn them against the grievous suffering that awaits them, the discourse would be probable. As hypocrites, they were prepared to hear evil. But the True Lord said: 'Give promising tidings to the hypocrites that there is for them a painful punishment.' This style is thus intended for the purpose of irony and humiliation; it serves as a tool to help the rhetorician perform his rhetorical task. Sometimes contradictions give us a truer picture than reality. For instance, if you approached a miser and told him: 'Welcome, Hatim,' what would be the stance of anyone attending this incident? You would have transformed him from the reality of the miser to an image of Hatim At-Ta'i, a well-known Arab figure of generosity. In doing so, you would have transformed the miser twice: you changed his status as a miser and then you ridiculed him. The reason is that inasmuch as you call a miser 'Hatim', you castigate, ridicule and humiliate him; for you have changed his mean and contemptible character into the opposite—an elevated, distinct and great character— in order to humiliate and loathe him.

The contrast is meant to reflect the radical difference. For instance, you may come across a tall man whom you call: 'Welcome, dwarf,' this is the contrast. Similarly, you may say to a short man: 'Welcome, giant'; this is also a contrast. If you meet a short man and then sit down to shake his hands, this is a form of ridiculing and sarcasm. The contrasts are used for rhetorical purposes to convey the meaning intended by the speaker. The saying of the True Lord: ‘Give glad tidings to the hypocrites,’ means that you hypocrites have accomplished what you desire through hypocrisy; it is as if you have been hypocritical because you like suffering. Since you have been hypocrites because you like suffering, I announce to you that you will suffer. Does the hypocrite not intend to achieve a purpose with his hypocrisy? He does. For this reason, the True Lord depicts his purpose for him as suffering.

When you want to escalate an issue, you shift your audience’s attention from something to its opposite. For instance, someone may be thirsty because he is either confined or imprisoned; when he wants to have a sip of water, his guard may deny him. This man may despair about the possibility that the guard brings him a cup of water. But if the guard wants to exacerbate the torture, he may fetch a glass of water and put it near the man. If the prisoner reaches out with his hands to grab the glass, the guard pours the water on the floor to increase the torture. When Allah Glorified is He says ‘glad tidings’, the one to whom it is addressed understands that the subject of the discourse is supposed to be a pleasant matter. If the True Lord then says: ‘that there is for them a painful punishment.’ this means that the anguish they feel is double. Allah Glorified is He has initiated it with an announcement of good news, but then He sealed it with a warning.

For instance—and to Allah Glorified is He belongs the supreme and most exalted parables—a father may say to his son: ‘Study, my son, so that you do not fail.’ If the son continues to play, the father may then say: ‘Son, the exam is approaching and you have to study.’ The boy may not pay attention until the exam day comes. The father then finds out that his son has failed when the exam results are announced. The father may then say to his son: ‘I congratulate you on your failure in the exam.’ Inasmuch as he says ‘I congratulate you’ he pleases his son because he is expecting to hear good news. However, when the son later hears about his failure, he gets depressed.

The phrase ‘glad tidings’ gives an impression which shows on the face; were the impression sad, one’s face would appear sad and he would look depressed. By contrast, if the impression were happy, his face would look delighted and pleased. Thus, the face reflects the impressions of the human psyche, including happiness, delightfulness, illumination, frowning and grief. Therefore, the phrasemay introduce either a pleasant or a sad piece of news. However, it is mostly used with happy news, whereas a warning is used to convey sad news that causes depression.

In another verse, the True Lord depicts the suffering of the disbelievers on the Day of Judgment and how He aggravates their torment: 'And if they call for relief, they will be relieved.' (al-Kahf: 29)

When we hear the word 'relief', we may infer that the disbelievers will be given something good and that mercy will be bestowed upon them, but the water given to them comes as 'water like murky oil.' The listener or reader of this verse may wonder: 'Is it a form of rescuing or torment?' This image is thereby intended to magnify the suffering. The water given to them is like murky oil; therefore, it foments their pain.

The severity of suffering—as we know—is proportional to the power of the one inflicting it. If the one inflicting suffering is a finite being, then suffering will be finite. If the one inflicting suffering is infinite, then suffering will also be infinite. How severe would the suffering be if it were proportional to the strength of the Powerful? Suffering is described as grievous in one instance, as humiliating in another and as enormous in a third. All those descriptions complement each other, and each one of them describes a specific aspect of suffering; grief is a feeling that the self- experiences due to what it suffers. Great suffering is the suffering that reached its apex; nevertheless, one may endure the suffering even though it has reached its apex. But if the suffering is inflicted by the True Lord, it will be too severe for anyone to conceal it. The endurance of any person, no matter how tolerant he may be, cannot handle such pain. This is an enormous and also grievous suffering in regard to the body, and although one may be patient and enduring at the beginning, he will ultimately collapse; at that point, the suffering becomes humiliation.

Because the hypocrites and the disbelievers are completely enmeshed in materialism, Allah Glorified is He describes their suffering as grievous because grievous suffering is only felt by the physical senses. Afterwards, the True Lord mentions some of the characteristics of the hypocrites:

ٱلَّذِينَ يَتَّخِذُونَ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ أَوۡلِيَآءَ مِن دُونِ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَۚ
أَيَبۡتَغُونَ عِندَهُمُ ٱلۡعِزَّةَ فَإِنَّ ٱلۡعِزَّةَ لِلَّهِ جَمِيعٗا ١٣٩

Do those who ally themselves with the disbelievers rather than the believers seek power through them? In reality all power is God's to give [139] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 139)

The first sign of hypocrisy is when the hypocrite takes a disbeliever as an ally, gets closer to him, treats him affectionately, elicits his advocacy and support, keeps his company and sits with him rather than with the believers. We know that all human actions must have a purpose; no action could be severed from the purpose for which it is intended. Only the insane do actions purposelessly. By contrast, the actions of any rational person are intended for a purpose and an end he wishes to accomplish. The hypocrites take the disbelievers as allies in preference to the believers; but what is their purpose in doing so? The True Lord exposes this matter and explains that, by doing so, the hypocrites seek to be honoured by the disbelievers. For this reason, they take them as allies in preference to the believers. Allah Glorified is He calls their attention to their ignorance because they pursued a path that leads to the exact opposite of the purpose they intended.

Since they seek honour, they ought to have inquired about the true meaning and significance of honour. Honour is robustness and strength. In the context of the verse, the meaning intended is advocacy and prevalence. When it is said that Allah Glorified is He is 'Aziz— the Almighty —it means that Allah Glorified is He dominates everything and is too powerful for anyone to overcome His strength or resist His punishment. If it is said that someone is 'aziz, it means that he is invincible. If it is said that something is 'aziz, it means that it is rare, and since it is rare, it is precious. Precious metals are indeed rare and scarcely found.

Since the hypocrites seek honour, they ought to seek it from the one who has it. Is it possible that they may seek it from their likes? If you seek honour, it means that you do not have it in yourselves; if you were honourable, you would not have sought to be honoured by the disbelievers. That is evidence that they were devoid of any honour, since they sought to have it from those who are equally subject to vicissitudes and life changes like themselves. Both the hypocrites and the disbelievers are humans; and since all humans are subject to vicissitudes, they may be honourable today and abject tomorrow. The means to achieve honour are self-sufficiency, power and esteem, and all these factors are subject to vicissitudes.

Hypocrites have sought honour from those who are equal and subject to vicissitudes as much as you are. They did not seek it from the eternal Possessor of all honour, the True Lord. If you really desire honour, you should seek it from the One Who is not subject to vicissitudes—the True Lord. For this reason, the True Lord explained to them that if you want to learn how to pursue honour, you have to change the way you seek it. You take the disbelievers as allies in preference to the believers, and you seek honour from them as well as from others who are equally susceptible to vicissitudes. Those who are susceptible to vicissitudes are in a constant flux of change every day. If the disbelievers are rich one day, they may be poor the next. In human life, you have seen rich people becoming poor, and strong people becoming weak; therefore, seeking honour from those who are susceptible to vicissitudes means that you are not honourable; that is, you seek honour from the wrong source. If you want true honour, you will have to seek it from the One Whose Might does not change—The True Lord, Who says: 'All honour belongs to Allah Glorified is He [alone].' (an-Nisa': 139) This statement involves a correction of the way in which honour ought to be sought. Everyone must seek honour inasmuch as he believes in Allah Glorified is He. Allah Glorified is He is the One Who confers honour and His Honour and Might never change. 'All' here indicates that there are different types of honour: the honour of being rich, the honour of being powerful and the honour of being esteemed. If one wants to know all these types and learn about them, he must know that all of them belong to the True Lord.

In order to properly fulfil their servitude to Allah Glorified is He; believers must be conscious that they are the servants of only One God. Since we are servants of Allah Glorified is He, He has obviated our need to be abjectly subservient to anyone else. Allah Glorified is He salvaged the believer by virtue of his faith and saved him the humiliation of being subservient to any other source of power. Allah Glorified is He saved the weak from being abjectly subservient to the strong, and likewise the poor from the rich, and saved the sick from the healthy.

Therefore, when the True Lord says: ‘All honour belongs to Allah Glorified is He [alone],’ this means that if you, human being, seeks a permanent honour that surpasses all other forms of honour, then you will have recourse to Allah Glorified is He; He has honoured us inasmuch as we are His creatures. For instance, the True Lorddid not let the poor borrow from the rich; rather, He has said: ‘Who is it that would loan Allah Glorified is He a goodly loan so He may multiply it for him many times over? And it is Allah Glorified is He who withholds and grants abundance, and to Him you will be returned.’ (al-Baqara: 245)

Allah Glorified is He raises His poor servant to the highest level of honour. The poor servant of Allah Glorified is He does not borrow; rather, the loan is required by Allah Glorified is He. For this reason, someone said to a weak person: ‘You are asking people for help; are not you bashful enough not to ask?’ The poor man then answered: ‘I have asked people by the power of Allah’s command.’ Thus, the needy ask in the Name of Allah Glorified is He; this means that the poor take Allah Glorified is He as an advocate and ask for help in His name. When man seeks honour from his counterpart, he takes refuge in the power of this being though that power was bestowed upon him by Allah Glorified is He and Allah Glorified is He might as well take it away.

We should thereby consider the Infinite Power of Allah Glorified is He —every power in the world is given by Allah Glorified is He; He bestows wealth, esteem and honour. Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَقَدْ نَزَّلَ عَلَيْكُمْ فِى ٱلْكِتَٰبِ أَنْ إِذَا سَمِعْتُمْ ءَايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ يُكْفَرُ بِهَا
وَيُسْتَهْزَأُ بِهَا فَلَا تَقْعُدُوا۟ مَعَهُمْ حَتَّىٰ يَخُوضُوا۟ فِى حَدِيثٍ غَيْرِهِۦٓ ۚ إِنَّكُمْ إِذًا
مِّثْلُهُمْ ۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ جَامِعُ ٱلْمُنَٰفِقِينَ وَٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ فِى جَهَنَّمَ جَمِيعًا ﴿١٤٠﴾

As He has already revealed to you [believers] in the Scripture, if you hear people denying and ridiculing God’s revelation, do not sit with them unless they start to talk of other things, or else you yourselves will become like them: God will gather all the hypocrites and disbelievers together into Hell [140]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 140)

The True Lord orders the believers to avoid the company of any of the disbelievers whenever they start mocking or denying the truth of Allah Glorified is He 's Message until they start talking about a different subject. Allah Glorified is He has commanded the believers to do so in order that they may not be like the disbelievers, because Allah Glorified is He will gather the hypocrites and the disbelievers in the fire. In this manner, only Allah Glorified is He protects those who have faith, and He safeguards it against any attack. Those who are jealous about their faith are the true believers. As long as you have believed and accepted Islam as your religion, then do not ever indulge anyone who attacks the religion. If you do so, this implies that he is dearer to you than your faith. Since you have pursued faith as your path and creed, then you must protect your faith against anybody's attacks. If someone dares to censure, ridicule or make false claims about your faith, then your jealousy about it makes it incumbent upon you to give up this person's company.

At the beginning, the believers were a helpless few who were incapable of confronting the disbelievers and the hypocrites. But when the believers abandoned their company, when they badmouthed Allah's Messages, both the disbelievers and the hypocrites realized that honour of faith is dearer to Muslims than their company. By contrast, if a Muslim keeps the company of the disbelievers and the hypocrites while they are disparaging Islam, this would imply that the latter's company is dearer to him than his faith. The disbelievers may then turn that discourse into a continuous discussion to expose the status of faith in the Muslims' hearts. But when a disbeliever sees a believer getting repelled and turned off by any action entailing any ridiculing of Islam, he realizes that a believer's faith is dear to him.

This verse is not the first about this subject matter; it is a reference to a previous ruling. We know that this verse was revealed in Medina which means that there is a verse that was revealed before, while the Prophet was still in Mecca. The True Lord says: 'And when you see those who engage in [offensive] discourse concerning Our verses, then turn away from them until they enter into another conversion. And if Satan should cause you to forget, then do not remain after the reminder with the wrongdoing people.' (al-An'am: 68)

Here the True Lord indicates that He has revealed a ruling related to this matter at the beginning; this was the ruling revealed about the disbelievers in Mecca where the disbelievers took advantage of the weakness of the believers.

Further, at that point, there was no ruling prohibiting the believers from keeping company of the disbelievers. Some of the believers were slaves of the disbelievers. In addition, some of the early Muslims had common interests with the disbelievers. The ruling then came along: if those disbelievers start imputing falsities to the religion, then abandon their company. Here in the chapter of an-Nisa', Allah Glorified is He reminds the believers that the ruling commanding them to abandon the company of the disbelievers once they start disparaging faith, is a continuous one. It applies to the believers from the time when they were still living among the polytheists who worshipped idols in Mecca to the time when they live in Medina alongside some of the people of the Book. When Allah Glorified is He assigns something, it is always within the capacity of man. Therefore, if one forgets Allah's Command, he must immediately hasten to abandon the company of those who speak ill of Allah's Messages once he remembers it. It has been stated in the Quran that if the believers hear people denying or ridiculing Allah's Messages, they should leave that place. We notice that the condition in the earlier verse was not hearing people denying or ridiculing Allah's Messages but rather seeing them: By contrast, hearing is mentioned in the verse under consideration: 'And it has already come down to you in the Book that when you hear the verses of Allah Glorified is He [recited], they are denied [by them].' What matters here is the awareness of the fact that the religion of Allah Glorified is He is being offended, regardless of whether one learns about it through hearing or seeing.

Those who ascribe divinity to others beside Allah Glorified is He or others from amongst the enemies of Islam may offend the religion in a visible or audible way. Others may do so through winking or insinuating once they see a Muslim. The saying of the True Lord: 'so do not sit with them until they enter into another conversation,' indicates that if they embark on an action other than that of offending Allah's Messages, then the believers may keep their company. This was at the outset of Islam. At that time, the believers had common interests with those who ascribed divinity to others beside Allah Glorified is He and the people of the Book; the Muslim community could not stand on its own. If the True Lord had immediately told them through His Prophet Muhammad: 'you must not company either the disbelievers or those who ascribe divinity to others beside Me,' this would have impinged on the interests of the believers.

The word 'engage in [offensive] discourse' has a clear concrete implication. It is to engage in discussing something false or, in general, to engage in the discussion of subject about which no conclusion could be reached. The scholars assert that we should not engage in discussing the higher attributes of Allah Glorified is He and that it is improper to do so since discussions about these matters tend to be endless.

For this reason, the True Lord says in a different part of the Quran: 'and they did not appraise Allah Glorified is He with true appraisal when they said, "Allah Glorified is He did not reveal to a human being anything." Say, "Who revealed the Scripture that Moses brought as light and guidance to the people? You [Jews] make it into pages, disclosing [some of] it and concealing much. And you were taught that which you knew not—neither you, nor your fathers." Say, "Allah Glorified is He [revealed it]." Then, leave them in their [empty] discourse, amusing themselves.' (al-An'am: 91)

You, Muhammad, have informed them that the One Who revealed the Book to you is the True Lord; the same One Who revealed the Gospel of which they have hid some parts and shown some. Having informed them of these facts, you may then leave them to enjoy their vain talk.

In another place, the True Lord talks about vain talk: 'They, the hypocrites, are apprehensive lest a chapter be revealed about them, informing them of what is in their hearts. Say, "Mock [as you wish]; indeed, Allah Glorified is He will expose that which you fear." And if you ask them, they will surely say, "We were only conversing and playing." Say, "Is it Allah Glorified is He and His verses and His Messenger that you were mocking? "' (at-Tawba: 64-65)

'And it has already come down to you in the Book that when you hear the verses of Allah Glorified is He [recited], they are denied [by them] and ridiculed; so do not sit with them until they enter into another conversation.'

Afterwards, the words that terrify the believer and frighten him follow: 'Indeed, you would then be like them.' This means that if you stay in the company of those who mock or deny the truth of the Messages of Allah Glorified is He you will be a disbeliever like them because you are willing to listen to them, while they attribute falsities to the religion. Whoever is content with a disbeliever is a disbeliever.

The verse thus refers to a preliminary phase in the history of Islam. If the believers constitute a self-sufficient society based on solidarity, not one of them is to keep the company of the disbelievers. Further, no one ought to befriend them unless they initiate it because keeping company with them while speaking ill of the religion is all the more reason for them to continue disrespecting it. Rather, a believer ought to castigate anyone who dares to mock the religion. Believers should also avoid those who deviate from the path of Allah Glorified is He or attack it. Unfortunately, though, contemporary societies tend to honour those who attribute falsities to religion. This practice entices people to disparage religion.

By contrast, if we turn our backs upon those who deviate from the path of Allah Glorified is He, they will seek another means of attacking the religions and attributing falsities to it and the course it sets. The corruption of the society emanates from the fact that a lot of those who attribute falsities to the religion of Allah Glorified is He are honoured and assigned a high status and distinction.

We learn from the saying of the True Lord: ‘And it has already come down to you in the Book that when you hear,’ the way in which man becomes aware of things; it is either through hearing or seeing. Therefore, if you, as a Muslim, sense an action that incites corruption, then you must realize that this is a kind of attributing falsities to the religion of Allah Glorified is He.

The saying of the True Lord: ‘avoid their company’ is a license to boycott those who do these things. If someone who mocks and denies the truth of Allah’s Messages, goes to a grocery store in the neighbourhood of his house, the shopkeeper in the grocery store ought to refuse to sell to him anything. Similarly, if this person goes to buy something to eat from the butcher, the latter ought to refuse to sell him anything; the same holds true for anyone whom this person may seek to fulfil an interest of his.

If this boycott takes place, this person will be disciplined. Further, everyone will know that the society is jealous about its religion, and that Allah Glorified is He is dearer to them than any form of reward they see in society. If each of those deviants and offenders see that society has boycotted and confined them within certain limits, he would re-embrace the correct path. They would also seek different means of earning their livelihood and feeding their children; that is admissible and deemed legitimate by Allah Glorified is He.

The True Lord says: 'Indeed, you would then be like them. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He will gather the hypocrites and disbelievers in Hell all together.' Do not think that this life is too long and that the time when this happens is too far ahead. A Muslim must not measure things in terms of the criteria he uses to measure the history of the world, like a century, two centuries or even ten centuries. Rather, a Muslim should know that the world is measured in terms of his own life, and that his life can end at any time. Every Muslim must work not only for the good of his worldly life but in order to go back to Allah Glorified is He as a true Muslim in the Hereafter. A believer must also fear being resurrected on the Day of Judgment among the hypocrites and the disbelievers in the fire. This is the fate to which anyone who accepts the mockery or the humiliation of his religion is doomed. Subsequently, the True Lord says:

ٱلَّذِينَ يَتَرَبَّصُونَ بِكُمۡ فَإِن كَانَ لَكُمۡ فَتۡحٞ مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ قَالُوٓاْ أَلَمۡ نَكُن مَّعَكُمۡ وَإِن كَانَ
لِلۡكَٰفِرِينَ نَصِيبٞ قَالُوٓاْ أَلَمۡ نَسۡتَحۡوِذۡ عَلَيۡكُمۡ وَنَمۡنَعۡكُم مِّنَ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَۚ فَٱللَّهُ يَحۡكُمُ
بَيۡنَكُمۡ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِۗ وَلَن يَجۡعَلَ ٱللَّهُ لِلۡكَٰفِرِينَ عَلَى ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ سَبِيلًا ﴿١٤١﴾

The [hypocrites] wait to see what happens to you and, if God brings you success, they say, 'Were we not on your side?' but if the disbelievers have some success, they say to them, 'Did we not have the upper hand over you, and [yet] protect you from the believers?' God will judge between you all on the Day of Resurrection, and He will give the disbelievers no means of overcoming the believers [141] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 141)

The saying of the True Lord: 'Those who wait [and watch] you' is a description of the hypocrites. When someone waits to see what happens with another person, this means that the former waits for the chance to find out about the latter's news in order to contrive his attitude and his demands of him in the light of such news. We learnt this meaning from the saying of the True Lord: ‘Say, "Do you wait for us except one of the two best things”’ (at-Tawba: 52).

The hypocrites lie in wait of the believers because, if they encounter something good, they want to avail themselves of it, but if something bad comes along, the hypocrites try to take advantage of it—if they apparently purport to be Muslims in order to conceal their disbelief. ‘But if the disbelievers have a success, they say [to them], "Did we not gain the advantage over you, but we protected you from the believers? ”’ If Allah Glorified is He bestows His victory upon the believers, and they succeed in collecting spoils of war, the hypocrites would say: ‘Did we not gain the advantage over you, but we protected you from the believers?’ They would thus argue that they are entitled to a share of the spoils of war. Conversely, if the disbelievers triumph, they hasten to them in accordance with the saying of the True Lord: ‘whereas, did we not gain the advantage over you, but we protected you from the believers?’

They try to take advantage of the disbelievers inasmuch as they claim that they have waited to see what would happen to the believers; upon this pretext, they assert that they are entitled to a share of their victory. The saying of the disbelievers: ‘whereas did we not gain the advantage over you,’ exposes their stance. When a battle breaks out between the camp of disbelief and that of faith, the hypocrites try to know all the details about the believers’ intentions. Once the hypocrites walk onto the battlefield, they pretend that they are capturing the disbelievers, but, in fact, they are protecting the disbelievers from the swords of the believers. Then, they tell the disbelievers: ‘we have taken possession of you;’ this means, ‘we have kept the believers from killing you.’ Later, they ask them for the price of what they have done.

Let us consider the eloquence of the Quran when it talks about the triumph of the believers: ‘victory.’ By contrast, when the Quran talks about the triumph of the disbelievers, it uses the word ‘success’ to indicate that their victory is only a transient kind of prevalence. Subsequently, the True Lord puts forwards a decisive statement about this matter: ‘Allah Glorified is He will judge between [all of] you on the Day of Resurrection, and never will Allah Glorified is He give the disbelievers over the believers a way [to overcome them].’

When Allah Glorified is He talks about the fate of the disbelievers and the believers, He does not refer to something too far ahead in the future for the listener to witness. Rather, Allah Glorified is He refers to what is certain; He does not tell the believer that he will triumph, since the believer may die before he witnesses any triumph. Instead, Allah Glorified is He refers to what is certain, namely, the fate and reward on the Day of Judgment, when the heaven becomes the actual abode of every believer. In addition, this life is too trivial to be the place of the reward for faith.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us not to seek the reward for faith in this life because all ends sought in this world are subject to change. Pleasure in life is transient; it will either abandon man or man will ultimately abandon it. By contrast, the reward for faith persists since the One in Whom you have faith persists. Therefore, the rule of faith states that whoever does good deeds is admitted into paradise. The True Lord says about the good: '[they will be] within the mercy of Allah Glorified is He. They will abide therein eternally.' (Al-'Imran: 107)

This means that paradise will continue to be as long as Allah Glorified is He sustains it, though He is capable of ceasing its existence. However, Allah's mercy never perishes because it is one of His attributes, and He is eternal. When the True Lord says: ' Allah Glorified is He will judge between [all of] you on the Day of Resurrection.' This means that this judgment is irrevocable because there is no god worthy of worship but Him; therefore, the judgment is final. The True Lord decreed some rulings on some of Muhammad's relatives. For instance, Allah Glorified is He passed a verdict on Prophet Muhammad's uncle; He has said: 'May the hands of Abu Lahab be ruined and ruined is he. His wealth will not avail him or that which he gained. He will [enter to] burn in a Fire of [blazing] flame. And his wife [as well] - the carrier of firewood. Around her neck is a rope of [twisted] fibre.' (al-Masad: 1-5) The third verse indicates that Abu Lahab will die as a disbeliever, and that Allah Glorified is He would not guide him to faith, although a lot of those who had taken an antagonistic stance towards to Prophet Muhammad eventually attained faith in him peace and blessings be upon him. The camp of disbelievers has indeed lost a lot of its leaders to the camp of faith. For instance, ''Umar ibn Al-Khattab, Khalid ibn Al-Walid and ‘Ikrima ibn Abu Jahl among others embraced Islam. So what made Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him know that Abu Lahab would not be among those who convert to Islam? Further, why did Abu Lahab not say: ‘My nephew said that I shall endure a fire fiercely glowing; I thereby profess that there is no God worthy of worship but Allah Glorified is He and that Muhammad is His Messenger.’ But Abu Lahab did not say so; Allah Glorified is He Who doomed him to this bleak destiny, knew that he would not ever utter the words of faith. Were Abu Lahab and his wife not capable of saying together: ‘We testify that there is no god worthy of worship but Allah Glorified is He and that Muhammad is His Messenger,’ and thus conclude the matter? But Allah Glorified is He Whose rulings are irrevocable, has ruled that they were disbelievers. After the True Lord reveals this decisive statement about Abu Lahab and his wife, He puts forward, in the sequential order of the Quran, what clarifies His statement: ‘Do not ever think that ruling could be revoked; Abu Lahab will endure a fire fiercely growing together with his wife, the carrier of evil tales. Thus, the True Lord says immediately after the previous verses: ‘Say, "He is Allah Glorified is He [who is] One," Allah Glorified is He the Eternal Refuge.’ (al-Ikhlas: 1-2)

No one will change Allah’s ruling. Therefore, the saying of the True Lord: ‘Allah Glorified is He will judge between [all of] you on the Day of Resurrection,’ means that Allah’s rulings are irrevocable since there is no other God but Him to revoke His decisions. ‘And never will Allah Glorified is He give the disbelievers over the believers a way [to overcome them].’ This is a result of Allah’s ruling; Allah Glorified is He will not favour the disbelievers over the believers. Further, the disbelievers will not have power to harm the believers. But is this rule valid for this life or the one to come? We know that in the Hereafter the True Lord will ultimately judge everyone according to his deeds after all worldly causes have been suspended. Laws of causality apply only to the worldly life; thus, whoever pursues the proper causes in this life will reach their corresponding effects. The reason is that the Lordship of Allah Glorified is He in this world rules that He compensates and rewards both the believers and the disbelievers in proportion to the effort they exert. Hence, if the disbelievers pursued the proper causes and means of achieving success and the believers did not, Allah Glorified is He will give the disbelievers power over the believers. The disbelievers may, in this case, defeat the believers.

An Arab adage teaches us 'not to think that erring is not a means of reaching what is right.' The underlying rationale of this statement is that when one errs, someone may correct his error. For instance, a teacher teaches his students that the last syllable of the word serving as a subject of a sentence should have a 'u' sound. A student may make a mistake and confuse the subject with the object which indicates that, though he learnt the rule, he was oblivious to it. His teacher may then correct his mistake. This correction helps engrave the rule in the student's mind. In this manner, erring may serve as a means of reaching what is right. Similarly, falsehood may be a path to attain the truth.

When falsities spread among people, a preacher of truth may emerge among them. Therefore, falsehood may serve as a cause for truth to emerge. The propagation of falsehood excites people's aversion towards the spread of corruption and causes them to cry out for help. Similarly, when pain befalls man, it drives him to seek a cure inasmuch as pain says to man: something not normal exists in this place, and without it, a man would not have realized he had to consult a physician.

Hence, we must know this rule: erring is a means of attaining what is right. Similarly, falsehood may be a means of attaining the truth, and pain may be a means of seeking cure. Every mistake spurs the one who made it to correct it; however, it does so with some provocation. The history of the Arabic language tells us an interesting story about the great master Sibawih, whom we remember whenever anyone makes a linguistic mistake by saying: 'The one who made mistake must have angered Sibawih.' The reason is that Sibawih is the one who laid down the foundations of Arabic grammar and its rules. Thus, whenever we say Al-Kitab, the Book, in reference to Arabic grammar, we often have in mind Al-Kitab of Sibawih.

But Sibawih was not originally a grammarian; he was a scholar of the Quran and its readings. One day, he was sitting in a symposium and people criticized him for a grammatical mistake that he made. He was infuriated and felt disappointed with himself. He then said: By Allah Glorified is He I will perfect my command of Arabic until I no longer make any grammatical mistakes. This is how he turned into a leading grammarian.

Another good example is Imam Ash-Shatibi, who was not a scholar of the Quran and its readings; he was a grammarian. He later faced a problem in the science of the Quran readings that he could not solve. As a result, he took an oath to dwell over the study of the Quran and its readings. He then became a leading scholar of this branch of Islamic sciences. Therefore, erring was the main reason for Sibawih becoming a grammarian; and a problem that Ash-Shatibi faced in the Quran and its readings induced him to become a leading scholar of Quran and its readings—although, the former was a scholar of Quran and its readings and the latter was a grammarian.

For this reason, I repeat what I said above: erring is a means of reaching what is right as much as falsehood is a means of reaching the truth, and pain is a means of reaching a cure.

Disbelievers may have apparently triumphed over the believers in some battles like the battle of Uhud; however, this was intended for the cause of edifying the believers. In Uhud, some fighters from amongst the believers violated the command of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They were then defeated as a prelude for the edification to follow; and it came in the battle of Hunayn, when the believers were too conceited with their numbers: ‘on the day of Hunayn, when your great numbers pleased you, but it did not avail you at all, and the earth was confining for you with its vastness; then, you turned back, fleeing.’ (at-Tawba: 25) An Arab poet described this scene in the following lines:

A defeat is only considered truly a defeat

If one fails to uproot its causes

Thus if you put a lot of effort in getting rid of such causes

then it would be foolish on part of anyone to censure your endeavour

When one uproots the causes of defeat, he turns his defeat into a victory. This happened in the battle of Uhud. At the beginning, the believers violated the commands of Prophet Muhammad, so they were defeated by their enemies.

However, they learnt from their mistake, so their defeat paved the way to achieve victory.

Therefore, if you, Muslim, see the disbelievers harming the believers, then know that faith has been shaken in the hearts of the Muslims. There is no effect without a cause; if the believers pursue the proper causes, they will achieve the desired effects. Allah Glorified is He said: 'Hence, make ready against them whatever force and war mounts you are able to muster.' (al-Anfal: 60)

If the believers failed to make ready against the disbelievers whatever they are able to muster or if they felt pride in their numbers, then the just result would be their defeat. Every believer has to have faith in the saying of His Lord: 'Then, do they wait except the way of the former peoples? But you will never find in the way of Allah Glorified is He any change, and you will never find in the way of Allah Glorified is He any alteration.' (Fatir: 43)

The profession of faith is not the end; rather, it is the beginning. Every believer will be commensurately rewarded for his deeds. Likewise, He is unhappy with His servant when he errs. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He disciplines and edifies His servants—and Allah Glorified is He has the most supreme example. For instance, some of us may not be patient enough to review all the material his children study at school. He thus hires a private tutor to undertake this task. The reason is that the love the father bears for his children may provoke him whenever his boy errs; he may thus beat his child. By contrast, a teacher would not be that provoked. Rather, he will take things lightly. Thus sometimes affection may drive a person to cruelly treat someone that he likes and would otherwise treat mercifully. An Arab poet says:

One may treat someone he loves cruelly to straighten him; and whoever wants to be strict must sometimes be tough with the one who he treats mercifully.

There is another example—and to Allah Glorified is He belongs the supreme and most exalted parables. If someone walks into a place to find his son, his neighbour's son and another unknown child gambling, he will slap his son on the face and command him to return to the house immediately. As for the other children, the man may only castigate his neighbour's son and may not even talk with the child he does not know. That is, punishment must be proportionate to the level of love and affection. Similarly, our interest in disciplining someone is commensurate with his status in our hearts; if we do not care about someone, we will not bother about his misbehaviour. Accordingly, if the disbelievers ever harm the believers, we ought to know that something is amiss with the faith of the latter. Allah Glorified is He does not want the believers to stay like this; rather, the True Lord purifies them of their errors inasmuch as he is put through difficult circumstances. Therefore, beware of failing to heed Allah's Causes. Subsequently, the True Lord says:

إِنَّ ٱلْمُنَٰفِقِينَ يُخَٰدِعُونَ ٱللَّهَ وَهُوَ خَٰدِعُهُمْ وَإِذَا قَامُوٓا۟ إِلَى ٱلصَّلَوٰةِ
قَامُوا۟ كُسَالَىٰ يُرَآءُونَ ٱلنَّاسَ وَلَا يَذْكُرُونَ ٱللَّهَ إِلَّا قَلِيلًا ﴿١٤٢﴾

The hypocrites try to deceive God, but it is He who causes them to be deceived. When they stand up to pray, they do so sluggishly, showing offin front of people, and remember God only a little [142] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 142)

We know that the hypocrites by nature purport to have faith while concealing disbelief. The True Lord explains: do not think that any creature can do anything that Allah Glorified is He does not know. Someone may contrive a plan against you, while he knows that you are aware of his cunning; so, is this cunning? No, the reason is that cunning takes place in secret; you know nothing about it while it is being contrived. In essence, the one, against whom cunning is being contrived, is supposed to be unsuspecting. The hypocrites—since they purport to have faith while concealing disbelief—try to deceive the One Who knows all the secrets concealed in men's bosoms. They should have learnt a lesson from the way Allah Glorified is He treated them due to the intermediation of the believers; for the believers spared the blood and wealth of the hypocrites. Further, the Muslims treated the hypocrites according to the rulings of Islam. But what punishment has Allah Glorified is He cunningly prepared for those disbelievers? Allah Glorified is He has prepared for them the bottom part of the Fire. Then, who is more capable of cunning? The truly intelligent person is the one who does not deceive someone whom he knows is capable of discovering his deception. It involves displaying love while secretly plotting to deceive. Who then eventually wins in cunning? The one who conceals a more severe deception—to counteract the deception of his rival—is the winner.

The person deceived always tries to contrive a bigger deception. This means that he has overcome the deception of the one who tried to deceive him. Allah Glorified is He has treated them in the same way in which they treated the believers. The hypocrites purported to have faith at the beginning in order to conceal disbelief. Allah Glorified is He then treated them on the apparent level; that is, as if they were Muslims. However, Allah Glorified is He has secretly decreed to inflict upon them the same or even a more severe torment than that which He inflicts upon the disbelievers; the hypocrites will be thrown at the bottom of the fire.

Every Muslim should be careful enough not to think or mistakenly conclude that deception is an attribute of Allah; thus, no one should call Allah Glorified is He as al-mukhadi' because Allah*'s* names and attributes are only those which He uses to call and describe Himself. Allah Glorified is He may undertake whatever act He wills, but no one is allowed to derive a new attribute for Allah Glorified is He from that act. Here, the True Lord presents us with a problem to show that the hypocrites are cunning and contrive evil against the believers. As a Muslim, you must know that a human is only capable of contriving evil in proportion to his capacity which is finite compared to the Infinite nature of Allah's capacity. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He exposes the evil those hypocrites conceal. When they cunningly contrive, Allah Glorified is He by His Infinite capability, cunningly contrives against them as well, sabotaging their cunning and punishing them for the evil they do. But do not say that Allah Glorified is He is cunning; Allah Glorified is He may describe or qualify any act or deed of His in whatever way He wills, but we must not do the same.

The goal of any activity is the key factor that motivates one's faculties to do it. If you love an activity, then you will approach it ardently and eagerly. The degree of eagerness with which one approaches anything is always taken as a measure of how much he loves it. An Arab poet describes the event of two lovers meeting as follows:

The key to judge the meeting of any couple is the way they crave each other and the time they spend together

The moment at which any two lovers meet is an indication of the affection they share. For instance, if the distance separating them is ten steps, they may hasten and cover it in three steps; this is an attempt to shorten the time in which they are distant. Similarly, the way in which they greet each other reflects the level of affection they share. One of them may shake the hand of another half-heartedly or coldly. By contrast, he may do so very affectionately and eagerly. He may also embrace the other. Further, the time a couple spends hugging each other whether it is a minute, two minutes or three minutes is also a measure of the affection they share. Thus, the factors that show the degree of affection a couple shares are: the eagerness with which one wants to see the other, the way in which they meet each other and the time they spend together. These factors have been used by poets to express affection and love among people. In the past, lovers used to hide their affection behind greetings. In the western civilization, in which religious values have vanished, men greet women by kissing them. In some countries, a man may shake hands with a woman, but does he do so eagerly? And does she shake his hand with the same eagerness? If you notice that the palm of the hand is straight and flat, then this is an ordinary greeting. But if one of them bent his thumb on the other's palm then you should see which person bent his finger to hold the other's entire hand. The one who does it is more eager than the other. If both of them did it, then both of them share the same eagerness. In addition, one should consider how much time each spent holding the hand of the other. In certain instances, a man and a woman may enjoy talking to each other to the extent that they forget that they are holding each other's hands.

Man approaches different events in correspondingly different ways. If the event is a happy one, we approach it with eagerness; by contrast, if the event is not a happy one, we approach it reluctantly. The hypocrites used to rise for prayer reluctantly and lazily: 'when they stand for prayer, they stand lazily.' It is as if they were performing the prayers as a veil to conceal their hypocrisy and hide it away from the eyes of Muslims. They did not rise to prayers out of their longing to meet Allah Glorified is He as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to say to Bilal Allah be pleased with him whenever he asked him to call for prayers: 'Comfort us with the prayers, Bilal.'(1) A believer should feel comfortable when he prays. By contrast, prayers constitute an onerous task for the hypocrite because he only does it to hide his hypocrisy away from the eyes of the Muslims. For this reason, hypocrites rise reluctantly to prayers: ‘When they stand for prayer, they stand lazily, showing [themselves to] the people and not remembering Allah Glorified is He except a little.’

(1) Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad

They purport to be rising to prayers in front of other people to deceive Muslims and so that others would see them praying. Inasmuch as they perform the prayers for the purpose of being seen and praised by other men, they do not say what is required of them to complete these prayers. They only say what they have to say aloud in public. For instance, they would recite the chapter al-Fatiha and some of the Quran, but they would not say subhan Rabi Al-’Azhim—’praise be unto my Lord, the Great’—while kneeling during prayers, and subhan Rabi Al-’A’la—’praise be unto my Lord, the High’—while prostrating.

Every believer has two contending façades; a façade that he puts on in the company of the believers, and another that he puts on when he is in the company of the disbelievers. The façade a hypocrite uses when he is in the company of the believers makes him perform the prayers and remember Allah Glorified is He. The façade he puts on when he is among the disbelievers makes him reluctant about praying and he seldom remembers Allah Glorified is He.

If we count how many words of remembrance are said aloud in prayers versus how many things are said secretly, we will find that the latter outnumber the former. While kneeling one says: subhan Rabi Al-’Azhim three times and while prostrating one says: subhan Rabi Al-’A’la three times. By contrast, a hypocrite remembers Allah Glorified is He only when he has to do it aloud which is very little. A hypocrite will only do what is seen and heard by others; this is the meaning of showing off. A hypocrite would not say or do anything that is not perceived by other people.

Societies are shaken and ruined by showing off because the True Lord wants every Muslim to do every deed while keeping Allah Glorified is He Who knows every secret, in his mind. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called our attention to this matter when he described the meaning of al-’ihsan: ‘to worship Allah Glorified is He as if you see Him and to always be aware that, although you do not see Him, He sees you.'(1) If one feels ashamed of deceiving another human being in an overt manner, how could he have the audacity to deceive Allah Glorified is He knowing that Allah Glorified is He sees him? Why does this servant consider his Lord the least important of his beholders?

If someone discovers that another deceived him, he punishes him; so would Allah Glorified is He not do the same with the one who deceives him? For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him describes the state of the one who is only concerned about people's praise and adulation; he peace and blessings be upon him says: 'What I fear most is that you may one day slip into the minor polytheism. The companions then said: 'What is the minor polytheism?' Prophet Muhammad said: 'Showing off— When Allah Glorified is He commensurately recompenses His servants for their deeds on the Day of Judgment, He will tell them to go seek those about whose praise they were only concerned in the worldly life and see if they could reward you.'(2) In addition, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'The one showing off will be called on Judgment Day: "You, wrong-doer; you, traitor; you, deceiver, your deeds have been discounted, and you have been denied any reward. So seek your reward from the one for whom you worked."(3) Therefore, the hypocrite ultimately deceives himself. He purports to be praying so that people would see him, and purports to be giving alms to the poor so that people would see him; that is, he does what Allah Glorified is He has enacted upon him, but he does not do it for Allah Glorified is He. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says in the Quran: 'But those who disbelieved - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland which a thirsty one thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing but finds Allah Glorified is He before Him, and He will pay him in full his due; and Allah Glorified is He is swift in account.' (an-Nur: 39) Further, Allah Glorified is He says in the Quran about another form of their hypocrisy: 'His example is like that of a [large] smooth stone upon which is dust and is hit by a downpour that leaves it bare. They are unable [to keep] anything of what they have earned. And Allah Glorified is He does not guide the disbelieving people.' (al-Baqara: 264) Whoever does what Allah Glorified is He enacts so that the believers see him, let him seek his reward from the one for whom he has worked.

(3) A weak Hadith related by Ibn Abu Ad-Dunya

The True Lord resumes the description of the psychological state of the hypocrites and says:

مُّذَبْذَبِينَ بَيْنَ ذَٰلِكَ لَآ إِلَىٰ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ وَلَآ إِلَىٰ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِۚ
وَمَن يُضْلِلِ ٱللَّهُ فَلَن تَجِدَ لَهُۥ سَبِيلًا (١٤٣) wavering all the time between this and that, belonging neither to one side nor the other. If God leaves someone to stray, you [Prophet] will never find a way for him [143] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 143)

'Wavering' means that it is like an object suspended from the end of a thread; the wind can move such an object in any direction because it is not fixed. The Arabic word translated as 'waver' shares the root with the Arabic word for 'flies'—whose habit is to come back again whenever man repels them. Part of the behaviour of flies is that they go back to the same place whenever they are purged out of it.

'Wavering between this and that, [true] neither to these nor those;' but did the hypocrites cause themselves to be in state of wavering or is it their nature? Let us ponder over the Greatness of the True Lord Who fashioned the human soul. There is a commander and a subordinate within the same self. The True Lord says: 'O you, who have believed, protect yourselves and your families from the Fire.' (at-Tahrim: 6)

Then, he wards off the fire inasmuch as he lets the rational, commanding power of his soul direct its commands to the subordinate part—and make the latter obey the former. The evidence is the saying of the True Lord about Cain: 'And his soul permitted to him the murder of his brother.' (al-Ma'ida: 30)

This means that part of Cain's soul drove the rest of it to kill Abel. Allah Glorified is He has created the human soul as a set of powers; one of them seeks comfort and pleasure, whereas the other likes and seeks austerity. The former seeks the praise of people, while the latter does so only to ensure that one has obtained what one needs. Both powers contend within the same soul. For this reason, the True Lord says: ‘protect yourselves.’ One’s soul can safeguard him from slipping into wrongdoing since it has multiple powers. Some powers like to achieve gratification and wealth and merely seek to satiate their desires, but the believing power of the soul consistently tells every one of us: ‘remember that all these are transient desires and that their improper satiation may bring upon you deleterious repercussions in the future.’

Hence, there is a conflict between the human powers. The True Lord explains to us this conflict in His saying: ‘And his soul permitted to him the murder of his brother.’ The desire for ascendancy was abetting Cain to kill Abel; however, fear of sinning was a force contending with this drive. The conflict between these two forces inside Cain flared up until the desire for ascendancy ultimately prevailed and drove his soul to commit murder. This shows that the human soul encompasses multiple powers, each of which seeks a distinct goal, but religion harmonises the powers of the soul.

Another example: sexual desire may vigorously overwhelm the soul, but one’s belief may deter him by ordering him not to encroach upon other people’s honours so that others would not violate his honour. It may also urge him to get married according to Allah’s Legislation so as not to have illegal children who may be brought up by other people. Allah has created sexual desire in people, but it should not control the soul. Therefore, the soul encompasses all powers and desires, and man should not let his desires trespass the boundaries Allah has set for them because if desires transgress their boundaries, the world will be corrupted.

For instance, we use electricity to generate light based on criteria fixed by the electrical engineers. They have set the positive and negative poles in specific places so we can generate the light we need or produce the sparkle required for operating a machine. However, if the positive pole is connected to the negative pole in a way other than the one designed by the engineer, an electric failure may take place and cause a fire or any other damage. The same holds true for the human self; if the male has intercourse with the female according to the laws decreed by Allah, this will lead to happiness; otherwise, social and psychological problems will flare up in the society causing infinitely detrimental effects. Accordingly, the self has multiple drives, not only one.

The desire to eat urges a person to eat, and religion responds to this desire but advises that eating should not turn into gluttony, as mentioned in the Hadith, 'A few morsels that keep his back upright are sufficient for him.'(1) Food is there only for the preservation of life.

Man has a desire to gain knowledge, and Islam rules that man must investigate Allah's signs in the universe in order to make the universe more convenient to live in. However, Islam proscribes the use of such desire as a justification for spying on people. Accordingly, the different human faculties are balanced by means of the guidance of Islam. Therefore, every Muslim should harmonize his faculties in the light of the guidance of Islam so that the human faculties become supportive to each other and the human self rather than contending with them. Subsequently, the human faculties will be in harmony with each other, and each body system will perform the task in the manner Allah has intended.

By contrast, a hypocrite lives in an indecisive state of purposely wavering between extremes. He has succumbed to some of his faculties at the expense of others: 'Wavering between them, [belonging] neither to the believers nor to the disbelievers…' (an-Nisa': 143). The disbeliever has an apparent privilege over the hypocrite, as there is harmony within his soul; he does not believe in Islam and overtly admits this fact, though actually this conflicts with his natural disposition, which urges him to believe in Allah.

Someone may wonder: how could we equate the one who apparently declares faith and conceals disbelief with the one who declares his disbelief? The answer is that the disbeliever does not deceive the believers and does not pretend to belong to the believers in the manner the hypocrite does. Rather, he explicitly states that he is a disbeliever, taking the side of the disbelievers, but the hypocrite is wavering and dishonest.

'Wavering between them; [belonging] neither to the believers nor to the disbelievers. And whoever Allah leaves astray - never will you find for him a way.' (an-Nisa': 143) Allah does not directly let any of His Servants go astray without offering guidance to him, as Allah Glorified is He teaches His creatures through His Messengers, and the guidance He reveals to them. However, when a person insists on not believing in Allah, He lets him go astray. Although He is Able to force him to have faith, He gives the person the choice to have faith in Him willingly. Allah supports and leads to guidance the person who draws closer to Him, but if he draws away from Allah, He will lead him astray, beautifying the worldly pleasures for him and giving him from its bounties. However, he will not find any way to guidance other than the one set by Allah.

(1) Excerpt from a Hadith related by At-Tirmidhi, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah

The following story is worth mentioning because it reveals the value of the path of Allah. Al-Asma'i, a great and valuable Arab author, who had a literary sense inclined to beautiful literary styles in poetry or prose, once found a person standing in front of Al-Multazam (the area between the Hajar Al-Aswad (the Black Stone) and the Door of the Ka'ba). The person was avidly supplicating to Allah saying, 'O Lord! I have disobeyed you; had not I been disobedient, I would not have come here to ask for Your Forgiveness. There is no god but You; I should have felt ashamed of disobeying You, but what can I do now?' Then, Al-Asma'i said, 'O You! Allah will forgive you because you have supplicated to Him in such a good way.' Then, Allah says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ لَا تَتَّخِذُواْ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ أَوۡلِيَآءَ مِن دُونِ
ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَۚ أَتُرِيدُونَ أَن تَجۡعَلُواْ لِلَّهِ عَلَيۡكُمۡ سُلۡطَٰنٗا مُّبِينًا ١٤٤

You who believe, do not take the disbelievers as allies and protectors instead of the believers: do you want to offer God clear proof against you? [144] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 144)

Allah blames the hypocrites for taking the disbelievers as their allies instead of Allah. Similarly, the believers blamed the hypocrites for taking the disbelievers as their allies instead of Allah and the believers. Therefore, the believers must not do this, and Allah Glorified is He clarifies that He has blamed the hypocrites as they took the disbelievers as their allies instead of Allah, so He warns the believers against doing the same:'O you, who have believed, do not take the disbelievers as allies instead of the believers. Do you wish to give Allah against yourselves a clear case?' (an-Nisa': 144)

This command is logically in line with the path of faith because if the believers take the disbelievers as allies instead of the believers, this will give Allah a clear case against them, showing that they deserve His torment. It is well-known that the hypocrite apparently declares to have faith but conceals disbelief in his heart. Therefore, the believer should not allow himself to deal with the disbeliever in the same way a hypocrite does; whoever does so presents a clear case to Allah to inflict His torment upon him.

Allah Glorified is He sent messengers, supporting them with miracles, and revealed comprehensive guidance to regulate man's actions in life in order not to give the people any proof to support their disbelief, and not to give them the chance to claim that He did not reveal to them how to adhere to this guidance. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He has not let man depend only on his reason to reach the idea of the existence of Allah, Who has created the universe. Allah has not left the people to these suspicions, but He sent us messengers with clear guidance so that people would not have any pretext against Allah after that. Therefore, no one may claim that Allah has not warned him and clarified matters for him. Ignorance of a law does not exempt one from punishment if he commits a crime, but Allah does not punish people without giving them guidance. He is more generous towards His servants than they are towards themselves. Therefore, Allah has sent messengers with the guidance that distinguishes between the permissible and the proscribed matters: '…that those who perished [through disbelief] would perish upon evidence, and those who lived [in faith] would live upon evidence…' (al-Anfal: 42).

Thus, no one may claim that Allah has taken him by surprise. If the believers take the disbelievers as their allies, draw closer to them and advocate them instead of the believers, they will be more evil than the hypocrites because a hypocrite is wavering between faith and disbelief. By contrast, the proof against the believers is lucid; Allah has revealed the righteous path to them, and they have declared to have faith. Therefore, if they do anything at odds with the faith they have declared, they will give Allah proof that they deserve His Punishment. '…Do you wish to give Allah against yourselves a clear case?'

(an-Nisa': 144) The clear case is the comprehensive and unquestionable proof. In the human realm, one may refute a proof in our day-to-day life in the manner a lawyer does—but Allah's proof is a clear and irrefutable case.

Subsequently, Allah says:

إِنَّ ٱلْمُنَٰفِقِينَ فِى ٱلدَّرْكِ ٱلْأَسْفَلِ مِنَ ٱلنَّارِ وَلَن تَجِدَ لَهُمْ نَصِيرًا ﴿١٤٥﴾

The hypocrites will be in the lowest depths of Hell, and you will find no one to help them [145] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 145)

Let us consider the precision of the manner in which Allah instructs the people to have faith. Allah has not collected everything relevant to the hypocrites in only one part in His Book, but He provides a glimpse about the hypocrites followed by another about the believers so that the listener may have aversion to the status of the hypocrite and like the qualities of the believer. In this context, Allah says, 'Indeed, the hypocrites will be in the lowest depths of the Fire - and never will you find for them a helper.' (an-Nisa': 145)

The word al-dark which is mentioned in the Arabic original verse, can be pronounced in this way or as darak like the way the Arabic word nahr is pronounced. Al-dark is always used in reference to the downward direction; as the righteous predecessors said, 'Fire has darakat (levels directed downwards), and paradise has darajat (levels directed upwards).'[1] Therefore, al-darak refers to descending to lower positions, and al-daraj refers to ascending to higher positions. In our age, we use the sea level as a reference for measuring height because the earth's surface is not flat, while the sea surface is even.

Similarly, we use water balance to make accurate measurements. For instance, rainfall shows us the work quality of the contractor who paved the street. We may also pour a bucket of water on a bathroom's floor in order to gauge the work quality of the worker. These examples suggest that things may be done to expose the truth of some matters. There is a famous Egyptian saying: 'The one who cements the building is the one who exposes the work quality of the builder.' If someone erects an uneven wall, the one who cements it will be forced to fill the gaps in the uneven parts so that the surface of the wall becomes even. Similarly, the painter can expose the quality of the work of the one who cements the wall because he may either find it easy to paint the wall or use a large quantity of materials to fill in the gaps and uneven parts on the wall. Subsequently, the work quality of the painter is exposed by natural elements such as dust. If a worker wants to cheat, he may deliver his work quickly because dust flies in a straight direction if a wall has been painted with a low quality material, dust will stick to it. Therefore, Allah has intended to expose the one who does not do his work properly. Everything ultimately returns to Allah until all creatures go back to Him exposed with their deeds with the exception of the believers, whose good deeds will protect them.

[1] Exegesis of Imam ibn Kathir

'Indeed, the hypocrites will be in the lowest depths of the Fire - and never will you find for them a helper.' (an-Nisa': 145) Allah the Glorified and Exalted has previously depicted the hypocrites as wavering and indecisive people who cannot maintain a fixed stance and can never earn the respect of the society wherein they live. Allah says about them: 'Wavering between them, [belonging] neither to the believers nor to the disbelievers....' (an-Nisa': 143) Wavering refers to indecisiveness and incapacity of a character to be independent. Allah the Glorified and Exalted depicts them in this mutilated way in order to demonstrate that His punishment for them is commensurate with what they did.

Allah has prepared the human minds in a way that enables them to receive and accept the rulings that He reveals so that people may not pity for or sympathize with the hypocrites when He punishes them. When Allah Glorified is He enacts a ruling, He ensures that no one will dispute with Him as He is the Sustainer of existence and the One. Allah could have said that He will condemn the hypocrite to the lowest depth of the Fire; there is no other power capable of redeeming the hypocrite. Therefore, He has appended the ruling on the hypocrite with His saying, '…and never will you find for them a helper.' (an-Nisa': 145) This indicates that this ruling is bound to be executed, and that none of Allah's creatures may modify or alter it; to Him only Glorified is He sovereignty belongs. Allah also lets those who pursue the proper causes have possessions in the worldly life; however, in the Afterlife no one except Allah will have sovereignty or possess anything: '…To whom belongs [all] sovereignty this Day? To Allah—the One, the Prevailing.' (Ghafir: 16)

Then, Allah declares that He will give a chance to the hypocrites to change their stance, declare their faith and repent what they did. Allah has allowed them to examine their situations and judge themselves, as He has not denied them the chance to repent. Rather, He says:

إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ تَابُواْ وَأَصۡلَحُواْ وَٱعۡتَصَمُواْ بِٱللَّهِ وَأَخۡلَصُواْ دِينَهُمۡ لِلَّهِ
فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ مَعَ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَۖ وَسَوۡفَ يُؤۡتِ ٱللَّهُ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ أَجۡرًا عَظِيمٗا ١٤٦

Not so those who repent, mend their ways, hold fast to God, and devote their religion entirely to Him: these will be joined with the believers, and God will give the believers a mighty reward [146]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 146)

There may be a glimmer of hope that urges one to repent so that no one ought to think that the ruling in this case is final and so makes one lose hope and get entangled in more evils. Therefore, He says, 'Except for those who repent…' (an-Nisa': 146); this refers to the one who repents of his hypocrisy. Further, if any corruption has resulted from his hypocrisy, he should fix it, hold fast to Allah and show sincere intentions and deeds. 'Except for those who repent, correct themselves, hold fast to Allah and are sincere in their religion for Allah…' (an-Nisa': 146). This means that in order for a hypocrite to be redeemed from the lowest depths of the fire, he must repent, fix what he has ruined, hold fast to Allah and be sincere in his religion for Allah alone. Repentance in this context means quitting hypocrisy and fixing the corruption resulted from hypocrisy. But how may someone hold fast to Allah? It is well-known that the hypocrites used to hold fast to the disbelievers because they sought to be honoured by them, i.e., the hypocrites felt comfortable among the disbelievers, so they took refuge with them and their strength. Allah commands them to hold fast to Him only because none can protect against Him, and He is the only source of Honour and Refuge.

It should be noted that the one who repents, corrects himself and holds fast to Allah fulfils all the pillars of faith. But Allah also says, '…and are sincere in their religion for Allah…' (an-Nisa': 146). So why has Allah stressed the importance of being sincere in this context? The reason is that hypocrisy originally stems from hearts. It is well-known that the heart may sin; any organ may sin by committing an act of transgression. For instance, the eye sins when it encroaches on the honour of others; similarly, the tongue sins when it assails and insults others. Therefore, every organ may sin in a certain manner. The sin of the heart is hypocrisy, so it is something hidden. The saying of Allah, '…and are sincere in their religion for Allah…' (an-Nisa': 146) is mentioned to affirm that sincerity—which lies in the heart—is necessary for repenting of hypocrisy.

That is to say that the repentance of the heart is different from the repentance of the other organs which repent by abstaining from the sin they committed, but the heart repents of hypocrisy by having sincere faith. Accordingly, Allah has established the merit of the believers who did not fall into hypocrisy, and has associated the repenting hypocrites with the believers. Accordingly, the reason for receiving Allah's reward is to be associated with the believers: '…for those will be with the believers. And Allah is going to give the believers a great reward.' (an-Nisa': 146)

This indicates that Allah's great reward will be received only by the believers, and whoever joins the believers will receive the same reward. Allah has ruled that rewards depend on the kind of deed. The hypocrites practiced hypocrisy to benefit from the rights Islam has established for the Muslims in the society, like protection of private wealth and lives so that they would be ostensibly counted as Muslims. When they hypocritically dealt with Muslims, the Muslims gave them the same rights they enjoyed; and when they repented, corrected themselves and became sincere in their religion for Allah, Allah considered them as the believers to whom He has promised to grant great reward. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

مَّا يَفْعَلُ ٱللَّهُ بِعَذَابِكُمْ إِن شَكَرْتُمْ وَءَامَنتُمْ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ شَاكِرًا عَلِيمًا ﴿١٤٧﴾

Why should God make you suffer torment if you are thankful and believe in Him? God always rewards gratitude and He knows everything [147] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 147)

Allah has clarified that the hypocrites are doomed to the lowest depths of the fire, and then He excluded from them those who repent, correct themselves, hold fast to Allah and become sincere in their religion for Allah. In this verse, Allah tackles and clarifies the idea of punishment, saying: ‘What would Allah do with your punishment…’ (an-Nisa’: 147). The verse is in the interrogative form, which linguistically means a question that is put forward by an inquirer and requires an answer. When Allah puts forward a confirmed issue, He does not use the predicative form to express it, as He did not say that punishing people does not involve any benefit or harm for Him.

In the verse, Allah has not put forward this issue using a predicative form; rather, He asks the hypocrites a question so that they state the matter He wants to confirm. For instance—and to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection—someone may say to another, ‘You have insulted me.’ The other person may respond by saying, ‘No, I did not insult you; I swear that I did not.’ He may also add, ‘bring forth a witness.’ Thus, this matter has gone through three stages: affirming that no insult was addressed, swearing that no insult took place and asking the claimant to bring a witness to prove that the alleged insult did take place.

Another person may respond to the one accusing him of insult, ‘I will leave the matter to you; what did I say that you may consider an insult?’ Whoever gives this response is sure that if the other person thinks well about his alleged accusation, he will not find a single offensive word.

By contrast, if one is certain that he has insulted the other person, he will be afraid lest the latter may find evidence that supports his accusation. Accordingly, if the accused person says to the accuser, ‘What insult did I say to you?’ This means that the accuser will search and not find anything. Accordingly, he will reach the truth and judge the matter himself.

When Allah says, ‘What would Allah do with your punishment…?’ (an-Nisa’: 147) He addresses a group of people who would be punished and who disobeyed Allah, but He has accepted their testimony against themselves. The verse indicates that the sinful deserves punishment, ‘What would Allah do with your punishment…’ (an-Nisa’: 147), and is prepared for it because he has disobeyed Allah. However, Allah is willing to accept the testimony of the sinful and his like. This demonstrates that faith is ingrained in the human self, and that whenever it faces troubles, it will resort only to the logic of faith.

Allah clarifies the matter to the hypocrites by asking them what He would do with their punishment, but the hypocrites will not find any reason relevant to Allah that may cause Him to punish them. This means that their natural disposition has been revived and will allow them to ponder the matter.

In day-to-day human life, man is often driven to punish another in order to give vent to his anger or to avenge himself because the latter has caused him some suffering, so he wants to react in the same way. He may also want to avoid the harm the latter may cause to him. Allah the Glorified and Exalted cannot be in any of these positions. If the hypocrites ponder this matter using only their natural disposition, they will inevitably arrive at the following answer: Allah will benefit nothing from punishing them if they are grateful to and have faith in Him.

This means that when Allah the Glorified and Exalted wills to discuss and confirm an issue, He prompts the sinful to admit it by putting it forward in the form of a question. Allah could possibly have used the predicative form, but in this way Allah would confirm the matter himself. However, when Allah uses the interrogative form, the answer provided to the question will confirm the matter, as they admit that they disobeyed and went against Allah’s Commands. This also indicates that Allah has entrusted them with the answer because it is based on logic and natural disposition. When a disbeliever tries to think ill of Allah, he will not logically be able to do so.

‘What would Allah do with your punishment if you are grateful and believe? And ever is Allah Appreciative and Knowing.’ (an-Nisa’: 147) What will Allah benefit from punishing the hypocrites if they were not grateful to Him and did not believe in Him? It is well-known that the Allah is so Exalted as to benefit from the obedience or disobedience of any person. However, the benefit and harm ensuing from obedience and disobedience respectively affect the creatures— Allah’s servants—not Allah Glorified is He.

Allah wants us to be obedient in order to preserve the well-being of society and to protect people from the harm they may cause to each other. Thus, Allah wants the people to gain the benefits of obeying Him as, before creating the creatures, He has existed with all the attributes of perfection whereby He has created the creatures. Further, creating the creatures will not accrue anything to Him. Therefore, Allah says in the following Qudsi Hadith: ‘O My servants, if the first of you and the last of you, and the humans of you and the jinn of you, were all as pious as the most pious heart of any individual amongst you, then this would not increase My Kingdom an iota. O My servants, if the first of you and the last of you, and the humans of you and the jinn of you, were all as wicked as the most wicked heart of any individual amongst you, then this would not decrease My Kingdom an iota. O My servants, if the first of you and the last of you, and the humans of you and the jinn of you, were all to stand together in one place and ask of Me, and I were to give everyone what he requested, then that would not decrease what I possess, except what is decreased of the ocean when a needle is dipped into it.’(1)

Therefore, the result of obeying or disobeying Allah ultimately affects the servants of Allah, not Him. The Mercy of Allah the Glorified and Exalted is revealed in the fact that He has created the creatures and protected them from the harm they may cause to each other. Allah Glorified is He also considers the person who treats Allah’s creatures kindly as obedient to Him; thus, He loves him. ‘What would Allah do with your punishment if you are grateful and believe?’ (an-Nisa’: 147) If they are grateful to and have faith in Allah, why should He chastise them? They will not deserve to be punished.

Allah Glorified is He wants to adjust societies and the interactions among its members so that societies would thrive and develop in an atmosphere of coexistence. Everyone has a specific attribute and a talent needed by the society.

Someone may have a piece of land upon which he wants to build. The landlord is not supposed to have studied engineering in order to design the building and its drawings. He is not supposed to be professional in the construction field in order to build a house, not even learn how to paint a building or become an electrician.

Similarly, the person who wants to wear a gown is not expected to learn how to obtain wool from sheep, spin and weave cotton and sew it afterwards. Everyone must have a useful job to benefit all the people; and since people are in need of each other, they have to peacefully coexist. Conflict must not be the foundation of things because it weakens the community and consumes its power in vain. Allah Glorified is He wants all the powers of society to support each other, not to conflict with each other. Therefore, Allah says, 'What would Allah do with your punishment if you are grateful and believe?' (an-Nisa': 147) Consequently, if they are not grateful and do not have faith in Allah, they will be punished, and Allah will not gain anything from their punishment.

(1) Narrated by Muslim, Abu `Awanah, Ibn Hibban and Al-Hakim on the authority of Abu Dharr

But why has Allah associated gratefulness with the attainment of faith? To answer this question, 'gratefulness' must be defined first. Gratefulness is a word of appreciation uttered by the person who has received a favour to the person who has done him a favour. Gratefulness involves saying to the person who has done you a favour, 'May you have plentiful bounties.' What is faith? Faith is to be certain that Allah is One. Which takes precedence over the other: gratitude or faith? Belief follows after taking advantage of the bounties of Allah. When man has been brought into the universe, he has found it well ordered, and he does not have any idea about religion or the Creator yet. Therefore, he will be eager to know who has created the universe for him.

Then, the messengers were sent to inform the people that the power that created the universe is Allah, Who orders them to follow a particular path. This is how faith is related to the bounties Allah has bestowed upon man. Thankfulness comes first, then faith. Thankfulness is a kind of general form of gratitude, whereas faith is a specific form of gratitude. Thankfulness is related to a specific bounty; whereas faith is addressed to the One Who has bestowed this bounty.

'What would Allah do with your punishment if you are grateful and believe? And ever is Allah Appreciative and Knowing.' (an-Nisa': 147) Allah Glorified is He informs the believers that He, Who bestows bounties, also thanks for them. How does this take place?

For example—and to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection—a person may buy some toys for his son after providing him with all the necessities of life. No one will buy toys for his son if he has not provided him with food and clothes. Accordingly, a person may buy some toys for his son to fill his leisure time if he has already provided him with proper food and clothes and the necessities of life. Then, the father may tell his son that the toy is for playing only during leisure time, and he should put it in its proper place before he studies. This means that everything in the house has a specific task that it performs. This also indicates that the father wants to discipline his son, allowing him to play with his toy at the time allotted for that purpose, and disallowing him to play with anything else in the house because if he does, he will break something. For instance, he must not tamper with the TV, the clock, the fridge or the washing machine so as not to break them.

The father must point out to him the difference between the things with which he may play and things he must treat seriously. Things specified for serious purposes should only be used when required; for instance, a washing machine is used only when one wants to wash his clothes. Similarly, a watch may not be used except when one wants to know the time and a fridge is used only when one wants to get something out to eat or drink. House appliances must not be approached except for specific purposes. As for toys, the child may play with during the time allotted for playing; however, he must keep them well. When a father watches his son and sees that he adheres to his instructions, takes care of the house appliances and keeps his toys, he will be happy. Thus, if a father does not give his son instructions, his son may spoil his toys. When the son adheres to the instructions of his father, his father will be content and happy with him. He will also buy more toys for his son because he can trust him, as he knows the rules he ought to follow while playing and how to keep his toy. In addition, his son avoids damaging the house appliances. The father will be more content with his son and will buy for him more new toys. If this is the case in the relationship between the father and his son, who are among Allah’s creatures, how will the Creator the Glorified and Exalted Who has brought all creatures into being, treat them? If man follows the path of Allah in every aspect of his life, he will find Allah All-Appreciative and All Knowing because Allah is pleased with His servant who adheres to His path and gives him in excess. Allah is All-Appreciative in the sense that if His Servants handle His bounties properly according to the purposes specified for them, Allah will be satisfied with them.

Allah manifests His Contentment by giving His servants in excess of what they need for the necessities of life, as Allah Glorified is He provides the necessities of life to everyone, even the disbelievers. He may also give His servants more than what they necessarily need in order to make them happy.

Therefore, the meaning of 'Allah is All-Appreciative' is that Allah the Glorified and Exalted is Content with His servants, and will reward them accordingly. Furthermore, Allah may grant His servants rewards corresponding to what they did or even more, in accordance with His saying, '…If you are grateful, I will surely increase you [in favour]…' (Ibrahim: 7).

Gratitude is shown by the servant towards his Lord and the Lord gives His servant in excess. A person must not pretend to do good deeds like the child who preserves his toy only when he sees his father, but once his father goes away, he damages it. However, Allah cannot be compared to any father, as any father has finite capability, but Allah is the Sublime Creator Who knows everything. He is All-Appreciative and All Knowing. Then, Allah the Glorified and Exalted says:

لَّا يُحِبُّ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْجَهْرَ بِٱلسُّوٓءِ مِنَ ٱلْقَوْلِ إِلَّا مَن ظُلِمَۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ سَمِيعًا عَلِيمًا ﴿١٤٨﴾

God does not like bad words to be made public unless someone has been wronged: He is all hearing and all knowing [148] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 148)

Allah the Glorified and Exalted wants to protect the believers from hearing evil sayings, i.e., offensive words. The words people use in their speech are often the words they most hear; if one's ear does not hear a certain word frequently, his tongue is not likely to use it. In this regard, if a child grows up in family observing good manners, he will most likely not utter any offensive words. If this child has started to say offensive words, it is realized that he has heard these words in the street because the child's permanent environment does not use such offensive words. When one investigates the source of these words, he may then find out that the child might spend some time in another environment from which these offensive words were transmitted to him.

Therefore, language is always transmitted through imitating the words uttered, and the tongue utters what the ear hears. It is well known that the acquisition of language is not relevant to one's nationality or lineage. For instance, if an English child grows up in an Arab environment, he will speak Arabic; and if an Arab child is brought up in an English environment, he will speak English.

Furthermore, within the sphere of a single language, there may be words that one would only use if one hears them; if one does not hear these words, he will not utter them. Allah the Glorified and Exalted wants to protect the society of the believers from evil sayings that may be heard by people, and transmit offensive language to them. If people utter evil sayings, the society will look weird and evil sayings will spread. However, Allah the Glorified and Exalted instructs the people to avoid uttering the evil sayings which Allah does not like. One should not just utter any word he wishes to say, for the utterance of such a word may harm generations to come. Someone may hear him utter this word and repeat it, and the bad example will be transmitted from one generation to the other. But the one who ultimately bears the sin for such a problem is the one who first uttered the evil saying.

Evil sayings may be based either on truth or falsehood; if it is based on truth, no one will, for instance, say that all people are bad. Someone may start by offending another; and a person may claim that someone has offended him. Allah the Glorified and Exalted wants to protect the ears of the believers from hearing evil sayings. Therefore, Allah says, ‘Allah does not like the public mention of evil…’ (an-Nisa’: 148). The opposite of this saying is that Allah likes public mention of good. But does Allah treat any faculty in people at the expense of another when He protects the society of the believers in this manner? No, He does not.

We know that the human self has a desire for revenge, self-defence and retaliation, and is inclined towards what relieves and alleviates anger. There is an Arab proverb that says, ‘Whoever is provoked and does not get enraged is a fool’; the underlying rationale is that the one who is provoked and does not get angry is deficient. However, this does not mean that Allah prevents people from uttering an evil saying in order to give vent to one’s anger, as He stipulates a condition for the utterance of such a word, ‘…except by one who has been wronged...’ (an-Nisa’: 148). The reason is that wronging a person means to misappropriate his right. Everyone is ultimately keen to protect himself and his rights; therefore, if someone is subjected to any form of injustice, he gets enraged and infuriated. Then, he either gives vent to his rage or suppresses and conceals it.

Thus, had Allah only said, ‘Allah does not like the public mention of evil…’ (an-Nisa’: 148), this would have been a suppression of the human psyche. Even though this suppression is in obedience to Allah’s Command because He does not like the public mention of evil, one may fail to control himself when provoked. Therefore, Allah has stipulated the condition under which public mention of evil may be permissible, namely, the occurrence of injustice. Allah clarifies that He does not like the public mention of evil, but He only allows it as a means of giving vent to anger because He does not rectify a faculty at the expense of another. Hence, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings of Allah be upon him says, ‘Anger is an ember ignited in the heart of the son of Adam, as you see it in the redness of his eyes and the bulge of his jugular veins. So, whoever senses something, let him stand if he is sitting and lie down if he is sitting. If he is still angry, he should perform ablution with cold water or wash up, for fire is only put out by water.’(1)

This means that one should move once one feels angry, as he should either change his position or pray after he performs ablution or wash up. This is in order for him to give vent to his anger to alleviate his suppressed feelings in the same way one may open a valve of a machine to let out some steam.

Therefore, whoever suffers injustice is permitted to make public mention of evil, and action which has two benefits: first, it allows one to give vent to his anger. Second, it allows the wronged person to declare that a certain person is unjust so that people can take their precautions in dealing with him. In addition, no one would delusively think that he can escape from his evil deeds. If everyone conceals the injustice he suffers, injustice will spread in the society. However, the servants of Allah should not expand the connotation of the word ‘wronging’ because one may be wronged through either words or deeds. The Muslim should also measure things accurately and in proportion to the injustice he suffers.

(1) Related by Al-Bayhaqi in As-Shu’ab; At-Tirmidhi from the narration of Abu Sa’id, except for the word tuqad (ignited), which is mentioned in the original Arabic Hadith; Ahmad and Abu Dawud.

'...So whoever has assaulted you, then assault him in the same way that he has assaulted you...' (al-Baqara: 194). Thus, Allah the Glorified and Exalted allows us exceptions only as necessary. Allah enjoins that no one should go beyond the limits set for necessity; He knows who is wronged through words or deeds, as He is the All Knowing and All-Hearing Therefore, no one should trespass the limits of courtesy.

Accordingly, Allah sets psychological and faith-based constraints necessary for giving vent to the suppressed anger, and at the same time, He does not preclude the possibility for aspiring for a better reaction based on one's faith. Allah allows His servant to mention evil openly if he is wronged, but if he aspires to a higher status of faith, he may choose not to mention evil openly and forgive his offender. Therefore, there is a difference between a matter that Allah leaves up to man and another that He obliges him to do. In this respect, Allah Glorified is He has left the matter of mentioning evil openly up to man, but He also likes man to forgive; this shows how the principles mentioned in the Quran are coherent and firmly connected. Allah Glorified is He says: '...Repel [evil] by that [deed] which is better; and thereupon the one whom between you and him is enmity [will become] as though he was a devoted friend.' (Fussilat: 34)

As Allah allows a person to make public mention of evil if someone wrongs him, He also gives another alternative which is to forgive the offender. When the wronged person forgives the person who has wronged him, the latter will most probably feel ashamed as he knows that there are others who are ethically nobler than him. Nothing bothers a person more than seeing another better than him in a certain aspect. When a wrongdoer is forgiven by the one he has wronged, he may feel a strong urge to be better than him.

Therefore, Allah regards the faith-based principle: '...Repel [evil] by that [deed] which is better...' (Fussilat: 34) preferable, and He does not make it compulsory because if someone is given a right and then is given the choice to take or concede it, this will be satisfactory for everyone. As this principle is not compulsory, it nourishes one's tendency to be generous and noble, but if it was compulsory, one faculty would be rectified at the expense of another. When someone assails another and the latter repels the evil of the former with a deed that is better, the assailant's character may be rectified. Allah Glorified is He says, '…Repel [evil] by that [deed] which is better; and thereupon the one whom between you and him is enmity [will become] as though he was a devoted friend' (Fussilat: 34). If the assailant persists in his aggression, the one who is trying to repel his evil with something better must bear in mind that Allah never says anything false, and that there must be some deficiency in the latter's behaviour.

For instance, the one who wants to repel evil with a better deed might have told the wrongdoer condescendingly that he would forgive him; such an arrogant attitude does not make anyone become a devoted friend. By contrast, if the one who is wronged really repels evil with a better deed in a humble and tolerant manner, the situation must evolve in the way Allah describes in His saying: '…and thereupon the one whom between you and him is enmity [will become] as though he was a devoted friend.' (Fussilat: 34) Furthermore, Allah puts the contending psychological reactions within clear frameworks; Allah says: '…So whoever has assaulted you, then assault him in the same way that he has assaulted you.…' (al-Baqara: 194) This ruling is intended to stop assailants from persisting in their wrongdoing. When certain people are not punished for wronging others, they tend to persist in their misdemeanour. However, if they are deterred, they may give up doing evil; thus, society will be protected from the spread of corruption. However, Allah still made the possibility of justly repelling the assault rather difficult.

A question may be raised: who is capable of achieving justice by attacking back just as he has been attacked? For instance, when someone slaps another person on his face, is it possible for the latter to slap the former with the same force and on the same part of the face? Therefore, repelling aggression with an equally aggressive attack is a difficult matter. Since Allah permits one to repel assault in the same way he was assaulted, and one may not be able to do this justly, as he may excessively attack back and become the offender instead of the offended, then forgiving the offender may be an easier and more accessible solution.

The feelings that overwhelm man as a result of having contending reactions towards a certain situation engender different motives that in turn lead to different inclinations. Inclinations are reactions to perceptions; if someone is hurt or attacked by another, the former exerts effort to control his anger, which means that he has difficulty in suppressing his anger. This implies that anger exists in the heart, and man is only required to control his inclinations. The angry person must prevent himself from being inclined towards evil retaliation, even if anger persists in the heart. '…who restrain anger…' (Al-'Imran: 134). This initial stage is followed by a second stage which is: '…and who pardon the people…' (Al-'Imran: 134).

What is required in the initial stage is to prevent any retaliatory inclination, and it is better to forget about the cause of your anger. The most exalted stage a person may reach in controlling his anger and forgiving those who wronged him is to treat them kindly. The reason is that the wrongdoer's faith is deficient. When someone suffers from physical sickness, help may be extended to him from his enemy, forgetting about their antagonism. If it is possible to react in this manner in the case of physical sickness, then it is more proper to do the same with the one who has deficient values. He needs suppression of anger, forgiveness (which is a nobler action) and kind treatment (which is the noblest action in this case).

Thus, Allah the Glorified and Exalted allows repelling attack in the same manner one was attacked, but He gives the option to control anger and avoid attacking back even if the cause of anger lingers in your heart. Then, He gives another option which involves a nobler action: forgiveness, which means forgetting about the cause of anger. Then, Allah allows people to elevate to even higher status in their reaction, as He says: '…and Allah loves the doers of good' (Al-'Imran: 134). In fact, all the Muslims desire that Allah loves them. Accordingly, Islam commands the believer to treat the person who maltreated him kindly.

One may wonder how he can treat the one who maltreated him kindly. The answer is that all people are watched by the Sustainer of all existence, Who is neither overtaken by drowsiness nor sleep, and sees everything. The assailant and the one who was assailed are created by Allah, Who protects, defends and takes the side of the one who was assailed. This renders whatever evil a person may suffer a gift for you. When we think deeply about the whole matter, we will find that when one forgives, he gains more benefits than in the case that he avenges himself. The rationale behind this is that when a person takes revenge, he uses his limited power, but when he forgives, he leaves the judgment up to Allah and His infinite Power. Then, Allah may respond to the offender’s attack or infinitely reward the one who has been offended. This is what Allah the Glorified and Exalted does when a wronged yet forgiving and righteous servant takes refuge in Him. Subsequently, Allah says:

إِن تُبۡدُواْ خَيۡرًا أَوۡ تُخۡفُوهُ أَوۡ تَعۡفُواْ عَن سُوٓءٖ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ عَفُوّٗا قَدِيرًا ١٤٩

If you do good, openly or in secret, or if you pardon something bad, then God is most forgiving and powerful [149] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 149)

It is well known that Allah does not permit anyone to make public mention of evil unless he has been wronged. This means that evil may either be concealed or explicitly mentioned. Thus, Allah says, ‘…If [instead] you show [some] good or conceal it or pardon an offense…’ (an-Nisa’: 149). This means that Allah knows whether a person does good deeds openly or secretly or pardons others for evil. Forgiveness is not considered a merit from the perspective of faith unless the one who forgives is in a position of power; otherwise, he would not forgive. Allah Glorified is He forgives while having power. If a person wants to forgive, he must act according to the ethics set by Allah’s Guidance, as it involves forgiveness while being able to retaliate. It should be taken into consideration that Allah does not want the Muslims to be humiliated; rather, he wants them powerful. The true merit is to forgive while being able to retaliate because if a person is not able to retaliate, he cannot be considered as pardoning. If a person who is not able to retaliate shows pardon, people considers him as a coward. However, if one wants to follow the ethical code set by Allah’s Guidance, he should utilize Allah’s bounties in the world for him to become competent and capable so that if he is wronged, he may forgive while being able to retaliate: ‘…Allah is ever pardoning and Competent.’ (an-Nisa’: 149)

As mentioned before, whenever the word kana, which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, is associated with any of Allah’s Attributes, it indicates an infinite status and permanent attribute, as Allah’s Existence is Infinite. Subsequently, Allah says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَكۡفُرُونَ بِٱللَّهِ وَرُسُلِهِۦ وَيُرِيدُونَ أَن يُفَرِّقُواْ
بَيۡنَ ٱللَّهِ وَرُسُلِهِۦ وَيَقُولُونَ نُؤۡمِنُ بِبَعۡضٖ وَنَكۡفُرُ بِبَعۡضٖ
وَيُرِيدُونَ أَن يَتَّخِذُواْ بَيۡنَ ذَٰلِكَ سَبِيلًا ﴿١٥٠﴾

As for those who ignore God and His messengers and want to make a distinction between them, saying, ‘We believe in some but not in others,’ seeking a middle way [150] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 150)

Allah Glorified is He makes faith a whole issue whose parts are inseparable. Declaring faith is not enough for someone to be called a believer because in order to have proper faith in Allah, one needs a messenger to teach him that the Creator is the One Who has made all the powers in the universe subservient to man and is named Allah. No one can know the Name of the Creator of the universe without a messenger sent by Allah.

We know that the human mind cannot identify the Name of the Creator of the universe by mere deductions, and man has been introduced to a well-ordered universe. Therefore, he must pay attention to the fact that there is the Power that has existed before the universe was created, and that man exists in an integrated universe. Someone may, for instance, hear his father say that the house was built by the father or the grandfather or the like. But no one has told this same person who erected the sky or created the sun, even though people allege to have done things that they have not actually done. It is thus quite peculiar that people do not inquire about the One Who created the universe.

It is worth-mentioning that people are interested in keeping record of the history of trivial or relatively important things in their lives. In this regard, we find a history of rocks and studies on the history of different industries; for instance, the history of the electric bulb that was invented by Edison who managed to generate electricity using limited resources. In summary, there are records of the history of almost everything in this world, which trace back the development of things to their respective origins. It is worth mentioning that each industry, no matter how trivial or important it is, has been passed from one person to another, and has not been invented in its present form by a single person.

Each inventor started from the point at which his predecessors had stopped and embarked on a new innovation until innovations have reached their present status. Who would possibly believe that a bulb—that one turns on and off so simply and disposes of when it is damaged—has a history? We may then consider the sun that never fades, wanes or is ever extinguished to draw an analogy. A lamp illuminates a small area, while the sun illuminates the entire universe—is the sun not worthy of inquiring about its history?

As mentioned previously, when man investigates the universe, apart from the idea of religion and what the Messengers conveyed about the Creator of the universe, the way He created it and the guidance, he may realize that people's criteria differ based on their positions and their strength. Someone may be sitting on a chair made of sycamore tree, another on a chair made of rosewood and a third may be sitting on a carpet on the floor.

Man depends on the crafts of other fellow humans based on his status and standing. For instance, a countryman or a nomad used to start a fire by rubbing a piece of iron against a stone; then, he might keep the fire lit to use it more than once. As man developed the methods of igniting fire, he used a lamp lit by oil. As civilization developed further, man used a glass gas-lamp that has a numerical meter indicating the level of light it produces.

For instance, there is a grade five lamp whose number indicates the intensity of the light it produces. Thus, the lamp's light intensity is increased according to the space required to be illuminated. As technology developed, man has used torches; with further technological advancement, man has used electricity, neon and recently solar energy to produce light. However, when the sun rises, people turn off the lights, as the sun light ultimately obviates our need for any other source of light. At night one ensures that the source of electricity in his house is intact to avoid any power failure and darkness. If this is the case with the lamp, what about the sun with which one does not face all these complications?

Throughout history, man has tried to understand Allah’s absolute Omnipotence even without messengers being sent. However, no one can know the Name of the Power that created the universe by reason alone, as it should be conveyed by messengers. The Name ‘ Allah’ is bound by a religious text and can only be known through Revelation. Therefore, how did some disbelievers say that they believed in Allah and disbeliever in His Messengers? How did they know that the Name of the Power in which they would believe is Allah? They must have learnt this name through an earlier messenger because having faith in Allah necessitates that one should have learnt His Name from an earlier messenger whom he believed.

Is it sufficient to have faith in Allah as a Great Power? It is obligatory for a person to think about what this Power expects him to fulfil? If this Power commands man to follow religious guidance, then who must convey it?

Therefore, a messenger must inform the people of the Name of the Power that created the universe, explain the path It requires them to follow, and how to obey this Power. Therefore, no one can separate having faith in Allah from having faith in His Messengers; otherwise, such faith would only be a mere belief in a hidden power. In this regard, the one who merely has faith in the Power that created the universe may not have the right to say that this Power is named ‘Allah’ because this Name must have been conveyed by a messenger.

Therefore, when someone says that he believes in Allah but does not believe in the Messengers, he should be regarded at fault because believing in Allah requires believing in a message transmitted by a messenger. Therefore, having faith in Allah is inseparable from having faith in the Messenger.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted created Adam after He had created the universe and the rest of the creatures. No one would possibly claim that Adam is the first creature to have existed in the world. A poet once said:

Adam cannot be - by logic - the first creature in the universe,
By inductive analogy, many creatures were created before him.

It can be said that many creatures were created before Adam, but Adam is the first human being. When Allah created him, He taught him all the names so that he may properly lead his life in the world; had not Allah taught him the names of beings, he would not have been able to converse with his children, and he would not have been able to identify the name of any object.

Therefore, Adam had to learn all the names from Allah because language is mainly transmitted through imitation, and no one can use a word unless he has heard it. Language is transmitted to people by their fathers who acquired it from the grandfathers. If we trace this line of transmission, we will ultimately end with Adam. But who transmitted language to Adam for him to utter the first word? It must have been Allah; this fact must be recognized by every rational human being. Thus, Allah's saying, 'And He taught Adam all the names…' (al-Baqara: 31), is logical and true from the perspective of inductive reasoning.

When one teaches his child how to speak, he first teaches him names of things, but no one knows how the child learns the verbs of action. For example, one may teach his child the names of some objects such as a glass, a table, a plate and food, but no one ever teaches his child what the verbs 'drink' or 'eat' means. Therefore, names are the basic parts of speech; subsequently man learns verbs through practice and experience.

Allah has placed in this universe formidable evidence of His Greatness as its Creator, and His Message is conveyed by the messengers who inform people that the Name of the Power who created the universe is Allah. They also tell people the Attributes of this Power, and that whoever obeys Him will be admitted into Heaven, and whoever disobeys Him will be condemned to fire. Had not there been any messengers, people would have continued living astray and would not have learnt the Name of the Power who created the universe. In addition, people would not have learnt what this Power expects from them. This is how we may respond to those who worship the sun, the moon or the stars. They may worship the sun because they consider it as the greatest power.

But there is a question to be asked in this respect, which is, 'What is worship?' Worship is to show obedience on the part of a servant to the One Who surely deserves to be worshipped. So, what did the sun command you (O worshippers of the sun) to do? And what did it forbid you from? They, the worshippers of the sun, would confess that the sun did not ask them to do anything. Accordingly, their worship to the sun is totally groundless. This is based on the fact that the sun has never laid down a methodology for those misguided people—the sun worshippers—to adhere to, nor is it able to do so. In addition, it cannot provide any reward for the one who worships it. We thus reach the conclusion that worshipping any power other than Allah the Almighty can be definitively proved null and void. As a matter of fact, true belief in Allah the Almighty is absolutely inseparable from believing firmly in His Messengers and Prophets who conveyed the divine Message to humankind.

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explains to us how Allah Glorified is He reveals to him by stating that He the Almighty impart His Revelation to His Messengers and Prophets through the archangel Jibril (Gabriel). The reason is that any Messenger is ultimately a human being, so he cannot be in direct contact with the Ultimate and Absolute Power in the universe. The same applies to our day-to-day life. We know that when someone wants to sleep, he does not want any light to bother him while sleeping, so he tends to sleep during the night to take advantage of the darkness. However, if he wakes up during the night, he fears walking in the house without light lest he may bump into something. For this reason, one may use a small torch even if the light it produces is as weak as what a candle emits.

In truth, such a small torch cannot be directly connected to the electrical power. It has to be attached to a transformer that receives high voltage power and converts it to the proper voltage this torch may take. If this is the relation between a small electrical instrument and the high voltage electrical power supplies, what would be the relation between Allah the Almighty and His Creatures?

As a matter of fact, Allah the Almighty created other creatures—like the angels—to act as intermediaries between Him and His Messengers and Prophets. He the Almighty in turn fully prepared these angels to properly undertake this special mission. Therefore, we say to those who want to have faith in Allah while rejecting to belief in His Messengers: ‘No; your belief as such is not profound.’ In this regard, it is important to know that Allah the Almighty has used the word ‘Messengers’ in the plural form to avoid that a particular nation or people would mistakenly think that its Messenger was the only one sent by Allah the Almighty and then deny the others. Rather, every nation must have faith in all the Messengers and Prophets of Allah the Almighty. It is true that every Messenger was timely sent by Allah to respond to the needs of his contemporary society. However, all of them—Messengers and Prophets of Allah—were sent to call for one creed. None of them has been sent with a particular creed that is at odds with the others. This yet does not preclude the fact that they employed different methods and discussed different issues pertaining to life and the way of improving it, each according to his time. Confirming this fact: 'O People, be mindful of your Lord, Who created you from a single soul, and from it created its mate, and from the pair of them spread countless men and women far and wide; be mindful of God, in Whose name you make requests of one another. Beware of severing the ties of kinship, Allah is always watching over you.' (an-Nisa': 1)

Adam and Eve lived together and gave birth to a number of children who, in turn, started to reproduce and make families. Every family was in need of a house to dwell in and a farm to produce their food. In fact, every individual needs at least half of an acre to produce the food he needs. In this vein, it is important to know that the more the offspring grow in number, the more they need to settle in other places; thus, they will make use of the different means of transportation. In other words, someone may depart from a region with limited natural resources to another where there is abundance in rain, thus getting the greatest benefit. He may also travel to places with more natural resources. It was in this way that people scattered here and there. In addition, each group of people started to develop its own customs and traditions, to the extent that it may be afflicted with certain kinds of diseases which do not afflict others. For this reason, He the Almighty sent each Messenger from among his own people to be fully able to address and tackle their own diseases and problems. Furthermore, He Glorified is He directed and enabled some minds to discover the secrets of the universe. Due to the progress of knowledge, the entire universe turned into a small village. For instance, we, in Egypt, became able to watch an event which is taking place right now in America. In addition, it is unfortunately due to this progress of knowledge that the entire world started to share the same bad habits. So, a bad practice or habit may emerge in America, and then it gets transferred to Germany, and ultimately infects our society. Thus, it becomes clear that these ambitious advancements turned the world into a small village with the same defects and the same customs and traditions.

That is why the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, the seal of all the Prophets and Messengers, must have been universal to address all humankind and to fit all times and places. In the Quran, Allah the Almighty tells us that Muhammad is the best of all Messengers and Prophets, and that his followers, in case they firmly adhere to his guidance are the best of all peoples and nations. In addition, believing in him peace and blessings be upon him necessitates a firm belief in all the Messengers and Prophets that were sent by Allah before him. Consequently, those who want to distinguish among Messengers know nothing about religion. The Jews believed in Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him, while some of them rejected to believe in 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Similarly, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent as a Messenger, some believed in him, while others did not. That is why Allah the Almighty refers to those who rejected to believe in him peace and blessings be upon him with His saying: '…They then increase in unbelief…' (Al-'Imran: 90). This clearly means that those who disbelieve in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him have committed a sin which will never be forgiven because there will be no Prophets or Messengers after him peace and blessings be upon him. Indeed, Prophet Muhammad is the seal of all the Prophets and Messengers.

Thus, the verse obviously indicates that the apex of faith entails that one must believe in the existence of a certain power whose name may not be known to him, and whose requirements and commands may be unclear as well. Furthermore, one may be unaware of the reward this power provides to the obedient or the punishment it afflicts upon the disobedient. That is why people are in a dire need of Messengers and Prophets. In addition, reason leads one to the necessity of having faith in Allah and His Messengers. As a matter of fact, He the Almighty uses the word 'Messengers' in the plural form to indicate that people must firmly believe that He the Almighty is the One Who deserves to be worshipped so that no one will be able to declare that he believes in certain Messengers and Prophets while rejecting others. For this reason, He Glorified is He says in this verse, 'As for those who deny Allah and His Messengers and want to make a distinction between them, saying, 'We believe in some but not in others,' seeking a middle way.' (an-Nisa': 150)

We know that kafar—the Arabic word translated in the above verse as 'deny'—means to veil and conceal. It is taken for granted that one will hide and conceal an existing object. Thus, to disbelieve in Allah the Almighty means to deny and conceal His Existence. This obviously indicates that the Existence of Allah precedes denying Him the Almighty. As such, the word kufr (disbelief) plainly indicates the Existence of Allah. That is why when we ask the disbelievers, 'What do you conceal and hide with your disbelief?' The answer shall be, 'We conceal and deny the Existence of Allah;' a matter that obviously tells that he had been a believer before becoming a disbeliever.

Thus, Allah's words, 'As for those who deny Allah and His Messengers and want to make a distinction between them…' (an-Nisa': 150) indicate that those who want to do so are foolish as the ultimate goal behind the mission of all the Prophets and Messengers is to inform people about Allah the Almighty the One Who sent them. For this reason, we find that Allah the Almighty in the Quran says: 'O, Prophet, strive against the disbelievers and the hypocrites, and be tough with them. Hell is their final home– an evil destination!' (at-Tawba: 74)

In truth, belief in Allah is ultimately inseparable from belief in His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. For this reason, only fools would want to differentiate between having faith in Allah and having faith in His Messengers. To those who make such a distinction, we say: 'Faith is of one essence and all the Messengers and Prophets of Allah were sent to achieve one ultimate objective; that is, to call people for the Oneness of Allah.' This point is proved by Allah's words in the same chapter of an-Nisa' in which He Glorified is He plainly states that: 'Indeed, we have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], as we revealed to Nuh (Noah) and the prophets after him. And we revealed to Abraham, Ishmael, Isaac, Jacob, the Descendants, Jesus, Job, Jonah, Aaron, and Solomon, and to David we gave the book [of Psalms].' (an-Nisa': 163)

This clearly shows that all creeds are of the same origin and that they are, in essence, various forms of one single creed. So, what do they seek to achieve by believing in some Messengers and abjuring others? They undoubtedly seek temporary power and authority. In the past, those in charge of religion used to address all matters and issues, be they religious, judicial or even pertaining to engineering. For this reason, people trusted them because they truly believed that they were the ones who delivered the Message of Allah the Almighty to humankind. In addition, they thought of them as the heirs of the Prophets and Messengers of Allah. Furthermore, people believed that they were the only ones entitled to acquire knowledge from Allah Glorified is He. Thus, we notice that most of the advanced sciences in ancient civilizations, like mummification in the ancient Egyptian civilization which is a riddle until today, were all practiced by priests of ancient Egypt. This implies that Allah is the origin of all the knowledge man attained on earth. The question to be asked here is, 'Why did humans then pass their own laws?' The reason is that clergymen usurped the temporary power and authority. But what does the term 'temporary power' mean? In truth, people used to resort to clergymen for advice in all matters, to the extent that they—the clergymen—fully realised that everyone wanted to make them content. People used to give them offerings and sacrifices just like they used to do with their so-called deities. Therefore, clergymen became extremely rich and lived in luxury to the point that they became very overweight due to the excessive amounts of food and the pleasures they used to indulge in. Therefore, when someone asked any of them about any matter, they used to give that person the opinion that would guarantee and assert their temporary power. This is why when a Messenger or a Prophet would come about and try to abolish these privileges, they (clergymen) would deny him so that they would continue to be at the top of the hierarchy of power and authority. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says: 'They have exchanged the signs of Allah for a small price and averted [people] from His way. Indeed, it was evil that they were doing.' (at-Tawba: 9) This means that they bartered away the Messages of Allah for a trifling gain of worldly pleasures; they gave up the Messages of Allah for a disdainful handful of worldly pleasures.

If we extensively investigate the history of law, we will find that the laws of the ancient clergymen accurately represented the early origins of the British, French and Roman Laws. As a matter of fact, the main reason that made people repel ancient clergymen is that they misused their temporary power.

Furthermore, people at that time noticed that each of those clergymen would pass different rulings for identical cases, and that they would be willing to change their verdicts for money. Consequently, people started to have suspicions about them and realised that they would twist their rulings to accommodate their interests. For this reason, people decided not to resort to clergymen for judgement anymore and started to make their own positive laws. Therefore, it becomes clear now that ‘temporary power’ was the main reason why some of the followers of the Messengers were biased towards them, to the extent that if another Messenger came about, they would fiercely resist his Message lest he should take away their temporary power. Thus, they would antagonise the new Messenger or Prophet. In fact, every new Messenger or Prophet is required to teach his followers and those who chose to believe in him that, if a Messenger of Allah comes forth, they should hasten to believe in him. This point is definitely proved by the Quran where Allah the Almighty clearly that says: ‘And [recall, O People of the Scripture], when Allah took the covenant of the prophets, [saying], "Whatever I give you of the Scripture and wisdom and then there comes to you a messenger confirming what is with you, you [must] believe in him and support him." [Allah] said, "Have you acknowledged and taken upon that my commitment? " They said, "We have acknowledged it." He said, "Then bear witness, and I am with you among the witnesses.’ (Al-‘Imran: 81)

Thus, He the Almighty accepted the previous Prophets’ solemn pledge to inform the people of the sequence of the divine Messages from the beginning until the seal of all the Prophets and Messengers—Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Thus, Allah the Almighty says, ‘As for those who deny Allah and His Messengers and want to make a distinction between them, saying, “We believe in some but not in others,” seeking a middle way,’ means that they try to draw distinction between Allah and His Messengers by passing judgment, which is primarily concerned with keeping their temporary power. In doing so, they were interested in creating an ‘in-between faith and infidelity’ situation. But there is no possibility for such a thing in religion; you either have faith or you are an unbeliever. If we reflect carefully on the structure of this verse, we will find that its meaning is perfected and fulfilled in the following verse in which Allah the Almighty says:

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلۡكَٰفِرُونَ حَقّٗاۚ وَأَعۡتَدۡنَا لِلۡكَٰفِرِينَ عَذَابٗا مُّهِينٗا ﴿١٥١﴾

they are really disbelievers: We have prepared a humiliating punishment for those who disbelieve [151]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 151)

As a matter of fact, the saying of Allah the Almighty ‘They are really disbelievers,’ clearly means that they are complete unbelievers. At that point, we may be faced with the following question, ‘Is there one who is a complete unbeliever and another who is not?’ The answer is ‘Yes.’ The one who does not believe in all the heavenly revealed Messages may have some excuse because no Messenger or Prophet had been sent to his people. However, unbelief would be egregious if it were committed by someone to whom a Messenger was sent. That is because this Messenger had informed such a person with the truth conveyed to him through revelation.

We notice that when Allah the Almighty talks about the disbelievers, He Glorified is He mentions the punishment prepared for them in the same verse. That is why we find Him the Almighty clearly stating this fact in His saying, ‘They are really disbelievers: We have prepared a humiliating punishment for those who disbelieve.’ This verse indicates clearly that Allah the Almighty has already mentioned the punishment prepared for the disbelievers in the Hereafter. In this regard, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is reported to have said, ‘The paradise was shown to me. If I wished, I would bring you some of its fruits.’(1) Indeed, Allah the Almighty has created Paradise and Hellfire. In addition, He Glorified is He showed paradise to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, to the effect that if he wished, he would have brought his Companions some of its fruits. Therefore, do not think that He the Almighty would wait till Judgment Day to prepare the abode of the disbelievers—that is, hellfire. Similarly, He the Almighty would not wait to the Day of Judgment to prepare the abode of the believers—that is, paradise. In the Quran, Allah tells that: ‘Those are the inheritors’ (al-Mu’minun: 10-11).

As such, it becomes clear that Allah Glorified is He did not wait and postpone the matter until after surveying who believed and who did not so that He may prepare for each group, in proportion to its number, its proper abode, be it Paradise or Hellfire. Rather, He the Almighty considered that all of His creatures might be believers, and thus prepared an abode for all of them in paradise. Similarly, He Glorified is He considered that all His creatures might be unbelievers and thus created the fire in such a way that is spacious enough to include them all. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘On the Day We will say to Hell, "Have you been filled?" and it will say, "Are there some more’ (Qaf: 30) The fire asks for more people to fill the places that were originally prepared for those who were not admitted into it as result of believing in Allah. As for those who disbelieved in Allah and His Messengers, who made a distinction between Allah and His Messengers and who believed in some Messengers and abjured others, Allah will allow the believers on the Day of Judgement to inherit the places originally prepared for them in paradise. Having shed light on the punishment prepared for the disbelievers, Allah the Almighty then cast light on the reward that will be provided for those who believed in Allah and His Messengers. In truth, this is logical and reasonable.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

Juxtaposing opposites helps the mind to assimilate them. For instance, a school headmaster may juxtapose two young men; each of them is a student in the last year at a high school. The headmaster may then say: ‘Look! This young man succeeded because he worked assiduously, whereas the second failed.’ This contrast prompts the listener to compare between the attitudes of each of the two students. Similarly, He the Almighty having shed light on the disbelievers and the punishment prepared for them, cast light on the believers and the reward to be provided for them. He Glorified is He says:

وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ بِٱللَّهِ وَرُسُلِهِۦ وَلَمۡ يُفَرِّقُواْ بَيۡنَ أَحَدٖ مِّنۡهُمۡ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ
سَوۡفَ يُؤۡتِيهِمۡ أُجُورَهُمۡۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ غَفُورٗا رَّحِيمٗا ١٥٢

But God will give [due] rewards to those who believe in Him and His messengers and make no distinction between any of them. God is most forgiving and merciful [152] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 152)

Here Allah the Almighty asserts an obvious matter, that is, the believers make no distinction whatsoever among the Messengers of Allah. As a matter of fact, the word ahad—the Arabic word here translated as ‘any’—is sometimes used to refer to the masculine singular and sometimes to the feminine singular.

In addition, it sometimes refers to the dual masculine, the dual feminine, the feminine plural or the masculine plural. Thus, this particular word ahad refers to all the Messengers of Allah Glorified is He. The fact that this word may be used to refer to both the masculine and the feminine may be confirmed by the Quranic verse in which Allah the Almighty addresses the Mothers of the Believers and tells them that: ‘O wives of the Prophet, you are not like anyone among women. If you fear Allah, then do not be soft in speech [to men], lest he in whose heart is disease should covet, but speak with appropriate speech’ (al-Ahzab: 32) As such, it becomes clear that the word ahad is used in the Arabic language to equally refer to the masculine, the feminine, the dual and the plural. Having talked about the disbelievers who made distinction between Allah and His Messengers, and having told that He the Almighty had prepared for them a humiliating punishment, He Glorified is He similarly told that the believers who did not make distinction between Allah and His Messengers will receive a great reward. He the Almighty finally concludes the verse by telling that He is Most-Forgiving and Most-Merciful. He the Almighty then says:

يَسۡـَٔلُكَ أَهۡلُ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ أَن تُنَزِّلَ عَلَيۡهِمۡ كِتَٰبٗا مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِۚ فَقَدۡ سَأَلُواْ مُوسَىٰٓ أَكۡبَرَ مِن
ذَٰلِكَ فَقَالُوٓاْ أَرِنَا ٱللَّهَ جَهۡرَةٗ فَأَخَذَتۡهُمُ ٱلصَّٰعِقَةُ بِظُلۡمِهِمۡۚ ثُمَّ ٱتَّخَذُواْ ٱلۡعِجۡلَ مِنۢ
بَعۡدِ مَا جَآءَتۡهُمُ ٱلۡبَيِّنَٰتُ فَعَفَوۡنَا عَن ذَٰلِكَۚ وَءَاتَيۡنَا مُوسَىٰ سُلۡطَٰنٗا مُّبِينٗا ١٥٣

The People of the Book demand that you [Prophet] make a book physically come down to them from heaven, but they demanded even more than that of Moses when they said, ‘Show us God face to face,’ and were struck by the thunderbolt for their presumption. Even after clear revelations had come down to them, they took the calf as an object of worship, yet We pardoned this, and gave Moses clear authority [153] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 153)

The verse under discussion tells us clearly that the question asked by the people of the Book was wrong, for they were supposed to demand that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked Allah the Almighty to make a book physically come down upon them form the heavens. In truth, the polytheists of Mecca who were masters of eloquence, elocution and fluency tried their best to find a flaw in the Quran, but they found nothing. Thus, they admitted the fact that the Quran was a great and a heavenly revealed Book, but the only problem for them was that they wished that the Quran had been revealed upon one of the masters of the two cities 'Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from [one of] the two cities?' (az-Zukhruf: 31) They recognised the greatness of the Quran, yet they were angry at the fact that it had been revealed upon the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a matter that made them intellectually disturbed. As a matter of fact, the polytheists and disbelievers of Mecca believed that the Quran was some sort of magic; other times, they claimed that it was taught to Prophet Muhammad by another human being; they also thought of it as some kind of poetry. Furthermore, they said that it was part of ancient mythology and legends. Having closely scrutinised it, they firmly believed that it was a heavenly revealed Book. Yet, the only problem for them was that it has been revealed upon the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him! They wished it had been revealed upon one of the masters of the two cities. In truth, they did all of this out of envy; a point which is affirmed in the Quran where He the Almighty says: 'Or do they envy people for what Allah has given them of His bounty? But we had already given the family of Abraham the Scripture and wisdom and conferred upon them a great kingdom.' (an-Nisa': 54)

Hence, their statement was by no means objective; it was rather quite remote from truth and abounded with confusion. They once said the Quran was a work of magic, but they did not find any answer when people asked them: 'Why did the Quran not enchant you then? Because if it were actually a work of magic, it would have enchanted you, and you would not have a will independent of the will of the magician.' Then, they claimed that it was none but some sort of poetry; a point that aroused people's surprise, especially if we consider this false claim in the light of the fact that they—the Arabs—were masters of poetry, to the extent that they had hung seven of their most wonderful poems on the walls of the Ka'ba. Therefore, it becomes clear that the biggest issue for the disbelievers and polytheists of Mecca was that they had refused to embrace Islam to the extent that whenever their arguments were proved weak and spurious, they used to fabricate new ones.

In this verse, Allah the Almighty explains that if they were asking for a book to physically come down from heaven, a Book (the Quran) had already been revealed to you exactly as much as the Torah was previously revealed to Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Since they believed that a Book was revealed to Musa (Moses) from heaven, why did they not believe in the revelation of the Quran to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? As a matter of fact, there must be a special meaning in the saying of Allah the Almighty, 'The People of the Book demand that you [Prophet] make a book physically come down to them from heaven….' We know for certain that the Book, Torah, was revealed to Musa (Moses) all at once. Further, the Jews asked for the Quran to be revealed in the same a way as the Torah of Prophet Musa (Moses) was revealed. If we ponder carefully over this verse, we will find out that they were asking for a book to be revealed to them directly from the Heavens, as if they wanted to isolate Messenger Muhammad. In other words, it is as if they wanted Allah the Almighty to speak to them directly away from him peace and blessings be upon him. That is why He the Almighty rebukes them in another verse of the Quran and says 'Do they distribute the mercy of your Lord? It is we who have apportioned among them their livelihood in the life of this world and have raised some of them above others in degrees [of rank] that they may make use of one another for service. But the mercy of your Lord is better than whatever they accumulate.' (az-Zukhruf: 32)

This indicates clearly that Allah the Almighty distributed the means of livelihood to humankind in the worldly life including the topic of revelation which is an infinite, divine Mercy from Allah the Almighty so the disbelievers are in no way allowed to interfere in the affairs of the universe. When Allah the Almighty says, 'The People of the Book demand that you [Prophet] make a book physically come down to them from heaven…', it indicates that they, people of the Book, attributed the revelation to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in spite of the fact that he peace and blessings be upon him never attributed the process of revelation to himself. In truth, all the time, he used to stress that fact by saying, ' Allah revealed so and so to me.'

It was narrated that Ka'ab ibn Al- Ashraf and others wanted Allah the Almighty to send down a book to each ordering them to believe in Prophet Muhammad. Thus, they—people of the Book —wanted a book to be revealed down to each of them in a personal way or that Allah Glorified is He would send them another book in addition to the Quran. But how could they make such demand even though they had the Torah?! At that point, Allah the Almighty wants to console Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and so tells him not to be disappointed by the people of the Book's demands because they had previously asked Musa (Moses) for something which was even more than that when they said to Moses, 'Show us Allah the Almighty face to face.' As a matter of fact, by doing so, they committed injustice against Allah the Almighty Himself. As such, you (O Prophet Muhammad) should not be disappointed or even surprised by their demand to you to send down a book upon them from heaven. Allah the Almighty says: 'The People of the Book demand that you [Prophet] make a book physically come down to them from heaven, but they demanded even more than that of Moses when they said, "Show us Allah face to face," and were struck by the thunderbolt for their presumption.'

In truth, once we see the word as-sa'iqha—the Arabic word translated here as 'thunderbolt'—we should first understand that it refers to something that comes from above and starts with a disturbing sound. While explaining that particular verse in the chapter al-Baqara, Allah the Almighty says: 'or [it is] like a rainstorm from the sky within which is darkness, thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears against the thunderclaps in dread of death. But Allah is encompassing of the disbelievers' (al-Baqara: 19) I pointed out that this act plainly indicates that the sound of the thunderbolts is so piercing that it may even damage the ear drums. Furthermore, the noise caused by the sound of thunderbolts may exceed the isolation provided by one finger because when one blocks his ears, he often does so with the end of his finger and not with all of them. Thus, the level of disturbance caused by the sound of the thunderbolts was so piercing and powerful that whenever they put their fingers into their ears, they failed to shut it out.

Obeying the Command of Allah, thunderbolts may destruct, burn or even come with a fierce wind that wipes out everything. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, '… and (they) were struck by thunderbolts for their injustice…'. Azh-zhulm—the Arabic word here translated as 'injustice'—means to give someone something to which he is not rightfully entitled. In fact, one would not be able to do so unless he usurped that particular thing from its rightful owner. As such, we should know that their question is a kind of wickedness and presumption because perception implies that the perceiver has comprehended what he perceived.

Thus, if you perceive something with your eyes, this means that your eyes have comprehended this object and encompassed its details. The same holds true for the ears when they hear, the nose when it smells, the sense of touch when it distinguishes between smoothness and roughness, and the sense of taste when tasting food. As such, it becomes clear that perception, regardless of the sense employed, means to fully comprehend the perceived object.

The people of the Book demanded to see Allah the Almighty face-to-face. This means that they wanted the instrument of perception—the eye—to realise the essence of Allah the Almighty. But when the perceiver is able to comprehend and realise the essence of the perceived object, it means that the former dominates the latter; a matter which is inconceivable to be achieved on the part of Allah Glorified is He. Indeed, this is the absolute and ultimate form of wickedness and presumption. It is possible that someone may see another; however, it is not right to think that one could do the same with Allah the Almighty. Why so? It is because He Glorified is He tells us in the Quran that 'Vision perceives Him not, but He perceives [all] vision; and He is the Subtle, the Acquainted.' (al-An'am: 103) It is taken for granted that Allah is the fully capable and thus none may ever be capable of dominating or encompassing Him.

If we select someone to solve a problem, this indicates that his mind is capable of solving it and finding an answer to it. Yet, if he were handed a problem and he failed to solve it, it means that his mind was incapable of handling it. Likewise, anything that is perceived attests that the tool employed to perceive it could dominate it.

At that point, it is of great importance to stress the fact that Allah is fully capable and Most–Exalted, and thus no creature is ever capable of dominating or even encompassing Him. He Glorified is He says: '…and (they) were struck by the thunderbolt for their presumption. Even after clear revelations had come down to them, they took the calf as an object of worship…' As a matter of fact, they should have at least disciplined themselves and quit trespassing the Limits and Laws of Allah, especially after the thunderbolt of punishment struck them ‘And when the two companies saw one another, the companions of Moses said, "Indeed, we are to be overtaken!’ (ash-Shu'ara': 61) The sea was ahead of them and Pharaoh was behind them; logic tells that there was no way to escape Pharaoh’s punishment. Yet, Allah the Almighty inspired Moses. ‘[Moses] said, "No! Indeed, with me is my Lord; He will guide me.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 62) Musa (Moses), in fact, resorted to the Supreme Power of Allah the Almighty and thus He commanded him to strike the sea with his staff. The sea was then split into two halves; each like a great mountain. However, after they walked on the bottom of the sea and after they realised the drowning of Pharaoh, they worshipped a golden calf paying no attention at all to the fact that He the Almighty had saved them from being destructed by the Pharaoh and his soldiers. They repaid Allah’s Favour upon them with denial and disbelief. He the Almighty then concludes the verse by saying, ‘…Even after clear revelations had come down to them, they took the calf as an object of worship, yet We have pardoned this and given Moses clear authority.’ The clear proof and authority that Allah the Almighty vouchsafed unto Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was the strict rule He imposed on them when He Glorified is He ordered them to kill themselves. Thus, they brought their swords to kill themselves because He the Almighty gave Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him the power and authority, and thus no one dared to disobey his command. Allah the Almighty then says:

وَرَفَعْنَا فَوْقَهُمُ ٱلطُّورَ بِمِيثَٰقِهِمْ وَقُلْنَا لَهُمُ ٱدْخُلُوا۟ ٱلْبَابَ سُجَّدًا وَقُلْنَا
لَهُمْ لَا تَعْدُوا۟ فِى ٱلسَّبْتِ وَأَخَذْنَا مِنْهُم مِّيثَٰقًا غَلِيظًا ﴿١٥٤﴾

We made the mountain tower high above them at their pledge;
We said to them, ‘Enter the gate humbly,’ and, ‘Do not break the Sabbath,’ and took a solemn pledge from them [154]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 154)

As such, it becomes clear that the Jews transgressed the limits and laws when they asked to see Allah the Almighty face to face. Then, they transgressed for the second time when they worshipped a golden calf. Allah thereby decided to address them through such commands that have a material, sensible bearing. In this vein, He the Almighty caused Mount Sinai to quake over them;

a fact which is clearly mentioned in the chapter of al-'Araf in which He Glorified is He states that 'And [mention] when We raised the mountain above them as if it was a dark cloud and they were certain that it would fall upon them, [and Allah said], "Take what We have given you with determination and remember what is in it that you might fear Allah.' (al-A'raf: 171)

Only material signs compelled the Jews, who transgressed the Limits of Allah, to carry out the divine orders and commands. For this reason, Allah the Almighty caused Mount Sinai to quake above them. Thus, they should either embrace and obey what Allah revealed to them wholeheartedly or be killed—since Mount Sinai would fall upon them by Allah's permission. Hence, we can see that they were only persuaded by commands which bore material results. That is why we find that all the Divine Commands and Decrees enacted upon them were expressed in material terms. Allah's saying, '…We said to them, 'Enter the gate, humbly,' means that to enter the gate while prostrating; again, this form of subjugation is expressed in a material sense. The gate Musa (Moses) commanded them to enter humbly was the gate of the village of Ariha in Ash-Sham(1). Allah the Almighty then orders them not to break the Sabbath. As a matter of fact, this part of the verse may be explained in the light of another verse in the chapter of al-'Araf in which Allah Glorified is He tells us about the Jews and how they used to break the law of Sabbath by fishing. Allah the Almighty says: 'And ask them about the town that was by the sea - when they transgressed in [the matter of] the sabbath - when their fish came to them openly on their sabbath day, and the day they had no sabbath they did not come to them. Thus did we give them trial because they were defiantly disobedient.' (al-A'raf: 163)

The word as-sabt—Sabbath—is etymologically derived from sabat and yasbutu which means to calm down. This meaning is confirmed by another verse of the Quran in which Allah the Almighty says: 'And it is He who has made the night for you as clothing and sleep [a means for] rest and has made the day a resurrection.' (al-Furqan: 47) This means that sleep is intended to be a period of respite wherein you discontinue your work and rest your bodies. Allah Glorified is He forbade them to go fishing on Sabbath days. However, it was only on Sabbath when fish would come to their shores enticing them with their fins as they swam everywhere above the water surface. As a matter of fact, this was intended as a test for them because fish would not come to them on other than on Sabbath days. This means that they did not find any fish on the days when they were allowed to go fishing. For this reason, they started coming up with ways to violate Allah’s Law; they thus spread nets so that fish would enter on the Sabbath day and would not be able to go out of it afterwards.

As such, the children of Israel disobeyed the command of Allah the Almighty. In such a way, Allah tells us about the deceit of the children of Israel. Allah the Almighty conferred a lot of favours upon them, yet they disobeyed His commands and violated His Laws. It is of great importance here to know that when Allah the Almighty postpones afflicting people with His punishments, He takes into consideration that He created them. In addition, He Glorified is He considers that because of their human instinct, they may not easily respond to the call to faith at first. Thus, He calls upon them to have faith, but their instincts refuse to respond, and so He forgives them. He calls upon them again, but they do not respond, and so He forgives them. Allah then calls upon them for the third time, but they do not respond and still He forgives them. Furthermore, even though He the Almighty took a solemn pledge from them that they must obey Him, they ultimately disobeyed and broke their covenant with Him. Therefore, Allah, being fully aware of the human nature, informs us of what happened with the children of Israel so that we would learn that if Allah is never bored of calling people to have faith, nor is He bored of constantly forgiving their sins. He the Almighty then says,

فَبِمَا نَقْضِهِم مِّيثَٰقَهُمْ وَكُفْرِهِم بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ وَقَتْلِهِمُ ٱلْأَنۢبِيَآءَ بِغَيْرِ حَقٍّ وَقَوْلِهِمْ
قُلُوبُنَا غُلْفٌۢ ۚ بَلْ طَبَعَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيْهَا بِكُفْرِهِمْ فَلَا يُؤْمِنُونَ إِلَّا قَلِيلًا ﴿١٥٥﴾

And so for breaking their pledge, for rejecting God’s revelations, for unjustly killing their prophets, for saying ‘Our minds are closed’ – No! God has sealed them in their disbelief, so they believe only a little [155] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 155)

The people of the Book broke all the aforementioned pledges and covenants. A pledge is a confirmed, clearly codified covenant. Breaking a covenant means it becomes no longer in practice; this actually is what made them entitled to be afflicted with the punishment He the Almighty threatened them with. They refused to acknowledge the signs that Allah sent to vindicate and advocate Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. In addition, they unjustly killed the Prophets of Allah. To justify their attitude, they claimed that their hearts were ghulf—the Arabic word here translated by the phrase ‘Our hearts are closed.’ This is why they could not respond to the calls to have faith. Describing their hearts as ghulf means that they are covered and sealed, to an effect that nothing may go into them or even out of them. In fact, they put forward this statement by way of emending what Allah said. That is, they said that no misguidance could be purged out of their hearts nor can any faith enter them. In truth, this is the ordinary nature of the disbelievers. In the Quran, Allah the Almighty says that the disbelievers will never have faith—whether they are warned or not. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe.’ (al-Baqara: 6-7)

In response to them, we wonder: Were your hearts created closed and sealed? In other words, were they created sealed, accepting no guidance and allowing no misguidance to be purged out of them? Or is it rather that you are the ones who made such a seal and stamped it on your hearts?

In the aforementioned two verses of the chapter of al-Baqara, Allah the Almighty explicitly tells that He is the One Who has sealed their hearts and cast a veil over their eyes. As for the hearts of the disbelievers, Allah the Almighty has sealed them so that they would not be able to recognise the path to guidance because the heart is the faculty through which one is able to recognise guidance, attain faith and embrace creeds. The veil on their hearing and eyes means that He the Almighty covered and closed the faculties whereby they may perceive the clear evidence that enables them to identify the Existence of Allah, the Most High. Thus, the heart, the abode of creed and faith, has been sealed and the ears and eyes have been veiled; but the question to be asked here is: Does this truly reflect their inborn nature? No; because if it were, we might wonder: Why did Allah specifically create them with this nature? We may also wonder: Why were those who were guided, not created with sealed hearts and veiled eyes and hearing either?’

However, each of the disbelievers justified his deviation and misguidance to himself and others by saying: ‘ Allah created me like this,’ which is sheer lying. Allah the Almighty —who is Self-Sufficient and in no need of an associate—will let the disbeliever adhering to his disbelief as long as he is content with it. Thus, their hearts were sealed as a result of their disbelief.

The aforementioned verses of the chapter of al-Baqara put forward the evidence in support of this divine law. They tell that when one turns into a disbeliever, his heart is consequently sealed. In addition, his hearing and eyes will be veiled and covered as a result of this disbelief. This point is definitely proved by the verse under discussion in the chapter of an-Nisa' in which Allah the Almighty makes clear this order, ‘…for saying “Our hearts are closed” - No! Allah has sealed them in their disbelief.’ This is a response to anyone who may say: ‘ Allah does not guide me.’ In saying so, this person does not pay heed to the fact that Allah the Almighty does not guide the one who abjures Him. The same holds true for the immoral and the wrongdoer. A striking example in this regard is Satan who first abjured Allah and thus Allah forsook and abandoned him.

Let us examine the wording of the Allah’s words, ‘And so, [We punished them] for the breaking of their pledge…’ In fact, the superficial understanding of the fundamental rules of the Arabic style may lead someone to wonder: Why was the particle ma used in this context? In response to this question, some claimed that ma was inessential in this context. To those who claim so, we say that it is totally wrong to say that there is a single letter or particle in the Quran that is inessential. If you say so, this would imply that the meaning of the sentence would be complete without it; such a letter or particle would thus be futile and excessive. Instead, you should say that you do not understand why this particle was used in this context; especially because now we live in an age in which our knowledge of Arabic rhetoric is rather artificial since we no longer possess natural fluency in Arabic. Indeed, if we do not learn Arabic, we will never be able to speak it. By contrast, the eloquent Arab, to whom the Quran was revealed, used to speak Arabic fluently with no need to learn from a teacher. This means that no one, for instance, taught him that the last syllable of the subject of any verbal sentence should have a ‘u’ sound accent on it, and that the last syllable of the object should have a higher accent on it. Rather, he spoke Arabic naturally and with spontaneous skill.

By contrast, we live in a different age in which foreign accents have dominated our language and filled our ears with linguistic mistakes. We have thus become in need of teaching ourselves the rules of the Arabic language in order to be able to speak it properly.

Most of the rules of Arabic grammar are inferred from the primordial sense of Arabic language that was inborn among Arabs without education. This is how the scholars of Arabic induced the rules of the language. In this vein, they discovered that there is always a ‘u’ sound accent on the last syllable on the subject of any verbal sentence; also, if the number of the subject of any sentence is dual, then the letter ’alif replaces the ‘u’ sound accent; and that if the subject is a regular masculine plural, then the letter waw replaces the ‘u’ sound accent. The rules of Arabic grammar have thus been deduced from the discourse of those who spoke the language spontaneously, naturally and instinctually.

When the Quran was first revealed, the Arabs heard the saying of Allah the Almighty ‘and so, [We punished them] for the breaking of their pledge…’ and no one of them said that it deviates from the rules of proper style. We know for certain that some of the Arabs did not believe in Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and did not believe in the Quran. Therefore, if there had been a single word that deviated from the familiar rules in language, they would have pointed it out and made a huge fuss about it. The Quran, the everlasting miracle of Prophet Muhammad, challenged the Arabs, who were masters of eloquence and rhetoric, to produce even one verse similar to that of the Quran, but they were unable to do so.

It goes without saying that any deviant would always try to seize any opportunity to expose the mistakes of his enemy, but not a single Arab said that there is a single error in the Quran; a matter that definitively proves that the style of the Quran is in total agreement with the Arabic linguistic instinct.

Allah’ words, ‘and so, [We punished them] for the breaking of their pledge…’ means ‘because they broke their pledge to Allah, We have caused them to suffer.’ But why was the particle ma used here? Some scholars said: ‘It was added in this context to stress the meaning.’ However, we repeat what we said before that it is totally wrong to say that there is an inessential particle or letter in the Quran; ma was used in this context for a specific purpose.

‘O People of the Scripture, there has come to you Our Messenger to make clear to you [the religion] after a period [of suspension] of messengers, lest you say, "There came not to us any bringer of good tidings or a warner." But there has come to you a bringer of good tidings and a warner. And Allah is over all things competent. (al-Ma‘ida: 19) Some scholars have said that the sentence did not originally contain that preposition min and that it was added so that the syntax of the sentence would be coherent. In this vein, we say: ‘If the sentence did not contain the preposition min, it would be semantically inadequate.’ I will give the following example to illustrate this point—and Allah has the most supreme parable. Someone may say: ‘I have no money’; the word ‘no’ negates the statement that the speaker has money; however, it may be the case that he has too little a sum to be considered money. But if someone says, ‘I have no money at all,’ this means that he has absolutely no money, that he is completely bankrupt and that he does not have anything that could be considered money. Therefore, the meaning of the saying ‘…No bearer of glad tidings has come unto us or any warner…’ with the preposition min following the negation article is different from the meaning of the sentence without it. The meaning in the former case is that no Messenger whether in the form of a bearer of glad tiding or in the form of a Warner has ever been sent to them.

Therefore, when Allah the Almighty says, ‘And so, [We punished them] for the breaking of their pledge…’ it means that because they broke their pledge, Allah has done something to them. But if this is the case, why did scholars make all this fuss about the use of ma in this context? The reason is the placing of ma after the preposition ba’ and before a verbal noun. This means that they have broken their pledge in every possible way. In fact, breaking a pledge or a covenant has different forms. The particle ma in this context is interrogative and is intended to make the statement an exclamation; that is, for what form of breaking and violating their pledge may We punish them?! We punished them because they broke a lot of covenants and pledges they gave to Us. Allah the Almighty says: ‘And so for breaking their pledge, for rejecting

Allah’s Revelations, for unjustly killing their Prophets, for saying ‘Our hearts are closed’- No! Allah has sealed them in their disbelief, so they believe only a little.’ (an-Nisa’: 155)

So, the question to be asked here is why did Allah Glorified is He frame this verse in the existing structure? In fact, the presence of the particle bal, the Arabic particle translated here as ‘No’, indicates that we missed an important point. For instance, when we say, ‘Zayd came to me. Oh, No! It is ‘Amr who came,’ this means that the speaker committed a mistake; initially, he said: ‘Zayd came’, he then corrected his statement: ‘Oh, No! It is ‘Amr who came.’ By saying so, the speaker negated the coming of Zayd and confirmed the coming of ‘Amr.

Allah the Almighty has said, ‘…No! Allah has sealed them in their disbelief, so they believe only a little.’ Normally, one would say, ‘and so, [We punished them] for the breaking of their pledge, and their unjustly slaying of Prophets, Allah has sealed their hearts.’ But Allah the Almighty did not say so due to His Great and Profound Wisdom. In truth, in order to fully and perfectly understand this wisdom, we should consider the opposite of the statement ‘…Allah has sealed their hearts...,’ which is ‘Allah has opened their hearts to accept guidance.’ In fact, the saying of Allah the Almighty expressly reflected their stance. Hence, we see and fully realise the greatness of the Quran since it conveys every meaning in the most accurate way. This is why we have to ponder over and contemplate every word of it.

Likewise, Allah the Almighty mentions the reasons why He did those things to them, including their breaking of their pledges, their refusal to acknowledge Allah’s Messages and their killing the Prophets wrongfully; it is for all these reasons that Allah did not open their hearts to guidance. Therefore, Allah has sealed their hearts as a result of their denial of the truth. The existence of the particle bal obviously indicates that something has been negated, while another has been affirmed. The negation is clearly manifested in the fact that Allah the Almighty has not opened their hearts to belief and guidance. As for what is affirmed, Allah the Almighty affirms that He has sealed their hearts as a result of their denial of the truth. This fact is mentioned elsewhere in the Quran, in the chapter of al-Baqara, ‘And they said, "Our hearts are wrapped."

But, [in fact], Allah has cursed them for their disbelief, so little is it that they believe.' (al-Baqara: 88)

This verse indicates that it is not that their hearts were already sealed; it is rather that Allah has cursed, alienated, banished and dispensed with them. For this reason, He the Almighty has abandoned them to themselves and let desires dominate them. But why has He Glorified is He concluded the verse saying, 'So they believe only a little'? This statement indicates that the path to faith has not been completely denied to those people. Therefore, this sentence is put here by way of securing and allowing for a possible change. For instance, one of those may pronounce that he has attained faith and has been concealing it lest he may be afflicted with harm. But how would any of them have a chance to have faith in the light of the verse in which Allah states clearly that 'He had sealed their hearts'? Answering this question, we can say that this part of the verse obviously indicates that the door to belief is open to all humankind, yet the children of Israel who committed the atrocities mentioned in the verse, would be unable to enter that door. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَبِكُفۡرِهِمۡ وَقَوۡلِهِمۡ عَلَىٰ مَرۡيَمَ بُهۡتَٰنًا عَظِيمٗا (١٥٦)

And because they disbelieved and uttered a terrible slander against Mary [156] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 156)

Someone may wonder: Has not Allah the Almighty already said that their disbelief was one of the reasons why He has sealed their hearts? To this person, I say: Do not think that there is any repetition in the Quran, not even a single word because the Quran is the Speech of Allah the Almighty Who forgets nothing and repeats nothing without a reason. In this regard, it is important to know that disbelief is of various degrees; it may take the form of denying Allah; further, it may take the form of denying the Messages and Revelations of Allah; yet, other times it may assume the form of denying Messengers and Prophets; it may also assume the form of not believing in some of the Prophets and it may even be by abjuring some of the heavenly revealed Scriptures.

Thus, there are different forms of disbelief. The particular form of disbelief referred to in the previous verse has to do with denying the Revelations of Allah the Almighty whereas the verse under discussion indicates clearly that their disbelief this time pertains to their denial of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and the terrible slander they made against Maryam (Mary). Hence, it is disbelief in Allah’s Revelations and in His Messenger.

The saying of Allah the Almighty ‘and for their refusal to acknowledge the truth…’is associated by the conjunction of ‘and’ with His sayings in the previous verse: ‘breaking their pledges’, ‘their refusal to acknowledge Allah’s Messages’, ‘their slaying of the Prophets against all right’ and ‘their boast: “...Our hearts are already sealed.”..’ But we notice here that Allah the Almighty did not use the particle ba’ (preposition) as He did before in ‘And so, [We punished them] for the breaking of their pledge.’

This shows the infinite Mercy of Allah the Almighty. Any of the deeds they committed would have been sufficient reason for Allah to seal their hearts. Yet, they did not do just one deed, they committed all of them. This definitively proves that Allah is neither waiting for His servants to sin nor willing to lure them into slipping in disbelief. Rather, Allah the Almighty wants to endear faith to His Servants.

The children of Israel had indeed committed egregious deeds: they broke their pledge, refused to acknowledge Allah’s Messages, killed Prophets wrongfully and alleged that Allah had sealed their hearts. It is noteworthy to mention here that the fact He the Almighty considered all these deeds as a single crime is due to His Grace and Mercy.

Allah the Almighty then tells about another crime of theirs, that is, ‘And for their refusal to acknowledge the truth, and the awesome calumny which they utter against Mary.’ Here, we notice that Allah Glorified is He equated their utterance of a terrible calumny against Mary with all the foregoing evil deeds they committed. The reason is that they objected to the mission of ‘Isa (Jesus) even though he peace be upon him was one of the Messengers endowed with constancy. Indeed, their objection to his mission may have been among the reasons why some people rejected to believe in him.

The creation of ‘Isa (Jesus) is undoubtedly miraculous. It goes without saying that all human beings reproduced by mating. Yet, ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was created in a very special way, that is, not through the natural process of reproduction. So, how come they abjured him and accused his mother, the Virgin Mary Allah be pleased with her.

A woman may bear to be accused of, charged and described with any quality, like being a liar, a thief or even being ugly, but accusing a woman of something relating to her honour is the most unacceptable. Here Allah the Almighty shows that they have committed two acts of disbelief; namely, they uttered a terrible calumny against Mary, which is an act of disbelief. Then, they refused to acknowledge that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was a Messenger even though Allah has decreed that he would not be born in an ordinary way, in order to honour him and to vindicate his prophecy to the Jews who were completely enmeshed in materialism to the extent that they had said: '…Show us Allah face-to-face…'.

Allah the Almighty also bestowed upon them bounties for which they could not even account; He Glorified is He bestowed upon them manna and quails when they were lost adrift in the Sinai desert. The colour of manna is like that of cream, its taste is like honey and it often falls on tree leaves in certain environments. As for quails, they are birds that resemble as-simman birds(1). They used to obtain manna from trees, collect it and eat it without having to put effort into cultivating it. Notwithstanding, they said: 'And [recall] when you said, "O Moses, we can never endure one [kind of] food. So call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from the earth its green herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." [Moses] said, "Would you exchange what is better for what is less? Go into [any] settlement and indeed, you will have what you have asked." And they were covered with humiliation and poverty and returned with anger from Allah [upon them]. That was because they [repeatedly] disbelieved in the signs of Allah and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were [habitually] transgressing.' (al-Baqara: 61)

They did not trust what is in the Hands of Allah; they wanted something material. For this reason He the Almighty drew their attention in a rather forceful way. He brought forth something at odds with all material laws; that is, the birth of 'Isa (Jesus) in a rather unusual way. Humans are born to a mother and a father. By contrast, He the Almighty created ‘Isa (Jesus) solely from a mother without a father. Hence, material laws have been broken. Their materialism made them oblivious to the way how Allah the Almighty created the first man without Father and Mother.

So, why then were people allured by the creation of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him? Since he was begotten by a mother without a father, the birth of Jesus has broken the material law that governs the birth of human beings, whether male or female. That is why ‘Isa (Jesus) irrefutably demonstrates the Absolute Capability of Allah the Almighty and that He is the One Who provides all causes and means of subsistence to humans. If humans want a certain effect, they should seek the causes that lead to it; but this does not apply to Allah because He Glorified is He is the Creator of all means and causes, and He is fully able to do whatever He wills without recourse to any causes.

We know that there are four different ways to explain the creation of anything: either it came about from two existing things—this is the first explanation; it came about from the non-existence of two things—this is the second explanation; it came about from the existence of the first thing and the non-existence of the second—this is the third explanation; or it came about from the existence of the second thing and the non-existence of the first one—this is the fourth explanation. These are the four different ways to explain how things come to existence. Allah the Almighty did not want to make the creation of man—whom He ennobled and to whom He made everything in the universe subservient—to follow a single mechanical pattern, lest someone say that causality is the necessary condition for existence.

At that point, I stress once again that this does not apply to the Creator Glorified is He. This point is definitively proved by the fact that He the Almighty created Adam peace be upon him without either a father or a mother, created us all from a mother and a father, created ‘Isa (Jesus) from a mother without a father and created Eve from a father without a mother. This is the conclusion that sound reason should clearly accept—creation is not merely a function of causal relation among natural elements; it is rather, the product of the capability of the Creator. The capability of Allah is also manifest when the causes are already provided, yet there is no ability to give birth to children. A case in point is when there is a married couple, but they are unable to reproduce due to infertility. 'To Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth; He creates what he wills. He gives to whom He wills female [children], and He gives to whom He wills males.' (ash-Shura: 49-50)

Creation is thereby not a mere function of mechanical causes; it is rather the outcome of the Will of Allah the Almighty Who wants to create. Similarly, He the Almighty wanted 'Isa (Jesus) to be born in this way to draw the attention of the children of Israel so that they may give up the path into which materialism has misled them. Thus, Allah the Almighty has created Jesus from a mother without a father; a point which definitively proves the Absolute Capability and Power of Allah. But the Jews did not receive this matter the way Allah wanted them to. They abjured Jesus even before he brought about his Gospel and violently opposed his Message. The evidence that they are liars is their desire to maintain their religious authority; they had a religious law stating that any adulteress has to be stoned. So, why did they not accuse Mary of adultery when she delivered Jesus? And why did they not punish her according to the law of the Torah? Why did they wait until 'Isa (Jesus) brought about his Gospel to say: 'You are a sinner and a son of a sinner'? As a matter of fact, all of this clearly indicates that the birth of 'Isa (Jesus) was an explicit sign from Allah that shocked, petrified and kept them from accusing Maryam (Mary) of committing such crime. Indeed, 'Isa (Jesus) spoke while he was an infant in the cradle, and even before Maryam (Mary) said anything about him; what had happened was too incredible for her to speak of. Furthermore, Allah has prepared her for that situation and has commanded her to stay silent when they asked her and to just point to the newly born infant in the cradle. 'Thereupon she pointed to him. They exclaimed: "How can we talk to one who [as yet] is a little boy in the cradle?" [But] he said: "Behold, I am a servant of Allah. He has vouchsafed unto me revelation and made me a prophet and made me blessed wherever I may be; and He has enjoined upon me prayer and charity as long as I live"' (Maryam: 29-31).

Thus, they were completely stunned in a way that even the strongest man collapsed. When antagonistic powers see this, they cannot help but become bewildered; for the truth has forcefully manifested itself and falsehood has been eclipsed. Although they had their own way, and it was decreed in their

Torah that whoever commits adultery must be stoned, they did not stone Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her. The shock was so powerful that it even upset the balance of their envy. The stunning miracle is the discourse of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him while he was still an infant in the cradle: ‘… “Behold, I am a servant of Allah. He has vouchsafed unto me revelation and made me a prophet”…’ (Maryam: 30). The surprise made the strongest man collapse and his strength fade away.

This was the situation as far as the Jews were concerned, but what about the followers of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him? The fact that an infant boy was speaking in the cradle is, by all measures, a miracle. So how come that none of their books include the saying of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him: ‘…“Behold, I am a servant of Allah”…’. This statement ought to have been studied carefully and should not have been overlooked. However, these words which assert the humanity of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him should have been preserved.

As a clarification, we do not intend to correct the beliefs or the creeds of others; rather, we only want the logic of faith to be clear in the minds of Muslims. The followers of other religions are free in their belief; however, it is important for us, Muslims, to properly understand our religion and the Quran so that no one will be able to distort our faith.

Allah says: ‘…And for their refusal to acknowledge the truth, and the awesome calumny which they uttered against Maryam (Mary) …’(an-Nisa’: 156). As Muslims, we denounce and would not even dare utter the terrible calumny about the Virgin Maryam (Mary) may Allah be pleased with her. Al-Buhtan, the Arabic word translated as “calumny”, means a horrific lie. There may be a tolerable kind of lie; notwithstanding, it is intolerable if someone says that a pious man drank intoxicants; the one who said so knows that he is lying, and that is a horrific lie (al-buhtan), and anyone hearing it would be stunned. Even though the Jews were aware of a precedence of Maryam (Mary) the virgin - as decreed by the command of Allah - that demonstrated how good and upright she was, they were neither abashed, nor did they keep themselves from accusing her of this calumny. The life of Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her before giving birth to ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him had been pure and virtuous. She lived in a sanctuary completely devoted to praying for her Creator. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He describes such calumny as terrible because it offended the chastity of Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her. If they looked back at their history, before the birth of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him, they would know that every girl among the people of Israel was hoping to give birth to the prophet that would follow Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. The people of Israel told their girls about the way in which the coming prophet would be born; thus, they knew that he would be delivered by a virgin girl. This is identical to the way they foretold the advent of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then denied him, as Allah Glorified is He says: '… But whenever there came unto them something which they recognized [as the truth], they would deny it. So Allah's curse is the due of all who deny the truth' (al-Baqara: 89).

It is due to Allah's mercy that He gave Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her preludes that would vindicate her, even in front of herself, and make her realize that the entire process happened inasmuch as Allah uttered the command: kun (be). Thus, Allah Glorified is He has not secretly decreed that she would deliver 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and hid this from her; rather, He the Almighty has provided her with physical signs—an angel came and breathed into her the pregnancy. Thus, she became aware of the material cause of her pregnancy since the angel came and breathed it into her. Allah Glorified is He intended this so that she would not accuse herself or suspect that something may have happened to her while she was sleeping.

Allah the Almighty has willed things to happen this way so that she would banish all doubts from her mind. Further, for her reassurance, she was previously foretold that she would give birth to 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him before she reached puberty. As Zakariyya (Zechariah) peace be upon him who was her benefactor, brought her food, while she was in her sanctuary, he saw that she already had sustenance. Thus, he asked her: 'O Maryam (Mary), from where came this to you?' 'So she answered: "It is from Allah; behold, Allah grants sustenance unto whom He wills, beyond all reckoning"…' (Al-'Imran: 37).

Logically, any woman must have a husband in order to give birth to a child. But, beyond all reckoning, Allah Glorified is He grants sustenance unto whom He wills. What is interesting here is that through this saying she attracted the attention of Zakariyya (Zechariah) peace be upon him to a focal issue of his interest; that is, to have a good offspring. Concerning this issue, Allah says: ‘There and then, Zakariyya (Zechariah) prayed unto his Lord, saying: “O my Lord! Bestow upon me [too], out of Your grace, the gift of goodly offspring; indeed, You are the Hearer of all prayer” Thereupon, as he stood praying in the sanctuary, the angels called out unto him: “ Allah sends you the glad tiding of [the birth of] Yahya (John), who shall verify a word from Allah, and [who shall be] honourable, utterly chaste and a prophet, from among the righteous” Zakariyya (Zechariah) exclaimed: “O my Lord! How can I have a son when old age has already overtaken me, and my wife is barren?” [The angel] answered: “Thus it is: Allah does what He wills”’ (Al-‘Imran: 38-40).

Thereby, Maryam (Mary) may Allah be pleased with her has encouraged Zakariyya (Zachariah) peace be upon him to pray to His Lord. This was a series of preludes to assure Maryam (Mary) that she gave birth to ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him as a result of Allah’s Command—kun. Similarly, Allah Glorified is He brought the fruits of the summer to her in the winter. Once she told Zakariyya (Zechariah) peace be upon him ‘… “Behold, Allah grants sustenance unto whom He wills, beyond all reckoning”…’ (Al-‘Imran: 37), she drew his attention to the importance of praying unto his Lord to bestow upon him a child—even though he knew that his wife was barren and that he was overtaken by old age. It is well known that when a man says this about himself in this context, he means that he can no longer reproduce. Also, the subsequent Quranic verse gives us a biological precedence long before science discovered it: ‘He prayed: “O my Lord! Feeble have become my bones, and my head glistens with grey hair”…’ (Maryam: 4). These words are a detailed explanation of what he meant when he said that old age had overtaken him. Modern science proves that the bones are the last source for nutrition in the human body; if a man stops eating food, the fats in his body start to sustain him. Similarly, if man stops drinking water which constitutes about ninety percent(1) of his weight, the human body starts to absorb water from its own cells, muscles and flesh. There is an Arabic proverb on malnutrition saying: ‘A year burns off one’s fat; another year consumes one’s flesh; and a third year crushes one’s bones.’

(1) This is scientifically inaccurate; the fact is, sixty to sixty five percent.

The body depends first for its nutrition on fats, then exhausts the nutrients in the flesh and afterwards gets them from the bones. Zakariyya (Zechariah) peace be upon him implied this fact when he prayed in the verse: ‘… “O my Lord! Feeble have become my bones”…’ (Maryam: 4). Zakariyya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was astonished because he identified the fact that the last source for nutrition (bones) had no sufficient nutrients to supply him with the energy to beget a child.

But which part of the body do the bones supply with nutrients? It is the brain; the chief controller that governs all the faculties of the body. In the same way, as every faculty of the body is subservient to the brain, it also devotes its lifetime subservient to the body faculties; organizing their capabilities to work, think, feel and behave. As long as the brain is sound, any damage that may happen to the body could in theory be compensated.

Henceforth, they are trying nowadays to explain death clinically; that it does not happen as long as the cells of the brain are still alive; if they die, then death happens. It is quite distinctive that the chief controller of the human body—the brain— is located in the highest part of the body inside the skull.

It is as if Maryam (Mary) may Allah be pleased with her had given Zakarriyya (Zechariah) peace be upon him the impetus when she told him: ‘… “Behold, Allah grants sustenance unto whom He wills, beyond all reckoning”…’ (Al-‘Imran: 37). Accordingly, heprayed unto his Lord to bestow upon him a child, so Allah conferred upon him what he asked for. Therefore, the fact that Allah grants sustenance unto whom He wills, beyond all reckoning, has been stated by Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her, and then concretely experienced by Zakariryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him. Afterwards, the bearer of glad tidings conveyed to her the news that she would give birth to ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him: ‘Lo! The angels said: “O Maryam (Mary)! Behold, Allah sends you the glad tiding, through a word from Him, [of a son] who shall become known as ‘Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), shall have great honour in this world and in the hereafter, and [shall be] of those who are made near to Allah. And he shall speak to the people in his cradle, and in old age and (he shall be) of the righteous.”’ (Al-‘Imran: 45-46)

However, how could Maryam (Mary) may Allah be pleased with her recognize that she would have a son without being married? Allah continues: ‘She said: “O my Lord! How can I have a son, though no man has ever touched me? ”…’ (Al-‘Imran: 47)

The Virgin Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her grasped well the full implications of Allah’s words. When she heard that the name of her child to come is ‘Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), she realised that he will be related to her and that he will thus be fatherless. She also appreciated that Allah Glorified is He will only name her child after her, if he is fatherless. Subsequently, Allah the Almighty says:

وَقَوْلِهِمْ إِنَّا قَتَلْنَا ٱلْمَسِيحَ عِيسَى ٱبْنَ مَرْيَمَ رَسُولَ ٱللَّهِ وَمَا قَتَلُوهُ وَمَا
صَلَبُوهُ وَلَٰكِن شُبِّهَ لَهُمْ ۚ وَإِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱخْتَلَفُوا۟ فِيهِ لَفِى شَكٍّ مِّنْهُ ۚ مَا لَهُم
بِهِۦ مِنْ عِلْمٍ إِلَّا ٱتِّبَاعَ ٱلظَّنِّ ۚ وَمَا قَتَلُوهُ يَقِينًۢا ﴿١٥٧﴾

And said, ‘We have killed the Messiah, Jesus, son of Mary, the Messenger of God.’ (They did not kill him, nor did they crucify him, though it was made to appear like that to them; those that disagreed about him are full of doubt, with no knowledge to follow, only supposition: they certainly did not kill him [157] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 157)

We notice that the verse starts with the coordinating conjunction waw (and) to know that it is related to the previous ones, namely: ‘And so, [We punished them] for the breaking of their pledge, and their refusal to acknowledge Allah’s messages, and their killing of prophets against all right, and their boastful saying, “Our hearts are already full of knowledge” – nay, but Allah has sealed their hearts in result of their denial of the truth, and [now] they believe in but few things –and for their refusal to acknowledge the truth, and the awesome calumny which they utter against Maryam (Mary)’ (an-Nisa’: 155-156).

Allah Glorified is He enhances the crimes of the people of Israel by this new one: ‘and (for) their (boastful) saying, “Behold, we have killed, ‘Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), the messenger of Allah”…’ (an-Nisa’: 157). The most surprising in this saying is the phrase: ‘the messenger of Allah’; did they really say it or not? If they did say so, then this would be an evidence of their habitual stubbornness and denial of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Had they only said that they killed him (without stating that he is the messenger of Allah), their sin would be less horrific. However, if they knew that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was the Messenger of Allah and, despite this, they killed him, then this would have been a horrific sin. Otherwise, if the phrase 'the messenger of Allah' in this verse was not actually said by them, then it has been used here to indicate the sarcastic accent of their discourse.

Let me give an example to illustrate this point: if someone who is famous for his strength is beaten and defeated by another, the latter may then sarcastically tell the people: 'I have beaten the strongest person among you.' Similarly, the phrase 'the messenger of Allah' may be used here to indicate the sarcastic accent of their discourse. Otherwise, it may have been merely said by Allah to show how horrific and abysmal their deed was.

In this verse, notice that Allah Glorified is He only mentions the name of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him associated with 'the messenger of Allah' to show the reader how abysmal and horrific their deed was. Consequently, 'Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them is the messenger of Allah despite all their stubbornness; this point is specially highlighted in the context of Allah's discourse about their denial of His bounties and blessings. This association implies that Allah Glorified is He scorns them because He will not send a messenger to guide the people to the right path without protecting him before he fulfils his mission. Thus, Allah says: 'the messenger of Allah' as a prelude to draw our attention to their all-lying discourse. Subsequently, Allah the Almighty tells us: '…However, they neither killed him, nor crucified him…' (an-Nisa': 157). The clause '…nor crucified him…' is intended to illustrate that no sooner had they assumed that they killed 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him than they declared his death to people. They did so even before they considered the idea of crucifixion. However, the truth was that they killed someone who resembled 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and crucified him afterwards. As soon as they killed this person, they spread the news that they had killed 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him even before they thought of the idea of crucifixion, but Allah Glorified is He has willed to decisively abort their sedition. He thus says: '… However, they neither killed him, nor crucified him…' (*an-Nisa': *157). Allah Glorified is He previously draws our attention to the fact that the people of Israel made a lot of fuss upon receiving the news of the advent of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Although, they knew that he would be fatherless and even told their daughters to always keep their eyes open lest any of them would be pregnant with 'Isa (Jesus); however, they uttered a terrible calumny against Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her who had been chosen for this mission by Allah Glorified is He. Typically, the same fuss was made at the death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him.

The fact that there was fuss about both the birth and death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him show us that one has to be consistent in his explanations and interpretations. Once the mind considers the way 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was born, it will realize that it happened in a rather atypical manner. Similarly, when Allah informs us that He the Almighty rescued and lifted 'Isa (Jesus) up as the people of Israel contrived to kill him, the mind should also realize that this was also an extraordinary matter. It would be plausible if one's mind recalled that the birth of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was extraordinary, so why would not his death be extraordinary as well?

Overall, we should believe whatever Allah tells us. Just as we believe that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was born fatherless, we have to believe that Allah Glorified is He has lifted him up into the Heavens. The birth of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him would be rationally inconceivable if Allah had not told us about it. Similarly, the death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him ought to be conceivable inasmuch as Allah tells us about it. They are one package—both his birth and death were peculiar. Thus, if we have accepted the first peculiarity about his birth, why would we not accept that his exit out of the scene was also peculiar? Therefore, we must not wonder because Allah tells us that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him exited out of life in a peculiar way; that is, whatever starts in extraordinary and peculiar ways, is bound to end in the same way.

Allah the Almighty says: '…However, they neither killed him, nor crucified him, but it only seemed to them [as if it had been] so…' (*an-Nisa': *157). The clause '… It only seemed to them [as if it had been] so…' is evidence that the death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was an entirely extraordinary process since the killers were not sure whether they had actually killed 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. It is known that the disciples and followers of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him used to turn their heads away and hide their names. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says: '… But it only seemed to them [as if it had been] so…' (an-Nisa': 157).

Narratives differed in explaining how '… It only seemed to them [as if it had been] so.' A narrative said that when people searched for 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him to kill him, he hid behind a small door (khawkha). In old houses, there used to be two kinds of doors; a door big enough for letting big objects into the house and a small door within this big door for the entrance of people (khawkha). Furthermore, there used to be big holes in the ceiling of the house called rawzana or naruza.

When they came looking for 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him (1) to kill him he went into the small door (khawkha). Then, another man called Tatianos went inside the door after him; but when 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him saw this, Allah inspired him to look up and he saw something lifting him up into the heaven. People outside the house felt that Tatianos took a long time; then, he went out and they perplexedly wondered if this was Tatianos or 'Isa (Jesus)? Things got mixed up especially due to the resemblance between Tatianos and 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Moreover, Allah the Almighty made Tatianos look like 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him so they killed Tatianos instead. Alternatively, another narrative says that when 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him knew that there was a conspiracy to kill him, he asked his disciples: 'Who would accept to look like me and enter paradise in return? What greater recompense the disciple could have?! Thus,'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him offered to whoever accepted this mission the greatest reward that a believer could ever ask for. It is said that one of the disciples named Sarkhas accepted the mission. Thus, Allah made him look like 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and so the Jews killed him instead.

Another narrative claims that when those who wanted to kill 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him knew that Allah has lifted him up to Heavens, they were afraid that the news would spread among people and make them believe in his message. Furthermore, they were afraid that people would try to take revenge upon those who tried to kill 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Hence, those killers brought someone who looked like ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and killed him. Afterwards, they declared that they had killed ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. A different narrative says that the one who was killed in lieu of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was one of those who betrayed ‘Isa (Jesus) for the sake of the Jews. This person followed those who contrived to kill ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. They walked into the place where he was sitting among his disciples and asked his disciples: ‘Which of you is ‘Isa (Jesus)?’ The desire to repent was then awakened inside the man, and his conscience reproached him for betraying the Messenger ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him; the matter which led him to say: ‘I am ‘Isa (Jesus).’ None of those who planned to kill ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him imagined that anyone would respond that he was ‘Isa (Jesus) unless he was actually ‘Isa (Jesus) himself. It was quite obvious that they wanted to kill ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him thus they killed the one who admitted to be ‘Isa (Jesus), without ascertaining that it was really him. One other narrative says that someone who betrayed ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him for thirty dinars, looked like ‘Isa so they killed him instead. As Muslims, we should not pay much attention to any of these narratives. What matters is that the perpetrators actually confessed that they had killed and crucified ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him.

(1) The entrance of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him in the shrine when the Jews wished to kill him.

The Quran, revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says: ‘… However, they neither killed him, nor crucified him, but it only seemed to them [as if it had been] so…’ (an-Nisa’: 157). Additionally, Allah the Almighty said that He has lifted ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him up to the Heavens; thus, the matter should be decisively settled for us because we, as believers, do not first examine detailed issues of belief to decide whether to have faith or not. On the contrary, we first believe in Allah the One Who revealed these specific issues and accordingly believe in everything that He the Almighty discloses afterwards. Since Allah settles this issue; thus, we must believe Him and the matter ends at this point.

Checking the details of this issue will not help us by any means. It is sufficient that Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…However, they neither killed him, nor crucified him, but it only seemed to them [as if it had been] so…’ (an-Nisa’: 157). This verse shows that the murderers were not sure about the identity of the one they killed. This uncertainty is expected when matters become confusing.

We often see such confusion arising in any accident that may happen in the presence of a big number of witnesses. Even if there are many people witnessing the accident, still the narratives about the event may differ. Sometimes, it may happen that narratives about an accident’s details differ, even if it was recorded on a tape. If this is the case, we should not wonder why there are different details and narratives about an event that took place in the past when there were none of the tools available in our time. Therefore, the disparity of opinions and narratives about the death of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is expected. Nonetheless, it is sufficient for us that Allah the Almighty says: ‘… However, they neither killed him, nor they crucified him, but it only seemed to them [as if it had been] so…’ (an-Nisa’: 157).

Thus, ’Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is actually alive since Allah did not inform us of his death. Additionally, we should admit that the truth is that Allah lifted ‘Isa (Jesus) up to Him as has been mentioned in the relevant verses. As Muslims, we must not think it quite farfetched that Allah Glorified is He has lifted ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him to the Heavens because the same idea has already happened to the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He peace and blessings be upon him told us that he was flown up to the Heavens, he met the Prophets and saw a lot of visions. Thus, the idea of the ascension of a human being to the Heavens while he is still physically alive is, in principle, possible. The disagreement may arise over the duration of this ascent for a few minutes, hours or even months; however, this does not contradict or negate the possibility of the ascent in principle. Therefore, if anyone casts doubts on this matter, we can answer by saying that every inconceivable matter is extensively addressed by Allah the Almighty. As Allah is the Merciful; He never imposes anything unless our reason can accept it. If there is a matter that our minds would find quite difficult to conceive, Allah gives us the freedom to either accept the text as is or, if found inconceivable, consider them ineffective; for these matters are never related to the essence of creed.

For instance, assume that someone said that ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was not lifted up to the Heavens and that he died. In what way will this distort the creed? This is ineffective; it neither rejects nor embraces the creed. The same holds true for the story of the night journey of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from Mecca to Jerusalem. In this concern, Allah says: ‘Limitless in His glory is He who transported His servant by night from the Inviolable House of Worship [at Mecca] to the Remote House of Worship [at Jerusalem] – the environs of which We had blessed – so that We might show him some of Our symbols: for, verily, He Alone is the All-Hearing and the All-Seeing’ (al-Isra’: 1).

Allah Glorified is He does not mention anything about the ascent of Prophet Muhammad to the Heavens; only the night journey of Prophet Muhammad from Mecca to Jerusalem was mentioned because the transportation is a terrestrial miracle. It is known that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never went to Jerusalem before this journey, as reflected in the sceptical questions delivered by the unbelievers of Mecca who wanted to embarrass the Messenger by asking him to describe Jerusalem, while they were quite sure that he has never been there before. However, he had seen the caravans owned by them on their way to Jerusalem. Thus, not only did he describe Jerusalem to them, but he also told them the news of their own caravans. When the caravans later arrived to Mecca, the travellers confirmed the verity of the narration of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Therefore, the transportation of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from Mecca to Jerusalem was a terrestrial miracle that could be proved. Hence, Allah Glorified is He explicitly mentions this: ‘Limitless in His glory is He who transported His servant by night from the Inviolable House of Worship [at Mecca] to the Remote House of Worship [at Jerusalem]…’ (al-Isra’: 1).

By contrast, Allah does not explicitly mention the ascent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the Heavens because no one in Quraysh, nor any of the inhabitants of the earth, saw the lote-tree that marks the end of the Seventh Heaven, the Furthest Boundary where no creation can pass. Furthermore, no inhabitant of the earth was capable of describing the path that the Prophet took in his ascent up to the Heavens.

Since the Quran is merciful towards human reason, it extensively addresses the issues that such mind would find difficult to assimilate. If there is a conceivable matter for our minds, we can possibly believe in. However, if found inconceivable, we consider them ineffective, but these matters are never related to the essence of creed or to the incumbent assignments ordained by Allah. Thus, Allah Glorified is He has authorized Prophet Muhammad to convey to us some inconceivable pieces of news, in the same way as He the Almighty has authorized him to inform us of the incumbent ordinances that, if obeyed, we will be rewarded, whereas if relinquished, we will be punished. As Allah says: '…Hence, accept [willingly] whatever the Messenger gives you [thereof] and refrain from [demanding] anything that he withholds from you…' (al-Hashr: 7).

Abu Hurayrah may Allah be pleased with him narrated that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'By the One in Whose Hands my soul is, surely 'Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary) will soon descend among you and will judge mankind as a just ruler; according to which he will break the Cross, kill the pigs and abolish the jizyah (taxes imposed on non-Muslims). Money will be in abundance so that no one will accept it, and a single prostration to Allah (in prayer) will be better than the whole world and whatever it encompasses.' Abu Hurayrah may Allah be pleased with him then added: 'If you wish, you can recite (this verse of the Munificent Quran): "Yet, there is none of the people of the earlier Scriptures (Jews and Christians), before his death (at the time of the appearance of the angel of death), but must believe in him ['Isa (Jesus)]; and on the Day of Resurrection he ['Isa (Jesus)] will bear witness to the truth against them"' (an-Nisa': 159).(1)

These are matters about which Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told us. Thus, there is no creed-pertinent issue being rationally inconceivable, especially for Muslims. However, some people may try to disprove this issue by claiming that Allah Glorified is He says: 'As Allah says: "O 'Isa (Jesus)! Indeed, I will cause you to die, will raise you up to Me and purify you of [the calumnies of] those who are bent on denying the truth"…' (Al-'Imran: 55).

This matter has been previously explained in full in the course of the reflection on the chapter of Al-'Imran. In this regard, we should pay attention to the role of the coordinating conjunction waa (and) that links the two Arabic verbs in the above verse; mutawafeek—cause you to die—and rafau'uka—raise you up.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

Sometimes, it is claimed that the coordinating conjunction waa implies order and sequence. Yet, it only indicates connection and association; for instance, we may say that Zayd and 'Amr came. This sentence could mean that Zayd accompanied 'Amr or that Zayd came first or vice versa.

By contrast, if we say that Zayd came fa (and soon) did 'Amr. This sentence strictly means that Zayd is the one who came first and 'Amr followed him because fa implies order and sequence. Thus, waa may only imply association and company in a generic sense and does not qualify or describe such association. Hence, the association between causing 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him to die and raising him up to the Heavens does not indicate that death took place first. Allah Glorified is He has revealed a number of verses demonstrating the meaning of merely association of the coordinating conjunction waa such as: 'As We have taken a solemn pledge from all the Prophets; from you, [O Muhammad], waa (as well as) from Nuh (Noah), waa (and) Ibrahim (Abraham)…' (al-Ahzab: 7).

Allah Glorified is He has accepted a solemn pledge from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and He the Almighty associated him with Nuh (Noah) and Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them both. Yet, this association does not imply sequence or order as Nuh (Noah) was sent as a messenger many years before Prophet Muhammad. However, why has Allah Glorified is He associated the death of 'Isa (Jesus) to his ascension? Allah the Almighty willed that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him would know that death is inevitable and that being raised up to the Heavens is merely a transitional period.

Alternatively, there is another reflection on this verse: 'As Allah says: "O 'Isa (Jesus)! Indeed, I will cause you to die and will raise you up to Me"…' (Al-'Imran: 55). It is known that human is a mixture of body and soul. When Allah Glorified is He decrees to end the life of anyone, He immediately takes away his soul from his body without any normal physical reason or damage caused to his body. Correspondingly, a human will immediately die if someone hits him vigorously on his head because the soul cannot continue to abide in the body that has been severely damaged.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He tells 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him that He raises him up (body and soul) without causing damage to any part of his body. The Arabic verb mutawafeek—cause you to die—means to take you up as a whole, body and soul, to the Heavens without being killed.

As previously mentioned, 'death' and 'being killed' are clearly distinct from each other; the former happens when the soul is immediately taken out of the body, whereas, the latter is caused by the destruction of the body, leading to the separation of the soul from it. This distinction is clear in the verse: '… If he dies or is killed…' (Al-'Imran: 144).

When the People of Israel said that they had killed 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He has refuted their claim by saying: 'However, they neither killed, nor crucified him, but it only seemed to them [as if it had been] so; and, verily, those who hold conflicting views thereon are indeed confused, having no [real] knowledge thereof, and following mere conjecture. For, of an absolute certainty, they did not kill him' (an-Nisa': 157). Thus, Allah the Almighty explains that they were not sure about killing the real 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. They were having doubts about the one they had killed; they were wondering whether they had killed 'Isa (Jesus), Tatianos or Sarkhas!

In this concern, Allah Glorified is He has described the attitude of the killers towards the reality of the identity of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him as having two phases. After Allah the Almighty denied that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was killed, He says: '…And, verily, those who hold conflicting views thereon are indeed confused, having no [real] knowledge thereof, and following mere conjecture…' (an-Nisa': 157). The first phase mentioned is that of confusion and doubt, wherein the suspected alternatives about the authenticity of the identity of 'Isa (Jesus) were seen as equally plausible. The other phase is that of conjecture and presumption, wherein the killers were more inclined towards accepting the alternative of conjectures. This explains that they were doubtful at the beginning and then they started to have conjectures about the one they killed.

Ultimately, Allah Glorified is He denies this illusion with absolute certainty, '…For, of an absolute certainty, they did not kill him…' (an-Nisa': 157), that they had not killed 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. There are different levels of certainty— knowledge, eyewitness and absolute. It is well known that the absolute certainty is the confirmed matter or a fact about which one is deeply and profoundly sure and which may never be put into question by one's mind or may never change.

As an illustration, someone may describe Manhattan Island as a ten-million-population, skyscraper-city in New York. If the listener has not seen the city and but has taken this information from a trustworthy person, he may consider it as a certainty of knowledge. However, if the listener visits New York later on, the level of certainty will rise to eyewitness certainty. Furthermore, if someone takes this person on a tour all over the city, then the level of certainty will ultimately rise to absolute certainty.

Allah the Almighty presents two levels of certainty in the following verses: 'Nay, you will soon come to understand! And once again: Nay, you will soon come to understand! Nay, if you could but understand [it] with the certainty of knowledge you would indeed, most surely, behold the blazing fire [of hell]! In the end you will indeed, most surely, behold it with the eyewitness certainty' (at-Takathur: 3-7).

As mentioned in the previous verses, Allah Glorified is He explains two phases of certainty; firstly, Allah bestows upon us certain knowledge about the Afterlife in which believers have faith even before they see it. Secondly, when the believers are going to cross As-Sirat (the hair-narrow bridge) set over the Hellfire on their way to Paradise, they will behold the truth with eyewitness certainty. However, Allah Glorified is He does not refer to the destiny of those who encounter the blazing fire of the hell because some of them will, afterwards, be admitted into Heaven, and others will be admitted into the hellfire. Likewise, the ones who deny and disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He will eternally be doomed to Hell and will never be admitted into Paradise. Those disbelievers are going to behold the blazing fire of Hell with the eyewitness certainty. Whereas, absolute certainty is mentioned in another context in the Munificent Quran: 'But if one happens to be of those who are wont to call the truth a lie [are used to deny the Resurrection], and [thus] go astray a welcome of burning despair [awaits him in the Afterlife] burning in Hellfire! Verily, this is indeed the absolute truth with certainty!' (al-Waqi'a: 92-95)

The fact that all those who are accustomed to call the truth a lie and accordingly go astray, will desperately suffer the torment of the blazing hellfire with an absolute certainty. Those people who did not witness the death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him would have the certainty of knowledge that he was not killed because they have faith in Allah the Almighty who says: '… For, of an absolute certainty, they did not kill him' (an-Nisa': 157). Whereas, those people who witnessed the death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him knew well that he was not killed; they only had doubts about it. By contrast, those people who killed the one who resembled 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him were absolutely certain that 'Isa (Jesus) was not killed at all, and that what happened for him was, as Allah says:

بَل رَّفَعَهُ ٱللَّهُ إِلَيۡهِۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَزِيزًا حَكِيمًا ﴿١٥٨﴾

God raised him up to Himself. God is almighty and wise [158] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 158)

Allah, the Ever-Invincible, has risen 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him up to Himself. Thus, even though they were, unswervingly, intending on killing him, Allah has sabotaged their seditious plot, for He is, indeed the Almighty and the Wise. Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَإِن مِّنۡ أَهۡلِ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ إِلَّا لَيُؤۡمِنَنَّ بِهِۦ قَبۡلَ مَوۡتِهِۦۖ وَيَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ يَكُونُ عَلَيۡهِمۡ شَهِيدًا ﴿١٥٩﴾

There is not one of the People of the Book who will not believe in [Jesus] before his death, and on the Day of Resurrection he will be a witness against them) [159] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 159)

The word 'none' is used in this context as a negating article and is used in another instance in the Quran; as Allah Glorified is He says: 'As for those of you who [henceforth] separate themselves from their wives by saying, "You are as unlawful to me as my mother", [let them bear in mind that] they can never be [as] their mothers; none are their mothers save those who gave birth to them…' (al-Mujadala: 2).

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He corrects the mistake into which those, who separate themselves from their wives by saying: 'You are as unlawful to me as my mother's back. Consequently Allah the Exalted says: '…None are their mothers save those who gave birth to them. Thus, behold, they but utter an objectionable and irrational statement, and is [therefore] a falsehood…' (al-Mujadala: 2). In this verse, the pronoun 'none' functions as the negating word; thus, Allah the Almighty explains that their mothers are only those who gave birth to them.

Returning to the previous verse, Allah Glorified is He mentions that it is decreed that none of the followers of earlier Revelations—the Jews and Christians—would fail to recognize or to attest to the truth refuting the death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him at the time of his death. Another issue is that there are several pronouns in this verse; for instance, to whom does the third person pronoun 'him' in the Arabic prepositional phrase bihi ([believe] in him) refer? Further, to whom does the third person pronoun 'his' in the Arabic word mawtihi (his death) refer? Does it refer to the death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him or the death of any of the followers of earlier Revelations? This confusion results from the fact that the meaning of every pronoun refers to both 'Isa (Jesus) and the followers of earlier Revelations previously mentioned in the verse. Thus, the verse may be interpreted to mean that none of the followers of earlier revelations will die unless he grasps and admits the truth, refuting the death of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Alternatively, the verse may also be interpreted to mean that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him will not die unless everyone from among the followers of earlier Revelations believe in him and grasp the truth about his death. Thus, all the nouns that precede the occurrence of a pronoun in the sentence are possible references for the pronoun. To know the reference of the pronoun, much elaboration is needed. In other cases, a pronoun may partially indicate its reference; for instance, Allah Glorified is He says: '… And no long-lived has his life span lengthened, and nor is lessened, unless it is thus predestined [by Allah]…' (Fatir: 11).

The life of anyone who is pre-ordained to live long cannot be lessened unless Allah decrees this matter. The third person pronoun 'his' in Allah's saying 'umurehe (his life span) partially refers to the reference because the Arabic word mu'amir (the long-lived) is a bi-conceptual word; one refers to the person who lives long, and the other refers to his age. However, the pronoun 'his' does not refer to the age of the man, but rather to the man himself. The meaning of the verse would be that no one could cause any human being to live a long or short life-span. In another case, the pronoun may have two possible references, as in the following verse: ' Allah is He Who has raised the Heavens without pillars, which you can see…' (ar-Ra'd: 2).

In this verse, there are two possible references to which the relative pronoun 'which' may refer; it could either refer to the Heavens or to the pillars. Both possibilities are equally correct; the pronoun probably refers to the Heavens, and the sentence would mean that Allah, due to His Capability, raised the Heavens high without any pillars so that you can see them and recognise His Might. In an equally valid way, it can also refer to the pillars, and the sentence would mean that Allah raised the Heavens without any pillars as we know them; rather, Allah has raised the Heavens using special laws against gravity or even using unperceivable or unseen pillars. Thus, the single pronoun may have two plausible references.

Returning back to the verse under discussion (an-Nisa': 159),it is noted that there are two plausible references for two consecutive pronouns. Do the pronouns refer to 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him or to the followers of earlier Revelations? Alternatively, could it be that one pronoun refers to 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and the other refers to the followers of earlier Revelations? Were this the case, which of them refers to 'Isa (Jesus) and which refers to the followers? Otherwise, could it be that there is a third implicit, indirect, contextualised reference for the pronouns in the verse? It could be indirectly understood from context that these pronouns may refer to a third reference; that is. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him whose advent was foretold by 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Indeed, it has been related that Messenger Muhammad, used to say that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him will descend from the Heavens unto the earth to break the Cross and to kill the pigs. Moreover, Messenger Muhammad added that 'Isa (Jesus) will then pray behind a Muslim man.

Remarkably, why did both Christians and Jews admit the idea of killing and crucifixion of 'Isa (Jesus)? They can be excused for their thoughts since Allah Glorified is He did not explain the matter then, when it actually took place, as He says: 'However, they neither killed, nor crucified him, but it only seemed to them [as if it had been] so…' (an-Nisa': 157). The verse indicates that they are exempted of blame for maintaining this conviction, yet they ought to have rejected the idea of crucifixion if they truly believed that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was, even if partially, divine. Accordingly, Islam came forth to vindicate ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and establish the truth by refuting his death and providing proof to his alleged followers.

However, the followers of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him did not pay attention to Islam’s account of this issue, though they ought to have done so thoroughly. Inasmuch as Allah the Almighty recounts the story of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and the truth about his death, He sets a divine decree in the Quran: ‘Nay, Allah raised him up to Himself…’ (an-Nisa’: 158). The Christians do accept the fact that Allah raised him up to Himself; however, they allege that this happened after his crucifixion. On the other hand, we, as Muslims, believe that Allah Glorified is He has raised ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him up to Him, and that he was never crucified; we also believe in his descent back to earth. Never, before or after Christianity, did the followers of any religion go as far as imputing, even partial divinity to a messenger. Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He will send him [‘Isa (Jesus)] down to earth again—after He had raised him—in order to dispel these false convictions. Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He will cause him to die as any of His creatures. People should not excessively linger over this matter; they should consider the issue rationally. Just as we believe that the life of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him started with a miracle, since he was born fatherless, we ought to accept the miracle of his exit out of earth—that Allah Glorified is He has lifted him up to the Heavens.

If a Muslim says that ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him had died after he was raised up to the Heavens, we ask him,: what about Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in his similar ascension up to the Heavens in the night journey? He was indeed biologically alive when this happened. Although Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stayed for a short while in the Heavens and then returned down to the earth; however, the idea that Allah has raised a human alive up to the Heavens and then returned to the earth anew, should not sound peculiar in case one considers the infinite Power of Allah.

The dissimilarity between the ascension of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and that of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him merely arises from the difference in the period of time passed in the Heavens. However, this is not an essential difference because the principle is the same. The concern is that both of them ascended to the Heavens alive and descended down to earth also alive which is plausible and accepted according to the perspective of Islamic Sharia. In confirmation to this issue, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Yet, there is none of the people of the earlier Scriptures (Jews and Christians), before his death (at the time of the appearance of the angel of death), but must believe in him ['Isa (Jesus)]; and on the Day of Resurrection he ['Isa (Jesus)] will bear witness to the truth against them' (an-Nisa': 159).

On the one hand, considering this verse superficially, someone may allege that the followers of earlier Scriptures must have already embraced faith in 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. On the other hand, considering this verse thoroughly, it is clear that they have believed in him only provided that he was in line with their whims and interests—rather than in the way Allah decrees them to have faith. They believed that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was perfectly or even partially divine—which encompasses the doctrine of trinity (the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit). Allah the Almighty decrees them to believe in 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him as one of His messengers, a human being and a servant of Allah. Thus, the verse under discussion means that each and every follower of earlier Scriptures, before he dies, will acknowledge that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was a messenger, a human being and a servant of Allah.

The third person pronoun (him) in the Arabic prepositional phrase bihi ([believe] in him) refers to 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. The other third person pronoun (his) in the Arabic word mawtihi (his death) could also refer to 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. In such a case, the verse would mean that every follower of earlier Revelations will believe in 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him as a messenger, a human being and a servant of Allah the Almighty before the death of 'Isa (Jesus). This will not be achieved unless 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him returns back to the earth in flesh and blood and tells them that they have been mistaken in denying and disregarding the anticipation of the advent of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as the seal of all Prophets; as much as they have been mistaken in falsely accusing his mother Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her. To demonstrate the verity of his accounts, 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him will not bring forth a new divine Sharia; rather, he will pray behind a Muslim—follower of Messenger Muhammad, who has been sent to all mankind.

What will the follower of earlier Revelations say when they see ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him praying behind a Muslim? Certainly, they will declare their faith in the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Alternatively, the verse could mean that every follower of earlier Revelations, who lives during the time of the ascension of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him until his return back to earth, will declare his faith in ‘Isa (Jesus) as a messenger, a human being and a servant of Allah. This will take place before the follower of earlier Revelations dies; even in the agony of death when his soul is being severed from the body.

The human worldly whims may preclude the soul from revealing certain truths, supress it from reaching absolute certainty and knowledge and turn it into arrogance and false pride. However, when the agony of death comes, everything that used to distract man from the truth or faith vanishes. At that moment, the human soul is awakened—as the reality and the truth of everything are unveiled and the delusional allure of worldly pleasures is dispelled. Then, the human starts to judge himself and then realises that he has been following his own whims and interests.

Nevertheless, such late profession of faith is of no avail such as the late faith of the Pharaoh of Musa (Moses), who said as he was on the brink of drowning: ‘… [And] when he was about to drown, [Pharaoh] exclaimed: “I believe that there is no deity save Him in Whom the People of Israel believe, and I am one of those (Muslims) who surrender themselves unto Him!”’ (Yunus: 90) Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Only now? When you had always been a rebel [against Us], and you were among those who spread corruption?’ (Yunus: 90) Thus, the late faith of the Pharaoh was of no avail at the time of his death, as Allah the Almighty says: ‘whereas repentance shall neither be accepted from those who continue to do evil deeds until their dying hour and then say: “Behold, I now repent”; nor from those who die as deniers of the truth. It is for whom that We have prepared a painful torment’ (an-Nisa’: 18).

Allah Glorified is He appends the verse under discussion by His saying: ‘…And on the Day of Resurrection he [‘Isa (Jesus)] will bear witness to the truth against them…’ (an-Nisa’: 159). This demonstrates that ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him will testify against those who witnessed his advent during his life span, as well as those who later ascribed divinity to him. Moreover, Allah the Almighty says: ‘and when Allah says (on the Day of Resurrection): “O ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary)! Did you say unto men, 'Worship me and my mother as deities beside Allah'?" ['Isa (Jesus)] answered: "Limitless are Your Glory! It would not have been possible for me to say what I had no right to [say]! Had I said this, You would indeed have known it! You know all that is within my inner-self, whereas I do not know what is in yours. Verily, You alone are the All-Knower of all that is hidden and unseen"' (al-Ma'ida: 116). Allah Glorified is He then tells of other atrocities committed by the Jews:

فَبِظُلۡمٖ مِّنَ ٱلَّذِينَ هَادُواْ حَرَّمۡنَا عَلَيۡهِمۡ طَيِّبَٰتٍ أُحِلَّتۡ
لَهُمۡ وَبِصَدِّهِمۡ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ كَثِيرٗا ١٦٠

For the wrongdoings done by the Jews, We forbade them certain good things that had been permitted to them before: for having frequently debarred others from God's path [160] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 160)

Allah Glorified is He explains that He proscribed the people of Israel from enjoying a number of the good things of life because of the abysmal deeds they perpetrated and the false stances they took. They committed a lot of horrific sins, wronged themselves and others and turned away from the path of Allah; that is, they refused to embrace Islam when it was revealed. Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He elaborates on the reasons for proscribing the People of Israel from enjoying certain good things in life:

وَأَخۡذِهِمُ ٱلرِّبَوٰاْ وَقَدۡ نُهُواْ عَنۡهُ وَأَكۡلِهِمۡ أَمۡوَٰلَ ٱلنَّاسِ بِٱلۡبَٰطِلِۚ
وَأَعۡتَدۡنَا لِلۡكَٰفِرِينَ مِنۡهُمۡ عَذَابًا أَلِيمٗا ١٦١

for taking usury when they had been forbidden to do so; and for wrongfully devouring other people's property. For those of them that reject the truth we have prepared an agonizing torment [161] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 161)

What are the wrongdoings that Allah the Almighty refers to in His saying, 'Because of the wrongdoings of the Jews, We forbade them certain good things…'? (an-Nisa': 160) Wrongdoings in this context mean giving someone something to which he is not entitled and has no right. The ultimate wrongdoing is when someone associates others in worship with Allah. For this reason, Allah the Almighty says: '…For, behold, associating others in worship with Allah is indeed an awesome wrong-doing!' (Luqman: 13)

Thus, there are several reasons why Allah Glorified is He proscribed the people of Israel from certain good things in life which were previously allowed to them. Allah always prohibits fewer things than his permitted bounties; proscriptions are indeed consistently fewer than what Allah allows. Further, whatever Allah does not explicitly proscribe is allowed and permitted. As Allah the Almighty says: 'Say (O Muhammad): "Come, let me convey unto you what Allah has [really] forbidden you: Do not associate anything in worship with Him; be good and dutiful to your parents; do not kill your children for fear of poverty [for] it is We Who shall provide sustenance for you as well as for them; refrain from committing any shameful sins, whether openly or secretly; and do not kill any human being [whose life] has been declared to be sacred by Allah, except in [the pursuit of] justice [according to Islamic Sharia]. That is what He has enjoined upon you so that you may use your reason and stay away from the property of an orphan, save to improve it, until he (or she) comes of age. And [in all your dealings,] give full measure and weight with justice; [however,] We do not charge any human being with more than he can bear; and when you voice your opinion (i.e. judge between men or give evidence, etc.), be just, even if it is [against] a near relative. And [always] fulfill the Covenant of Allah. These are what He has enjoined upon you so that you may remember"' (al-An'am: 151-152).

In these verses, Allah Glorified is He lists the proscriptions He has enacted; there are indeed few prohibitions if compared to the permissible bounties. This shows us how merciful Allah is towards His creatures! Allah has indeed bestowed upon us infinite and innumerable bounties and allowed us to pursue all of them with the exception of a few proscriptions, which were mainly enacted to keep man disciplined.

Some people may argue that Allah has proscribed something because it is harmful. This may very well be the case; however, we should bear in mind that Allah does not proscribe things exclusively because they are harmful. Allah may well proscribe something to discipline the people upon whom He enacts such a proscription. For instance, if someone is in charge of a family, he may forbid a child to eat a certain kind of food or may reduce his pocket money in order to punish him; surely, to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection.

But why did the children of Israel deserve to be punished through prohibitions? The underlying reason is that they used to go around the path of Allah and twist it to allow themselves to do what Allah has forbidden. Since they have gone astray and made lawful to themselves what Allah has forbidden, Allah Glorified is He said, ‘You had the audacity to encroach on and pursue what I have prohibited you to do. I thereby have the right to forbid you to pursue some of what I used to allow you before.’ Allah intended this so that no one would mistakenly think that by pursuing something which Allah had forbidden; he took something against the will of Allah; for indeed no one can do something at odds with Allah’s will. Therefore, Allah may forbid some of what He used to allow him to do.

Forbidding may either be a prohibition of something granted through a prior divine law or a prohibition of a certain habit, natural inclination or something that one may be doing out of necessity. For instance, when someone excessively drinks intoxicants, like wine, he denies himself access to many good things in life that are permissible for them. A physician may tell them their liver has cirrhosis, and they may no longer eat or drink such and such. We thus see how man may wrong himself, and how this may preclude him from pursuing things that were originally permissible.

Similarly, whoever eats or drinks something excessively, like sugar, for instance, will have to suffer the repercussions of consuming more than their body needs of such substance. Allah’s law dictates that, when you consume more than your bodily need of sugar, you become sick and you may never consume any sweets again. We thus notice that all diabetic people crave sugar and sweets, and even though they can buy them, they are forbidden to eat them. It is as if Allah Glorified is He tells them, ‘You have denied yourselves what Allah has allowed you through your injustice and wrong-doing.’

The same may hold for another man who has wealth, land and many servants. Those who work for him do the job of grinding wheat on his behalf; they then bake him white bread of the finest kinds of flour that is absolutely free of any kind of impurities. The man will then eat this fine bread while his servants eat lower quality bread which they also prepare for themselves. However, Allah's law will one day force him to eat brown bread; physicians will order him to eat this for the good of his intestines because he ate too much white bread that is made of the finest kinds of wheat. By contrast this man's servants will get a chance to enjoy eating this fine type of bread; it is thus due to this man's injustice that he was deprived of a good thing that he was once allowed.

Therefore, if you ever see that a man has been deprived of a bounty that he used to be allowed, you have to immediately realize that this man has pursued something that Allah has forbidden, or alternatively, abused a right that Allah had granted him. However, Allah watches over all of us and none of our deeds ever escape His reckoning. Thus, prohibition may be through an explicit law; in this case the punishment for violating this prohibition is decreed by The Legislator. In addition, something may be prohibited because it is repulsive to one's natural inclination or habits. This is often the case when the thing forbidden is something one may excessively use or abuse.

Therefore, we must carefully read this verse, 'So, then, for the wickedness committed by those who followed the Jewish faith did We deny unto them certain of the good things of life which [before] had been allowed to them; and [We did this] for their having so often turned away from the path of Allah.' (an-Nisa': 160)

The same holds for those who practise usury; they accept money in usury to increase their wealth. But do they want wealth and fortune for its own sake or do they want to achieve another goal? It is true that wealth or fortune is a form of livelihood. However, it is an indirect form of livelihood because it is used to acquire things of which man may avail himself, which constitutes the direct form of livelihood. We have said earlier; assume that someone who has a mountain of gold loses his way in the desert and runs out of food. Will his mountain of gold be of any avail to him in this case? Indeed, no. A loaf of bread and a glass of water will indeed be far more valuable to him than all his gold. Does the one who practise usury to increase his wealth do so to enjoy more pleasure in life? If he does so, Allah Glorified is He will punish him with many calamities and take away his wealth.

Whoever wants to continue enjoying what Allah has allowed him until he dies must not pursue anything Allah prohibited. If one does so, one will continue to enjoy Allah's bounties and blessings. The True Lord Glorified is He says: '…and never does Allah do the least wrong to His creatures.' (Fussilat: 46) Man, thus does the most injustice to himself. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Verily, Allah does not do the least wrong unto men, but it is men who wrong themselves.' (Yunus: 44)

In this manner, as the Jews wronged themselves, Allah deprived them of good things that they were originally allowed to enjoy. But who caused this to happen? It is humans' deeds. But what changed? Is it the essence of the good things that were prohibited or the ruling concerning them? It is the ruling concerning them; these good things became prohibited instead of being allowed. 'So, then, for the wickedness committed by those who followed the Jewish faith did We deny unto them certain of the good things of life which [before] had been allowed to them; and [We did this] for their having so often turned away from the path of Allah.' (an-Nisa': 160)

But how did they turn away from the path of Allah? They wronged themselves and practised usury. These are deeds that made this slip into the realm of error and falsehood. But they did not stop at this. They wanted to lead others astray and mislead them. This is the meaning of turning away from the path of Allah. Such an attitude made them incur another sin over and above their others sins. It was thus not enough for them to err, but they went further by leading others astray.

Upon hearing '…they shall bear the full weight of their own burdens, as well as some of the burdens of those ignorant ones whom they have led astray; Oh, how evil the load with which they shall be burdened' (an-Nahl: 25) a sceptic may wonder: how could the Quran contradict itself? In one instance, it says: '…and no bearer of burdens shall be made to bear another's burden…' (al-An'am: 164). In response to this claim, we say, every sin is reckoned in a different way. If one errs, he alone will bear the consequences of his deeds, if he does not sway others into erring. However, if one tries to lead others astray, he will bear the burden of the sin of abetting others to err.

The True Lord Glorified is He tells us more about how the Jews wronged themselves: 'For taking usury when they had been forbidden to do so; and for wrongfully devouring other people's property. For those of them that reject the truth we have prepared an agonizing torment.' (an-Nisa': 161) We have addressed the question of usury before. They used to accept bribes; in doing so, they wrongfully devoured other people's possessions. The same holds for stealing and cheating; these are all forms of devouring other people's possessions. Whatever one takes without a due right, one takes wrongfully. Accordingly, Allah has prepared for whoever does so, a grievous suffering. Everyone has two possible places of which they may assume one in the afterlife: a place in Heaven if he believes and a place in hell if he disbelieves. Thus, no one ought to think that either Heaven or the Hellfire will be too small. Allah has created Heaven on the basis that all mankind may become believers and similarly created Hellfire on the basis that all mankind may become disbelievers.

For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'That will inherit paradise; They will abide therein eternally.' (al-Mu'minun: 11) When a believer takes his place in paradise, Allah grants him the place that was assigned for a disbeliever in the paradise if he had chosen faith.

The grievous suffering Allah readied is so painful and debasing, that it can vanquish anyone, no matter how resolute or strong they are; indeed no one can endure the suffering Allah has readied for the disbelievers in the Afterlife.

But did all the followers of earlier revelation take the same course of action? Was there not anyone among them who considered believing in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? Was there not anyone who considered the signs and narratives that foretold the advent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the Torah and the Bible? There were indeed some among them who did. The True Lord Glorified is He relates to us the true history of what happened. He thus tells us that those who are deeply rooted in knowledge among the followers of earlier revelations are an exception:

لَّٰكِنِ ٱلرَّٰسِخُونَ فِي ٱلۡعِلۡمِ مِنۡهُمۡ وَٱلۡمُؤۡمِنُونَ يُؤۡمِنُونَ بِمَآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيۡكَ وَمَآ أُنزِلَ
مِن قَبۡلِكَۚ وَٱلۡمُقِيمِينَ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَۚ وَٱلۡمُؤۡتُونَ ٱلزَّكَوٰةَ وَٱلۡمُؤۡمِنُونَ بِٱللَّهِ
وَٱلۡيَوۡمِ ٱلۡأٓخِرِ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ سَنُؤۡتِيهِمۡ أَجۡرًا عَظِيمًا ١٦٢

But those of them who are well grounded in knowledge and have faith do believe in what has been revealed to you [Muhammad], and in what was revealed before you – those who perform the prayers, pay the pre- scribed alms, and believe in God and the Last Day – to them We shall give a great reward [162] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 162)

Allah Glorified is He did not generalize His statement that the followers of earlier revelations are disbelievers, wrong themselves and practise usury to all of them; rather, He mentioned an exception. A good example is `Abdullah ibn Salam Allah be pleased with him who seriously considered following the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and knew well that the Jews tend to be corrupt and malicious. He thus said to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'I will believe in you as a Messenger of Allah; I have recognized that you are Allah's Messenger with the same certainty I recognize my son; indeed, I am even more certain that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah than that my son is actually my son. 'The True Lord Glorified is He says the following about this situation: 'They unto whom We have given revelation to before know it as they know their own children…' (al-Baqara: 146). But no one will ever fail to recognize their own child. The same holds for those who are deeply rooted in knowledge; they know that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a Messenger from Allah to deliver His message. The one who is deeply rooted in knowledge is the one whose faith cannot be shaken and is never swayed by impulse or self-interests. He is indeed the one who has attained absolute certainty in his faith. 'But those of them who are well grounded in knowledge and have faith do believe in what has been revealed to you [Muhammad], and in what was revealed before you…' (an-Nisa': 162). The saying of the True Lord Glorified is He: '…in what has been revealed to you…' (an-Nisa': 162) refers to the Quran. The Quran is thus the standard against which all previous scriptures ought to be measured. Accordingly, those who believe in what has been bestowed upon the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from Allah, must believe in all that was mentioned in the previous scriptures.

A good observer of the rhetorical and stylistic scheme of the verse is bound to notice a change in the following part: '…those who perform prayer…' (an-Nisa': 162). The True Lord Glorified is He started the verse by saying: 'But those of them who are well grounded in knowledge and have faith do believe in what has been revealed to you [Muhammad], and in what was revealed before you; those who perform prayer…' (an-Nisa': 162).

We know well that when the regular masculine plural in Arabic is in a nominative position, its last syllable always contains a waw letter instead of a u-sound accent on its last letter. Further its last syllable would contain a ya` letter instead of a lower accent if it is either in an accusative or a dative position. Here al-muqimin—the Arabic word here translated as '…those who are [especially] constant in… (an-Nisa': 162) -is associated through a conjunction with a word in a nominative position; it should have thus been al-muqimun. Grammarians call this an anomalous case kasr al-`i`rab (an exception to the rules of parts of speech) because the word assumes a part of speech that requires a morphological form other than that which it has. This is thereby a case wherein the general rules of the parts of speech are broken. The Arabic linguistic acuity which first received the Quran noticed this grammatical anomaly.

Indeed, it used to be the case that whenever an Arab heard a linguistic mistake, he would panic. We may well remember the following illustrative story. An Arab(1) nomad once heard a Caliph giving a speech; the nomad noticed that the Caliph made a mistake, so he put his fingers behind his ears to twist and fold them to hear well what the Caliph was saying. Upon making another mistake, the Arab nomad stood up. When the Caliph made a third mistake, the Arab nomad said: I profess that you have assumed the high position of Caliph only by chance. In other words, he was telling the Caliph that he did not merit such a prestigious status.

But if a verse in The Book that is intended to challenge the eloquent contains an anomaly, the eloquent should have wondered: how come Muhammad peace

---

(1) The Arab who heard the caliph erring in grammar while on the pulpit and blessings be upon him said that he challenges our eloquence with this book even though it contains an anomaly that does not follow the proper rules of grammar. However, no one said this. This indicates that they realized the rationale underlying this linguistic anomaly. Allah Glorified is He intended it to attract the attention of every reader to the importance of the issue to follow: '…those who perform prayer…' (an-Nisa': 162).

But why is this matter so important? The reason is that prayers constitute the main pillar of Islam. All the other pillars relate to specific events and so happen only once or periodically. A Muslim may profess that there is no deity worthy of worship except Allah Glorified is He and that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is His messenger only once in his life time. Similarly, every Muslim is obliged to fast only one month every year. Also, one has a license not to fast if one is undergoing certain strenuous conditions. Further, one pays zakat (alms to the poor) every year or whenever they harvest their crops. Finally, one is only bound to do pilgrimage if he can financially and physically afford the journey. Thus, the only pillar of Islam that is practised continuously and daily is the prayer. In this respect, we may understand the following noble verses: 'What has brought you into hell-fire? They will answer, "We were not among those who prayed."' (al-Muddaththir: 42-43)

Islam encompasses five explicit pillars. It is possible that a Muslim may not be able to fulfil them all. For instance, a Muslim may only be able to fulfil the first two pillars; there is no deity worthy of worship except Allah Glorified is He and that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is His messenger alongside praying constantly. Allah Glorified is He uses the expression: '…those who are [especially] constant in prayer…' (an-Nisa': 162), to show how the prayers sustain affection and closeness between Allah and every Muslim. One may worship Allah through fasting only in one month every year; similarly, one may demonstrate their obedience and love to Allah by paying zakat only when they receive the revenue of their land or wealth. Further, one may worship Allah through pilgrimage only if they are financially and physically capable of undertaking it. By contrast, when one prays five times a day every Muslim constantly pledges their loyalty to Allah.

We have previously said that the prayers encompass all the other pillars of Islam. In praying we profess that there is no deity worthy of worship except Allah Glorified is He and that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is His messenger. We also know that as much as zakat involves sacrificing a portion of one's fortune, prayers also involve sacrificing a portion of the time one could have otherwise devoted to work. Thus, praying involves paying zakat through the sacrifice of time. Similarly, in fasting one abstains from all the good of life which Allah allows them. But in prayers, one also does the same. Finally, one orients himself towards Mecca every time they pray. Thus, every time a Muslim prays, it is like performing pilgrimage.

In conclusion, Allah brought forth a grammatical anomaly in His saying: '…those who perform prayer…' (an-Nisa': 162) to pay our attention to the importance of this form of worship. In addition, some scholars argued that the True Lord Glorified is He used such an anomaly to praise those who are constant in prayer because they consistently declare their loyalty to Allah. Indeed, so long as a Muslim is sound, he should never cease to demonstrate such loyalty.

Subsequently, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…and spend in charity, and all who believe in Allah and the Last Day…' (an-Nisa': 162). This asserts that all acts of worship are essentially intended to avow the servant's adherence and loyalty to their faith in Allah. Faith, as we know, is twofold. On one hand, the apex of faith is to believe in Allah; on the other hand, having faith also consists in believing in the afterlife. Allah Glorified is He says that the reward of those among the followers of earlier revelation who stick to this code of conduct and show this level of faith will be: '…these it is unto whom We shall grant a mighty reward' (an-Nisa': 162). It is a mighty reward because they chose not to blindly follow the general orientation of their people and took a resistant and resolute stance in rejecting their attempt to falsify and paraphrase Allah's religion. Further, they deserve a mighty reward because they attested to the truth of the Quran's assertion the arrival of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was foretold in the Torah. Subsequently, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

إِنَّآ أَوۡحَيۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ كَمَآ أَوۡحَيۡنَآ إِلَىٰ نُوحٖ وَٱلنَّبِيِّـۧنَ مِنۢ بَعۡدِهِۦۚ وَأَوۡحَيۡنَآ
إِلَىٰٓ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ وَإِسۡمَٰعِيلَ وَإِسۡحَٰقَ وَيَعۡقُوبَ وَٱلۡأَسۡبَاطِ وَعِيسَىٰ
وَأَيُّوبَ وَيُونُسَ وَهَٰرُونَ وَسُلَيۡمَٰنَۚ وَءَاتَيۡنَا دَاوُۥدَ زَبُورٗا ﴿١٦٣﴾

We have sent revelation to you [Prophet] as We did to Noah and the prophets after him, to Abraham, Ishmael, Isaac, Jacob, and the Tribes, to Jesus, Job, Jonah, Aaron, and Solomon – to Dawud We gave the book [of Psalms] [163]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 163)

We know that when the True Lord Glorified is He wants to directly attribute a discourse to Himself, He uses the first-person. The first-person pronoun has three facets. In certain instances, Allah uses `inna; in other instances, He uses `innani and in others he uses nahnu. In this verse Allah Glorified is He says: 'We have sent revelation to you [Prophet] as We did....' (an-Nisa': 163) In another place in the Noble Quran, we encounter the saying of the True Lord Glorified is He 'Verily, I, and I alone, am Allah; there is no deity save Me....' (Ta Ha: 14) In a third place, He says: 'Indeed, it is We who sent down the Quran and indeed, We will be its guardian.' (al-Hijr: 09)

Here Allah Glorified is He uses `inna because the bestowal and guarding of His reminder, i.e. The Quran, involves the manifestation of a diversified array of His attributes. When Allah addresses His creatures, He does so in a way that manifests the traces and effects of His attributes in the universe in which we live. The universe in which we live abounds with beings that serve man; these beings in turn needed a lot of might and greatness to constitute for man a proper environment in which he can live and thrive. Further, the preparation of the universe for the reception of man required much power and might. The perfection and infallibility of the universe in which we live reflects the perfection of the attributes of the Master Who fashioned it. It required infinite knowledge of things, wisdom of design and provenance to fit everything in its proper place, a capability to demonstrate that perfect harmony, and affluence and abundance to bestow different parts of the universe with different bounties. When discussing a work of His whose production involved the manifestation and the use of many of His attributes, Allah uses either `inna or nahnu. When, the True Lord Glorified is He talks about Himself He says 'innani meaning 'Behold I am Allah.' In such a case, `ina and nahnu are never used.

In the verse under consideration, Allah Glorified is He says: 'We have sent revelation to you [Prophet]…' (an-Nisa': 163). This means that We have inspired for man, a path and course of life that enables him to properly exercise his mastery over the universe.

This means that Allah has inspired man with a path and a course of life that enables him to properly exercise his mastery over the universe and preserve his life and his world. The preservation of the universe requires knowledge, wisdom, capability and mercy. For this reason, revelation teaches us that a whole array of perfect attributes collaborated and manifested themselves in the creation of the universe. Due to Allah's mercy towards His creatures, He gave them venues to explore and recognize these attributes: 'Do you not see that Allah sends down rain from the sky, and We produce thereby fruits of varying colors...' (Fatir: 27).

Allah Glorified is He sent down water from the sky. None of His creatures take part or have control over this process; it is only a few centuries ago that man discovered that water evaporates and then vapour forms clouds. Subsequently, cloudscondense and rain falls. Therefore, man does not interfere in the whole process. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Do you not see that Allah sends down rain from the sky…' (Fatir: 27). Afterward, the True Lord Glorified is He acknowledges the effort and role of His creatures. In this vein, He says: 'and We produce thereby fruits of varying colors...' (Fatir: 27). Allah Glorified is He did not say, 'I bring forth'; rather, He acknowledged that His creatures use the reason with which He endowed them to use His blessings. In this respect, Allah acknowledges and appreciates the role of His creatures in ploughing, sowing the seeds and irrigating the land to grow crops. Therefore, the Quran uses `inni to refer to the unity of the Essence of Allah. By contrast, it uses `inna to refer to an array or the totality of Allah's attributes because all of Allah's actions involve the employment and manifestation of a number or all of Allah's attributes including; His Will, Knowledge, Capability, Wisdom in addition to His Infinite Capacity to diminish or outspread things, His Exaltation, Humiliation and His Compassion. Therefore, in such contexts

Allah uses either `inna or nahnu because both have a glorifying tone. In this context, the True Lord Glorified is He glorifies Himself to manifest an array of His perfect attributes. For this reason, some spiritualists who tasted the greatness of Allah and the beauty of His attributes say:

Exalted be my Lord over any suspicion or doubt
He is indeed too great to be comprehended

Whenever He wants to celebrate His sanctified unity, He refers to Himself by 'inni. And whenever He wants to refer to the collective power of His attributes He refers to Himself by `inna. Upon considering this matter, we will realize that the True Lord Glorified is He does absolute justice toward His creatures because He made it possible for them to know Him. In this manner, Allah allowed His creatures to bring about and create things. When Allah Glorified is He addresses a matter that is the combined result of His Power and Capability alongside the capability of His creatures, He uses the particle nun—which implies glory and greatness because Allah is ultimately the One Who provided His creatures with these capabilities.

Allah Glorified is He created being out of nothing; however, He endowed His creatures with a creative capability to bring about and change things. But it should be kept in mind, that there is a difference between creating matter from nothing and creating something from matter that already exists. Allah Glorified is He created everything from nothing, yet, He endowed His creatures with the capability to use the things He created to make and innovate new tools and objects to promote the quality of their lives. Thus, Allah Glorified is He continuously reminds His creatures of His grace and bounties. He thus says: '…so blessed be Allah, the best of the creators.' (al-Mu'minun: 14)

Allah Glorified is He thus endowed His creatures with a creative power. However, His creatures can never create anything out of nothing; they create things from the abundant elements Allah has made available for them on earth. Allah's creatures thereby create new objects from the elements Allah created. The one who created the glass which we use to drink water did not do so out of nothing. It is true that glass, as a substance, did not exist before man invented it. However, no one would contest the fact that all the elements, of which glass is made, are present in several environments, including sand and others. Reason used these elements to create a new substance from the damp sand; further, it designed tools to shape and fashion this glass. This is how man created glass from elements already available in nature. Therefore, the difference between what Allah creates and what His creatures create is that Allah creates from nothing, whereas His creatures create new things from what Allah created and made subservient to them. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He described Himself by saying: '…so blessed be Allah, the best of the creators.' (al-Mu'minun: 14)

Thus, humans are only capable of creating things from the elements Allah created and made available to them; you are completely incapable of creating out of nothing. Allah Glorified is He is indeed the best of the creators and no one's creation would ever compare to His. As much as Allah has bestowed upon His creatures a creative capability, Allah describes Himself as the best of the creators. Further, Allah's creation is as we have already said, (I am repeating this so that it would be anchored in people's minds) always soulless and inanimate. In other words, humans are incapable of creating a male cup and another female cup so that they may copulate and reproduce new small cups that may then grow into mature cups. By contrast, Allah breathes the secret of life into inanimate matter and enlivens it. For this reason, Allah is the best of creators.

If you investigate, all living beings in the universe, you will find that there is an active yet secret power present in all of them. If you consider what a human is made of, you will find that they have several senses including smell, taste and touch. Most of these senses function spontaneously and involuntarily. For instance, whenever you open your eyes, you will immediately see your surroundings, even if you do not deliberately will to see. Similarly, if you do not want to see you will simply close your eyes. But if you do not want to hear you cannot order your ears to stop receiving sounds. In the same manner, you voluntarily open your mouth to eat and taste but you do not order your nose to smell; your nose just senses whatever odours or scents are around you. Further you may voluntarily extend your hands to touch. But you cannot deliberately will to laugh; is there any organ you may order to laugh? You may come across things or events that stimulate your laughter, but you cannot order any organ in your body to laugh. Similarly, you cry when something stimulates you to cry; however, you cannot order any specific organ or sense in your body to cry. For this reason, Allah associated laughing and crying with life and associated nothingness with death. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And that it is He alone who causes [you] to laugh and to weep; And that it is He alone who deals death and grants life.' (an-Najm: 43-44)

Allah made certain organs in humans function spontaneously and involuntarily. No human being knows how they exactly happen or get excited. No one may keep their ear from hearing. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He does not command one not to hear a specific thing; however, one is commanded not to overhear or eavesdrop on others.

Our tradition did not require us to prevent ourselves from hearing anything because no one can possibly block his/her ears from hearing anything. However, one can voluntarily choose not to eavesdrop on others. Thus, Allah made His enactments in line with the capabilities of man and within the realm of what is up to him and can voluntarily choose. In this respect, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And when you see those who engage in [offensive] discourse concerning Our verses, then turn away from them until they enter into another conversion…' (al-An'am: 68).

Here Allah Glorified is He used the word ra`yt (meet) which literally means to see; even though the context is related to the sense of hearing because no Muslim can prevent himself from hearing if other people around him indulge in blasphemous talk about Allah's messages. However, Allah ordered whoever hears such a discourse to turn their back upon those who promote it. Allah Glorified is He explains to us what is concealed and kept a secret. Indeed, even though a lot of things in the universe may seem to be acting agents, yet, in reality, all of them are completely submissive to the will of Allah. For this reason, spiritualists and those who have true knowledge of Allah say, 'It is due to Allah's goodness and generosity towards you, that He attributes certain actions to you, even though He is the Cause of all causes'.

Allah Glorified is He is the Creator underlying everything and is indeed the Cause of all causes. The most that any of Allah's creatures may do is to orient and direct some of the active powers or energies that Allah created in the universe. It is indeed due to the greatness of the True Lord Glorified is He that the strong cannot give any of their strength to the weak. None who is strong may say to another who is weak, ‘Here! Take some of my power and strength so that you may endure life.’ By contrast, Allah invites the weak to resort to Him and promises them that if they do, He will give them strength to endure and do whatever they wish. Thus, no creature of Allah Glorified is He may voluntarily give their strength to another; rather, they may use the ramifications or effects of their strength to help the weak. A good illustration of this point is a situation wherein a strong person helps another weak person to carry something that is too heavy for the latter to carry. In such a situation, the strong use their strength to help the weak; however, they cannot transfer their strength or power to the weak so that they may carry that heavy object.

By contrast, Allah does not only use His Power to support His creatures; He rather, bestows some of it upon the weak whenever the latter resorts to Him. Allah Glorified is He is the One Who gracefully endowed affluence to whoever is rich or affluent and deprived whoever is poor of it; similarly, He is the One Who endows mercy to whoever is merciful, capability to whoever is capable and wisdom to whoever is wise. All these bounties are thus originally educed from the True Lord Glorified is He. This sums up our explanation of the use of ‘inna.

The True Lord Glorified is He put the verb awhayna (the Arabic word translated in the verse under study as inspired) in the plural form. But what is al-wahy (revelation)? Originally, the word means to inform or reveal to someone something secretly or in a concealed manner. But there are several ways in which one may reveal a secret or apprise another of it. Means of communications are tools used to transmit what a speaker says to a listener; alternatively, one may reveal something to another using certain signals that the others see. These signals are used explicitly and not implicitly. By awhayna Allah means that He informed and revealed to whoever He talks about in His discourse certain knowledge in a secret way. The word wahy has different meanings; every act of informing someone of something secret is a wahy. But who revealed secretly? Further to whom did he reveal secretly? And what was revealed secretly? To respond to these questions let us consider how Allah Glorified is He talked about the genre of beings. He said the following about the earth even though it is inanimate: ‘When the earth is shaken with its [final] earthquake. And the earth discharges its burdens. And man, says, "What is [wrong] with it? " That Day, it will report its news. Because your Lord has commanded it.’ (az-Zalzala: 1-5)

These verses indicate that Allah Glorified is He has set the lifetime of earth to end on Judgment Day. By analogy we sometimes—and to Allah belong the supreme and most exalted parables—try to estimate the life expectancy of products; we make or set them to collapse or stop functioning at a specific time. Similarly, Allah revealed to the earth, even though it is inanimate, to quake at a certain time, namely, on the Day of Judgment.

Accordingly, to help us know Him and understand His discourse, Allah Glorified is He left traces of His existence and power in the way He created His creatures. If one wants to wake up at 3 a.m., a time at which he is not used to waking up, he must set the alarm to go off at that time. The relation between this man and his clock is analogical to the relation between Allah and His creatures. Allah created the earth and set it to explode at a certain time in accordance to the laws of its constitution. Similarly, Allah Glorified is He set certain animals to follow specific courses of actions: ‘And your Lord inspired to the bee, "Take for yourself among the mountains houses, and among the trees and [in] that which they construct.’ (an-Nahl: 68) Allah Glorified is He has thus secretly inspired bees to behave in a certain manner and He made such behaviour part of its instinct. There is a difference between matters that a being instinctually does and matters that it voluntarily chooses to do. Instinctual matters are rather mechanical and cannot be changed; however voluntary decisions can be reversed and modified.

A good example of mechanical structures is that of computers which man uses to store data. This machine cannot say to the one who feeds it with data, ‘do not store in me such packs of data.’ Further, it cannot keep anyone from retrieving the data stored in it, if this person knows how to use it. Computers are incapable of choosing or making decisions.

By contrast, human reason is characterized by its capacity to select information and knows how to release this information in the relevant situations. Further it consciously determines what things should be kept as a secret and which could be revealed to others. Human reason may even go as far as choosing to lie or tampering with facts and changing them. However, a computer or an electronic mind is incapable of doing so; it is only capable of retrieving the data that was stored in it. Accordingly, man is more rationally developed.

When the True Lord Glorified is He created the universe, He endowed every being with an instinctual structure that befits its functions and purpose in life. In this vein, He endowed man with the capacity to freely choose between different alternatives. By contrast, He ruled that all others beings would mechanically follow their instincts. A being that is wholly governed by its instinct cannot choose anything; thus, its life follows a fixed, unchanging law.

This mechanical nature is quite evident in the cosmological order: in the heavens and the celestial spheres, the earth and the planets. All these follow the laws that Allah has set for them. The same also holds for terrestrial beings like plants. One may plant a tree. As this tree grows, the capillaries of its roots may then spread downward in the land to absorb minerals and other nutrients. However, every plant, in accordance with the biological structure Allah set for it, absorbs only a specific assortment of nutrients; thus, a plant may benefit from a nutritive substance that is of no avail to another.

Botanical scientists discovered these facts through their study of the growth of plants. Some of them, whose faith is weak, or those who are not always conscious of Allah, may say, ‘plants can feed themselves due to the theory of fine capillary tubes.’ This theory—as we know—states that liquids rise in capillary tubes whose diameter does not exceed that of a hair; the liquid then rises above the surface of the container in which it is originally placed although, as we all know, liquids settle at the same level in any container in which they are placed. When we place these capillary tubes in a vessel that contains liquid, the liquid rises in them above the level at which they originally settled in the vessel. The reason is that the pressure on the water inside these tubes is way less than that on the water in the vessel; scientists thus assumed that plants nourish themselves in this manner.

We say to these scientists: but what about the fact that plants select certain nutrients from the soil and leave out others. Liquids rise in vein-tubes irrespective of the nutrients they may contain. It is because you are not conscious of Allah that you claim that nature does so; you thus overlook a very important fact; that our Lord caused each plant to selectively choose a different combination of nutrients from the same soil; if plants depended only on the phenomenon of capillarity they would all use the same set of nutrients indiscernibly. The True Lord Glorified is He thus rightly says: 'Glorify the name of your Lord the Most High. Who creates, then makes complete. And Who makes (things) according to a measure, then guides (them to their goal).' (al-A'la: 1-3)

Allah Glorified is He is the One Who determines the nature of all beings and guides every being to the fulfilment of its purpose. In this vein, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '… [all] watered with the same water: and yet, some of them have, We favoured above others by way of the food [which they provide for man and beast] Verily, in all this there are messages indeed for people who use their reason!' (ar-Ra'd: 4)

Thus, Allah Glorified is He endows every plant with a specific instinct that is different from any other member of its species. In this respect, even though a peasant may plant paprika beside sugarcane and then plant pomegranate beside both, each of them will taste differently. Paprika would be chilly and spicy; sugarcane would be sweet and the taste of pomegranate would be a mixture of both sweetness and sourness; the last would be different from the first two. These different tastes would be there if plants exclusively depended in their nourishment on the physical phenomenon of capillary tubes. But another scientist may contend that this difference in taste is due to natural selection. At the stubbornness of such a scientist we wonder, why do you not admit that such selection is caused by Allah instead of going around in vicious circles?

To sum up al-wahy is to reveal something to someone in secret. But secret revelation does not always have to be through an agent; sometimes, certain characteristics or features stay latent in something and then reveal themselves at some point or when a specific event happens. This is analogous to the beep of an alarm that goes off at a set time. The following saying of the True Lord Glorified is He gives an example of how He inspired animals: 'And your Lord inspired to the bee, "Take for yourself among the mountains houses, and among the trees and [in] that which they construct.' (an-Nahl: 68)

It is quite thought provoking that an American scientist who devoted his life to the study of the life cycle, species and environment of bees discovered that bees first inhabited and started producing honey in hives found in mountains. Subsequently, man started to discover beehives in high trees that he did not grow; finally, man managed to domesticate and breed bees and build special gardens, hives and farms for them. This scientist never read the Quran or learnt about the three kinds of beehives it describes. However, this scientist empirically studied the life cycle of bees in a robust manner and arrived at the same result the Quran had foretold centuries ago. Indeed, in almost every century and age a scientist discovers new facts that vindicates and attests to the truth of the Quran and its claims. However, Allah's revelation and inspiration to man assumes a different form; the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And so, [when he was born,] We inspired [thus] the mother of Musa (Moses), "Suckle him [for a time], and then, when thou hast cause to fear for him, cast him into the river…"' (al-Qasas: 7).

No messenger went to the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to advise her. However, she knew for certain that she had to cast her son into the river to save him. Muslim scholars have put a lot of effort to make the meaning of al-wahy more accessible to us; they said that revelation is a kind of certain knowledge about something that one suddenly acquires without knowing its source; such knowledge is always supported by evidence that it is inspired by Allah. For this reason, one does not seek rational clues to accept or believe in it. A good example of this form of revelation is Allah's discourse on the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him quoted above: 'And so, [when he was born,] We inspired [thus] the mother of Musa (Moses), "Suckle him [for a time], and then, when thou hast cause to fear for him, cast him into the river…"' (al-Qasas: 7). By Allah, would a woman in the whole world comply if we told her to throw her child if she is worried about him? Of course, she would not! But the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him followed the revelation of Allah and took it for granted. As soon as Allah's revelation entered her heart and He secretly inspired her, she believed it; further, since this revelation was from Allah, the human soul received and embraced it with certainty and faith and Satan was not capable of casting doubts in it about its truth. Thus, the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him cast her son into the river after she had suckled him. But Allah wanted to comfort her and assure her about the destiny of her son. He thus explained to her that He has issued His orders to the river to cast the child ashore and arranged that his enemy, namely the Pharaoh of Egypt, would pick and bring him up in his palace. Similarly, Allah inspired the disciples of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And [remember] when I inspired to the disciples, "Believe in Me and in My messenger `Isa (Jesus". They said, "We have believed, so bear witness that indeed we are Muslims [in submission to Allah]."' (al-Ma'ida: 111) Allah also inspired the angels. For instance, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '[Remember] when your Lord inspired to the angels, "I am with you, so strengthen those who have believed. I will cast terror into the hearts of those who disbelieved…"' (al-Anfal: 12).

Allah's revelation encompasses all species whether these species are invisible like the angels or visible and perceptible like humans like, the disciples of `Isa (Jesus) and the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon them. Allah Glorified is He says 'We inspired' to bring to our attention that Allah is not the only One Who inspires and reveals matters in secret. Satan and devils do the same with their followers: 'And indeed do the devils inspire their allies [among men] to dispute with you. And if you were to obey them, indeed, you shall most surely be polytheists.' (al-An'am: 121)

Allah Glorified is He also says the following about Satan and the devils: 'And thus, We have made for every prophet an enemy - devils from mankind and jinn, inspiring to one another decorative speech in delusion. But if your Lord had willed, they would not have done it, so leave them and that which they invent.' (al-An'am: 112)

Accordingly, al-wahy consists in secretly inspiring or revealing something to someone. It is not restricted to the True Lord Glorified is He; rather, revelation could be from Allah, Satan and the devils or from those who support and follow Satan. Further, revelation and inspiration may be directed to inanimate things, animals, angels or humans.

Thus, if we would like to put forward a comprehensive definition of revelation we would say, revelation in language is to reveal or inspire something to someone secretly. This revelation could be either from Allah or from the devils. It could also be directed to any being on earth whether animal or human being. Further the subject matter of this revelation could either be good or evil.

The word wahy can bear any of these senses. Accordingly, if it is used in a generic manner it can be construed to indicate any of them. But in Islamic Law, it is used in the context of only referencing Allah's secret revelation and inspiration to His messenger. The same holds for the meaning of salat (prayers). Linguistically, it may mean invoking Allah or asking Him for something; it may also mean blessing the name of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him whenever his name is mentioned; it could also refer to the prayers enacted on us whether these are deeds or sayings. However, the term has been coined by the scholars of Islamic Law to refer to the five daily prayers and the special movements and statements they involve, starting by saying, 'Allah is greater than all', to initiate one's prayers until one terminates their prayers by saying, and 'May Allah's peace and mercy be upon you.'

'Umar Allah be pleased with him(1) said the following about this comprehensive sense of salat. He once asked Hudhayfa Allah be pleased with him 'How have you been today?' So Hudhayfa Allah be pleased with him answered, 'I like allurements, hate the truth, pray without performing ablution and feel that what I have on earth is more than what Allah has in the heavens. 'Umar Allah be pleased with him was infuriated. Indeed, if it had not been for `Ali, who suddenly entered, 'Umar could have taken a decision against Hudhayfa Allah be pleased with them. 'Ali asked 'Umar Allah be pleased with them 'What is the cause of your anger, Commander of the Believers?' 'Umar Allah be pleased with him replied, 'I have asked Hudhayfa about how he has been today and he said such and such things.' So 'Ali Allah be pleased with him said, "O Commander of the Believers, by liking allurements, he meant that he likes his wealth and his children, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…Your worldly goods and your children are but a trial and a temptation…' (al-Anfal: 28). By hating the truth, he meant that he hates death which is an uncontested truism; indeed, who among us likes it commander of the believers? By praying without performing ablution, he meant that he blesses the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him whenever his name is mentioned. Finally, by claiming that he possesses on earth what Allah does not possess in the heavens, he meant that the he has a wife and a child on earth whereas Allah does not have either in the heavens.' Thus, Hudhayfa Allah be pleased with him used allurements, death and prayers in a special sense. I have deliberately adduced this example to demonstrate the distinction between linguistic generic meanings of words and their specific meaning in the context of Islamic Law.

(1) 'Umar Allah be pleased with him asking, 'How are you Hudhayfa'? and the strange answer of Hudhayfa which was then explained by `Ali ibn Abu Taleb may Allah be pleased with them

This also shows the difference between al-wahy as a term and a concept in Islamic Law and its linguistic meaning. The linguistic meaning of al-wahy is to reveal or inspire something to someone secretly. However, as a religious term, al-wahy refers to the revelation of Allah to His messenger. All other forms of revelation and inspiration are educed from the generic linguistic sense.

The True Lord Glorified is He says in the verse we are explaining: 'Behold, We have inspired thee [O Prophet] just as We inspired Nuh (Noah)…' (an-Nisa': 163). The word awhyna indicates that Allah made a secret revelation to a messenger of His. To understand why Allah's revelation was secret, we need to bear in mind that Allah's attributes are absolutely perfect and that all creatures are subordinate to the power of Allah Glorified is He. Accordingly, no one can be directly in contact with Allah because He is absolutely sublime. Even the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him could not bear to be in such contact. For this reason, Allah used the angels, who are luminous creatures, as intermediaries to communicate His message to His messengers. Further, Allah prepares His messengers for the reception of His revelation even before He sends it down to them through angels.

There is an hierarchy of relation. The highest being, namely, Allah, initially communicates His discourse to the angels and then the latter reveal it to a selected set of His creatures. This selected set, i.e. the Messengers, have been fashioned by Allah to receive His revelation. Subsequently, those messengers deliver Allah's message to other humans. This chain is intended to alleviate the awe of being in direct contact with Allah; nonetheless, messengers are always shaken in awe when they receive revelation from the angels. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said the following about his first encounter with the angel of revelation, ‘The Truth was revealed to me when he was in the cave of Hira`. Gabriel peace be upon him came to me and said, ‘Read!’ So, I answered, ‘But I cannot read.’ Gabriel grabbed and held me so close to the extent that I was exhausted; he then let go of me and said, ‘Read!’ So, I replied, ‘But I cannot read.’ So, he grabbed and held me so close until I was exhausted again. He then let go of me and said, ‘Read!’ So, I answered, ‘But I cannot read.’ So, he grabbed and held me so close for the third time and then let go of me. He then said, ‘Read in the name of your Lord, who has created; created man from a clot. Recite and your Lord is the most Generous.’(1) (al-‘Alaq: 1-3)

After these events took place, the Messenger of Allah peace be upon him returned to his wife Khadija bint Khuwaylid Allah be pleased with her. His forehead was soaking with sweat and his heart was pounding. He then said: wrap me with clothes, wrap me with clothes. They then covered and wrapped him with clothes until his fear was dispelled. However, what happened was natural. For Gabriel peace be upon him is an angel who encountered Muhammad ibn `Abdullah peace and blessings be upon him who is a human being. This had to happen so that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would get used to receiving revelation from Gabriel peace be upon him.

However, did Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him continuously receive revelation in this state of trembling and suffering? No; Allah’s revelation would sometimes stop for a while. In such cases, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would long for it. Further Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him became capable of enduring the exhaustion involved in receiving revelation. However, his forehead continued to soak with sweat whenever he received revelation. He also used to find difficulty in moving when this happened. In addition, if he received revelation while he was riding an animal, it would slow down and cry out in pain. Similarly, whenever Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him received revelation while he was leaning his thigh on the thigh of one of his Companions, the weight of Prophet Muhammad would increase to the extent that it would almost break the leg of his Companion. Prophet Muhammad used to bear all these hardships and forms of fatigue during the reception of revelation. The reason is that a chemical change used to happen in the body of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so that he would realize that what he was receiving was not an ordinary discourse but rather a discourse miraculously revealed by Allah.

(1) Al-Bukhari

When revelation descended upon the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him it used to have a jingle sound like that of a bell; this sound heralded that revelation was due and about to start so that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him prepared himself for its reception. When the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was initially enervated by the reception of revelation, Allah Glorified is He due to His mercy caused revelation to stop so that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would long for revelation due to the sweetness of what was revealed to him. This longing, in turn, made him prepared for and willing to go through the troubles entailed in receiving revelation. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ceased to receive revelation for a while, his adversaries said, 'The Lord of Muhammad abandoned and alienated him.' They only admitted that Muhammad has a Lord in this situation; they did so after they had denied the truth of the claims of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. They thus failed to be intelligent enough not to exploit this situation and express their view about it in a way that does not contradict with their prior stance. The truth was that the True Lord Glorified is He saw the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was exhausted and enervated upon receiving revelation; He thus suspended revelation for a while so that the Messenger of Allah would long for the sweetness he found in revelation and prepare himself for enduring the pain entailed in its reception.

The Prophet's longing for and love for revelation completely alleviated any pain he may have experienced in receiving revelations. Indeed, when one of us is on the way to visit someone they like, they may be willing and may not mind to walk through a valley of mud or on thorns until they reach this person. Accordingly, the fact that revelation stopped for a while was intended to make Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him long to and crave for revelation and so that every one of us would pay attention to the following saying of Allah Glorified is He when they read the Quran: ‘And the Hereafter is better for you than the first [life].’ (ad-Duha: 4)

This means that the life to follow will please you. Subsequently, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Have we not opened up thy heart, and lifted from thee the burden that had weighed so heavily on your back? And [have We not] raised for you your reputation?’ (ash-Sharh: 1-4)

The True Lord Glorified is He thus addressed this matter. He wanted to tell the believers, not to think that the Lord of Muhammad—as they say—has alienated and abandoned him. No. Rather, He suspended revelation to him for a while to prepare him for the reception of more revelation. Allah thus gave them an example from the universal laws they observe every day to show that the change in the flow of revelation is quite normal; yet, their disbelieving ways blinded both their sight and insight. In this respect Allah Glorified is He says: ‘By the morning brightness; and [by] the night when it covers with darkness; your Lord has not forsaken thee, nor has He become displeased with you.’ (ad-Duha: 1-3)

We need bear in mind that Allah Glorified is He chooses to swear by whatever He wills about whatever He wills. The morning brightness is at the beginning of the day; it is the time for working, labouring, effort exertion, earnest actions and exhaustion. By contrast, night and nocturnal hours are the time for comfort and rest.

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He explains that if you consider the law governing the sequence of day and night, you will realize that Allah made daytime for working and night-time for resting. Similarly, the fact that revelation stopped for a while was intended as a period of respite so that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would restore his energy and prepare himself for the reception of new revelations. The True Lord Glorified is He swears: ‘By the morning brightness; and [by] the night when it covers with darkness; your Lord has not forsaken thee, nor has He become displeased with you.’ (ad-Duha: 1-3) Does the fact that the night follows the day, indicates that Allah has cursed mankind and deprived it of daytime? No; night is a bliss that Allah conferred upon mankind so that people may rest and prepare themselves for a new day.

Allah Glorified is He revealed the verse under consideration when a Jew once asked the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask Allah Glorified is He to reveal to them a book from the heavens: 'The People of the Scripture ask you to bring down to them a book from the heaven. But they had asked of Musa (Moses) [even] greater than that and said, "Show us Allah outright…" (an-Nisa': 153).

The True Lord Glorified is He ordered the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him to explain to them that Allah has sent down revelation to him as much as he sent down revelation to previous messengers. Did you not suspect that Allah Glorified is He sent down revelation to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him? You have definitely suspected and cast doubt upon the fact that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him received revelation from Allah. However, let us set aside your suspicions and what you deny and consider instead what you believe in. Allah Glorified is He says: 'We have sent revelation to you [Prophet] as We did to Nuh (Noah) and the prophets after him…' (an-Nisa': 163).

Thus, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is not the first to receive revelation: 'We have sent revelation to you [Prophet] as We did to Nuh (Noah) and the prophets after him…' (an-Nisa': 163). Scholars often bypass this matter rather quickly and inattentively. However, let us ponder over it for a while. We say this statement may falsely give the impression that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was the first to receive revelation. The truth is that Adam peace be upon him was the first to receive revelation long before Noah peace be upon him did. But there is a diametrical difference between the revelation Adam peace be upon him received and the revelation the Prophets received after him.

A good example is Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. Nuh (Noah) was sent to warn his people against Allah's punishment and to promise them His mighty reward should they obey Him. As for Adam peace be upon him his people came forth after him. For this reason, Allah did not advocate Adam with a miracle because he is the father of all mankind. Children always imitate their fathers; even the children of atheists mimic their fathers. Allah Glorified is He revealed to Adam peace be upon him His saying: '…there shall most certainly come to you, guidance from Me: and those who follow My guidance need have no fear, and neither shall they grieve.' (al-Baqara: 38) Sending guidance to Adam peace be upon him in this context, refers to the coming of revelation.

But why was Nuh (Noah) mentioned first in the verse? The reason is that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was sent to a nation that was already there. For this reason, he needed to be advocated by a miracle that confirms the truth of his message. Allah sent Nuh (Noah) to all mankind, as there was no one on earth except them. But Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to all mankind, as Islam is the seal of all religions. There were other nations besides his own when he was missioned. ‘We have sent revelation to you [Prophet] as we did to Nuh (Noah) and the prophets after him, to Ibrahim (Abraham)…’ (an-Nisa’: 163), why did Allah say, ‘prophets after him’, (after Nuh [Noah])? And why did Allah name the Prophets after mentioning ‘…revealed to Abraham’?

Scholars reasoned that this style stresses the honour of those prophets. ‘…to Ibrahim (Abraham), Ismail (Ishmael), Ishaq (Isaac), Ya`qub (Jacob), and the Tribes, to `Isa (Jesus), Ayyub (Job), Yunu*s* (Jonah), Harun (Aaron), and Sulaiman (Solomon) — to Dawud (David) We gave the book [of Psalms].’ (an-Nisa’: 163). It is as if the True Lord is telling Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when the Jews ask you to have a book sent down to them from the Heavens, say to them, ‘ Allah inspired me as much as He inspired previous prophets; I am thus not a peculiarity.’ Still, ‘And even if we had sent down to you, [O Muhammad], a written scripture on a page and they touched it with their hands, the disbelievers would say, "This is not but obvious magic.”’ (al-An‘am: 7) Indeed, every denier insists on his denial. They were not arguing to reach the truth; they were just sophistically contending falsities.

Allah Glorified and Exalted thus lists the names of the Prophets whom He inspired: ‘…to Ibrahim (Abraham), Ismail (Ishmael), Ishaq (Isaac), Ya`qub (Jacob), and the Tribes, to `Isa (Jesus), Ayyub (Job), Yunus (Jonah), Harun (Aaron), and Sulaiman (Solomon) — to Dawud (David) We gave the book [of Psalms].’ (an-Nisa’: 163) Here, we notice that Allah mentioned revelation in general. However, when He mentioned Dawud (David), He explicitly said that He named the revelation He sent upon him, the Book of Psalms even though He had not mentioned any of the names of the books that he revealed to the previous Prophets, like the Torah in the case of Musa (Moses), or the Bible in the case of ‘Isa (Jesus). The reason why He mentioned the book that was revealed to Dawud (David) was because itincluded all the universal laws common with the other laws, i.e. praising Allah and exalting Him. There were no legal rulings in the Book of Psalms.

But someone may argue that no legal rulings were enacted on `Isa (Jesus) in the Bible. We say this may be the case; but the Bible complements the Torah. It thus only addressed spiritual aspects because the Torah that existed before it contained all the legal rulings. Therefore, despite the major differences between the Jews and Christians on the issue of `Isa (Jesus) and his mother, they agree as much as they call the Torah and the Bible, the Old and the New Testaments respectively. They also consider them a single book calling it 'the sacred book.'

But what is the meaning of az-zabur (Book of Psalms). It is derived from the term zabr al-bi`r which refers to the following process. When people dug wells to obtain water, they were often afraid that dirt would fall back and shut the hole of the well. For this reason, they used to make walls on the sides coated with either stones or, as they do in the Egyptian countryside, with cement. The term zabr al-bi`r was then used in a generic sense to refer to any kind of repairs done to wells. The term later transcended this usage. For instance, they called reason zabr because it makes sense of matters. Likewise, walls on the side of a well keep dirt from falling inside the well, exactly as reason protects man from going astray. Reason bridles desires from leading man astray and misguiding him. Thus, those who think that the function of reason consists in haphazardly unleashing the mind to irresponsibly produce and pursue false ideas are mistaken. We tell them, you must first understand the meaning of the word reason for you to properly fathom its function. Subsequently, the True Lord says:

وَرُسُلًا قَدْ قَصَصْنَٰهُمْ عَلَيْكَ مِن قَبْلُ وَرُسُلًا لَّمْ
نَقْصُصْهُمْ عَلَيْكَ ۚ وَكَلَّمَ ٱللَّهُ مُوسَىٰ تَكْلِيمًا ﴿١٦٤﴾ to other messengers We have already mentioned to you, and also to some We have not. To Moses God spoke directly [164]

(The Quran, an-Nisa': 164)

The prophets of Allah mentioned in the previous verse are not all the prophets in whom every Muslim is required to believe. We were taught at

Al-Azhar University that we have to believe in twenty-five prophets. One of the poets mentioned those prophets in the following verses,

‘We have proof that there are eight prophets.

After the ten we mentioned in addition to the seven remaining:

Idris (Enoch), Hud (Eber), Shu’aib (Jethro), Saleh (Shelah) as well as Dhul Kifl (Ezekiel), Adam and then the seal of all prophets, Muhammad.’

In the chapter of al-An`am, the True Lord says: ‘And that was our (conclusive) argument which we gave Ibrahim (Abraham) against his people. We raise by degrees whom We will. Indeed, your Lord is Wise and Knowing. And we gave to Ibrahim (Abraham), Ishaq (Isaac) and Ya`qub (Jacob) - all of them We guided. And Nuh (Noah), we guided before; and among his descendants, Dawud (David) and Sulaiman (Solomon) and Ayyub (Job) and Yousef (Joseph) and Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron). Thus, do we reward the doers of good. And Zakariyya (Zechariah) and Yahya (John) and `Isa (Jesus) and Ily*as* (Elias) - and all were of the righteous. And Ismail (Ishmael) and Alyasa` (Elisha) and Yunus (Jonah) and Lut (Lot) - and all of them we preferred over the worlds.’ (al-An‘am: 83-86)

Eighteen Prophets are listed in these verses. In addition to these, there are seven others; Idris (Enoch), Hud (Eber), Shu’aib (Jethro), Saleh (Shelah), Dhul Kifl (Ezekiel), Adam and Muhammad. Allah thus mentioned twenty-five Prophets in the Quran. However, the verse that precedes the verse under discussion has not provided the names of these twenty-five Prophets. Allah mentioned some of the names of the prophets in the chapter of al-An`am and others in the chapter of ash-Shu`ara.’ Thus, the True Lord says: ‘and (We sent) messengers about whom we have related (their stories) to you before and messengers about whom we have not related to you. And Allah spoke to Musa (Moses) with (direct) speech.’ (an-Nisa’: 164) This verse indicates that there are more prophets than the twenty-five. The True Lord mentions in the Quran: ‘And there was no nation but that there had passed within it a warner’ (Fatir: 24).

This verse indicates that Allah only told us the names of the most prominent prophets whose nations were larger than those of the others, or exerted intensive effort in communicating their messages to them, For instance, Allah sent some prophets to nations whose population was more than a hundred thousand people like Yunus (Jonah): 'And We sent him to [his people of] a hundred thousand or more.' (as-Saffat: 147) The old world lived in isolation from each other. People did not possess the means whereby they could communicate. Thus, every nation suffered a specific set of ailments and was characterized by a special demeanour. For this reason, a different prophet had to be sent to every nation to treat the specific set of ailments it suffered. Every prophet was in turn required not to mention the ailments that plagued other societies so that they would not be transmitted, by example, to the nation to which he was sent. The True Lord knows through His eternal knowledge that His creation will use the capacity for thinking and innovation with which He has endowed them to investigate the universe and innovate means of communication, and turn the world into a single village. When this happens, whatever happens in the East will immediately be known in the West. Further, social and political ailments will be spread in the world. Hence, there will be a need to send a single Prophet who can deal with the totality of ailments and problems the world suffers; this was the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the seal of all prophets.

The True Lord aptly uses the verb 'related' in the context of telling us about the history of prophets for a good a reason. It indicates that the Prophet of Allah peace and blessings be upon him has nothing to do with the details of these stories; rather, the events involved in every prophet's story are put forward in context as they happened. Further, Allah eternally knows that His creation will innovate the art of storytelling.

It is quite peculiar that people call it the art of storytelling. The novelist often composes imaginary tales that do not have anything to do with reality. In real history writing, its authors add elements from their imagination to the actual events upon the assumption that these are the requirements of perfecting the art of storytelling. They thus lose sight of honest reporting. For this reason, the True Lord explains to us that the stories of the prophets besides all other stories in the Quran are all true, real and actually happened.

The stories of the Quran relate to us true events, as reported by the True Lord, not any of the creation. There is indeed a difference between the confidence one may have in the narrative of the True Lord Who only relates stories to His creation to bid them to stick to His path, and the confidence one may have in a narrative related by any of Allah's creation for any purpose, whether it is entertainment or anything else. Most of the stories written by man abound with things made up by human imagination like the novels of Georgie Zeidan about Islam and the prophets. When he was asked why He added things from his imagination to the actual stories, he answered in the traditional way and said, 'I did so to serve the plot of the stories.'

Accordingly, we must distinguish between the narratives relayed to us by fellow humans and those put forward by the True Lord. We must always keep this distinction in mind so that no one may ever dare to add something from his imagination to a narrative conveyed to us in the Quran. If this happens, someone may one day have the audacity to say that narratives are the same and that nothing sets apart the one found in the Quran from any others. The Quran is not written by an author; it is rather, the speech of the Sublime Creator, Who relates past stories to teach and guide us to the righteous path. We should always heed the fact that Allah eternally knows what happens and will happen in His universe. He said: 'We relate to you, [O Muhammad], the best of stories in what We have revealed to you of this Quran although you were, before it, among the unaware.' (Yusuf: 3)

Allah related the best of stories in the Quran to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because he is the one who will deal with all mankind including the nations to whom prior prophets were sent. In so far as this is the task of the Prophet Muhammad, Allah informed and explained to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his nation the story of every prophet with his nation, and the key events that happened during his life including the ailments of that society. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him —as we know— and his nation after him are tasked with preaching the path of Allah to all mankind. Hence, they must be aware of the truth about the prior prophets and their respective societies. Allah says: 'We relate to you, [O Muhammad], the best of stories in what We have revealed to you of this Quran although you were, before it, among the unaware.' (Yusuf: 3)

Accordingly, those stories inform of the undertaking of every prophet. Historiography—as we know—is connecting events with the times when they happened. This may assume different forms. We may focus on the events and then mention the people who were involved in these historical events. Alternatively, we can write the history of a specific period by talking about the key figures who lived in that period and then mention the main events that took place in their lives. The word biography indicates a specific person is the centre of the story and the main events that occurred around him. In contrast, when we make a certain event the centre of the story, the focus is primarily directed to the event with less focus on the people involved in it.

Here is a good example; when we write the history of Al-Hijra, this event is the centre. In this wake, we talk about how the Prophet Muhammad travelled with Abu Bakr,’Umar ibn Al-Khattab and other Companions Allah be pleased with them imigrated with them. The event of imigration from Mecca to Medina and its details constitute the focus of all the historical narratives about Al-Hijra.

By contrast, when we write the biography of a specific person, like the biography of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, the life of the Prophet Muhammad constitutes the centre of attention and discussions because we are primarily concerned with relating the events of his life.

The same holds for the stories of the prophets the Quran relates. They are the centre of the narrative, and then the events they lived through are mentioned. The messages sent from the heavens to mankind to relay to them the path of Allah consist of two main parts. Firstly, a theoretical part which The True Lord wants to impart to His creation through His Prophets. This part often consists in a body of knowledge that they should learn. Secondly, any message always has a practical side. The True Lord wants His servants to act and live their lives in accordance with the knowledge He imparts to them. Indeed, acquiring divine knowledge is not a luxury; rather, it is a responsibility to apply what one learns by adhering to the set of do’s and don’ts which Allah enacted. If one was only required to know what Allah wants to impart him without having to do anything based on such knowledge, the quest of life would be rather easy.

When the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked the disbelievers of Quraysh to profess that there is no god worthy of worship but Allah, they resisted because they knew that such a profession was not a mere verbal utterance. They knew well that such a profession involves a set of requirements. They also knew that if they make such a statement; they would be acknowledging that no one is entitled to absolute mastery or lordship except Allah. This in turn implies that all servants of Allah would be equal, the thing which they would never accept.

Every divine book revealed from the heavens was intended to be learnt and then acted upon. This means that acquiring divine knowledge necessarily implies acting upon it; for knowledge is worthless if it is not transformed into action. Every prophet was required to convey to his people the rulings of Allah and explain to them that they are required to live their lives per these rulings. Significantly, divine rulings always fall within the realm of human capability.

Allah tells the story of previous prophets so that we may learn that some people learnt and acted upon what they learnt. Indeed, actual stories give us an illustration of the practical application of divine knowledge. For this reason, the True Lord relayed to us the story of the prophets in the Quran. For instance, Allah told us the story of Nuh (Noah) when Allah commanded him to build a ship, and how his people used to ridicule him for executing the command of Allah. Allah also tells us about how He then commanded Nuh (Noah) to take on the ark he built, a pair of each kind of animal, one of each sex. The True Lord says: ‘And he constructed the ship, and whenever an assembly of the eminent of his people passed by him, they ridiculed him. He said, "If you ridicule us, then we will ridicule you just as you ridicule. And you are going to know who will get a punishment that will disgrace him on earth and upon whom will descend an enduring punishment in the Hereafter." So, it was, until when Our command came and water came forth from the valley, We said, "Load upon the ship of each creature, a male and a female, and your family, except those about whom the word has preceded, and include whoever has believed." But none had believed with him, except a few.’ (Hud: 38-40)

Nuh (Noah) should not have overlooked the saying of the True Lord: ‘…except those about whom the word has preceded.’ He should have realized that it indicated that some of his family will not believe. However, ‘Noah called to his son who was apart from them, ‘O my son, come aboard with us and be not with the disbelievers.' (Hud: 42) The response was: '[But] he said, "I will take refuge on a mountain to protect me from the water.' (Hud: 43) So, Nuh (Noah) replied: 'There is no protector today from the decree of Allah, except for whom He gives mercy.' (Hud: 43) After the son of Nuh (Noah) drowned and the water sank into the earth, Nuh (Noah) invoked Allah and said: 'My Lord, indeed my son is of my family; and indeed, Your promise is true; and You are the most just of judges!' (Hud: 45)

This is one aspect from Nuh's (Noah's) story by which the True Lord informs us about those who rightly deserve to be considered by the children of the prophets. Allah's messages are essentially a paths and way of life; whoever adheres to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him deserves to be from his lineage but whoever fails to follow him does not deserve such an honour. For this reason, the True Lord responded to Nuh (Noah): '…he was not one of your family.' (Hud: 46). Only those who follow the path of the prophets deserve to be related to them. The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him indicated to us this principle when he said about Salman Al-Farisi Allah be pleased with him 'Salman is a member of the house of the Prophet.'(1)

The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say that Salman is an Arab or that he is a Muslim. He rather said that he is a member of the house of the Prophet. In the same manner, but in a different sense, the True Lord explained to Nuh (Noah) in the context of talking about his son: 'Indeed he is not of your family; indeed, he is one whose work was other than righteous, so ask Me not for that about which you have no knowledge.' (Hud: 46)

Some people put forward erroneous interpretations of the meaning of 'he was not of your family.' They said that that the mother of Nuh's (Noah's) son was the one who fornicated. To those who make such a claim, I say, ask your Lord for forgiveness and consider well the underlying fundamentals of the ruling: 'Indeed he is not of your family; indeed, he is one whose work was other than righteous, so ask Me not for that about which you have no knowledge.' (Hud: 46)

Accordingly, the basis of ascribing the fatherhood of any of the prophets to anyone is not blood lineage, marriage or descent; it is rather the deeds of the latter and their degree of conformity to the path preached by the relevant prophet. Those who slurred the wife of Nuh (Noah) need to ask Allah for forgiveness. The True Lord is far removed from deceiving His prophet. Even if we assume that the mother of Nuh's (Noah's) son fornicated –God forbid–, what is the fault of the son? He would have nothing to do with his mother's sin. But the saying of Allah: '…he is [one whose] work was other than righteous…', indicates that only those who act upon the teachings and divine path imparted by the prophets merit the honour of being their sons.

(1) [Al-Hakim and Al-Tabarani]

Let us consider the saying of the Prophet of Allah peace and blessings be upon him to his tribe; Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him related when the verse: 'And warn, [O Muhammad], your closest kindred' (ash-Shu'ara': 214) was revealed, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him started to tell the tribes of Quraysh one by one saying, 'O tribe such and such, spare yourself from the fire.' He then went to Fatima and said, 'O Fatima, daughter of Muhammad, spare yourself the fire; I do not have anything for you in respect to Allah except for the fact that you have ties of kinship.'(1)

Allah gives examples of wives. He says: 'Allah presents an example of those who disbelieved: the wife of Noah and the wife of Lot. They were under two of Our righteous servants but betrayed them, so those prophets did not avail them from Allah at all, and it was said, 'Enter the Fire with those who enter.' (at-Tahrim: 10)

Betrayal in the context of the foregoing verse is not infidelity. It is rather used to indicate that even a prophet cannot force his wife to have faith in Allah. Everyone is absolutely free to embrace any creed he wills. Thus, no man has the right to force or impel his wife in any matter related to her faith, even if he claims to be divine. For instance, the True Lord says the following about the wife of the Pharaoh: 'And Allah presents an example of those who believed; the wife of Pharaoh, when she said, 'My Lord, build for me near You a house in Paradise and save me from Pharaoh and his deeds and save me from the wrongdoing people.' (at-Tahrim: 11)

These glimpses demonstrate that everyone can voluntarily choose and will be judged for his faith irrespective of his kinsfolk or spouses. Nuh's (Noah's) son was the one whose conduct was unrighteous. This is shown by the saying of the True Lord: '…he is one whose work was other than righteous.' Allah thus did not mention the son of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him in person. He mentioned his conduct.

(1) [Al-Bukhari, Muslim, An-Nisa`i, Ahmad and At-Tirmadhi]

Every prophet has a story that the Quran relays so that the path of Allah would become clear in people's minds. Allah uses the stories of the best of humans, whom He chose to guide humanity as found in the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Allah tested him at the beginning of his life with the daunting experience of being thrown in a fire. At that time, Ibrahim (Abraham) was a young man full of hope. So how did Ibrahim (Abraham) react?

The True Lord willed to redeem Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him from the fire. However, Allah let the disbelievers get a hold of him and threw him in the fire. He did not command the heavens to rain to extinguish the fire. All of this was intended so that Allah would establish an indisputable proof of His existence, and so that Allah's plot against those disbelievers would be tight. Abraham was not capable of escaping from them; further no rain fell. On the contrary, the fire continued to grow and glow. However, Allah ordered the fire not to burn Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when he was thrown in it.

It has been related by 'Ubay ibn Ka`b Allah be pleased with him that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said that when they tied Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him to throw him in the fire, he said: "There is no god worthy of worship but You, Allah, Lord of all things; may all exaltation and praise be unto you; no one shares Your absolute dominion over everything. They then put Ibrahim (Abraham) in a ballista and threw him from afar into the fire. Gabriel peace be upon him then received him and said, 'O Ibrahim (Abraham), do you need me to do anything for you?' So, Ibrahim (Abraham) answered, 'I do not need anything from you.' So, Gabriel said, 'Then ask your Lord for whatever you need.' So, Abraham said, 'It suffices that He is aware of my status. Allah then ordered the fire to cool and be a source of peace for Ibrahim (Abraham).'(1)

(1) Quoted from (At-Tafsir) of Al-Qurtubi… It was also mentioned by Ibn Kathir in his (Tafsir) and Az-Zamkhshar in (Al-Kashshaf).

This dispelled the plot of those who conspired against Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and infuriated them. Thus, Allah gives us examples from the lives of early prophets in the Quran so that we may learn and benefit from them. Because we learn from the experiences of prior prophets in forging the path of our lives, we will become the best nation ever.

The True Lord tested Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him at the beginning of his life. He also tested him towards the end of his life through his son. Ibrahim (Abraham) had succeeded in the first test, which was the most important thing for him at that time; but when one gets older he starts to dedicate his life to his offspring.

Allah chose to test Ibrahim (Abraham) through his son towards the end of his life. But Allah did not tell Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him that his son would die, and that he had to endure this loss. Further, He did not tell him that someone will slay his son. Rather, Allah commanded Ibrahim (Abraham) to slay his son, and this is the ultimate form of trial. In addition, Allah did not reveal this command to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him through direct revelation. He did not impart this command to his heart, nor communicated it to him through a veil or through an angel. Instead, Allah communicated His command to Ibrahim (Abraham) through a dream: ‘O my son! I have seen in a dream that I am slaughtering you (offer you in sacrifice to Allah).’ (as-Saffat: 102) Thus, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him told his son about the command of Allah to him as he exactly saw it in his dream; and we know that the dreams of the prophets are all true.

Someone may say, ‘Why did Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him not tell his father that this was just a dream? Further, why did Ibrahim (Abraham) not abruptly slay his son without telling him about the dream’?

We say, it is due to Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) peace be upon him concern, fear and great care for his son that he wanted him to be rewarded for getting killed and sacrificing his life for the cause of abiding by Allah’s Command. Thus, Abraham said: ‘O my son! I have seen in a dream that I am slaughtering you (offer you in sacrifice to Allah).’ (as-Saffat: 102) Ismail (Ishmael) answered peace be upon him: ‘O my father, do as you are commanded. You will find me, if Allah wills, of the steadfast.’ (as-Saffat: 102)

Notice that Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him did not ask his father to slay him but instead asked him to do what he was commanded. This demonstrates that Ismail (Ishmael) understood that it was not his father who wanted to slay him; it was rather Allah Who commanded his father to slay him. Further, had Ibrahim (Abraham) abruptly attacked Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon them, he would have become furious and his heart would have been filled with hatred towards his father to the extent that he could have attacked him. Thus, Ibrahim's (Abraham's) care and pity for his son made him explicitly tell him that the command to slay him was decreed from the heavens. Ibrahim (Abraham) did thus as much as any other tries to ease things for his son.

However, Allah manifests His care for His creation by rewarding them after death. For this reason, Ibrahim (Abraham) did not want to deprive Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon them, of the reward Allah bestows upon those who abide by His commands. Thus, both Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon them, had the honour of obeying Allah's Commands. In this vein, we can easily see that Ibrahim's (Abraham's) course of action reflects his utmost care for Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon them in this world and in the hereafter. This teaches us that the True Lord only wants us to abide by the rulings of Allah and the fate He decrees. The True Lord says: 'And when they had both submitted and he put him down upon his forehead.' (as-Saffat: 103)

This is the honour one wins for obeying Allah's Commands. At the outset, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him abided by the command of Allah. He then discussed the matter with his son who in turn chose to submit to the will of Allah. Both won the honour of submitting to the will of Allah and abiding by his commands. Both succeeded in the divine test. The True Lord says: 'We called to him, "O Abraham, you have fulfilled the vision." Indeed, We thus reward the doers of good.' (as-Saffat: 104-105)

The True Lord spared both Ibrahim (Abraham) and his son peace be upon them, the difficulty of going through the slaying process. For this reason, we always say that Allah does not relieve anyone of something he enacted upon him unless he accepts Allah's will. Those who continue to suffer what Allah decreed on them are the ones who do not accept it. If Allah decree that someone suffers an illness, and that person accepts Allah's decree and considers his endurance of it a proof of his faith, Allah will relieve his suffering. Indeed, people say that in health one enjoys a bounty from Allah; but in sickness one lives in the company of Allah.

Abu Hurayrah related that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘On the Day of Judgment, Allah Glorified and Exalted will say to some of His servants, “I was sick and you never visited Me.” So, His servants would answer, ‘But how would You, Lord of everything, suffer any sickness?” Allah would then say, “Were you not aware that my servant was sick and you did not visit him? Did you not know that, had you visited him, you would have found me there?”’(1)

Who dares dispense with the company of Allah? If every patient knows that he is in the company of Allah while he is sick, he would be shy to cry out of pain or complain about it. However, we do not ask patients or those who are sick to do so. We only ask them to turn to Allah and supplicate to Him by saying, ‘O my Lord I am willing to endure any suffering or pain for the sake of meriting Your forgiveness.’

The True Lord says: ‘And when they had both submitted and he put him down upon his forehead.’ (as-Saffat: 103). This saying indicates that Allah’s decree is never relieved unless the one upon whom it has been enacted accepts and submits to it. If we see someone suffering from something that Allah decreed, we must infer that this person never accepted the ruling of Allah. However, Allah did not only relieve Ibrahim (Abraham) of obeying His command to slay his son and ransom Ismail (Ishmael) with a tremendous sacrifice, but He also foretold Ibrahim (Abraham) the news that he would have a new-born named Ishaq (Isaac). ‘And we gave him good tidings of Isaac, a prophet from among the righteous.’ (as-Saffat: 112)

Now let us consider another view from the Quran that gives us the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him so that we may further learn of Allah’s reward for those who adhere to the path of faith. The events we are about to discuss took place at the time when Musa (Moses) was being prepared for receiving Allah’s message.

(1) [Muslim]

Musa (Moses) was on his way to Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon them; at that time, he had not yet received the message of Allah. This shows that Musa (Moses) had a natural inclination to faith and that Allah had carefully fashioned and prepared him for the reception of His message. Reaching the well of Madyan, he found two girls trying to keep their cattle away from the water. The Quran gives us an account of the conversation that took place between Musa (Moses) and the two girls in their first encounter: ‘And when he came to the well of Madyan, he found there a crowd of people watering their flocks. And he found aside from them, two women driving back their flocks. He said, "What is your circumstance?" They said, "We do not water until the shepherds dispatch their flocks; and our father is an old man.’ (al-Qasas: 23)

The saying of the two women, ‘We do not water until the shepherds dispatch their flocks; and our father is an old man’ (al-Qasas: 23) indicates the principles and values on which they were brought up. They only went out of their house because their father was a very old man. Accordingly, even though they went out to work out of necessity, none of the two women forgot who they are, and that she must ensure not to trespass certain behavioural norms. They thus said, ‘We do not water until the shepherds dispatch their flocks…’ (al-Qasas: 23). This means that they would water their animals after the crowd around the well walked away. The daughters of Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him only acted as far as necessity required. They did not take such necessity as a pretext to violate the norms and restrictions to which they should adhere as females and thus run the risk of getting stuck in the crowd of men around the well. So, what did Musa (Moses) peace be upon him do? He watered the animals on their behalf.

Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had a strong faith-inspired resolution even before he became a prophet. The True Lord explains to us this point so that no one would wonder, ‘How can I be like a prophet commissioned by Allah’?

The unique faith-inspired resolution depicted by this episode from the life of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him ought to motivate every believer to adopt the same attitude. If a believer sees a woman going out of her house for any purpose, he should hasten to take care of her needs until she returns to her house without taking advantage of the situation in a way which contradicts the proper behaviour of any true believer. If this faith-inspired resolution were to spread among us, not a single woman would be cast on the street except for a pressing necessity. In addition, this part from the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him showed us the keenness every woman should have to protect herself and preserve her dignity. In this respect, one of them said to her father Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him after he invited Musa (Moses) to reward him: ‘One of the women said, "O my father, hire him. Indeed, the best one you can hire is the strong and the trustworthy.’ (al-Qasas: 26)

This statement indicates that no woman may go alone outside her house for a long time or beyond a certain distance. However, being wise, Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him realized that he could not hire a strange man and let him live among his two daughters. Thus, his faith led him to the right solution; he called upon Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and told him: ‘He said, ‘Indeed, I wish to wed you one of my two daughters, on the condition that you serve me for eight years.’ (al-Qasas: 27) In such a case, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him would be married to one of the girls and would thus be prohibited to marry the other.

We need to carefully heed these stories so that we may learn how we can be religiously cautious in a constant manner. Now let us consider another aspect from the life of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when the True Lord invited him to become a prophet. Let us consider how he received this mission with a pure and devoted soul. Musa (Moses), was so keen to deliver Allah’s message in full that he asked the True Lord to send with him his brother Harun (Aaron). ‘And my brother Harun (Aaron) is more fluent than me in tongue, so send him with me as support, verifying me. Indeed, I fear that they will deny me.’ (al-Qasas: 34)

Musa (Moses) recommended Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them to participate with him in delivering the message of Allah because he was keen to succeed in his task. He knew that delivering the message of Allah required eloquence and articulation and he was worried that the lisping in pronunciation he used to suffer because of a piece of amber that burnt his tongue when he was young, might make him falter. Interestingly, he did not hesitate to invoke the help of his brother. This is in diametrical contrast with contemporary rulers who are often afraid to appoint competent prime ministers or deputies who have better capabilities than they do, lest they should eclipse them.

These scenes that the Quran depict teach us a lot. The True Lord wanted to prove to the followers of Muhammad the precision of the path it prescribed. Because Allah has revealed to us a path to learn, He requires us to implement it in our lives. Further, the requirement to apply the path of Allah is not something new; it is found in the stories of all the prophets who learnt the path of Allah and applied it in their lives. The biggest problem any recipient of the path of Allah may slip into is to learn it and yet fail to act upon it.

Recently a lot of people argued that religious education at schools does not help improve the behaviour of the students. To those who make such allegations we say: you do not understand the nature of religious education. It is not like teaching geography or geometry or any other science. To excel in geometry, a student needs to learn how to use the given to make correct inferences; this is the requirement for excellence in the field of geometry. However, geometrical theories do not require man to adjust his behaviour in life. It does not give any practical guidance or sets of do's and don'ts.

Geometrical theories are separate from the lives of the students. By contrast, when a student learns his religion, he learns to obey Allah's Commands and avoid his prohibitions. The challenge involved in achieving religious excellence thus consists in applying what one learns. If a student notices that those who teach him the religious rulings, whether at home or at school, hardly ever apply or adhere to these rulings, he will fail to properly learn his religion. For instance, a student may learn that lying is prohibited by Allah, but if this student finds that lying is quite widespread among those who teach him in the society, he will lie to others. Similarly, a student may learn that praying is the key pillar of Islam, and that it ought to safeguard every Muslim against committing sins and bad deeds; yet, if this student notices that no one around him prays or that prayers do not safeguard those who perform them against committing sins that Allah prohibited, he will not care to pray regularly. Thus, the failure of religious education to fulfil its purpose does not stem from the absence of good teachers; it is rather due to the absence of an exemplary practical application of the teachings of religion.

Now let us return to our discussion to the stories of the Quran. These stories were put forward to illustrate to us the practical application of the theoretical teachings of religion by demonstrating how the prophets of Allah implemented it in their own lives. You, followers of Muhammad, are not inferior to any of the preceding nations. On the contrary, you are the best nation ever. Accordingly, you must learn from and avail yourselves of the good examples that earlier nations who received Allah's messages passed on to you.

This is the meaning of the saying of the True Lord: 'and (We sent) messengers about whom We have related (their stories) to you before and messengers about whom We have not related to you. And Allah spoke to Musa (Moses) with (direct) speech.' (an-Nisa': 164) The Quran has relayed to us the main events that took place in the lives of the prophets so that we may learn the wisdom underlying them.

Scholars distinguish between a prophet and a messenger. Some of them argued that every messenger is by default a prophet but not vice versa. To those who maintain this view we say: if we carefully consider the linguistic sense of both words along with their terminological use, we will be comforted: The Quran says: 'And We did not send before you any messenger or prophet.' (al-Hajj: 52)

Thus, both prophets and messengers are sent by Allah. However, Allah sends a messenger to preach rulings and beliefs that were not revealed in earlier messages. By contrast, prophets are sent to implement what was revealed in earlier messages. Accordingly, Allah sends prophets to give through their lives a practical example of applying the messages of Allah. Accordingly, prophets only apply and adhere to the codes of the divine messages that preceded them; they do not bring forth any new divine laws. On the other hand, Allah sends messengers to deliver new laws and decrees to mankind and act upon them. This is the extra mission a messenger undertakes.

The True Lord sent the messengers to deliver His laws and apply them. But Allah sent the prophets to give an example of proper conduct; prophets apply what the law the messenger prior to them put forth and preached. Thus, prophets are often sent to nations that have a long history of defying and arguing with messengers.

Obstinacy made the children of Israel take pride in being the nation to whom the greatest number of prophets were sent. While this is true, we need to bear in mind that prophets and messengers are often sent to cure people from the ailments they suffer. Similarly, if someone goes to physicians frequently, this means that they suffered from several diseases. The same holds for the children of Israel; they suffered from a lot of ailments. Accordingly, the fact that the greatest number of messengers were sent to them is not an exaltation of their status as much as it is an indication of the numerous problems that plagued their vision and society.

Both the messengers and the prophets are sent by Allah. The difference between them consists in the fact that the messengers of Allah deliver new laws from the heavens, whereas the prophets only apply the laws the messengers had already delivered before them. So, technically speaking, a messenger is the one to whom a divine law is revealed to both deliver to the people and practically apply it among them. The True Lord then appends the verse by His saying: ‘And Allah spoke to Moses with [direct] speech.’ (an-Nisa’: 165) Undoubtedly Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was among the prophets to whom the following saying of the True Lord refers, ‘We have inspired.’ Someone may wonder: why did Allah specify Musa (Moses) by saying: ‘And Allah spoke to Moses with [direct] speech.’ (an-Nisa’: 165)

Here we need to note that the revelation whereby Allah communicates with his prophets is the revelation in the technical sense of Islamic law. This is different from the above explained generic meaning of revelation in language. The True Lord had explained the way whereby He addressed His selected prophets to deliver their message to His creation: ‘And it is not for any human being that Allah should speak to him except by revelation, or from behind a partition or that He sends a messenger to reveal, by His permission, what He wills. Indeed, He is Most High and Wise.’ (ash-Shura: 51)

The True Lord communicates with the prophets either through inspiration, or from behind a veil or by sending a messenger like the angel Gabriel peace be upon him. If we ponder over this verse, we will realize that there are three kinds of divine revelation: a special inspiration, a speech from behind a veil or a direct messenger sent by Allah. These three forms of communication are the kinds of revelation.

This means that Allah would never speak to a human being except through sudden inspiration, or from behind a veil, which is a divine speech that His prophets used to hear without seeing the one saying it, namely, Allah. Finally, revelation through a messenger refers to the descent of Gabriel peace be upon him to communicate Allah's revelation to His prophets.

The saying of the True Lord: 'And Allah spoke to Moses with [direct] speech' (an-Nisa': 165) indicates that Allah revealed to Musa (Moses) His message in two ways. First, Allah revealed to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him His message in the same way in which He communicated His revelation to all others prophets. Second, Allah revealed His message to Musa (Moses) in a special way, namely, through a speech from behind a veil in the sacred valley.

The saying of the True Lord tukaliman (spoke) is the root of the Arabic word kallam in the verse under consideration. It makes us wonder why Allah used the root of the word? The reason is that revelation in general is a speech. Thus, secret inspiration, speaking from behind a veil as well as sending a messenger are all forms of the speech of Allah. Speech is what conveys the intention of the speaker to the one he addresses; the evidence is that Allah called the three forms of revelation kalam. The secrecy of revelation refers to the secret way of conveying it. This means that no one hears the revelation except the messenger. Further, Allah may reveal His message to His messenger by inspiring it to his heart. Both methods fulfil the function of speech since its purpose, as we have explained above, is to convey the intent of the interlocutor or speaker to the one he addresses.

The verb 'spoke' indicates that Allah spoke directly with Moses, and that His speech was overt rather than covert. Further, this indicates that the True Lord did not send any messenger to Moses to deliver to him His revelation. Accordingly, 'And Allah spoke to Moses with [direct] speech' (an-Nisa': 165) draws our attention to the fact that His revelation to Moses was not of the kind that He explained in His saying: 'And it is not for any human being that Allah should speak to him except by revelation or from behind a partition or that He sends a messenger.' (ash-Shura: 51) Therefore, Allah said: 'And Allah spoke to Moses with [direct] speech.' (an-Nisa': 165)

Scholars asked themselves a rational question: how could Allah speak then? To those scholars we say: if a qualification that is used to described Allah's creation is used to describe Him, it needs be understood considering Allah's saying: '[but] there is nothing like unto Him.' (ash-Shura: 11) We thus need to bear in mind that existence is attributed to both Allah and man, the existence of man is different from that of Allah. Similarly, though knowledge is attributed to both Allah and man, the knowledge of Allah is different from the knowledge of man. Further, though capability is attributed to both Allah and man, the capability of Allah is different from the capability of man. Finally, though Allah says that He is established on His throne and a human being may say that he is established on his chair, the two cases are incomparably different. Thus, if an attribute that qualifies man is used to qualify Allah, the latter must be understood considering Allah's saying: '[but] there is nothing like unto Him.' (ash-Shura: 11) If scholars adhere to this principle, all disagreement among them regarding the attributes of Allah will come to an end.

Accordingly, while the True Lord says that He has two hands and a face, no one should think that the hand of Allah is like a human hand. Rather attributing a hand to Allah should be understood considering Allah's saying: '[but] there is nothing like unto Him.' (ash-Shura: 11) The same holds for Allah's face. As long as we agree that all of Allah's attributes should be understood in the light of the above verse, there is no need for scholars to ferociously fight with each other over the characterization of these attributes. Further there is no need for these scholars to fight over the interpretation of these attributes; they should not thus split into two groups: a group that calls for interpreting the attributes of Allah and another that calls for dogmatically accepting them without any interpretation. The latter argues that if Allah says that He has a hand, we should just accept what He says without any attempt on our part to interpret His statement. To the scholars who call for abstaining from interpreting the attributes of Allah, we say: why do not you say that attributing a hand to Allah falls within the realm of His saying: '[but] there is nothing like unto Him.' (ash-Shura: 11)

Indeed, because we learnt through our experience in this world that the same thing or attribute may be ascribed differently to different people, we must acknowledge that Allah and whatever is attributed to Him is incomparable to anything we know.

For instance, someone may receive an invitation to dine with a mayor of a certain village. The latter may then serve the former an assortment of foods that reflects the status of the village and its leader. The same person may then receive an invitation to dine with a governor of a city; this governor may serve this man an assortment of foods that again reflects the status of the city and its leaders. Finally, the same person may receive an invitation to dine with the president of his country; the former will similarly serve him an assortment of food that reflects the status of the country and its president. Hence while the same person was invited to dine three times, the level and quality of the foods the mayor may serve him is different from that the governor may serve him; yet, both are different from what the president of the country may serve him. If it is thus the case that a single thing may be done in different ways by different humans based on their status and level of distinction, would not it be only logical to assert that the Creator and anything attributed to Him has an incomparable status?!

The True Lord told us that He spoke with Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when he was in the valley and sent him a fire to attract his attention. The True Lord says: ‘Indeed, I am your Lord, so remove your sandals. Indeed, you are in the sacred valley of Tuwa. And I have chosen you, so listen to what is revealed to you. Indeed, I am Allah. There is no deity except Me, so worship Me and establish prayer for My remembrance. Indeed, the Hour is coming - I almost conceal it - so that every soul may be recompensed per that for which it strives. So, do not let one avert you from it who does not believe in it and follows his desire, for you then would perish.’ (Ta Ha: 12-16)

The True Lord said all this to him; further, Allah initiated the speech. Subsequently, Musa (Moses) received the revelation in the same way other prophets did.

Revelation was conveyed to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him through inspiration, speech from behind a veil and through a messenger.

A good example of revelation through inspiration is the Qudsi Hadith, as well as the set of laws and decrees the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him left for us. A good example of revelation through speech from behind a veil is the enactment of prayers. The prayers were not enacted through Gabriel peace be upon him; rather Allah directly enacted praying.

Here, I do not want to plunge into a vain discussion regarding whether the True Lord spoke with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and the latter heard Him when He enacted prayers, or whether the Prophet peace be upon him saw Allah when He was addressing him or not. It is needless to over investigate issues that Allah did not teach us about. Indeed, courtesy with Allah requires us to avoid any such discussions or investigations. Allah said: 'And do not pursue that of which you have no knowledge.' (al-Isra': 36)

As for the Quran, it was completely revealed through the messenger of the angels, Gabriel peace be upon him. No part of the Quran was revealed through inspiration; only Qudsi Hadith was inspired. The reason is that one may think that inspiration is thought induced in him by a genie or a devil or such thing. Thus, all the verses of the Quran were revealed through Gabriel. Further, every time the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him received revelation from Gabriel, his body used to undergo certain physical and chemical changes so that he would not doubt that Gabriel was the one speaking. Allah wanted the Quran to be revealed in an absolute way that no one may doubt.

Upon receiving revelation through Gabriel, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him used to hear a sound like the jingle of a bell. Subsequently, the forehead of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would soak in sweat, and his body would become heavier to the extent if he was on the back of riding animal, the animal would kneel and bend down until its stomach touches the ground. Also, if the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was leaning his thigh on the thigh of one of the Companions, the latter would feel that his thigh is about to collapse. All these were material, cosmic signs that no one could doubt.

For this reason, when some scholars literally interpreted the following saying of Allah, they argued that if the True Lord had not sent a prophet, people would have been justified in saying: 'And if We had destroyed them with a punishment before him, they would have said, "Our Lord, why did

You not send to us a messenger so we could have followed Your verses before we were humiliated and disgraced?"' (Ta Ha: 134)

We say to those scholars, if you properly examine this verse, you will realize that you disagree on an issue upon which no disagreement should have occurred. Does man know what Allah requires of him using reason alone? Or is reason only capable of leading man to the existence of a higher power that created and governs the universe? But can rational thought lead man to the name of this power or its requirements? Can reason identify the reward this power has prepared for those who follow the path of life it has set and the punishment it prepared for those who failed to do so? Reason cannot solve any of these questions. Reason can indeed furnish a proof of the existence of supreme power that created, organized and governed, but transcends this universe. However, a messenger is required to inform people of the name of this power and deliver to them the requirements of the path prescribed by this power and the decreed laws. There should thus be no contradiction between the role of reason and that of the prophets in guiding man to the existence and the worship of Allah.

Despite the fact there is no such contradiction, people are prone to acknowledge the importance of reason and rational knowledge more than they acknowledge the importance of prophecy and the kind knowledge it conveys. How was man capable of discovering electricity? No one does not know or would deny that human reason is the faculty that seeks to unveil Allah's secrets in the universe and enables man to achieve useful discoveries and inventions. If you ask anyone who is the founder of the theory of relativity, everyone will tell you Einstein. If you also ask anyone who is the first one who discovered gravity, everyone will immediately tell you Isaac Newton. We learn by heart almost all the names of the key inventors and discoverers. Do you know the name of the one who invented the way to generate electric power which we use to run factories, light our houses and made the generation of electricity a widespread industry with a wide range of products that suits all financial capabilities?

But by Allah, how come you know the name of the inventor of electric generators and electric bulbs but remain ignorant of the name of the Creator of the sun that illuminates half the earth every 12 hours. No one has claimed to be the manufacturer of the sun even though we know the inventors of almost every innovation in the universe. The bulb, for example, no matter how big it is, only illuminates a small perimeter; beyond the range of this perimeter, the light fades away and darkness prevails. This is nothing compared to the sun that illuminates half the terrestrial sphere every 12 hours.

The creation of the sun required a capability and wisdom proportional to its creation. Further, the sun does not have a glass cover that can be changed if it breaks as is the case with electric bulbs. Accordingly, human reason had to infer that a Creator must have fashioned all the beings in the universe and that this Creator cannot have renounced His Right of creating these wonderful beings. Sometimes we come across people who claim to the possession of something they do not actually own. But if the Creator informs through His messengers peace be upon them that He has created the universe and no one objected to Him, no one should wonder whether He is the Creator of these beings or not. He is their Creator until someone objects to that.

The role to be played by reason is to discover the power that creates and governs the universe; however, this role does not dispense or do away with the important role that the messengers of Allah play. Reason, however, can lead one to have faith in a supreme and indefinite power which is great enough to create a universe of such a great and wide scale before mankind even came to being. However, reason can never identify the requirements of that power whether in the form of commandments or prohibitions. Further, it does not know what rewards this power promises those who do good things in their lives and what punishment it has prepared for those who do bad deeds; for this reason, it was necessary to send messengers to mankind to inform them of the divine commands.

Accordingly, the proof of the existence of Allah Glorified is He evolves in two phases. The first phase is undertaken through believing in a supreme and indefinite power. The second phase is fulfilled through the role of the messengers of Allah Glorified is He who informed people of His Names, Attributes, requirements, reward and punishment. Thus, scholars should agree on the role of reason and that of prophets as there is no necessity for disagreement.

I am calling for this so that those who are always fishing for vulnerable points to attack the religion of Allah Glorified is He would not keep in doing that. Let me also add that scholars should find a common ground to agree on instead of confusing people through their disagreement. Simply, the messenger of Allah Glorified is He is the authority on issues with which reason has nothing to do.

Historically, we know that the biggest problem of philosophy is that it had set a narrow scope for searching. In the past, philosophy used to be the mother of all sciences; for instance, geometry was a branch of philosophy and so was mathematics. The same used to apply to natural sciences like chemistry, physics and the origin of languages.

However, when empirical scientists discovered that philosophers are always searching for theoretical abstractions and never focusing on applied experiments, they gave up on philosophy and established the modern empirical sciences that are separate from philosophy. Ever since, these sciences contributed numerous inventions and discoveries that have helped to make our lives easier and with which we still avail ourselves.

Nonetheless, philosophers continue to pursue their theoretical ventures and digressions and turn their back upon applied and experimental sciences. Therefore, we find no philosophical school agree with the other because they all want to know the unseen which is essentially unknowable through reason and which is only known through prophets.

I have always given an example that I tend to repeat frequently to illustrate this point. Let us assume that we are sitting in a room and the doorbell suddenly rings. We will rationally agree that someone must be at the door and that they have rung the bell. However, if we try to imagine or make surmises about the identity of the visitor, someone may say that the visitor is a man whereas another may guess that it is a woman. Further, someone may think that the one who rang the bell is a policeman, whereas another may say that they are a friend. Another may say that it is someone who came to give us glad tidings or even to warn us about something. Our surmises tend to differ because we delved into the process of imagination. Thereby, matters and questions of this sort should not be investigated by reason. Indeed, it would be more reasonable to agree that there is a visitor who rang the doorbell and then let the visitor reveal their identity and tell us their name, characteristics, and the reason for their coming. Once this happens, no disagreement may take place among us.

However, philosophers slipped into the mistake of confusing what is imaginable with what is rational. We can never identify the Name of the Creator and His Commandments through reason alone. The Creator must tell us about Himself. Indeed, since our reason leads to having faith in a supreme power that created this great universe, we must believe that such a power must tell us about itself. Thus, if a messenger comes forth to solve the riddle of the creation and tells us that the power that created the universe is called Allah Glorified is He we should follow him. Sending messengers, therefore, comforts the human soul and satisfies its desire for knowledge. Every rational person should be happy that Allah Glorified is He has sent messengers to enlighten mankind and should also yearn to hear and learn from them because they come about to solve the key riddle regarding the origin and the creation of the universe in such a precise way that has for long preoccupied the human mind. Further, messengers told us about the commandments of this power.

Messengers settle the disagreement and resolve this riddle and satisfy the desire of the human mind. For this reason, the companion `Ali ibn Abu-Taleb Allah be pleased with him was once asked, 'Did you recognise that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He because you knew your Lord? Or did you know your Lord based on what Muhammad told you?'

`Ali (who was described by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as the gate to knowledge) replied, 'If I had known my Lord based on what Muhammad taught me, I would have been more certain about Muhammad than I am about my Lord. Further, if I had known that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He because I knew my Lord, I would not have needed a messenger from Allah Glorified is He. The reality is that I had rationally recognised the existence of my Lord and then Muhammad came along and informed me of what my Lord required of me.'

Thus, `Ali Allah be pleased with him settled the matter. Reason instinctually arrives at the necessity of having faith in an indefinite power that underlies the universe. This power created it and continued to confer the livelihood upon all the creatures, sustain and support them. Afterwards, Allah’s messengers came to inform us of His Name and what He requires us to do and not to do.

Those who disagree about the great role played by reason versus that played by the messengers of Allah Glorified is He and in proving and informing mankind about the Existence of Allah may dispense with all these vain arguments. Reason alone cannot prove or inform mankind about Allah Glorified is He and His Commandments. Therefore, a messenger is needed to inform us about this power. However, someone may sophistically argue that every messenger may need another messenger to explain and verify what he said and that this will go on forever.

We must know that Allah Glorified is He has fashioned all the messengers to be infallible to undertake the task of delivering His Messages. For instance, our Prophet Muhammad ibn `Abdullah peace and blessings be upon him was able to establish an entire ummah (the followers of Islam) in twenty-three years whose goodness will remain until the Day of Judgment. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did so because he delivered to his people the Message of Allah Glorified is He to guide them to the way of doing well and avoiding evil deeds. But he peace and blessings be upon him was only capable of doing all that because Allah Glorified is He has fashioned him to be of great moral character. We thus learn that Allah Glorified is He has sent messengers to relieve the mind of the necessary task of searching for the name of the power that created the universe and its requirements.

Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

رُّسُلًا مُّبَشِّرِينَ وَمُنذِرِينَ لِئَلَّا يَكُونَ لِلنَّاسِ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ حُجَّةُۢ
بَعْدَ ٱلرُّسُلِۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَزِيزًا حَكِيمًا ﴿١٦٥﴾

They were messengers bearing good news and warning, so that mankind would have no excuse before God, once the messengers had been sent: God is almighty and all wise [165] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 165)

We know that the Arabic word al-bishara means to tell someone about a good matter that will happen in the future. By contrast, the word an-nidhara is to tell someone about a bad or evil thing that will take place in the future. Allah the Almighty is the Invincible and the All Wise Who has placed everything in proper order; why? Because His messengers were sent to promise those who do good deeds with admittance into heaven and to warn those who go astray about being doomed to the fire. So, do not think that those who disbelieved in Allah Glorified is He will be able to do anything to save themselves from His Punishment; for He is Mighty and is not in need for His creations.

We know that Allah Glorified is He does not forbid any behavior except through an explicit text. Similarly, He does set the laws that no one should violate. So, He informed us that He is Ever Exalted in Might and All Wise. His Mighty and Wisdom allowed and enabled us to know His Guidance. Next, Allah Glorified is He says:

لَّٰكِنِ ٱللَّهُ يَشْهَدُ بِمَآ أَنزَلَ إِلَيْكَ ۖ أَنزَلَهُۥ بِعِلْمِهِۦ ۖ
وَٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ يَشْهَدُونَ ۚ وَكَفَىٰ بِٱللَّهِ شَهِيدًا ﴿١٦٦﴾

But God Himself bears witness to what He has sent down to you — He sent it down with His full knowledge – the angels too bear witness, though God is sufficient witness [166] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 166)

The word lakin (but) indicates that what follows is a supplementary modification of and an addition to what preceded it. We can deduce the saying of Allah Glorified is He that He 'bears witness' indicates that what will follow is a statement made by Him. The adversaries of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him do not bear witness that He deserves to receive this Message. But Allah Glorified is He corrects what they said and explained to them that He has created man and He knows best the law of his preservation. Thus, the Path that Allah Glorified is He revealed to His messengers is the law that preserves mankind.

Even though the people of the Book(1) do not bear witness to the truth of what Allah Glorified is He has bestowed upon Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and denied what their books foretell about the arrival of the seal of all messengers and prophets, but Allah Glorified is He does bear witness to this truth and He is sufficient as a witness.

---

(1) (Jews and Christians)

Allah Glorified is He has revealed the Quran with His Knowledge and nothing, no matter how secret or small, escapes His Knowledge. Further, He has created everything and He knows—and He is the All Knowing—the laws that best fit and govern them. Per our human experience and conventions, the one who manufactures something is often the one who sets the rules of its operation and maintenance so that it may properly serve its functions. Similarly, because Allah Glorified is He created man, He has set for him the law of his preservation through His Commandments and prohibitions. For this reason, how could Allah Glorified is He who has created, not know His Own Creation, when He is the Most Subtle, the All Aware.

If a watch breaks down, we will immediately take it to a specialized technician to examine it and identify the damage that occurred to it. The same holds for the Creator of man. All absurdities and falsehood in the world are because man tries to decree laws for his own preservation beyond what Allah Glorified is He decrees in His Guidance even though man avails himself of Allah's Creation and would not claim that he created himself or any other creature.

We advise those who want to maintain themselves to let Allah Glorified is He Who has created all mankind to set for them, through His commandments and prohibitions, the law required for their preservation. If they then want to develop and pass new laws, they should do so considering the Path of Allah Glorified is He. If any defect emerges in human life, we must seek its remedy in the first law of the Creator, i.e. The Quran. Indeed, troubles often ensue from man's oblivion to the fact that he is the creation of Allah Glorified is He. Further, man always tries to set laws for himself apart from the Path set by Allah Glorified is He. These sufferings and asperities mankind suffers will come to an end once they return to the law of the Creator.

Not only does Allah Glorified is He bear witness but also the angels do because they merited the honour that one of them, namely Gabriel Allah be pleased with him delivered revelation to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. In addition, the angels record the good and bad deeds of man; further they carry what was written on the Preserved Tablet and deliver that with which they have been entrusted. However, even though the angels know a lot, Allah Glorified is He said that He is sufficient to bear witness. But why has not Allah Glorified is He said that He is sufficient to bear witness and the angels also? The reason is that Allah Glorified is He does not need the testimony of the angels to substantiate whatever He attests to.

Also, we must not seek the testimony of the angels to substantiate the testimony of Allah Glorified is He. If we do so, this would mean that we trust in the angels more than we trust in Allah Glorified is He since He alone dates a testimony of mankind and that of the angels. Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him should know that Allah Glorified is He is sufficient as a witness.

Afterward, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ وَصَدُّوا۟ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ قَدْ ضَلُّوا۟ ضَلَـٰلًۢا بَعِيدًا ﴿١٦٧﴾

Those who have disbelieved and barred others from God's path have gone far astray [167]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 167)

The result of disbelief will return only to the disbeliever; any disbeliever has the freedom to choose whether to disbelieve or to believe. And it will be more harmful if they misguide others; they went far astray and tried to misguide others. Therefore, they bear not only their burdens, but also that of those whom they have misguided in full scale.

But, how may they turn others away from the Way of Allah Glorified is He? They may do so when those who have been led astray try to keep signs of guidance from reaching people. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And those who disbelieve say, "Do not listen to this Quran and speak noisily during the recitation of it that perhaps you will overcome."' (Fussilat: 26)

Had they understood the meaning of this verse, they would not have said what was mentioned in it, namely, making noise that would keep people from hearing the Quran. Therefore, they acknowledge that the Quran guides to the righteous Path if it reaches people. If the Quran did not have such an immediate and powerful effect on people, they would not have said so. They thus conceded that they would be defeated if the Quran reached other people who are called for guidance.

If Allah Glorified is He has said that they have indeed gone astray, this would be sufficient. However, Allah Glorified is He has used the root of the verb to add strength and assertion to the sentence. This indicates that what they did was the ultimate form of going astray which is worse than going far astray.

When we consider the word ba`id (far), we know that if something is described as far, this indicates that it is quite temporally distant from its source. Similarly, if someone goes astray, the worst thing they can do is to live their entire life this way. However, if the one who goes astray tries to lead others astray, they would be trying to extend the state of being astray; for, in this case, it will extend beyond their lifetime because new generations would continue to be led astray.

In mundane terms, going astray, may, for instance, assume the form of taking a wrong path instead of a right one and losing one’s way. In this manner, the ultimate form of going astray would be losing one’s way in a desert without food and water until one dies. But the one who goes and leads others astray as well as spread misguidance in their life and after their death. They have thus prolonged the span of misguidance.

Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ وَظَلَمُواْ لَمۡ يَكُنِ ٱللَّهُ لِيَغۡفِرَ لَهُمۡ وَلَا لِيَهۡدِيَهُمۡ طَرِيقًا ١٦٨
إِلَّا طَرِيقَ جَهَنَّمَ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَآ أَبَدٗاۚ وَكَانَ ذَٰلِكَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ يَسِيرٗا ١٦٩

God will not forgive those who have disbelieved and do evil, nor will He guide them to any path [168] Eexcept that of Hell, where they will remain for everthis is easy for God [169]
(The Quran, an-Nisa’: 168 - 169)

The discourse in these verses starts with a discussion of disbelieving and wrongdoing. As for disbelieving, it means to veil the existence of the Supreme Being, while wrongdoing means to live per a human order that does not lead to any pleasure or happiness in life; whoever leads their life in such a manner wrongs themselves. Further, this human order and way of life ultimately lead those who follow it to torment in the Hereafter. The one who becomes a disbeliever is the one who veils the Existence of Allah Glorified is He and in doing so deprives themselves of the Path that Allah Glorified is He reveals to mankind in order not to go far astray. Allah Glorified is He says: '…then whoever follows my guidance, he shall not go astray nor be unhappy…' (Ta Ha: 123). In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: '…whoever follows My guidance there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve…' (al-Baqara: 38)

Those who follow whims and out of interest stick to ways and paths of life that were conjectured by humans live a miserable and harsh life. No one ought to think that those who only follow their interests would lead an infinitely comfortable and liberal life. No; those who do so may transiently satisfy their immediate desires but in the long run, they suffer a lot and live in abiding misery. Accordingly, whoever pursues this path wrongs oneself.

Someone may wonder how come they are described as they have wronged themselves. There must be someone who wronged and another party who was wronged; so, who is wronged and who is the wrongdoer? Every one of them is both the wrongdoer and the wronged. The human being is composed of several various abilities. The power of desire wants to limitlessly pursue the satisfaction of its whims. By contrast, man's values and norms restrain him and try to keep him on the righteous Path.

Those who commit disbelieving and refuse to follow the Path of Allah Glorified is He let the power of desire dominate and overrule their values and norms. Islam, came about to establish a balance among the powers of the human soul so that none of them may prevail over the other.

Allah Glorified is He will not forgive those who have disbelieved and do evil, nor will He guide them to any path except that of hell, where they will remain forever. This is the Ruling of Allah Glorified is He regarding those who deny the truth and wrong themselves. Allah Glorified is He will never forgive them and He will not guide them to any path except that which leads to hell to eternally abide therein. Next, the Almighty Allah says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ قَدۡ جَآءَكُمُ ٱلرَّسُولُ بِٱلۡحَقِّ مِن رَّبِّكُمۡ فَـَٔامِنُواْ خَيۡرٗا لَّكُمۡۚ
وَإِن تَكۡفُرُواْ فَإِنَّ لِلَّهِ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلِيمًا حَكِيمٗا ١٧٠

The Messenger has come to you [people] with the truth from your Lord, so believe – that is best for you – for even if you disbelieve, all that is in the heavens and the earth still belongs to God, and He is all knowing and all wise [170]
(The Quran, an-Nisa': 170)

After Allah Glorified is He succinctly has given us an account of the series of battles that ensued between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the Jews on the one hand and the polytheists on the other hand, Allah Glorified is He addresses all mankind to accentuate the place of the Path of Allah Glorified is He on earth. In this manner, Allah Glorified is He alerts all people that the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the synopsis of all the messages that preceded it. All mankind must, therefore, discern the value and merit of this new Faith since Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has indeed been sent with the Light and Guidance from Allah Glorified is He. Further, he has enough proof to demonstrate that he is the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and that he can guide people to the righteous Path instead of that which they are.

Before the arrival of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him people used to follow disparate doctrines, dogmas and creeds. However, since Islam came about, it proved to everyone that it supersedes all religions.

The proof furnished by Islam in support of its correctness and truth consists in its own teachings and the evidence of their validity. This proof leaves no excuse for anyone to stick to his past creed. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought forth the light that guides man to the righteous path. The arrival of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings of Allah be upon him was thus like a comprehensive process of purifying the creeds of mankind. It gave every human the chance to rid themselves of any impurities in their creed and belief, and to start a new phase of faith.

Allah Glorified is He admonishes and encourages people to follow Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with whom the truth was revealed.

The truth in this context refers to the absolute truisms that never change no matter how conditions or circumstances may change. The reason is that truth cannot assume different forms or colours. For instance, if a group of people witnessed an accident and then another person came along and attested to what they all saw, no one among them would disagree with him. However, if each one in this group followed their interests, they may be inclined to add things to what they witnessed and may thus give contending testimonies. Indeed, some of them may follow their wildest imagination and fabricate a set of lies that does not have anything to do with what happened.

Thus, this is the truth which never changes and to which any group of honest people, no matter how big it is, would attest. However, people are sometimes tempted to change the truth and twist it so their testimonies differ; this is how groundless lies and delusions are propagated. Allah Glorified is He explains to us that the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought forth the truth that never changes no matter how circumstances or conditions may alter irrespective of whether it is of creed, worshipping, moral or ethical side. You will find that whatever he says is consistently the same and never changes because it is true.

Allah Glorified is He gives us an example of this truth that He sends water from the sky that fills riverbeds to overflow, each per its measure. The stream carries on its surface a growing layer of froth, like the froth that appears when people melt metals in the fire to make ornaments and tools: in this way Allah Glorified is He illustrates truth and falsehood. Every valley receives an amount of water proportionate to its size. But, in time water coming down from the mountains carries along with it dust or straw or other needless objects; these things are what we call scum on the surface. The same holds for the process of melting metals like iron, copper or gold of which we make jewelry or other useful tools. When we melt these metals in the fire, some impurities are bound to float up to the surface of these melted metals; these impurities are called scum. Allah Glorified is He and then shows us how He lets truth overcome and prevail over falsehood saying that the froth disappears, but what is the benefit if man stays behind.

No matter how many impurities may smear or mix with the truth, the truth ultimately repels the scum and pushes it aside. Thus, if falsehood ever prevails over the truth, we ought to know that this is the scum that sometimes rises to the surface and then gets pushed away. However, the truth will continue to be what it is no matter how things change. Allah Glorified is He says that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has come to the people with the Truth from Him and He advises them to believe in Him as it is better for them. Believing in this context means to embrace faith in the existence of Allah Glorified is He in the fact that His Messages were delivered by His messengers, in the fact that Allah Glorified is He has angels and that resurrection and reckoning will follow after death. Such faith, in turn, requires us to act and behave per certain principles and maxims it sets; accordingly, having faith involves the recognition that our beliefs cannot be severed from our actions.

But, what would happen if people did not believe? Allah Glorified is He tells us that if the people deny the truth. behold, to Allah Glorified is He belongs all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth, and Allah Glorified is He is indeed All Knowing, All-Wise; He is Self-Sufficient. He never changes and He constantly governs His universe which, in turn, is completely subservient to Him. Thus, nothing in the universe will change due to the disbelief of any disbeliever except for its discontentment with the latter. The entire universe belongs to Allah Glorified is He and neither the heavens, stars, moon and nor rain will ever change due to any disbeliever.

Consider this. Look around you in this world; if you find any disturbances in it, you should know that what man did is at odds with the Path that Allah Glorified is He has prescribed for man to follow. By contrast, everything that was not susceptible to tampering by man has remained sound and intact. For instance, the sun never failed to rise or set. The same applies to the moon whose motion was never disrupted. Similarly, the stars never deviate from their celestial orbits and the wind blows according to the command of its Creator. Accordingly, the motion of every being in the universe is perfectly organized except for the things with which man interferes and tampers. Indeed, whenever man approaches nature and the beings around him per the Path set for him by Allah Glorified is He things continue to be in harmony. By contrast, whenever man approaches them in a manner out of the Path that Allah Glorified is He has set, they will become disrupted and corrupted. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…Indeed, Allah will not change the condition of a people until they change what is in themselves…’ (ar-Ra‘d: 11).

Corruption often results from the works and whims of the human soul when it deviates from the Path of Allah Glorified is He. For this reason, we wonder whether people ever complain about the unavailability of light! No; the reason is that the sun is not under our control. Similarly, people never complained about the unavailability of air. People do complain about the unavailability of food because food grows out of the land which requires labour. Man, thus has the choice between sitting lazily and not working or working and growing fruits. However, even though man may labour and work, some people tend to appropriate the yield of the land and deprive others of it. This a reason underlying the corruption spread in the universe.

Allah Glorified is He brought forth to them an illumination that can lead them to having faith in the Path preached by the seal of all messengers, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Further, Allah Glorified is He gave them a chance to atone for the mistakes they committed against their prophets and against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. In this respect, Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَهۡلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ لَا تَغۡلُواْ فِي دِينِكُمۡ وَلَا تَقُولُواْ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ إِلَّا ٱلۡحَقَّۚ إِنَّمَا
ٱلۡمَسِيحُ عِيسَى ٱبۡنُ مَرۡيَمَ رَسُولُ ٱللَّهِ وَكَلِمَتُهُۥٓ أَلۡقَىٰهَآ إِلَىٰ مَرۡيَمَ وَرُوحٞ مِّنۡهُۖ فَـَٔامِنُواْ
بِٱللَّهِ وَرُسُلِهِۦۖ وَلَا تَقُولُواْ ثَلَٰثَةٌۚ ٱنتَهُواْ خَيۡرٗا لَّكُمۡۚ إِنَّمَا ٱللَّهُ إِلَٰهٞ وَٰحِدٞۖ سُبۡحَٰنَهُۥٓ أَن
يَكُونَ لَهُۥ وَلَدٞۘ لَّهُۥ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِۗ وَكَفَىٰ بِٱللَّهِ وَكِيلٗا ﴿١٧١﴾

People of the Book, do not go to excess in your religion, and do not say anything about God except the truth: the Messiah, Jesus, son of Mary, was nothing more than a messenger of God, His word, directed to Mary, a spirit from Him. So believe in God and His messengers and do not speak of a ‘Trinity’– stop [this], that is better for you – God is only one God, He is far above having a son, everything in the heavens and earth belongs to Him and He is the best one to trust [171] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 171)

Allah Glorified is He starts the verse with a command directed to the People of the Book not to commit excess concerning their religion. Exceeding the bounds means crossing and trespassing the limits of justice. As a logical base, everything has a middle and two extremes; we always require people not to incline towards any of the extremes by way of being overly strict or excessively lose. The people of the Book slipped into this dilemma. They failed to be moderate and fair in their judgments. For instance, the Jews abjured `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and accused Maryam (Mary) of fornication; this was an excess of hatred on their part. By contrast, Christians excessively loved `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him; they thus said that he is a God or the son of God or a third of three (Trinity doctrine). This was also a form of exceeding the bounds of truth. Allah Glorified is He thus asks them to take a moderate and fair stance on issues pertaining to religious faith.

Following the Path of Allah Glorified is He does not require exceeding the bound of truth. For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent by Allah Glorified is He to preach a moderate religion that puts everything in its proper order. In this manner, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him foretold us about what will happen to `Ali, Allah be pleased with him. What Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him predicted ultimately happened. The Khawarij ultimately declared that 'Ali Allah be pleased with him was a disbeliever; further, the extreme Shi`ites claimed that he was a prophet and some of them went as far as claiming that he is God. In this respect, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to 'Ali, ‘You are like 'Isa (Jesus). The Jews hated him to the extent that they falsely accused his mother of fornication and the Christians loved him to the extent that they attributed to him a status that is not his.’ `Ali Allah be pleased with him said, ‘Two groups of people will be doomed because of their relation to me. The first is the group of those whose love to me would make them excessively praise and attribute to me what is not actually for me and the second group is the group of those whose hatred of me would drive them to falsely accuse me of things I did not do. Let everyone be advised that I am not a prophet and that I do not receive revelation. Rather, I follow The Book of Allah Glorified is He and the Sunnah of His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him as much as I can. Thereby you are only bound to obey me in things that you love or hate in so far as I order you to obey Allah Glorified is He.’ (1)

(1) [Ahmad]

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had informed `Ali that those who excessively love him and those who excessively hate him would not be gathered with him in paradise. Those who would excessively love him would allege that he was a messenger or even a God and those who would excessively hate him would allege that he was a disbeliever. Similarly, the Christians did this with `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him; they overstepped the bounds of truth in their love for him, made him a God, or a son of God, or a third of three (Trinity doctrine). Allah Glorified is He thus tells them not to have excess in religion since `Isa (Jesus) is nothing but a messenger of Him. Allah's saying that `Isa (Jesus) is a Messenger of Him is a response to the Jews whose excessive hatred for `Isa (Jesus) made them refuse to believe in him and even drove them to falsely accuse him and his mother in an egregious way.

The saying of Allah Glorified is He that `Isa (Jesus) is nothing but a messenger of Allah and His word which He directed to Maryam (Mary) and a soul created by Him, is a response to the fact that the Christians exceeded the bounds of truth because they attributed divinity to `Isa (Jesus). They claimed that he is the son of God and espoused the doctrine of trinity. But he was the son of Maryam (Mary) whom Allah Glorified is He foretold that she would give birth to him: ‘She said, "My Lord, how will I have a child when no man has touched me? " The angel said, "Such is Allah; He creates what He wills. When He decrees a matter, He only says to it, 'Be,' and it is.”’ (Al-‘Imran: 47)

Maryam (Mary) said so with the intelligence of a woman who has absolute faith in Allah Glorified is He. He knows that no man touched her and as long as He has attributed the boy to her this indicates that the boy will be born fatherless. `Isa (Jesus) will be born even though no man has touched Maryam (Mary). Then Allah Glorified is He explains this point when He said that The Messiah is a soul created by Him. In another verse, He indicated to this reality that `Isa (Jesus) is indeed a soul created by Allah Glorified is He. Allah says: ‘And mention the one who guarded her chastity, so We blew into her [garment] through Our angel [Gabriel], and We made her and her son a sign for the worlds.’ (al-Anbiya’: 91)

What is the meaning of `Isa (Jesus) being Allah's Word? This statement indicates that Allah Glorified is He has breathed of His spirit into Maryam

(Mary) and then His order 'Be!' for `Isa (Jesus) to grow in her womb followed. Allah Glorified is He mentions this kind of order in another verse; when He decrees a matter, He only says: '… "Be," and it is…' (Al-'Imran: 47).

The coming of `Isa (Jesus) required two prerequisites, a spirit or soul and the Word of Allah Glorified is He which underlies all creation. The Christians' misunderstanding is that `Isa (Jesus) is the son of God since Maryam (Mary) never got married. They, thus, said as long as Allah Glorified is He said that `Isa (Jesus) has been created of His spirit then he may be a part of Allah Glorified is He. However, in saying so, they overlooked the simple fact that all things come from Allah Glorified is He. Thus, He says: 'And He has made subservient to you whatsoever is in the heavens and whatsoever is in the earth, all, from Himself; most surely there are signs in this for a people who reflect.' (al-Jathiya: 13)

Does this mean that the earth and the sun are actual parts of Allah? The simple answer is no. If they have suspected that `Isa (Jesus) is the son of Allah Glorified is He only because his mother Maryam (Mary) was not touched by any human male and he was born fatherless, they should have also had suspicions about the divinity of Adam. No male or female copulated to bring about Adam. He was born fatherless and motherless. Allah says: 'Indeed, the example of `Isa (Jesus) to Allah is like that of Adam. He created Him from dust; then He said to him, "Be," and he was.' (Al-'Imran: 59)

No one has then the right to restrict or impose constraints on the Grace of Allah Glorified is He and His Capability. Indeed, the creation of Adam was much more sophisticated. But, Allah Glorified is He gracefully likened the creation of Adam to that of `Isa (Jesus). Further, Allah Glorified is He teaches us that Adam, like `Isa (Jesus), came into being due to a command of His Will. Allah Glorified is He says: '…I have made him complete and breathed into him of My spirit…' (al-Hijr: 29)

Thus, to come to being, Adam needed two prerequisites just like `Isa (Jesus); the order to 'Be!' and the breathing by Allah Glorified is He of His Spirit into him. We need to focus a little bit on the creation of Adam to understand the chain of creation ensued whether this was the creation of Adam or the creation of Eve or the creation of the angels or any other creature including `Isa (Jesus). Adam did not know how he was created; neither Adam nor anyone after him has the right to question the way he was created. This is a matter that which no one has anything to do with. Allah Glorified is He thus, warns us against listening to those who make groundless and vacuous claims about creations. He says: 'I did not make them witness to the creation of the heavens and the earth or to the creation of themselves, and I would not have taken those who lead others astray as assistants.' (al-Kahf: 51)

Therefore, we must not listen to those who claimed that man was originally an ape or anything of this sort. The reason is that those who talk about the first creation of man groundlessly lay claims about something they did not witness. The first creation is something that cannot be examined or investigated using the tools of empirical science because experimental labs only investigate things and objects that already exist. Thus, passing verdicts on such matters at odds with what Allah Glorified is He tells us is false. No one was there with Allah Glorified is He when He created the creation to tell us how such a creation took place. We only learned about these matters through what Allah Glorified is He told us about them. The Creator told us that we were created from water, dust, mud, altered black mud and from clay like that of pottery; He told us about this in several verses. Those who want to falsify or cast doubts on what the Quran says in this regard claim that the Quran makes contradictory statements about the process of creations: in one instance, it claims that man was created from water, in another from earth, in a third instance from mud and in a fourth instance from pottery clay.

We simply ask those who make such claims whether there any contradictions entailed in the fact that the Quran talks about the phases of creation? The primal matter of creation was water; Allah Glorified is He then mixed water with dust. When the two elements were blended together the resultant mixture was mud. Then the mud was then left to ferment which in turn became transmuted dark slime. After this, it turned into clay which was subsequently used to create Adam. Thus, everything that Allah Glorified is He said in all the verses that addressed the creation of Adam is consistent and in harmony with each other. Allah Glorified is He says: '…I have made him complete and breathed into him of my spirit…' (al-Hijr: 29).

After Allah Glorified is He has created a soulless, motionless mold of clay, He breathed into it of His own spirit through the command kun (Be). Our being required two main elements: a soul and a Word of Allah. The soul is what gives existence. Life comes about through the unity of soul and body. Afterward, the Will of Allah Glorified is He to bring His creature into being is manifested and executed through the command kun (Be). Indeed, even though man can prepare the same chemical mixture, but he is never capable of creating a new human being because the order to bring about a new human being is missing.

Allah Glorified is He tells us about the creation of Adam, which we did not see, He shows His Mercy to us. Allah Glorified is He then has left on earth an evidence of truth concerning the creation of Adam. Though we have not witnessed the creation of life, we witness the reverse process, i.e. death. In death, the soul is first severed from the body; after this, the body expands like transmuted dark slime then the water inside the body evaporates and the body starts to decompose back into the earth. These are the stages of death that begin with the separation of the soul from the body, the petrifying of the body leads to its rotting, then the water of the body begins to evaporate and the body begins to decay back into the earth.

Even though we do not know how life started we eye witness how it ends in our day to day experiences. Allah Glorified is He has intended that we concretely experience the end of life to demonstrate for us the verity of His Statements about the beginning of life and creation because death or the termination of life is the opposite of life and the opposite of anything is its own negation. The last component required for bringing the body of man into life is the soul which is alternatively the first thing that left the body. After the soul is severed from the body it petrifies, starts to rot and become like transmuted dark slime. Subsequently, the water evaporates and the entire body decays back into dust.

Human body has recently been analysed and then they discovered that it is composed of several elements. Upon analyzing the soil of fertile land that yields to man the food that sustains him they discovered that it is composed of the same elements. It is quite peculiar that the elements of which man is composed are identical to the elements of which the soil of fertile land is composed. This indicates the verity of the statement that Allah Glorified is He has created man from clay. Further, it demonstrates why the sustenance of life depends on the yield of land so that each component element of clay may support the corresponding element in the human body. When they analysed the human body in comparison with the analysis of the soil, they discovered that it is mainly composed of oxygen and that it constitutes around 67% of the human body, followed by carbon which constitutes around 19% of the body. In addition, they found that magnesium constitutes less than 1% of both the human body and the soil.

Further, scientists discovered that the most important elements constitutive of the human body are oxygen, carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, chloride, sulfur, calcium, phosphor, potassium, sodium, iron, iodine, cellulose and magnesium. These are the most important constitutive elements of the human body. Some of these elements form organic compounds whose function is constant and well known and some do not. However, whoever wants to expand his knowledge on these matters should ask experts in these fields.

Those who analysed the components of the soil and the human body were not scholars of religion. Thus, they were not intent on establishing evidence in support of the verity of the statements Allah Glorified is He makes in the Quran. Rather, some of them do not know anything about the Quran or the scientific facts it mentions. But Allah Glorified is He has made Prophet Messenger peace and blessings be upon him explain for us evidence that proves the correctness of these facts. In this manner, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Allah may support this religion (i.e. Islam) even with a disobedient man.’ (1)

Allah Glorified is He sometimes wills to support His religion through the statements or deeds of the disbelievers. He has made them discover facts and reach conclusions that if they knew could guide people to the righteous Path, they would not proclaim it. It is indeed due to Allah's Wisdom that He has made the disbelievers incapable of escaping the advocacy of religion, i.e.,

(1) [Al-Bukhari & Muslim]

Islam. Allah Glorified is He made some of them serve His religion against their will. We must try to understand this matter in a profound, tolerant and subtle manner. Allah Glorified is He has created the first human being from clay. There is another verse wherein Allah Glorified is He says that He has formed Adam fully and breathed into him of His Spirit (al-Hijr: 29). Further, a third verse, He says that Creating Adam was through ordering him to 'Be!' and He is (Al-'Imran: 47).

Accordingly, the creation of Adam required two prerequisites: the first, the breathing of the Spirit of Allah Glorified is He into the body of clay, and the second, the command kun (Be)! These are the two factors that were required for the creation of `Isa (Jesus), a Spirit from Allah Glorified is He and a Word that He addressed to Maryam (Mary). This is clear evidence in support of the verity of the saying of Allah Glorified is He concerning the likeness of the creation of 'Isa (Jesus) to that of Adam (Al-'Imran: 59).

Allah Glorified is He tells us the story of creating Adam from clay, moulding and fashioning him with His hands. Allah says: 'Allah said, "O Iblis (Satan), what prevented you from prostrating to that which I created with My hands? Were you arrogant then, or were you already among the haughty? "He said, "I am better than him. You created me from fire and created him from clay."' (Sad: 75-76)

Allah Glorified is He has created a body from clay and breathed into it of His Spirit; since He did so, a man came into being and started to reproduce and will continue to do so until the Day of Judgment. Should we then wonder about the way in which `Isa (Jesus) was created? No. When Adam begot his first offspring through the regular reproduction process; a sperm of his fertilized an ovum in the womb of Eve. Thus, the first human offspring was born. The sperm of Adam was a living part of him; its motion, in turn, allowed it to fertilize the ovum of Eve. Thus, the sperm is created from Adam and the life it has is inspired by the soul of Adam, but Adam is originally created by Allah Glorified is He. Therefore, this is evidence that the sperm has been created by Allah Glorified is He because He has created Adam. The sperm is alive because Allah Glorified is He breathed into it of His Spirit. It then moved to the womb of Eve and fertilized an ovum which then turned into a baby which she delivered. The reproduction of living sperm capable of fertilizing then continued so that more generations would evolve.

The offspring and descendants of Adam, until the Day of Judgment, will continue to bear characteristics of the original mold of Adam that Allah Glorified is He initially had created. Further, the Spirit that Allah Glorified is He breathed into this mould never dies. Indeed, if the soul died or perished, reproduction would not have continued. We thus learn that each one of us bears some of the characteristics of the physical mould Allah Glorified is He had fashioned with His own hands as well as part of the Spirit He had breathed into this mould.

Let me repeat the example I always give in the wake of discussing this matter so that the facts about it would be anchored in the minds of the youth. If we add a cubic centimetre of a concentrated coloured liquid to a litre of water and then take a drop of this water, we will discover that this drop of water contains only very little of this coloured cubic centimetre. If we then put this drop of water in a big container of water, the entire container will only contain a small portion of the cubic centimetre of this coloured solution. If we then pour the water in this container into the sea, the entire sea will contain the same small portion of a cubic centimetre of this coloured solution. Similarly, the posterity of Adam, until the Day of Judgment, will continue to bear a constantly diminishing portion of the physical constitution of Adam.

We notice that a lot of thinkers and intellectuals in the West avoid any discussions about the idea that `Isa (Jesus) is a son of God. When they are forced into discussions about this matter they say, ' Allah was only father to `Isa (Jesus) through His Love for him.' But, if this were the case, one may well argue that Allah Glorified is He loves all His Servants and that all of them, by the same token, share the same status with the Messiah. For Allah Glorified is He says in a Qudsi Hadith, 'All of the creation is Allah's dependants, and those who are most beloved to Him are those who are the most beneficial towards their own dependants.'(1)

If we understand this statement in a rigorous, empirical and experimental sense we will find that it is both right and true. All of us came to being due to the capability of Allah Glorified is He and His will; further, all of us have been fashioned by Allah Glorified is He since the time Adam had been created. The only difference between us and Adam is that the Heavens selected him to become a Messenger. However, some still believe in the doctrine of the trinity. In this respect, some argue that the trinity is only a trinity of attributes. But could there be a trinity of divine attributes that is composed of secondary qualities? For instance, they maintain the divinity of the father, the son and the Holy Spirit (trinity). In this vein, they maintain that there would not be a father unless there is a son and there would not be a son unless there is a father.

(1) [Muslim]

We know that there are primary and secondary facts. A person may be both a father and a son; he is son relative to his father and a father relative to his son. These are secondary qualities. However, the Attributes of Allah Glorified is He must be essential and not secondary qualities. Their belief in the divinity of the father, the son and the Holy Spirit (trinity) refers to secondary and not primary or essential qualities that befit Allah's Majesty. Some Christian scholars argued that al-Fatiha in the Quran refers to Allah Glorified is He through a trinity of attributes since it starts with saying ‘Allah, the Most Merciful, and the Most Gracious.’ They took this verse as a clue to claim that the Quran starts by referring to Allah Glorified is He in terms of three attributes. In response to those who make such groundless arguments, I say that we recite it as such, ‘In the Name of Allah, the Most Merciful, and the Most Gracious' without using the conjunction particle 'and.’

Further, why did Allah Glorified is He choose to beget a son more than one thousand and nine hundred years ago, although He has deprived the generations prior to the birth of the Messiah of the honour of receiving a son of His? Why did Allah Glorified is He not beget a son throughout the ages and only chose to beget one around twenty centuries ago? Further, what is the time that Allah Glorified is He has honoured with the presence of His son?

Would thirty-three years, which is the life of the Messiah, suffice to honour mankind with the presence of the son of Allah? Further, why has Allah Glorified is He deprive all generations of the beginning of creation until the Day of Judgment of such an honour?

We further wonder why does any creature beget a son? It is because this creature wants to guarantee the survival of its species and the continuity of life. Every human being knows that he is bound to die. But Allah Glorified is He has created life and death and He will eternally continue to be. He is thus in no need of assuring the continuity of His life through any human being. Allah Glorified is He asserts this fact in the chapter of al-Ikhlas by saying: 'Say, "He is Allah, who is One. Allah, the Eternal Refuge. He begets not, nor is He begotten. Nor is there to Him any equivalent."' (al-Ikhlas: 1-4)

Some may argue that Muslims sometimes say that Allah Glorified is He is Wahid (One) and sometimes say Allah Glorified is He is Ahad (the One). We know that both statements are not semantically identical. Logicians and linguists distinguish between the whole and its parts; they also differentiate between genre and species on the one hand and the members of genre or species on the other.

The word genus is used to qualify what consists of several members or individuals like the human species. There may be a man named Khalid, another named Mohammad and a third called `Ali. By contrast, the whole is composed of parts like a chair which is made of different components like wood, glue, nails and other substances. The chair is, thus, a whole that is composed of several components. But the essence of wood is different from that of nails. Thus, the chair is composed of several components whose essence is completely different. Further, we cannot call any of the components of a chair as a chair. For instance, we cannot call nails a chair or wood alone a chair. The word chair is used in reference to the totality of wood, nails, glue and paint when they are arranged per a specific form and order.

By contrast, the word human is used to qualify a vast sense of beings, namely, mankind because the essence of all these human beings is the same. We say the human designates an entire genre of beings.

We may, thus, describe any being that has the essential qualities of a human being as human. Thus, we can correctly call a man by the name Mohammad a human being as much as we may correctly call another one by the name Zayd a human being and a third of the name `Ali also a human being. The whole has parts whereas the generic name refers to class of individuals which share the same essential attributes. Further, the whole may be only one thing that is composed of several parts. Thus, each individual chair is composed of several parts.

Here a question arises: ‘Is Allah Glorified is He a whole or could He be described as a genus’? Neither of these qualifications can be used to describe Allah Glorified is He. It is not a name that is used to qualify a class of individual beings or substances because He is One; further Allah Glorified is He is not composed of parts because He is the One. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He can neither be described as a whole part, nor as a genus or member or species belonging to a genus. Indeed, if the word 'Allah' designated a genus this would imply that it is composed of several individual members. Further, if the word Allah had referred to a whole, such a whole would have been composed of parts. But Allah Glorified is He is One and no other individuals share with Him the same essence; also, Allah Glorified is He is the One and is, thus, not composed of parts.

For this reason, the Quran responds to anyone who may argue otherwise by saying that Allah is the One (al-Baqara: 16). Allah also says: ‘And your god is one God. There is no deity worthy of worship except Him, the Beneficent, the Merciful.’ (al-Baqara: 163)

I have adduced all this evidence so that we may properly understand the saying of Allah Glorified is He through admonishing the followers of the Gospel not to excess in your religion, and do not say anything about Allah except the truth. The Messiah, `Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), was nothing more than a Messenger of Allah, His word, directed to Maryam (Mary), a spirit from Him. So, they should believe in Allah and His Messengers and do not speak of a ‘Trinity’; stopping that is better for them. The saying of Allah Glorified is He to ‘desist that it is better for you’ means to give up saying these void claims and stick to the orders of the Allah Glorified is He.

It is intended to disclaim and denounce all false statements and celebrate and praise the truth and all true statements. We can infer this from the Words of Allah Glorified is He previously explained.

Allah Glorified is He then says that He is but One. This means that no other individuals participate with Allah Glorified is He in His Divine Essence. Once we encounter the word subhanu Glorified is He, we need to understand that it is intended to glorify and exalt Allah, the Creator.

For this reason, the word subhanu Glorified is He is often used while discussing peculiar matters that tend to confuse and baffle human reason. Further, although there are disbelievers in this world in addition to those who have the audacity to disparage Allah Glorified is He and attribute divinity to humans, no human being has previously had the audacity to qualify another human being by the word subhanak Glorified are you. For this reason, we praise Allah by saying Glorified is He over and above any exaltation and glorification we may attribute to Him. In addition, no one, no matter what his religion, creed or faith is, ever called himself Allah. Allah Glorified is He challenges even the disbelievers to have the audacity to call themselves Allah. Indeed, have you ever come across any audacious disbeliever who named his son Allah?

Even such a level of audacity cannot be found among disbelievers. The reason is that the disbeliever can never be sure that he is right. Thus, even if he does so, a disaster may befall him. If there was a single disbeliever who truly believed in his claims that there is no God in this universe they would name his son Allah. But no one has the audacity to do so. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Lord of the heavens and the earth and whatever is between them, so worship Him and have patience for His worship. Do you know of any similarity to Him?’ (Maryam: 65)

This challenge was there long before this verse was revealed. But what happened after it had been revealed? Did anyone have the audacity to name his son with the name of Allah? No one did even though people call their children all sorts of names. In the village where I was born a man called his daughter a long, weird name. He named her 'flowers that flourished in a blooming season and a kingdom whose subjects are all loyal.’ Man, is free to do what he wishes. But, no one has ever had the audacity to call a child of his Allah. The fact that this never happened demonstrates that the claims of the atheists and the disbelievers are false because no one among them has the boldness to do so. Allah Glorified is He challenges all of them with describing Himself with glorification and also challenges them with Himself. Accordingly, every one of us may comfortably and confidently call Allah Glorified is He subhanak because it is used to qualify naught beside Allah. Indeed, if you examine all the poems of praise and adoration that were ever composed in celebration of other human beings you will find none that qualifies a human being as subhanak Glorified is He.

No one has used this qualification to describe a fellow human being. In this manner, Allah Glorified is He controls a matter which is essentially up to man. For no human being, would dare call another human being Allah. ‘Indeed, Allah is but one God. the Exalted above having a son. To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth. And sufficient is Allah as Disposer of affairs.’ (an-Nisa’: 171)

Only beings that live on earth or in the heavens beget children; it does not make sense that Allah Glorified is He would follow the model of his creatures. This claim is incoherent and self-contradictory. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth. And sufficient is Allah as Disposer of affairs.’ (an-Nisa’: 171)

Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

لَّن يَسۡتَنكِفَ ٱلۡمَسِيحُ أَن يَكُونَ عَبۡدٗا لِّلَّهِ وَلَا ٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ ٱلۡمُقَرَّبُونَۚ وَمَن
يَسۡتَنكِفۡ عَنۡ عِبَادَتِهِۦ وَيَسۡتَكۡبِرۡ فَسَيَحۡشُرُهُمۡ إِلَيۡهِ جَمِيعٗا ١٧٢

The Messiah would never disdain to be a servant of God, nor would the angels who are close to Him. He will gather before Him all those who disdain His worship and are arrogant [172] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 172)

The source of honour for any human being ought to be his servitude to Allah Glorified is He. He has wanted to manifest His Lordship to the seal of all prophets, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and make him fully acknowledge his servitude to Him. He thus took him at night to Al 'Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem by saying: ‘The Exalted who took His servant by night from Masjid Al-Haram (the Ka`ba in Mecca) to Masjid Al- 'Aqsa (sacred mosque in Jerusalem), whose surroundings We have blessed, to show him of Our signs. Indeed, He is the Hearing, the seeing.’ (al-Isra’: 1)

We notice that Allah Glorified is He did not use ‘His messenger’, but rather used ‘His servant’ when He spoke about the event of Prophet Muhammad’s peace and blessings be upon him midnight journey and his ascension to the seventh sky. This is because servitude is a gift and bounty from Allah. It is as if the servitude of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to Allah is as infinite as the Goodness of Allah. If this is the case with the best of all humans, i.e. Muhammad, so then how can others be too proud to admit their servitude to Allah? Neither `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him nor the angels were too proud to be servants of Allah. '…nor would the angels who are close to Him…' (an-Nisa': 172). The reference to the angels is intended to exalt and add importance to the negations. For instance, a proud peasant may say, 'The head of the mayor's police force cannot challenge me; not even the mayor himself would dare to do so.'

Since the angels are higher and more exalted than human beings, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'The Messiah would never disdain to be a servant of Allah, nor would the angels who are close to Him.…' (an-Nisa': 172) Some scholars argued that the 'select few' of humans are better than the select few of angels, whereas the 'masses' of the angels are better than the masses of the humans. However, the terms of any language are first assigned to tangible objects, then to the intangible ideas. The reason beyond this is that man starts out his life journey perceiving only the tangible objects. Allah says: 'And Allah has extracted you from the wombs of your mothers not knowing a thing, and He made for you hearing and vision and intellect that perhaps you would be grateful.' (an-Nahl: 78)

Since, Allah says that we knew nothing, this means that whatever followed afterwards, followed as a 'means' towards acquiring knowledge; namely our various senses, like hearing, seeing and the capacity to attain experiences. A good example that illustrates this point is the issue of al-ghasb in Islamic law. Al-ghasb means to appropriate or usurp the right of someone else publicly and by coercion. This is different from stealing secretly; it is also different from mugging. Mugging means snatching something from its owner and running away. By contrast al-ghasb means to take something by force.

Al-ghasb, stealing and mugging are all forms of unrightfully appropriating that to which one is not entitled. The word ghasb originally refers to a tangible process namely, the skinning of a goat. Coercively appropriating or usurping someone else’s right is thus called ghasb because it is like skinning the one whose possessions are appropriated. Thus, a word that originally refers to something concrete and tangible is used to refer to something abstract. In the verse under consideration the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘The Messiah would never disdain to be a servant of Allah, nor would the angels who are close to Him.…’ (an-Nisa’: 172). The word yastankif (feel too proud), like the words yastafhim and yastakhrij, all originally have tangible connotations and were hence used to refer to abstract ideas.

The root of the word yastankif is nakaf which refers to a tangible action; which is wiping off tears using one’s fingers. Let us assume that the son or the wife of a man of dignity saw him weeping; the latter will immediately try to wipe off their tears with their fingers. Istankaf means to remove an-nakf which in turn means to wipe off one’s tears. Wiping off the tears indicates that one is too proud to be seen weeping and shedding tears due to something that impacted them. This process only happens when one wants to hide their tears away from others.

Accordingly, the reference of the word has been extended beyond the tangible connotation to include a moral one, namely, pride and arrogance. In this manner, it is said that a person is too proud to walk in the way of another person, sit with another person or sit on a lesser seat than another. In this sense, Allah says that the Messiah was never too proud to be a servant of Allah; on the contrary he felt honoured by such servitude. Similarly, the angels near to Allah are honoured by their servitude to Him; indeed, they do not have any knowledge of this world and do not do anything except glorifying and exalting Allah because all they know is that they are His servants. This servitude does not humiliate the one who practises it; but rather honours them. Further, servitude is an honour that only those who are willing to give and sacrifice can merit. Those who are too proud to do so, do not appreciate the value of servitude to Allah. For this reason, neither the Messiah nor the angels near to Allah were ever too proud to be servants of Allah.

The True Lord Glorified is He then adds: ‘…He will gather before Him all those who disdain His worship and are arrogant.’ (an-Nisa’: 172) All those who are too proud to serve Allah in addition to those who abet them to maintain such false course are doomed to hellfire.

Subsequently, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

فَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ فَيُوَفِّيهِمْ أُجُورَهُمْ وَيَزِيدُهُم مِّن
فَضْلِهِۦ ۖ وَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ٱسْتَنكَفُوا۟ وَٱسْتَكْبَرُوا۟ فَيُعَذِّبُهُمْ عَذَابًا
أَلِيمًا وَلَا يَجِدُونَ لَهُم مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ وَلِيًّا وَلَا نَصِيرًا ﴿١٧٣﴾

to those who believe and do good works He will give due rewards and more of His bounty; to those who are disdainful and arrogant He will give an agonizing torment, and they will find no one besides God to protect or help them [173] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 173)

Why did Allah not put forward the part where He talks about those who were too arrogant to serve Him before the first part to make it a continuation of the previous verse? Why did Allah not resume the discourse He started in the previous verse on those who were too arrogant and proud to serve Him and show that they are fated to suffer and that they shall find none to protect them from Allah and none to bring them relief? Afterwards, He could have told us about the rewards that await those who attain to faith and do good!

The reason is that the True Lord Glorified is He talks about a group of people that deviated from the righteous path and to whom He will never extend the reward of those who adhered to the righteous path. Allah thus chose to talk first about the reward that awaits the obedient so that the disobedient would know what they will miss. Allah will then, if they insist on their disobedience, deprive them of this reward so they would lament on their loss. For, as people say, the opposite of the good, best manifests its goodness.

The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'To those who believe and do good works He will give due rewards and more of His bounty…' (an-Nisa': 173). We know that the reward is proportionate to the deeds for which it is granted. So why did Allah Glorified is He mention His bounty? Let us recall what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said about the value of one's deeds and actions in this life. 'No one will be admitted into heaven due to their deeds or actions.' The Companions then wondered, 'Not even you, messenger of Allah?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Not even me, unless

Allah confers His bounty and mercy upon me. I thereby advise you to always aim at doing what is good and to always try to be closer to good through good deeds. Further, none of you should ever demand dying; for if he is obedient and good he may do more good deeds and if he is sinful and bad he may repent.'(1)

'Say: "In the grace of Allah and in His mercy, in that they should rejoice; it is better than that which they gather."' (Yunus: 58) People recognized this truth and they started to supplicate to Allah by saying, 'Allah treat us with Your grace and mercy and not Your justice.' For only His grace and mercy can aid us to a better status, whereas His justice may send us to oblivion.

The True Lord Glorified is He says the following about those who are too arrogant and proud to serve Him: '…to those who are disdainful and arrogant He will give an agonizing torment, and they will find no one besides Allah to protect or help them.' (an-Nisa': 173) This means that they will not find anyone to appeal to Allah on their behalf; further no one will either advocate them or protect them from their deserved torment. Afterward, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ قَدۡ جَآءَكُم بُرۡهَٰنٞ مِّن رَّبِّكُمۡ وَأَنزَلۡنَآ إِلَيۡكُمۡ نُورٗا مُّبِينٗا ﴿١٧٤﴾

People, convincing proof has come to you from your Lord and We have sent a clear light down to you [174] (The Quran, an-Nisa': 174)

Al-burhan (a manifestation of the truth) is the miracle that proves the truth of the seal of prophets, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; it also means a stark compelling proof. But someone may wonder, what is the difference between the manifestation of the truth and the clear light? We know that every messenger is supported by a miracle that vindicates the truth of the message he conveys from His Lord. Miracles can be different from the teachings the messengers were sent to deliver, then Allah would reveal to them His books and teachings so they can convey them to their people. For instance, the miracle of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was his staff, but the teachings he was commanded to deliver to his people were in the

---

(1) [Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Ibn Majah]

Torah. Hence, miracles were the ‘manifestation of the truth’ to what the messengers of Allah conveyed from their Lord. As we said, miracles might have little to do with the teachings revealed to the messenger; like the miracle of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him for instance. His miracle was to heel the blind, the leper and bring the dead back to life by Allah’s will, but the teachings he was commanded to deliver to his people were in the Bible.

By contrast to all the messengers prior to him, the miracle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who is the seal of all prophets was, in itself, the very Book that contained the teachings he was commanded to deliver to mankind. His miracle and Book are one and the same; the Quran. Allah Glorified is He intended this because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent as a messenger to all mankind and no messenger would follow him until the Day of Judgment. This is al-burhan or the manifestation of truth that Allah Glorified is He sent to Muhammad. The clear light here is a metaphor taken from the material world; light keeps one from stumbling in the dark, taking wrong turns or bumping into harmful objects. Similarly, the light of the Quran refers to the values it propounds. As for the material light that Allah Glorified is He bestowed upon us, it is well known to everyone.

Subsequently, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

فَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ بِٱللَّهِ وَٱعْتَصَمُواْ بِهِۦ فَسَيُدْخِلُهُمْ فِي
رَحْمَةٍ مِّنْهُ وَفَضْلٍ وَيَهْدِيهِمْ إِلَيْهِ صِرَٰطًا مُّسْتَقِيمًا ﴿١٧٥﴾

God will admit those who believe in Him and hold fast to Him into His mercy and favour; He will guide them towards Him on a straight path [175] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 175)

Here Allah Glorified is He talks about those who have attained faith in Him and held fast unto Him, but what is the meaning of holding fast unto Allah? In the past when a man fell in a pit he used to shout till someone would come to pull him out of it. This is the original meaning of the word i'tisam (holding fast unto; i.e. clinging to the one who rescues and saves you from a disaster or an abyss). The True Lord Glorified is He provides us with the needed ‘means.’ So, when the sun shines above our heads and we walk under its blazing heat, Allah provides us with trees so we can protect ourselves from the heat under their shade. When it rains, He provides us with umbrellas to protect ourselves from being drenched and when we get thirsty he provides us with a ‘means’ so we could drink a cup of water. However, only the wise remember, at the time of every cause, the real One who provided such causes and means in the first place.

So, as being a believer you must never think that these material means are the ultimate causes of your sustenance. If you always keep in mind that Allah is the cause of all these causes you will never be too proud to serve Him. Even when your experience seems apparently evil, so long as you keep in mind that Allah is the One Who caused you to go through it, you will know that it is intended for your ultimate good.

Man’s knowledge often misleads him in so many ways; he may think that something is good for him and it turns out to be bad or the opposite. Indeed, every one of us, at least once in a lifetime, must have thought that a certain thing was good and then realized that it was evil and likewise thought that another was bad but then it turned out to be good. Evil is only what is brought upon man due to his own actions. As for the things that befall us despite our actions or planning, they are all based on Allah’s will and His knowledge; not on our own will or knowledge.

Someone might say, ‘I pray to Allah to give me such and such and He does not answer my prayers.’ We say, ‘You ask Allah for things that you think may be good; but Allah’s knowledge is different from yours.’ For this reason, Allah does not answer your every beck and call. If you truly believe in Allah and hold fast unto Him you will need to ask yourself a simple question, ‘Do my actions underlie the fact that I did not get what I asked for’? If yes, then only blame yourself. If not, then this is just what Allah willed for you, so rest assured it is ultimately good for you and that a divine wisdom underlies what happened.

My fortune in this life is always good to me,
Because I am content with Allah’s decree be it good or bad,
If it turns out to be good I feel redeemed and rewarded,
And if it turns out not, then I know my reward will be for my patience

‘And as for those who have attained to faith in Allah and hold fast unto Him – He will enfold them within His grace and bounty, and guide them unto Himself by a straight way.’ (an-Nisa’: 175) So long as they attain to faith in Allah and hold fast unto Him, Allah will guide them unto Himself by a straight way. The fruit of being righteously guided is explained and pointed out in another verse where Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and those who are guided; He increases them in guidance and gives them their righteousness’ (Muhammad: 17). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also tells us,‘Whoever acts upon what he knows, Allah will cause him to learn more than he had previously known.’[1]

This means that Allah will entrust whoever acts upon what he knows with more knowledge because he availed himself of the knowledge he had in serving others and did not suspend or keep it. The True Lord the Glorified and Exalted closes the chapter of an-Nisa` with His saying:

يَسۡتَفۡتُونَكَ قُلِ ٱللَّهُ يُفۡتِيكُمۡ فِي ٱلۡكَلَٰلَةِۚ إِنِ ٱمۡرُؤٌاْ هَلَكَ لَيۡسَ لَهُۥ وَلَدٞ وَلَهُۥٓ
أُخۡتٞ فَلَهَا نِصۡفُ مَا تَرَكَۚ وَهُوَ يَرِثُهَآ إِن لَّمۡ يَكُن لَّهَا وَلَدٞۚ فَإِن كَانَتَا
ٱثۡنَتَيۡنِ فَلَهُمَا ٱلثُّلُثَانِ مِمَّا تَرَكَۚ وَإِن كَانُوٓاْ إِخۡوَةٗ رِّجَالٗا وَنِسَآءٗ فَلِلذَّكَرِ مِثۡلُ
حَظِّ ٱلۡأُنثَيَيۡنِۗ يُبَيِّنُ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمۡ أَن تَضِلُّواْۗ وَٱللَّهُ بِكُلِّ شَيۡءٍ عَلِيمُۢ ١٧٦

They ask you [Prophet] for a ruling. Say, ‘God gives you a ruling about inheritance from someone who dies childless with no surviving parents. If a man leaves a sister, she is entitled to half of the inheritance; if she has no child her brother is her sole heir; if there are two sisters, they are entitled to two-thirds of the inheritance between them, but if there are surviving brothers and sisters, the male is entitled to twice the share of the female. God makes this clear to you so that you do not make mistakes: He has full knowledge of everything’ [176] (The Quran, an-Nisa’: 176)

Al-istifta’—the root of the Arabic word yastaftunak, means they ask for a ruling seeking the legal opinion on a particular issue or question about which the inquirer has no knowledge. The Companions used to ask Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to enlighten them even though Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told them, ‘Do not ask me about the matters on which I have not enlightened you. People before you were doomed to perdition due to their excessive inquiries and their disagreement with their prophets. Accordingly, if I command you to do something then follow my command as much as you can and if I forbid you from doing something then make sure to consistently abstain from doing it.(1)

The Quran used the word yas`alunak (they ask you) in several verses. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He wants to teach us that the companions wanted to prove that their love for the path of Allah by basing all their lives and actions on it. Indeed, had they disliked the path of Allah they would not have asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to enlighten them. They realized that upon its advent, Islam acknowledged and let certain practises continue but abolished others. The Companions did not want to just go on doing whatever they have been doing from their days of pre-Islamic ignorance as if in continuity with it (namely, the practises which were not admonished by the Quran). They rather wanted to do any practises in continuity with their new point of reference; the Quran. So, they used to excessively ask Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about everything. A legal opinion is sought in a ruling, but a question can be sought in a ruling and or in a matter not related to any ruling. In the verse under consideration the Companions wanted the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to enlighten them on a ruling about inheritance from those who leave no heirs in their direct kin. However, the Quran was quite eloquent since it succinctly phrased their question: ‘They request from you a legal ruling. Say, “Allah gives you a ruling concerning one having neither descendants nor ascendants as heirs…”’ (an-Nisa’: 176). In an earlier part of this same chapter, Allah says: ‘And you shall have half of what your wives leave if they have no child…’ (an-Nisa’: 12).

This verse however, addresses the maternal kin, but Jabir ibn `Abdullah’s inquiry Allah be pleased with him was about the paternal kin. Jabir ibn `Abdullah

---

(1) [Muslim, Ahmad, Ibn Maja and An-Nasa`i]

Allah be pleased with him related that, ‘I once became quite sick and lost my consciousness in the middle of the road. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him who were walking around, saw me. So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him performed ablution and then poured on me the water he used for ablution. I then awoke and asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him “What should I do with my wealth? How should I distribute it?” But Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not answer me until the verse concerning inheritance was revealed.’(1)

In another version of the above Hadith related by Imam Ahmad Allah rest his soul, Jabir Allah be pleased with him said, ‘No heir in direct kin will inherit me, so how will my wealth be distributed upon my death?’ So, Allah revealed the verse at hand. Some scholars said that the word kalala (those who have no heirs in their direct line) is derived from kilal at-ta`ab (exhaustion) because kalala in Islamic law means the one who has neither a child nor a father. But any human being goes through two main phases throughout his life. In the first phase, he is supported by his father. When one grows up and his strength fades away, his son then starts to support him. Thus, the one has neither a father nor a son lives in toil and labour, with neither a father nor a son to care for him when he grows old. For this reason, such a person is described as kalala.

Some people say that the word kalala is derived from iklil which is a sheath of flowers worn on the head. In this sense kalala would refer to the relatives who surround one but are not related to him as fathers or sons.

‘If a man dies, leaving no child but only a sister, she will have half of what he left. And he inherits from her if she dies and has no child.’ (an-Nisa’: 176) Al-Kalala thus refers to the case when one dies and has a sister (or a half-sister from his father’s side); in such a case his sister is entitled to inherit half of his wealth. If this sister dies, her brother can inherit her whether he is her brother or half-brother from her father’s side. If a man, who does not have an heir in the direct line, has two sisters, they are entitled to two thirds of his wealth. But if such a man has brothers and sisters, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

---

(1) [Al-Bukhari]

‘If there are both brothers and sisters, the male will have the share of two females.’ (an-Nisa’: 176) This means that every brother is entitled to double the share of every sister.

The True Lord Glorified is He seals the verse with His saying: ‘Allah makes clear to you His law, lest you go astray. And Allah knows of all things.’ (an-Nisa’: 176) This means that the True Lord Glorified is He explains His rulings lest people should go astray. Allah Glorified is He pre-eternally knows every deed every man will commit and any secret he will try to conceal. Further, Allah knows what is best for people. We hereby conclude our reflection on the chapter of an-Nisa’.

The Chapter of

al-Ma’ida

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

We now begin the chapter titled al-Ma'ida which comes after an-Nisa' in the arrangement of the Quran. We know that the Quran has two arrangements; the arrangement of the chronological order of its revelation, and the arrangement of the entire text in its written form. Those people who wish to criticise Islam might like to say, 'Why is the Quran not arranged in accordance with its chronological order of revelation so that it starts with the first verse that was revealed and ends with the last one revealed'? We say that the Quran was not only revealed as a book of divine guidance, but as both a methodology and a miracle. Prophet Muhammad's message is all-inclusive for every nation and every age until the Last Hour because no other messenger will ever come after him. Hence, the miracle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is unique in that it will remain as long as his message remains until the Last Hour, with a way of guidance which will cover all walks of life until the end of time.

Prophets used to be sent to specific nations in specific locations and for specific times because the world was like a series of disconnected peoples due to the absence of any means of communication that could make it easy for people to come together. Allah Glorified is He willed to complete the series of messages with the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so that it would complement the progress of the human conscience through uniting the whole world. This means that if an ailment breaks out in the East, it will be immediately transferred to the West; calling for a single cure and a single curer.

As for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, he was uniquely given a persisting miracle which will last side by side with the methodology so that everyone who follows Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him can say, ‘The methodology of Islam is in the Quran, and the miracle of the Prophet of Islam is the Quran’. Had the miracle been of the same nature, mode and form of the previous miracles which were given to his fellow messengers, it would have ended the moment its time ended; just a piece of information and an event in history. We know that the sea was parted for Musa (Moses) peace be upon him as a piece of information, but we did not see it for ourselves, and we know that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him healed the blind, the leper and raised the dead by Allah’s will, but we are only aware of this now as a piece of information. Were it not for the fact that we believe in the Quran which has told us the stories of such events, we would have had our reservations about them.

There are those who say that the miraculous nature of the Quran lies in its rhetoric, eloquence, manner of discourse and its unmatched articulacy, since the Arabs were a people of rhetoric. But we say that not only did this miraculous Quran outdo all the articulacy and eloquence of the Arabs and utterly incapacitate them, but even when we conveyed its teachings to the English, French, Germans, Italians or any other people in the world, the teachings remained miraculous.

Thus, we see that Allah Glorified is He wanted an aspect of the Quran to remain miraculous for all peoples, namely those miracles upon which the languages would not differ, nor the nations. So, we are talking about intellectual miracles which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would tell about to his unlettered community (he himself being unlettered and without any tuition in science or culture); and these things would come true centuries later, and they would even be acknowledged by those who do not believe that such things were revealed by a deity.

Some people tried to raise Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the level of divinity because he said things, fourteen centuries ago, which are coming true only now, and no one could say such things except someone with an unparalleled knowledge. But they knew that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had affirmed that he is human, and that he was sent with a method which is in line with the path of ongoing events. The Quran reveals universal miracles that fall within a common ground with all other nations, and are not limited to one culture at the expense of others.

This method was sent down so that the world would be ruled by an unlettered nation which had never advanced far enough to establish laws or constitutions, and which had no experience of any sophisticated knowledge. It was a nation of nomads and desert-dwellers who had never agreed on a single law; each tribe, clan, kinfolk and family had its very own law. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent by Allah to this unlettered nation to establish in their midst a methodology which would cover all of life's issues until the Last Hour. And when people get impacted by a certain issue in their society, they will not find a solution for it except a one which, by considering our own teachings, either agrees with what Islam revealed, or does not deviate from the bounds of Islam's teachings and guidelines.

The Quran's rulings were revealed per the events and circumstances of the times because it is the True Lord's will to do what is best for those who lived at the time and place of the Quran's revelation. We find that The Quran makes mention of questions which would be posed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; and these many questions he would be asked indicate that people's state of faith was fit. Those who asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to give them rulings on certain issues thereby wanted – as we said before – to live their lives in view of the method they loved. They were not like the Israelites about whom Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'They were commanded to sacrifice the most common type of cows; but when they made things difficult, Allah made it difficult for them. By Allah, had they not restricted their guidance to the will of Allah, this issue would never have been made clear to them until the end of times.'(1) This means that, had they not said '…if Allah so wills, we shall truly be guided aright,' (al-Baqara: 70) they would not have been guided to the right cow to sacrifice.

There are things that Islam accepted just as they were in the time of pre-Islamic ignorance because they were rational and logical; Islam did not come to get rid of any regimes contemporary to its revelation, but it came to get rid of the corruption of these regimes. So anything that was sound by nature was left as it is. Whatever it is they were not guided to naturally; Islam would explain it for them. So a Quranic text had to be revealed for every significant matter in their lives. In the instances when verses were revealed after particular events necessitated them, this made them stick fast in people’s hearts. We gave an example of this before by saying, ‘Suppose a man has a medicine cabinet in his house and a member of his family is ill, and needs a particular medicine. Since the man does not know where this medicine is, he needs to search through all the contents of the cabinet in order to find the medicine he needs, and a lot of time might pass before he can find what he wants. But if this man does not have any medicine in the cabinet, and his son gets a headache he will go directly to the pharmacy to buy him some aspirin: this tablet of aspirin will treat that headache…a specific cure for a specific ailment’.

(1) Narrated by Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir

When the solution comes after the event occurs, this bolsters one’s certitude. And the solution might have been present in the Quran, yet they were unable to discern it. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He let things happen to them first which made them turn to the Heavens for a solution, and the solution was given right after the event to avoid any misguidance or difficulty. Hence, the Quran had to be revealed according to events; and once the events occurred and the entire methodology had been revealed twenty-three years after the advent of the Quran’s revelation, Allah Glorified is He willed that it be arranged in a particular order in its written form.

Both the written and the revealed orders constitute miracles for the Quran and for Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The Quran contains long chapters with many verses, and Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him taught Prophet Muhammad to place certain verses in certain spots, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would recite these verses in the communal prayer along with the new verses, which were attached to them by revelation. The greatness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would be clearly shown when he prayed with these verses and then added the new ones which had been revealed to him, and this was all done on purpose. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would stand in prayer fully confident in the fact that the One Who revealed the Quran had said to him: ‘We will make you recite, (O Muhammad), and you will not forget.’ (al-A’la: 6)

When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him recited, he would recite what had been revealed to him that very day alongside that which had been revealed to him a year before. This was a miracle by all standards because when an ordinary person speaks about something for ten minutes and then an hour later someone asks him to repeat what he said, he would not be able to remember the exact expressions and ideas he spoke. But here we are faced with a messenger who instructed his companions to write, and instructed those who could memorise the Quran to do so, and then stood in prayer and recited the verses which had been revealed to him a year before, alongside verses which had been revealed six months later, alongside verses which had been revealed a month later, alongside verses which had been revealed only a day before which proves that none of this was within the control of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, but it was rather, under the full command of the Lord of Muhammad, who arranged the letters of the Quran so that Prophet Muhammad would recite it without forgetting a single letter from it: 'We will make you recite, (O Muhammad), and you will not forget.' (al-A'la: 6)

Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him would come every year in the month of Ramadan to arrange the Quran with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and verify his memorization of it. In Ramadan of the final year of Prophet Muhammad's life Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him verified the Quran with him twice.

So we are not just talking about the revelation of the Quran, but there is also the arrangement of the Quran in a way which differed from the original way as it was revealed. Had the Quran been arranged in the same order as it was revealed in, some people would have said that it was only a verbal reaction to specific situations; but the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to rearrange the Quran so that it would be an everlasting miracle. The Quran was not revealed at the behest of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and every letter of it was revealed in this order intentionally to affirm that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was truly sent to convey the Quran, and that it was not within the capacity of any human mind to arrange it as thus, but rather, it was arranged by the One Who revealed it to Prophet Muhammad, namely Allah Glorified and Exalted is He.

So, the chapter of al-Ma'ida (1) comes after an-Nisa' in the written arrangement of the Quran. When we consider al-Ma'ida, we must first ask, what does Ma'ida mean? It means a table laden with food and drink, or a feast; and the chapter was given this name because it contains mention of how 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him asked his Lord to send a table laden with food down from Heaven after the Apostles urged him to ask Allah to do so. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Isa (Jesus) the son of Maryam (Mary) said, "O Allah, our Lord, send down to us a table spread with food from Heaven to be for us a festival for the first of us and the last of us and a sign from You. And provide for us, and you are the best of providers."' (al-Ma'ida: 114)

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He, chooses a beautiful cause as a prelude for this chapter, saying:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ أَوۡفُواْ بِٱلۡعُقُودِۚ أُحِلَّتۡ لَكُم بَهِيمَةُ ٱلۡأَنۡعَٰمِ إِلَّا
مَا يُتۡلَىٰ عَلَيۡكُمۡ غَيۡرَ مُحِلِّي ٱلصَّيۡدِ وَأَنتُمۡ حُرُمٌۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَحۡكُمُ مَا يُرِيدُ ١

You who believe, fulfil your obligations. Livestock animals are lawful as food for you, with the exception of what is about to be announced to you. You are forbidden to kill game while you are on pilgrimage – God commands what He will [1] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 1)

It begins, then, with the importance of fulfilling obligations and vows, and the lawfulness of consuming livestock as food. As we know, al-Ma'ida comes in the written Quran after an-Nisa' which comprised various vows and obligations intrinsic to faith like; marriage, dowries, bequests, debts and inheritance, all of which are rulings related to agreements and contracts. It is as though after an-Nisa', the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He, were saying to us, 'You are aware of all the pledges which were mentioned in an-Nisa', so honour them and be true to them'.

We also observe that al-Baqara comes before Al-'Imran, both of which speak about the materialistic Jews. So, an-Nisa' and al-Ma'ida both address the civil society of Medina, after the Quranic verses revealed in Mecca had dealt with educating the society and instilling the doctrines of Divinity

(1) The story of the table of `Isa peace be upon him

(monotheism) and Prophethood. The chapters of al-Baqara and Al-'Imran dealt with the matter of practical doctrine and the prophets; and the chapter of an-Nisa' was concerned with the decisive doctrines of Sacred Law.

Now we come to al-Ma'ida in which the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'O you who believe, fulfil your obligations...' (al-Ma'ida: 1). The True Lord Glorified is He addresses the believers with a relative pronoun, and does not say, 'O believers'! This shows that faith is not a temporary state through which a man passes occasionally, but that it is renewed through renewing our actions every time we obey the laws which our covenant of faith compels us to do. When the True Lord Glorified is He directs His discourse to those who have attained to faith, this emphasises that He does not invade anyone's life to command them, even though, as Lord of the worlds, He created man and brought all things into existence and subdued them to serve man.

Yet Allah Glorified and Exalted is He did not use this to compel all mankind into believing, He rather invited all people to faith first, and those who believed He honoured them with moral responsibility. Hence, they would rightfully deserve to be addressed as, 'O you who believe…' (al-Ma'ida: 1), i.e. 'O you who believe in Allah as the One Deity'; and the Deity must have attributes which reflect His Divinity; such as Omnipotent Power, Glory, Wisdom and Might. Allah does not issue commands to those who do not believe in Him, He rather invites those who do not believe first. Hence, we find that all the verses which reveal rulings start with the words 'O you who believe, (such-and-such) has been ordained for you' because with belief, comes responsibility.

'O you, who believe, fulfil your obligations...' (al-Ma'ida: 1). We know that Arabic is a root-based language, meaning that each root has a 'family' of words derived from it. Hence, the word awfa (to be true) for example, is derived from the root verb wafa/yafi, and there is also awfa and waffa, all of which mean' to be true', but each expresses a different level of strength and weakness, or abundance and scarcity. For example, the True Lord Glorified is He used the word waffa to describe Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: 'And Abraham, who fulfilled his obligations.' (an-Najm: 37)

Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did much to show his loyalty when Allah tried him and fulfilled his trial to the level of excellence. 'Allah says:

And (mention, O Muhammad), when Ibrahim (Abraham) was tried by his Lord with commands and he fulfilled them…' (al-Baqara: 124).

So, the True Lord used the word waffa as an explanation of what Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did in the face of the trials he underwent; and to' be true' is to' fulfil'. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'O you who believe, fulfil your obligations...' (al-Ma'ida: 1). That is, you must, if you believe in Allah, fulfil your covenants. Fulfilment either addresses individuals, meaning that no one must be neglected, or it refers to the approach itself, meaning that the approach must not be defective. A person might read every chapter of a book which means he has been true in reading every section, but The True Lord wants us to put every detail of the Book within the practise of moral responsibility.

Allah Glorified is He commands us to testify that there is no deity but Allah Glorified is He and that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of Allah, to perform the prayer, to pay the zakat (mandatory almsgiving), to fast Ramadan and to perform the pilgrimage to Mecca if we are able. A person might do all these things and thereby perform his moral responsibilities; but there are others who fulfil them while being dutiful to every detail in its entirety without neglecting any, and they stay true to them without any negligence.

The True Lord Glorified is He addresses the believers here: 'O you, who believe, fulfil your obligations...' (al-Ma'ida: 1). So, we are faced here with the concepts of 'belief' and 'fulfilling obligations'. We have explained the meaning of belief; as for obligations they are a binding connection between two parties, and each party must adhere to their responsibility and take their due. An obligation is called in Arabic 'aqd because the word 'aqd means a 'knot', i.e. something which does not become unfastened. Therefore, we call the convictions which take firm root in people's hearts and minds 'aqida (creed) because they are tied as a knot; they are not temporary fantasies which are here today and gone tomorrow. From the perspective of jurisprudence, creed is something instilled in the heart and does not resurface in the mind to be reassessed thereafter. Allah Glorified is He commands us to be true to our `uqud (obligations (singular 'aqd)), and as we know there are many obligations in Islam, starting with the first vow, which we made when we were mere seeds in which case, Allah tells us how He took the seeds of the children of Adam from their loins and made them bear witness that He is their Sustainer. Allah says: 'And mention when your Lord took from the children of Adam - from their loins - their descendants and made them testify of themselves, saying to them, "Am I not your Lord?" They said, "Yes, we have testified." This - lest you should say on the Day of Resurrection, "Indeed, we were unaware of this."' (al-A'raf: 172)

Allah Glorified is He wants us to be true to this primordial obligation so that no man tries to evade it when the time comes to fulfil it. Next, we come to the obligation of being a vicegerent on earth which was assigned to Adam peace be upon him and all his offspring after him. Never assume that you are the original element in this universe simply because material means are subdued to your service and are allotted to you for a specific span of time. Never think that these things have been allotted to you because of your skills alone. When you plant seeds in the earth and water them, know that the crops grow only because Allah has subdued the earth for you.

Never imagine, when you mount a horse, that you are the skilled equestrian who has broken it in; no, it was the True Lord Glorified is He who subdued the horses for you. Do you not see that sometimes horses buck and throw skilled riders off their backs? This should keep us conscious of an inescapable fact; had Allah not subdued horses for us, we would have never been able to ride them.

Allah also tells us, in the Quran, how He created for us even the things our hands have wrought and the domestic animals which we own; and how He subdued them to our will so that some of them may be used for riding and others for our food. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do they not see that We have created for them from what Our hands have made, grazing livestock, and then they are their owners? And We have tamed them for them, so some of them they ride, and some of them they eat.' (Ya Sin: 71-72) The believer must also bear in mind that the True Lord Glorified is He subdued the camel for its owner and made it so that even a small child can command it to sit on the ground to be loaded with heavy cargo, and then he orders it to stand up again, and all through the way the camel obeys. But when we come across a serpent or a snake, naturally we would not want to domesticate it. This is how the True Lord Glorified is He reminds mankind of His Omnipotent Power. He subdued large creatures for them, and at the same time instilled much fear in them from smaller creatures like snakes. He subdued them to our will so that some of them may be used for riding and others for our food.

This subduing made it possible for man to domesticate many creatures. The farmer's donkey carries fertilizer made of waste, and it does not object to this; and then the farmer advances in life and becomes the leader of his tribe, and he has the donkey washed and buys it a saddle so he can ride it to go and meet the local commissioner. The donkey does not object to any of these things because Allah has subdued it.

Never assume that it was your skills alone, as a man, which have subjected these creatures to your will. Were it a matter of skill alone, man would have subdued the tiny flea which may attack him any time; bugging him the whole night, that a whole family might stay up all night to kill a single flea. Allah says: 'O people, an example is presented, so listen to it. Indeed, those you invoke besides Allah will never create as much as a fly, even if they gathered together for that purpose. And if the fly should steal away from them a tiny thing, they could not recover it from him. Weak are the pursuer and pursued.' (al-Hajj: 73)

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He commands us to say 'In the Name of Allah, the Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy' before partaking to any action. Beware of embarking on anything using your power alone because your task will only take effect when Allah Glorified is He subdues it for you. You start an action in Allah's Name because He is The One Who made you His vicegerent and subdued all creatures to your will.

Then we have the obligation about which the True Lord Glorified is He said to Adam peace be upon him that whoever follows Allah's guidance will not go astray, and nor will he be unhappy. Allah Glorified is He says: '…then whoever follows My guidance, he shall not go astray nor be unhappy.' (Ta Ha: 123) He also says: '…then whoever follows My guidance, no fear shall come upon them, nor shall they grieve.' (al-Baqara: 38) This is an obligation made to all mankind. And the Muslims had an obligation towards Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when they partook to the covenant of Al-'Aqaba, pledging to aid and protect him from all that they would protect themselves from, and they also had a similar covenant with him, at Al-Hudaybiyya.

The True Lord Glorified is He commands the believers to be true to all vows intrinsic to the supreme dogma, namely belief in Allah; everything that comes from The Lord in whom you believe is considered a pledge of honour; for a pledge is always made between two parties. Allah did not force anyone to believe in Him, but man believes in Allah by free will; and as long as the believer has attained to faith in Allah by free will, he must follow Allah's way of guidance.

The one who believes thereby goes to the True Lord Glorified is He saying, 'Lord, I shall do whatever You command'; and this is an acknowledgement of the pledge he has made. And whenever any religious pledge is made, this is part of honouring our primal testimony of faith which we made to Allah; making it a 'shared' pledge with Allah, since the servant's faith in Allah makes him a party in this pledge. Allah legislates for man, and the servant obeys this legislation so that he may receive the amplest reward. So, an obligation might be 'a contract' between the servant and his Lord or between the servant and another of Allah's creatures who is equal to him, or between the servant and himself. In the case of obligations made between man and himself, we call them 'vows', like when a servant vows to perform a certain amount of fasting or praying; and he is obliged to fulfil what he has vowed, since he vowed it to Allah. As for the 'contract' between the servant and his fellow man, and the vows he makes with himself, they both hinge on the founding and primal testimony of faith to Allah.

So, the True Lord's words: '…fulfil your obligations...' (al-Ma'ida: 1), mean: do what Allah Glorified is He has ordained to be lawful, and keep awayfrom what He has made unlawful. Do not debate or differ about what 'an obligation' means. Do not ask whether it is between the servants and his Lord, between the servant and his fellow man, or between the servant and himself; for everything which stems from the supreme pledge constitutes an obligation for the believer to which he must be true.

'O you who believe, fulfil your obligations. Livestock animals are lawful as food for you…' (al-Ma'ida: 1). He begins the chapter by commanding us to fulfil our obligations, and then by announcing that livestock animals are lawful to eat. We know that man was brought into the universe, and that Allah Glorified is He first created the universe and then created man and descended him on it. This was a mercy from Allah to man in that He did not create man first, but rather, He first created the sun for him, and prepared the whole universe before creating man; and when man was brought into the universe, he found all the constituents of life; minerals, plants and animals.

The highest level of subdual to mankind comes in the form of animals because minerals and plants serve the animals, and animals and mankind are alike in that they each comprise life, blood, and organs. The True Lord Glorified is He here gives an announcement about the highest level of servitude to man, namely livestock animals, saying: '…Livestock animals are lawful as food for you…' (al-Ma'ida: 1). And He commands us to fulfil our obligation; and He has every right to do so since He has already given us the value of this by creating the universe and subduing it for us; and the epitome of subdual comes in the form of livestock. It is as though '…Livestock animals are lawful as food for you…' (al-Ma'ida: 1) is a prior justification for the command that Allah Glorified is He issued before it. We notice here that the word uhillat (has been made lawful) is a verb in the passive voice. This is because faith has qualified us as partners deserving the lawfulness of eating livestock animals. The scholars have spoken much about the words bahimat al-an`am (livestock animals). In Arabic, the noun form fa`il can either have the meaning of an active participle or a passive participle. For example, when we say that Allah is Rahim, this means He is' merciful', so this is an active participle; and when we say that a person is qatil, this means he has been 'murdered', so this is a passive participle. So, what does the word bahima (beast) mean here? Is it active, or passive? If we take the word bahima to mean the same as mubhama which means 'vague' or 'unintelligible' because its affairs are unknown to us and difficult to understand, and we do not know what its motions or gestures mean, nor do we understand the language by which it communicates with its own kind, then in this case, the word is passive in meaning. It might also be active in meaning because the beast does not understand and we are unintelligible to it.

We say that cattle are governed and subdued by their instincts, and that man did not invent their fodder until he first saw them freely going to eat it, which means that they were the ones that taught man what they eat. No one should therefore say that these are mere beasts with no understanding since we should know that cattle were not created to understand human affairs, and that they were subdued and subjected to man's will, and still man might learn from them.

Our proof for this is that Allah blessed some of His creatures, whom He selected, and educated them about the speech of birds; for it perturbed the hoopoe to see the Queen of Sheba and her people prostrating to the sun instead of Allah. Although a mere bird, it knew that prostration must only be offered to Allah, the Invincible One, not to the sun. Thus, we see how man can learn many things from the traits and habits of animals; and thus, we see that those who love to breed animals learn about their diets by following them and observing what they eat and what they set aside. Farmers give clover to buffalos rather than mint because they observed that buffalos, when let loose, do not eat mint but rather, clover. The True Lord Glorified is He also tells us: 'Until when they came upon the valley of the ants, an ant said, "O ants enter your dwellings that you not be crushed by Solomon and his soldiers while they perceive not."' (an-Naml: 18)

So, it is we who do not understand the language of the ants; we see the beasts being governed by their instincts, whilst man possesses intelligence – yet his passion overrules his intelligence.

Allah's words '…are lawful as food for you…' indicate that the One Who made this food lawful connected its lawfulness to the subdual of animals. Our proof for this is that when we place a rope around the neck of a buffalo or a sheep, and the rope tightens we find it stretching out its neck as if seeking to answer its calling as being 'lawful food', and the people say, 'It wants to be made lawful!' which means a butcher should be brought. Even though it is an animal, yet it seems to seek its very own slaughtering to benefit man. As though it were conscious of the loss which will be incurred if its meat got wasted for nothing; and this is proof that it was subjugated to man's will. As for animals which are unlawful to eat, it is amazing that when this rope-procedure is done to them, they do not stretch out their necks.

The an`am or livestock animals which Allah mentions in the Quran are four kinds of cattle of either sex: sheep, goats and both sexes of camels and cattle. This makes eight pairs; and then Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him added to this the gazelles and zebras, and he only prohibited the canines which have fangs like lions, and birds of prey which have talons. Had Allah not specified this lawfulness, there would have been no limits and we would have found ourselves eating carrion, butted animals or animals which died from falling off high places, etc., but the True Lord Glorified is He saved us from this ill fate and made these harmful things unlawful to us.

‘O, you who believe, fulfil your obligations...’ (al-Ma’ida: 1)! So, it is Allah’s right upon us, as believers, to stay true to our vows because He offered the universe to us, with all its flora and fauna to be at our service. He also made lawful to man the species which are closest to his type because of the life form they possess. He then says: ‘…with the exception of what is about to be announced to you. You are forbidden to kill game while you are on pilgrimage - Allah commands what He wills.’ (al-Ma’ida: 1) Had the True Lord Glorified is He not made this law, people would have eaten cattle, whilst they were in the state of pilgrimage; but Allah Glorified is He forbade hunting during the pilgrimage and within the Sanctuary of Mecca or while in the state of consecration for pilgrimage (ihram). The Sanctuary, as we know, is centred around the Ka`ba which is enclosed by the Sacred Mosque.

The land-zone wherein one enters the state of consecration for the pilgrimage is set by landmarks that differ according to the direction from which one approaches. Those coming from Medina enter consecration at Dhul-Hulayfa or Abar `Ali; those coming from Egypt, the Levant or the Islamic West enter consecration at Al-Juhfa (now known as Rabigh); those coming from Tuhama enter consecration at Yalamlam; those coming from the plains of Yemen or Hijaz enter consecration at Qarn Al-Manazil; and those coming from Iraq and other eastern places enter consecration at Dhat ‘Irq.

As for those who live in Mecca, they enter consecration for the pilgrimage simply by being in Mecca itself. As for `umra (the lesser pilgrimage) for those who live within the Sanctuary, they enter consecration when they go outside to the first point out of the Sanctuary; namely Al-Ju`rana, then At-Tan`im then Al-Hudaybiyya.

As for the time zone of the pilgrimage, it is within the months of Shawal, Dhul-Qa`da, and the first ten nights of Dhul-Hijja. As for the time zone of the lesser pilgrimage, it is the whole year, unless one is already performing the greater pilgrimage or making another lesser pilgrimage, or if it is before he finishes the greater pilgrimage in case he is still stoning the pillars or spending the night at Muzdalifa, wherein he cannot begin another consecration. Al-Ju`rana, At-Tan`im and Al-Hudaybiyya are the limits of the Sanctuary, and to engage in hunting within the Sanctuary is forbidden at all times for all people. As for hunting outside the Sanctuary, it is only forbidden to those in a state of consecration for the pilgrimage. All others have the right to hunt.

This way the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He teaches His creatures to be always vigilant about His method of guidance. In one place, He tells them, 'Hunting is forbidden here, and food and drink are forbidden during this time', such as during the fasting of Ramadan. We Muslims have twelve months, four of which are sacred: Dhul-Qa`da, Dhul-Hijja, Muharram and Rajab.

At the points of consecration hunting is forbidden only to the pilgrims, and this is just a disciplinary commandment of faith. When one arrives at the consecration landmark he enters consecration, i.e. he changes his attire and wears the special attire prescribed for pilgrimage which everyone wears so that all are equal. People are only distinct from one another because of their outward attire, so Allah Glorified is He commands man to abandon this distinction as soon as he enters consecration. The things which a Muslim can do before entering consecration become forbidden to him after he enters consecration at the appointed landmark.

Before entering consecration, a Muslim can have a haircut, wear perfume, hunt and pick vegetation; but once he consecrates himself, he must abstain from all this so that he can prepare to refuel the depths of his soul with the presence of the Giver of blessings rather than the blessings themselves. This is the proper state in which one must be to enter the House of the Giver of blessings. Hence, Muslims lay aside the blessings to remain in the presence of Him who provides them. It is also forbidden for anyone to hunt in the Sanctuary whether he is in a state of consecration or not, so that all become conscious that the Sanctuary is for Allah alone, and to prepare for answering the calling of Allah with awe. From the moment of consecration, one is forbidden from many things, starting with hunting and marital relations; and then he enters the land-zone where hunting is forbidden to all people as a symbol of awe.

Muslims are to perform pilgrimage once in a lifetime as a religious obligation; and every time we make pilgrimage heading to our Lord's House, He tells us, 'Do not distract yourself with the blessings, for you are heading to the Giver of blessings; and He will expiate all sins by means of the pilgrimage' '…With the exception of what is about to be announced to you. You are forbidden to kill game while you are on pilgrimage...' (al-Ma'ida: 1). If we take this to mean the state of consecration, it is correct; and if we take it to mean one's presence in the Sanctuary, it is also correct; for hunting is forbidden in the Sanctuary for pilgrims and non-pilgrims alike.

The True Lord Glorified is He ends the verse saying: '…Allah commands what He wills' (al-Ma'ida: 1) after having started it with: 'O You who believes...' (al-Ma'ida: 1). Thus, we see that the end of the verse logically matches the rest of it, for when Allah addresses the believers who believe in Him, one of the necessary ramifications of this belief is to obey the decrees of The Lord in whom they believe. As long as the believer believes in Allah, he must turn to the rulings which Allah has ordained and adhere to them. But the general meaning of the verse might urge some to separate its rear from its main body, giving way to one of the allegations directed at Islam. These people claim that if Allah says that He commands what He wills, and some people believe while others do not, so how come Allah '…commands what He wills' (al-Ma'ida: 1) when He does not simply command all to believe?'

We say, 'Do not separate the rear of the verse from its main body because Allah is only addressing here those who believe in Him as their Lord'. Those who believe in Allah, as their Deity endeavour to adhere to the rulings that He ordains, to apply them. Yet, no one should think that the disbelievers are beyond Allah's will when He says ,'…Allah commands what He wills' (al-Ma'ida: 1) because those who disobey the ordinance of Allah are logically bound to persist on their disobedience to whatever He ordains. But the one who rebels against the legal obligations which Allah ordains is not reasonable, and he refuses the fact that he is weak. The Angel of Death may take the rebel's soul when he is not even sick; so, what will he do to ward off death?

Therefore, there are matters in which all people must submit to Allah's Ordinance; and the disbeliever submits to Allah's Ordinance in certain matters more coercively than the believer because, for example, the believer accepts death as Allah’s Ordinance but the rebel, who does not pray or perform any religious obligation, faces all vicissitudes of life including death with great suffering that exceeds the hardship experienced by the believer while facing the vicissitudes of life including death.

Hence, Allah’s saying: ‘…Allah ordains what He intends.’ (al-Ma’ida: 1) refers to a general issue because the one who rebels against Allah’s Ordinance in matters in which he has free will thinks logically and rebels against the ordinance which Allah forces him to do. This is in contrast with many man-made laws which are not strong enough to resist this rebellion, but Allah’s Ordinance is more coercive, as the rebel cannot ward it off. No one should think that Allah has made His servant’s free will absolute. He as a person who can rebel against faith, but there are many things that he cannot rebel against; so Allah ordains whatever He intends. Then, Allah says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لَا تُحِلُّوا۟ شَعَٰٓئِرَ ٱللَّهِ وَلَا ٱلشَّهْرَ ٱلْحَرَامَ وَلَا ٱلْهَدْىَ وَلَا ٱلْقَلَٰٓئِدَ وَلَآ
ءَآمِّينَ ٱلْبَيْتَ ٱلْحَرَامَ يَبْتَغُونَ فَضْلًا مِّن رَّبِّهِمْ وَرِضْوَٰنًا ۚ وَإِذَا حَلَلْتُمْ فَٱصْطَادُوا۟ ۚ وَلَا يَجْرِمَنَّكُمْ
شَنَـَٔانُ قَوْمٍ أَن صَدُّوكُمْ عَنِ ٱلْمَسْجِدِ ٱلْحَرَامِ أَن تَعْتَدُوا۟ ۘ وَتَعَاوَنُوا۟ عَلَى ٱلْبِرِّ
وَٱلتَّقْوَىٰ ۖ وَلَا تَعَاوَنُوا۟ عَلَى ٱلْإِثْمِ وَٱلْعُدْوَٰنِ ۚ وَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ ۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ شَدِيدُ ٱلْعِقَابِ ﴿٢﴾

So, you who believe, do not violate the sanctity of God’s rites, the Sacred Month, the offerings, their garlands, nor those going to the Sacred House to seek the bounty and pleasure of their Lord — but when you have completed the rites of pilgrimage you may hunt. Do not let your hatred for the people who barred you from the Sacred Mosque induce you to break the law: help one another to do what is right and good; do not help one another towards sin and hostility. Be mindful of God, for His punishment is severe [2] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 2)

The verse starts with, ‘O you who have believed, do not violate the rites of Allah...’ which comes after the verse in which Allah has declared certain things lawful. This indicates that Allah clarifies to His servants that He gives them certain things and withholds other things, and He does the same with his others. Therefore, a person should not only consider what is withdrawn from him; rather, he should consider things withdrawn from others for his sake.

For example, when Allah commands a person not to steal, He restricts his freedom with this commandment, and at the same time, He restricts the freedom of all other people in this regard for his sake. When this person judges the matter according to how it affects him, he will find that he is the main beneficiary because everyone else will obey Allah’s law by refraining from stealing from him. Accordingly, everyone will benefit from this command, and even if a person steals something, he cannot steal from everyone; but if a thousand people steal from one person, what will be left with him?

When Allah commands His servant not to look at the kinswomen of others, this seems to restrict his freedom, but in fact He also restricts the freedom of everyone else for the sake of this person, commanding them all not to look at the kinswomen of others.

Therefore, when a Muslim knows that Allah has prohibited a certain matter, he should not consider this prohibition only on his part, but he should also consider that the same matter is prohibited for all people in his favour. Allah says, ‘…do not violate the rites of Allah...’ (al-Ma’ida: 2) which means that the believers should not profane the inviolability of the rites set up by Allah. The word sha’a`ir which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means all the rituals of the religion. If we say that a country’s symbol is the eagle, this means that whenever we see the symbol we recognise the country. The same applies to the different flags of nations and even governorates as in Egypt, for example, every governorate has its own symbol and flag. Therefore, the symbol is a marker that identifies something, and Allah’s rites are the rules of His religion that are commandments, prohibitions, creed and rulings.

But the word sha’a`ir commonly refers to the rites of Hajj, the first of which is to enter a state of ihram (ritual state for Hajj or ‘Umra) that should not be neglected. Other rites of Hajj are tawaf (circumambulation of the Ka`ba), sa`y (going between Safa and Marwah during Hajj and ‘Umra), standing on Mount `Arafat and the stoning of the pillars marking the pebble-throwing area. They are Allah’s rites which He has commanded the believers not to violate or neglect because they provide religious regulations. Allah’s Command to all those who perform Hajj or ‘Umra to enter a state of ihram (ritual state for Hajj or ‘Umra) should be considered as a command to separate themselves for a period of time from the bounties they usually enjoy, as the journey of Hajj is considered as a journey towards the Giver of all bounties. Allah orders the believers who perform Hajj or 'Umra to wear unified clothing, so that no one is better than another; in everyday life, people's clothing highlight the difference between them and indicate their social status. Therefore, when they remove their ordinary clothes and wear unified clothing, the distinctive mark they have in common is their profession of allegiance to Allah.

Likewise, when the pilgrims or the people who perform 'Umra are commanded not to cut a single hair, no matter if they are rich or poor, they find that they are equal despite their different social positions and status, and that they equally submit to Allah's Command. This self-discipline caused by belief is not related to people only, but the self-discipline appears in the way a person deals with all creatures. The trees around the Sanctuary are inviolable, and no person is permitted to cut them down or cut anything of them, so the plants inside the Sanctuary are protected and safe. Likewise, the pigeons, and other animals and people are safe inside the Sanctuary; for they are all inside the Sanctuary of the Lord of all creatures. This status instils awe in the human soul caused by faith. Therefore, the period of Hajj is a time of spiritual regulation and self-discipline in which all types of existence live in harmony. All people become equal and animals and plants are safe. Inanimate objects serve all other types of existence; animals serve man, plants serve animals and inanimate objects serve them all but is not served. In addition, Allah protects an inanimate object in the Ka`ba, commanding people to greet the Black Stone, kiss it if they are able or at least point to it.

The master of creatures honours and lauds an inanimate object, as the one that is unable to kiss the Black Stone must at least greet it by pointing to it, for his Hajj to be accepted. Therefore, crowds of people struggle to reach the Black Stone, and even the inanimate objects within Allah's Sacred House of Worship are protected, as Allah has made it one of the rituals of Hajj and has commanded the people to kiss this inanimate thing - the lowest genus of beings - although they do not kiss animals or plants. Therefore, this is the ultimate balance in the universe. Man, who is superior to all creatures, goes humbly to kiss or greet the Black Stone, in submission to Allah's Command.

People also throw pebbles at another stone that symbolises Satan for them to know that stones are not inherently objects of value; rather, the matter depends on the commandments of the Supreme Commander, so that they do not think that stones in general are to be honoured. Hence, the pilgrim kisses one stone, and throws pebbles at another stone.

‘O you who have believed, do not violate the rites of Allah...’ (al-Ma’ida: 2), Allah has made these rites in order to achieve spiritual regulation, and to keep in mind the commands of Allah so that no one would claim that he is an integral and essential part of the universe; rather, all the creatures are Allah’s Servant. All of existence shows a chain of servitude; man serves man, animals serve man, plants serve man and animals and inanimate objects serve all creatures. However, no one is better than another; even inanimate objects declare Allah’s Glory with His Praise, whilst man might not do that.

‘Indeed, we offered the Trust to the heavens, the earth and the mountains, and they declined to bear it and feared it; but man, undertook to bear it. Indeed, he was unjust and ignorant.’ (al-Ahzab: 72)

This commandment not to violate the rites of Allah means that every rite takes its share of esteem and respect; and no one should imagine that any of these rites may have any kind of intrinsic holiness; rather, Allah gives them this holiness and can remove it if He wishes.

‘O you who have believed, do not violate the rites of Allah or the sanctity of the sacred month...’ (al-Ma’ida: 2). It means that people should not violate the inviolability of the sacred month, as Allah has commanded them to do so for their own good. Allah Glorified is He protects man’s dignity from humiliation before his enemy, and protects the weak from yielding to the strong. In addition, even the strong person who can fight may wish to cease fighting for a period of time to rest, but if he declares so publicly, he will appear to be publicly yielding to his enemy. Therefore, Allah specifies a period of time in which He forbids fighting; the sacred months. Accordingly, a warrior realises that Allah has forbidden fighting during the sacred months to protect man, and give him an opportunity to experience the pleasure of safety, peace and tranquillity so that the strong might yearn for peace thereafter.

Why has Allah mentioned the sacred month (in the singular form) though we know there are four sacred months? If we consider the sacred months as a category, then this term can apply to all the sacred months. In addition, if we consider the sacred months as the months of the pilgrimage, which are Shawwal, Dhul-Qa`dah and the first ten nights of Dhul-Hijjah, the meaning will be also correct. We know that there are four sacred months, three of which are consecutive, namely Dhul-Qa`dah, Dhul-Ḥijjah and Muharram, and one is separate, namely Rajab. Allah Glorified is He knows that every action must have a time and a place; if there is no action, time or place will be considered, as they did not come into existence until Allah created His universe. No one should ask, 'Where was Allah, and when did Allah exist?' because these questions refer to time and place which are created by Allah Who has given every action a time and a place. Therefore, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He, protects people's pride and His merciful legislation act as a shield that protects the weak among them. In addition, Allah's legislation helps the strong among His servants to refrain from transgression and oppression. Therefore, He has made certain places and times sacred; the sacred places are those at the Sanctuary: '…And whoever enters it shall be safe.…' (Al-'Imran: 97) Therefore, one must ensure safety for people when he enters the Sanctuary. As for the times that Allah has made Sacred, they are the sacred months.

Allah deals with events from the perspectives of both time and place. In ancient times, the stronger party would fight and come close to victory, and once the sacred month began, he would continue to fight and claim that the sacred month would come after the end of the war. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He prohibits changing the time of the sacred months because He wants to offend the war.

Then Allah says: '... or (neglect the marking of) the sacrificial animals...' (al-Ma'ida: 2). The word al-hady which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means the sacrificial animals which are offered to the Sanctuary; this word also is the plural of the word hadiyyah (offering or gift). Some people would offer sacrificial animals to the Ka`ba which are called in Arabic hady. Allah has decreed that these sacrificial animals should be offered to the Sanctuary only, as in the past, the Sanctuary was a barren valley that did not contain many animals. People would bring sacrificial animals with them when they came to perform Hajj, so Allah has forbidden approaching these sacrificial animals because they are intended to be offered to the Sanctuary. The pilgrims come in great throngs, and when many people assemble in such a barren valley, they need food. Therefore, it is not permissible for a believer to use the sacrificial animals for anything other than for the purpose for which they should be offered. Therefore, it is not permissible for the one who takes a sacrificial animal with him to be offered to the Sanctuary to slaughter and eat it while travelling. One should ensure that the other pilgrims' offerings are protected and secured for the Sanctuary, '…and garlanding (them)...' (al-Ma'ida: 2). The word qala`id which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means a garland. In the past, the pilgrims feared that their sacrificial animals would stray, so they put garlands around the animals' necks so that those who saw them would know that they were offered to the Sanctuary. The Arabic word al-hady refers to sacrificial animals in general which wear no garlands around their necks, and the word al-qala`id means the sacrificial animals which had garlands around their necks to mark them as offerings for the Sanctuary. The prohibition here may even include taking the garlands that mark the sacrificial animals so that they would not be lost. Allah Glorified is He expresses meanings in an eloquent way.

In the past, when the pilgrims did not have any collars, they would cut pieces of the bark from trees and hang them around the necks of their sacrificial animals, so that people would know they were intended to be offered for the Sanctuary. Accordingly, Allah provides sustenance that includes meat for the pilgrims coming to the Sanctuary and He ordains that the provision of hady (sacrificial animals) becomes one of the rites of Hajj. Allah is the One Who calls the people to perform Hajj, and they are the guests of the Most Merciful.

A person may slaughter a sacrificial animal to feed his guests, so what about Allah Glorified and Exalted is He? Therefore, He has intended that the hady (sacrificial animals) to be food for His guests. People gather at Mina and Arafat in countless numbers, so Allah honours them with the finest and most delicious foods. The poor go to the slaughterhouse in Mecca and take the finest of meat and then may dry it in the open air and the sun and store it for them to eat it over a long period of time; this type of meat is called' jerked meat'. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He expresses the commandment in a highly eloquent way.

Allah Glorified is He says: '…(the sanctity of) the sacred month or (neglect the marking of) the sacrificial animals and garlanding (them) or (violate the safety of) those coming to the Sacred House seeking bounty from their Lord and (His) approval.…' (al-Ma'ida: 2) This means that people should not be prevented from going to Allah's Sacred House, or diverted from the way to it, as they are the guests of Allah. These words were revealed before Allah's saying: '…indeed the polytheists are unclean…' (at-Tawba: 28).

Before this verse was revealed, the disbelievers used to perform Hajj to Allah's Sacred House. We may ask: Do the disbelievers seek favour from Allah? Yes, as Allah bestows His bounties upon all people even the disbeliever, but His Great Pleasure is not attained by the disbeliever. The bounties which Allah bestowed on the disbelievers are represented in their prosperous. Now, Allah also bestows His bounties upon the disbelievers.

But how could the disbelievers attain Allah's Great Pleasure? The disbelievers imagine that all that they do is intended to please Allah. The precision of the Quran is manifested in Allah's saying, '…seeking bounty from their Lord and (His) approval…' (al-Ma'ida: 2), and does not say, 'seeking bounty from Allah and (His) approval', as the believer is the one who carries out the religious obligations.

Allah has two types of bestowals; Lordly bestowal and divine bestowal. Lordly bestowal refers to that which He gives to the believers and disbelievers as Lord and Sustainer; He subdues the means of living for them all. For example, the sun rises and benefits the believer and disbeliever and the means of living are given to both the believer and the disbeliever. As for divine bestowal, it is represented in Allah's Commands and Prohibitions. In this verse, Allah says: '…seeking bounty from their Lord and (His) approval…' (al-Ma'ida: 2). This means that they did not pay heed to the basic two elements of religion: commands and prohibitions. Then Allah says, '…But when you come out of ihram, then (you may) hunt…' (al-Ma'ida: . 2). This means that when the pilgrim removes the ritual state for Hajj and comes out of the Sanctuary, he may hunt.

‘... And do not let the hatred of a people for having obstructed you from Al-Masjid Al-Haram...’ (al-Ma’ida: 2). Before the idolaters had been banned from entering the Sacred House of Allah, the believers were commanded not to attack the disbelievers who visited the Sacred House of Allah in revenge for the suffering which they experienced at the hands of the disbelievers. Therefore, Allah has commanded the believers not to take revenge from the disbelievers, as they prevented them from entering the Sacred House of Allah at the time of the Truce of Al-Hudaybiyya. Rather, the believers have been given the responsibility of upholding Allah’s legislation on earth, so they should abstain from selfishness or tribal and familial prejudices because Allah’s legislation has been revealed to lead the whole world, and it is not suitable for the believer to take revenge on the disbeliever when he comes to the House of Allah, and this is not consistent with the duty of upholding Allah’s legislation.

Therefore, Allah said to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Indeed, We have revealed to you, (O Muhammad), the Book in truth so you may judge between the people by that which Allah has shown you. And do not be an advocate for the deceitful.’ (an-Nisa’: 105). When Allah commanded the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to judge between people, this judgement must not discriminate between the believers and disbelievers because the Muslims are the upholders of Allah’s legislation and are the best nation which Allah has raised up for the benefit of all mankind. If people understood that Islam was for their own good, they would not wage war against them.

Muslims are not only good for themselves; rather, they bring goodness to all mankind. Therefore, Allah says, ‘... And do not let the hatred of a people for having obstructed you from Al-Masjid Al-Haram lead you to transgress...’ (al-Ma’ida: 2). This means that Muslims should not allow the anger they feel towards certain people to make them transgress because they prevented the Muslims from entering the Sacred House of Allah in the year of Al-Hudaybiyya. When the disbelievers know that Allah Glorified and Exalted is He commands the believers to treat them properly, they will be aware of the Lord’s Mercy and will feel ashamed for not believing; but if the believer transgressed against the disbeliever in revenge for the past aggression, the disbeliever would realise that the believer took revenge for the aggression.

However, if the disbeliever sees that the believer does not transgress in obedience to Allah's Commands, he will see that Islam reforms its followers in a way which gives them psychological loftiness rising above spite, hatred, and blind support. The Quran expresses this meaning in an accurate manner, as the religion did not come to suppress emotions or instinct, or to make people' platonic', as they claim. It does not ask the people to suppress their hatred, but it instructs them not to let their hatred make them transgress against the people they hate. Allah does not forbid hatred, for it is relevant to emotions.

When 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him saw the killer of his brother, Zayd ibn Al-Khattab, passing by him, someone said, 'This is Zayd's killer! 'Umar replied, 'What should I do with him, when Allah has guided him to Islam? If Islam expiates disbelief, shall it not also expiate the killing of 'Umar's brother?' However, 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him said to his brother's killer, 'When you see me, turn your face away from me.' He said this because he knew the effect of emotion and that he did not love his brother's killer. So, the killer of Umar's brother said to him, 'Will your hatred for me lead you to deny me one of my rights? 'Umar said, 'No, rather you will get all your rights.' His brother's killer replied, 'No matter, then. Only women cry over love.' Therefore, it was faith that prevented Umar from avenging his brother's death.

'... And do not let the hatred of a people for having obstructed you from Al-Masjid Al-Haram lead you to transgress...' (al-Ma'ida: 2). Allah Glorified is He does not prohibit the feelings of hatred and aversion because He knows that this is beyond man's capacity, as it is a matter of emotion. Emotion cannot be governed by law, but it should not give you the right to transgress.

Islam intervenes in human actions, urging a person to do something and abstain from another; Islam does not intervene in human craving which is an expression of a phase that succeeds the initial perception which causes a person to love or hate. Then, he expresses this feeling by displaying a certain tendency. There are three aspects of sensation; perception, sentiment and tendency.(1) When a person walks in a garden full of flowers and sees a flower, this is called perception, and Islam does not forbid this perception. Then the person has the free will to admire and like the flower, but he should no pick this flower.

Islamic legislation only intervenes in the human tendency in matters relevant to women. In this case, Islam intervenes from the first stage of perception: when a man sees a beautiful woman, this refers to perception; when his heart loves her, this refers to sentiment, but approaching her refers to tendency.

Allah is merciful with men as He commands them to lower their gazes from the beginning because they are completely unable to make a clear distinction between perception, sentiment, and tendency. Both perception and sentiment interact in man's mind, and he takes the decision either to keep himself chaste and repress his feelings, or not to do so and spoil people's honour. Therefore, Islamic Law serves men from the very beginning when it commands them to lower their gaze: 'Tell the believing men to lower their gaze and guard their private parts. That is purer for them. Indeed, Allah is Acquainted with what they do. And tell the believing women to lower their gaze and guard their private parts…' (an-Nur: 30-31).

In this case, Islamic Law intervenes from the first phase of perception because tendency cannot be separated from sentiments in this case; seeing a woman causes chemical reactions in a man's soul and seeing a man causes chemical reactions in a woman's soul. However, when one sees a flower, this does not lead to any chemical reaction, and one can have a vase of flowers. The verse means that Allah Glorified and Exalted is He does not prevent the believer from feeling the human emotions of hatred and detestation because faith requires feelings. Some of the enemies of Islam say that the verses of the Quran contradict one another because Allah says, 'You will not find a people who believe in Allah and the Last Day having affection for those who oppose Allah and His Messenger, even if they were their fathers or their sons or their brothers…' (al-Mujadala: 22). And the criterion of faith does not allow this, and the Quran says in another verse, '…but if they endeavour to make you associate with Me that of which you have no knowledge, do not obey them…' (Luqman: 15).

(1) From Proofreader: This information is per the knowledge and belief of Sheikh As-Sha`rawy may Allah rest his soul, and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily confirm to the scientific facts and information proven true.

The one who reflects deeply on this will recognise that a person may be kind to those he loves and to those he does not love. As for the intimate feeling which is relevant to the heart, Allah forbids the believers to direct them towards the idolaters.'... And do not let the hatred of a people for having obstructed you from Al-Masjid Al-Haram...' (al-Ma'ida: 2). Allah does not forbid hatred, but He forbids the reactions which spring from hatred even if they are justified, as was the case with the Treaty of Al-Hudaybiyya. Then, Allah says, '... And cooperate in righteousness and piety...' (al-Ma'ida: 2). This verse turns the issue of faith into a global issue. The word ta`awanu (cooperate) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse has the morphological form tafa`al, which implies the notion of reciprocity between two parties, like the Arabic word tasharak (share) which implies the participation of two parties on equal basis. For example, 'Tasharak `Amr wa Zayd', 'Sharak Zayd `Amr' or 'Sharak `Amr Zayd' mean that `Amr and Zayd participated with each other on equal basis, the only difference in the second and third examples is that 'Zayd' is the subject in the second example and the object in the third example, and '`Amr' is the object in the second example and the subject in the third example.

For example, 'Qatal fulan fulanan' means that someone fought another. When two people are involved in the same verb, there is a subject and an object. There is a difference between this, the previous examples and the following example 'A`en fulanan' (help someone), which is an order to only one person to help another person. This example is different from 'Ta`awan ma`a fulan' which is an instruction to one person to help another.

Life's undertakings are varied to the extent that they cannot be covered by a single talent. When you build a house, you need someone to dig the ground for setting the foundations and build the walls, someone to make the bricks, someone to make the cement, and someone to make the iron. One person cannot learn all these talents and build a house by himself, but cooperation involves assigning a particular task to each person. There is a specialist in every field which man requires such as; sewing, medicine, pharmaceuticals and other life needs. Allah commands the believers to cooperate so that life goes on, and each person will benefit from the skills of another exchange for him doing his own work diligently. The word ta`awanu which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means cooperating and helping one another. This word involves the existence of the person who helps and the person who is helped. However, the helper does not always give help, but one day he will be helped; and the one who is helped will not always be helped, but one day he will give help. This is the cooperation required for the life affairs which Allah has willed for His vicegerents on earth who are required to worship Allah alone without partners. It cannot be done by the efforts of only one person, but it needs different efforts and talents that must complement one another in order to be done.

When we build a single apartment building, we use many instruments which require much energy, starting with the architect who draws up plans for the plot of land. Then, he may produce a three-dimensional model of the building he wishes to construct if he wants to be more skilful in his craft. Then the piece of land will be dug by the person responsible for this task who will be followed by the person who also sets the foundation of the building and places the iron rods. This is followed by the persons who make the reinforced concrete, the persons who construct the building, the persons who install the sanitation and water supply systems and the persons who make the electrical connections. This involves the cooperation of different capabilities in order to construct a single building, and one person cannot do all these tasks.

Therefore, cooperation is essential for man in order to be a vicegerent. Being a vicegerent requires that he should reconstruct the earth, a task which requires him to avoid spoiling good elements, rather he should improve them, Allah says, '…And cooperate in righteousness and piety, but do not cooperate in sin and aggression….' (al-Ma'ida: 2) This means that He wants the world to be reconstructed, not ruined, and He wants what is intrinsically sound to remain sound. Therefore, in order to reconstruct the earth, we must cooperate in good, not in evil.

The word bir which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means the matters towards which the soul feels comfortable, while the word al-ithm means the matters which trouble the soul and what a person fears that it may be discovered by others. If you proceed to do something but fear that people will see you doing it, this is considered a sin because if it was not a sin, you will like people to see you doing it. Therefore, Allah's saying, '... And cooperate in righteousness and piety, but do not cooperate in sin and aggression...' (al-Ma'ida: 2) is a commandment for every group of people to cooperate in doing good, and it is appropriate to say to every group: Cooperate with one another, as long as you do not allow your organisation to engage in any activities which contradict your religion, such as the Rotary Club and the Masons, whose activities are said to be benevolent. Any charitable organisation is welcome, but it should not imitate the West; rather, it should do benevolent activities in the name of Islam so that the world will know that these benevolent activities are done in a Muslim country. It is most preferable not to give Islamic organisations foreign names so that no one thinks that the benevolent activities are done by non-Muslims. If any Muslim can do benevolent activities, he should do them in the name of Islam. Every person should know Islam instructs the Muslims to devote their lives to benevolence and goodness. Accordingly, the beneficiaries of charitable organisations should not imagine, mistakenly, that benevolent and good activities are done apart from Islam. We are instructed to ascribe the benevolent deeds we do for our religion because our religion commanded and encouraged us to do them. Every Muslim must know that his religion is not devoid of values so that he needs to acquire them from non-Muslim countries, but Islam makes the Muslims free of any need for anything other than it. If we do benevolent deeds and offer social services to the people, we should not ascribe these deeds to other than Muslims. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And who is better in speech than one who invites to Allah and does righteousness and says, "Indeed, I am of the Muslims."' (Fussilat: 33)

Therefore, each Muslim should do good deeds while declaring that Islam commands them to do so, and should not ascribe these good deeds to any other organisation. It is forbidden for the Muslim to ascribe his good deeds to non-Muslim organisations because this cooperation would not be for the sake of Allah. Allah says: '... And cooperate in righteousness and piety, but do not cooperate in sin and aggression....' (al-Ma'ida: 2) He wants us to do good and prevent it from being demolished; and everyone must be aware that he cannot do all forms of goodness alone.

If a poor man who has only one garment is asked from where he got his loaf of bread, he may say that the grocer gave him this loaf of bread. This indicates that Allah willed that this grocer to sell bread for people and to give away some bread as charity. As for the bakery, the flour came to the baker from the mill where dozens of workers and engineers work to grind the flour for them to deliver it to the bakery where someone makes dough from it, someone bakes it and someone sells it.

We must realise Allah’s Omnipotence which allowed investors, who were thinking of their own benefit, to buy these huge machines for grinding and baking. It is difficult for a single person to buy such machines because of their high price. In addition, these machines must be imported from foreign nations which have laboratories and scientists that study motion and energy in order to design these machines so that a man can eat bread.

This is how the will of Allah causes all actions of life to be organised. The grocer sells the bread which the baker makes, and the grinder, kneader, machine importer, and designer participate in making bread. In addition, the school which teaches the engineer who designs the machine also participate in making the bread. Many people cooperate to make a loaf of bread even though most of them only think about bread when we are hungry.

Accordingly, all the actions of life rely on cooperation, but if people cooperate in doing evil, they will destroy good deeds because cooperation in evil begins with assisting in an action which contradicts Allah’s instructions that consist of commands and prohibitions, while the matters which are not regulated by commands and prohibitions are permissible; one may do them or not as he wishes.

The one who commits himself to Allah’s Commands and prohibitions cooperates in righteousness and piety, while the one who does the opposite cooperates in evil and aggression. This is because he turns the commands into prohibitions and vice versa.

Allah’s saying: ‘... And cooperate in righteousness and piety, but do not cooperate in sin and aggression...’ (al-Ma’ida: 2), ensures the reconstruction of the earth and prevention of corruption. The one who takes bribes, and the one who facilitates bribery by acting as a mediator between the briber and the bribe, the one who delivers intoxicants, and the one who cheats are considered as cooperating in evil and aggression. Even the doorman of an apartment building who knows that suspicious activities take place in one of the apartments and takes a compensation for this, cooperates in sin.

All these people should beware of being tempted by the benefit which these sinful acts yield because Allah will cause these people to have a tragic end. In addition, the woman who tempts people with her beauty, her life will end with suffering and with no aid except from those kind people who were not seduced by her beauty and did not enjoy it unlawfully. This is because when a man sees a woman with whom he engaged in sinful acts, he will remember all the calamities which befall him because of her and will hate her for it.

Allah wants justice to prevail in the world for it to be balanced, and so anyone who gains something through sin will suffer due to this sin in his life. A person may count all the money which he has earned lawfully by hard work and the money he has earned by unlawful means, and then consider the calamities which have befallen him and the costs they have incurred upon him. This person will find that the calamities have taken all the money he earned by unlawful means and even the money he earned lawfully. This matter always occurs in this way; Allah does not postpone it to the Hereafter, as He wants to establish justice in this world, otherwise, how could those who do not believe in the Day of Reckoning witness Allah's Ability to maintain the balance of His universe? Allah has willed that there should be reckoning in this world so that those who do not believe in the Day of Reckoning do not cause corruption in the universe. Everyone who causes corruption will realise the bad destiny of another one who also caused corruption. Therefore, those who enjoy the yields of sinful acts in this worldly life should beware of their deeds before it is too late. The only people who are excused are children who are immature and unable to perceive the fact that they live on ill-gotten money. However, once the boy or girl grows up and realises that the money is earned from unlawful sources, she must be ashamed to buy a dress with this money, or even eat a single piece of bread earned by unlawful money. A person must be aware that Allah has allowed him to ask about the source of the money he receives, so that he does not use this ill-gotten money. A person may pay this ill-gotten money for charity rather than spending it on himself, and Allah will never leave such a person in need of money.

Everyone must consider deeply Allah’s saying: ‘...And cooperate in righteousness and piety, but do not cooperate in sin and aggression...’ (al-Ma’ida: 2), and make it a criterion by which he judges the people he sees in the world. The same also applies to the taxi driver who puts a veil over a man and woman committing unlawful acts in the taxi and takes an extra charge for that. This man should consider the money which he gains in this way and the money he spends on treating his illness, or that of the children he supports.

‘... And cooperate in righteousness and piety, but do not cooperate in sin and aggression...’ (al-Ma’ida: 2). There are different forms of aggression from which society suffers. Aggression against time takes place when a person takes compensation for work which he does not carry out, aggression against people by usurping their rights or taking bribes from them. In order to maintain faith in society, being a vicegerent on earth must be preserved. This necessitates reconstruction of the earth and prevention of corruption in it.

‘…but do not cooperate in sin and aggression. And fear Allah; indeed, Allah is severe in penalty.’ (al-Ma’ida: 2) This means that these transgressions result from the lack of cooperation in righteousness and from cooperation in sin and aggression, and there will be severe retribution for these transgressions. Piety means to follow Allah’s Commands and to refrain from His prohibitions so that we do not turn the commands into prohibitions or vice versa. Accordingly, we will be protected from the punishment of the Compeller.

Some shallow-minded people might say that there is contradiction in some of the verses of the Quran, as some of the verses state, ‘...fear the Fire...’ (al-Baqara: 24), while others state’... And fear Allah...’ (al-Baqara: 194). They wonder if it is possible for a person to protect himself from the fire and from Allah. These people do not understand the meaning of the Arabic word ittaqu (place a protective shield between someone and that which may harm him). Therefore, ittaqu Allah means (protect yourself from Allah’s punishment by following His commands and avoiding His prohibitions).

When a person places a protective shield between himself and Allah, he places a protective shield between himself and Allah’s Wrath. Therefore, to protect oneself from Allah’s Wrath means protecting oneself from fire.

Allah ends the verse by saying: '... indeed, Allah is severe in penalty.' (al-Ma'ida: 2) People neglect cooperating in righteousness and commit sins because they do not find any deterrent in their societies; otherwise, society would protect its members from committing sins. If there was faith-based awareness in society, it would ostracise the transgressors and make them feel that they were abandoned. Accordingly, they would come back to the right path.

People are only tempted to commit serious crimes because society does not show enough concern for small crimes. Therefore, Allah draws our attention to the fact that He will not ignore the matter as some of His slaves do, as people may be complementary and may not try to prevent the sins which some of them commit. However, Allah is severe in retribution that will take place at a time when the individual has no influence, wealth, position, or lineage to protect him from Allah. If the weakness of society encourages you to cooperate in sin, you must fear Allah, for He is severe in retribution.

How will the sinner be punished? We do not know because we are not Allah. We may find that the retribution creeps into the sinner in the form of a painful illness that not only compels him to spend all the money he has, but also to ask others to help with his treatment or the treatment of someone he loves. The means of Allah's retribution may not wait until the Hereafter, but may befall the sinner without him realising that; and this is known as severe retribution.

Allah declares certain things to be unlawful after having made other things lawful by saying, '…Lawful for you are the animals of grazing livestock…' (al-Ma'ida: 1). Allah Glorified and Exalted is He, gives further specification for the cattle which are made lawful. He has made lawful each pair of sheep, goat, camel, and cow, to which Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him added gazelles and wild cattle, and every sea creature. Allah's saying, '...except for that which is recited to you (in this Quran)...' (al-Ma'ida: 1) indicates that there will be a prohibition; Allah states in the Quran the cattle He forbids:

حُرِّمَتۡ عَلَيۡكُمُ ٱلۡمَيۡتَةُ وَٱلدَّمُ وَلَحۡمُ ٱلۡخِنزِيرِ وَمَآ أُهِلَّ لِغَيۡرِ ٱللَّهِ بِهِۦ وَٱلۡمُنۡخَنِقَةُ وَٱلۡمَوۡقُوذَةُ
وَٱلۡمُتَرَدِّيَةُ وَٱلنَّطِيحَةُ وَمَآ أَكَلَ ٱلسَّبُعُ إِلَّا مَا ذَكَّيۡتُمۡ وَمَا ذُبِحَ عَلَى ٱلنُّصُبِ وَأَن
تَسۡتَقۡسِمُواْ بِٱلۡأَزۡلَٰمِۚ ذَٰلِكُمۡ فِسۡقٌۗ ٱلۡيَوۡمَ يَئِسَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ مِن دِينِكُمۡ فَلَا تَخۡشَوۡهُمۡ
وَٱخۡشَوۡنِۚ ٱلۡيَوۡمَ أَكۡمَلۡتُ لَكُمۡ دِينَكُمۡ وَأَتۡمَمۡتُ عَلَيۡكُمۡ نِعۡمَتِي وَرَضِيتُ لَكُمُ ٱلۡإِسۡلَٰمَ دِينٗاۚ
فَمَنِ ٱضۡطُرَّ فِي مَخۡمَصَةٍ غَيۡرَ مُتَجَانِفٖ لِّإِثۡمٖ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٞ ﴿٣﴾

You are forbidden to eat carrion; blood; pig's meat; any animal over which any name other than God's has been invoked; any animal strangled, or victim of a violent blow or a fall, or gored or savaged by a beast of prey, unless you still slaughter it [in the correct manner]; or anything sacrificed on idolatrous altars. You are also forbidden to allot shares [of meat] by drawing marked arrows — a heinous practice – today the disbelievers have lost all hope that you will give up your religion. Do not fear them: fear Me. Today I have perfected your religion for you, completed My blessing upon you, and chosen as your religion islam: [total devotion to God]; but if any of you is forced by hunger to eat forbidden food, with no intention of doing wrong, then God is most forgiving and merciful [3] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 3)

The verse begins with His words, 'Prohibited to you are dead animals...' (al-Ma'ida: 3). We may observe that the first word of the verse is a passive verb, despite the one who forbids is obviously known: Allah. He does not force this upon anyone, for the addressee here participated in the covenant of faith with their Lord, so He Commands them and they have agreed to adhere to His commands. Therefore, Allah says, 'Prohibited'. Allah forbids and the faithful believer submits to this prohibition.

The word al-maytah which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means the dead animal whose spirit left the body without the body being damaged, i.e., the animal died of natural causes. Life ends in one of two ways: either by natural death that occurs without the body being damaged, or by the body being damaged beyond repair. When a man strangles another living being and prevents it from breathing, the spirit leaves the body because a part of the body is irreparably damaged, as breathing is essential. A person may also kill another by shooting him with bullets because the spirit can only remain within a body that has certain attributes.

But there are certain body parts in whose absence the soul can remain in the body, such as the hand; severing it does not entail death. If a person's heart stops, it may be massaged so that it beats again, as long as the brain is still alive; and the longest time the brain can remain alive without oxygen is seven minutes only in rare instances. (1) If the brain ceases to function, the person dies, so doctors have defined clinical death as the moment in which the brain ceases to function. Accordingly, there are two cases in which the soul leaves the body: natural death and killing.

In case of death, the spirit leaves the body without the body being damaged; as for killing, the spirit leaves the body because the body is damaged. It is out of Allah's Mercy that He forbade the eating of dead animals because it has died for a reason that cannot be recognized, lest the people eat it along with its disease.

Likewise, He forbade the consumption of blood, which is the liquid which flows in veins and arteries, gives the body heat and warmth, and transports nutrients. Blood has two different roles as it flows: it carries waste from the kidneys and lungs, and there is also oxygenated blood which carries nutrients. If people consume this blood, it could be the oxygenated kind or it could also be the kind of blood that has not yet been rid of the impurities of the kidneys and lungs. It is also called' spilled blood', i.e. flowing blood. In the past, people used to fill the intestines of the slaughtered animal with this blood, cook it and eat it.

There is also blood which is not impure such as the liver, which is a single piece, and the spleen; and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Two kinds of dead meat and two kinds of blood have been permitted to us. The two kinds of dead meat are fish and locusts, and the two kinds of blood are the liver and spleen.'(2)

(1) From Proofreader: This information is per the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawy may Allah rest his soul, and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily confirm to the scientific facts and information proven true.

(2) (Ahmad, Ibn Majah and Daraqatny)

So, the liver and the spleen are exempted from the general ruling of blood, but the blood which spills upon slaughtering is prohibited. The reason fish and locusts are lawful to eat is that their flesh does not contain flowing blood; and when you cut a large fish, no blood flows from it, but rather, it is only found inside the flaps of the head, and not in the capillaries. Therefore, when a fish dies, there is no harm in eating it, and the same is true for locusts.

Then, Allah states the prohibition of 'the flesh of swine' (al-Ma'ida: 3). No believer should ask about the reason for the prohibition of the flesh of swine. Scientists has made all kinds of researches to know why Allah has prohibited dead animals and blood, and they have realised that Allah does not want a disease to be conveyed from a dead animal to man, and He has forbidden blood because it contains toxic wastes like urea and other substances.

Every prohibition has a reason, which may be obvious or hidden. The Quran was revealed to an unlettered messenger who did not know about complex scientific matters, and the earlier Muslims implemented the teachings of the Quran because it was revealed by Allah, in Whom they believed as All-Wise. They also knew that Allah wants the best for His Creation. Every handicraft sets rules for protecting his craft. We do not find a furniture maker, for example, smashing up the wardrobe he has made; rather, he does his utmost to beautify the furniture he has made. As long as Allah is the One Who has created us and we believe in Him, we must obey His commands and refrain from all His prohibitions. This does not prevent us from utilising knowledge for the sake of strengthening faith, and to respond to any argumentative, probing person although no one has the right to raise arguments about Allah's religion. If he wants to argue, he must first argue about the existence of Allah and the Revelation Allah imparts to man by means of His messengers; if he is convinced, he must obey Allah's Commands. The religion should be studied from the top. The believers obey Allah's Commands, so when giving the ruling, Allah has not directed His instructions to all people, but He has directed them to the believers saying, 'O you who have believe…' (al-Ma'ida: 2) because the believers believe in Allah, so they must obey Him and follow His rulings.

The most valuable thing a man possesses is his health, so when his health declines, he searches for the causes. If food is the problem, he chooses a doctor who is specialised in the digestive system and who prescribes medicine for him. The sick person does not say to the doctor that he will not take this medicine unless he clarifies the reason for prescribing this medicine and its effect. So, the role of the mind here is to lead the person to a doctor whom he trusts, and he must then obey the instructions which this doctor gives for him. As long as one believes in Allah, he must obey His commands and avoid His prohibitions. The patient does not debate with the doctor, so how could any man argue with his Lord concerning a certain ruling?

A doctor may make a mistake, as any human being does, and he might even cause the death of his patient; when we have doubts about the instructions of a given doctor, we can seek the consultancy of other doctors, and then we obey their instructions. No one should argue concerning Allah's rulings, but we should obey all His commands.

Man puts his trust in human beings who are prone to error, so his trust in Allah should be above his trust in any other person. Therefore, the reasonable person should obey and follow Allah's Commandments and obey them without any debate, as the mind is the means to reflect on the signs of Allah's existence, but it should not lead a person to argue Allah's Commands which he should obey. 'Prohibited to you are dead animals, blood, the flesh of swine...' (al-Ma'ida: 3). Analyses have confirmed that the flesh of swine contains tapeworm, ringworm and several other worms which cannot be treated.

The next forbidden item is: '... and that which has been dedicated to other than Allah...' (al-Ma'ida: 3). This means uttering a name other than Allah when slaughtering an animal, such as saying, 'In the name of al-Lat and al-`Uzza' and not saying, 'In the Name of Allah, Allah is the Greatest.' This is because man benefits from the genera which existed in this universe when he was created and these genera waiting to serve him because he is Allah's vicegerent on earth. Animals have souls, but they are inferior to man because he has the ability to think; plants are inferior to animals, and inanimate bodies are inferior to plants. Every time man is served by beings, he must remember the Bounteous Creator; when man slaughters an animal; he does so by the leave of the Great Creator Who is greater than man, animals and the universe. Therefore, he must slaughter it in the Name of the Creator.

Some people do not eat meat out of sympathy and compassion towards animals, while they eat plants. However, if they know that plants also have life, will they refuse to eat them, too? It has been confirmed in this age that plants have life, and even inanimate bodies have life; if you split open a piece of stone or any kind of rock, you disturb with every tap of the hammer the cohesion of the particles of the rock which cling together, and you might do this without being aware of the life within it.

'…And there is not a thing except that it exalts (Allah) by His praise…' (al-Isra': 44). Allah's righteous servants know this fact and they deal with all the other creatures around them – whether animal or inanimate bodies – keeping in mind that they glorify Allah. Therefore, they do not belittle or despise things no matter how small they are; rather, they treat them gently. Even when they slaughter an animal, they have mercy on it, so they do not sharpen the knife in front of it or slaughter one animal in front of another. Moreover, they give food and water to the animal they wish to slaughter, because they know that it glorifies Allah. They slaughter the animals only because Allah has permitted them to eat it. They are held accountable for their deeds by Allah; as for the other beings around them, they are subdued by Allah.

These words of Allah convey a message: '... any animal over which any name other than Allah's has been invoked...' (al-Ma'ida: 3). Almighty Allah is the One Who has allowed us to eat living beings which have faculties of sensation and movement. He has created those animals and made them subservient to us so we can slaughter and eat them. Therefore, we must acknowledge the favour of the One Who has bestowed this on us and show gratitude to Him by reciting His Name upon slaughtering, 'In the Name of Allah, Allah is the Greatest'. This is an acknowledgment that we only slaughter that animal in the Name of Him Who has permitted us to do so.

'Can they not see how, among the things made by Our Hands, We have created livestock they control? And We have made them obedient, so some can be used for riding, some for food' (Ya Sin: 71-72). Allah has subjected these animals to our will, and being able to slaughter and eat them is a manifestation of this favour. Hence, when we slaughter an animal, we must remember the One Who has subjected it to our will and made it lawful for us to eat. Also, Almighty Allah forbids eating strangled animals. Strangling entails depriving a living being from one of the three elements Allah has made indispensable for life: food, water, and air. The All-Wise Creator has created these elements and placed them in a particular order of importance. A man can live for thirty days without food, for Allah has allowed for any crisis that may result in food being inaccessible. He has equipped your body with the ability to store nutrients which can be used when no food supply is available. He has created in us the desire for food since we need not just to satisfy hunger, but also to enjoy food, and He has also equipped our bodies with the mechanisms necessary to answer this instinct.

Allah does not command us to combat all desires. He does not command us to shun food and despise lawful needs. Rather, Allah permits us to eat to provide our bodies with the essential strength and energy we need, and also to enjoy the pleasure of eating. Anything more than what is directly consumed to generate energy is stored in the body as fats and flesh; and if a day comes when you cannot find any food, you can derive energy from the stored fat. This is one aspect of the absolute precision of Allah's creation. A car, once it runs out of fuel, immediately stops working. The physical form Allah has created for you, however, does not immediately stop operating when food runs out, but it keeps going for thirty days–a sufficient time to receive help or find a way to provide yourself with food.

Arab women in the past used to describe penury by saying' One year melted the fat away, another year did away with the flesh, and another year reduced the bones to nothing!' This sums up the different degrees of hunger; at times of hunger, fats are the first to be used up. Then, if hunger persists, it starts to eat into the flesh and bones. As for water, a human being can do without water for three to ten days according to the amount of water stored in his body. Air is the most essential of all. A person cannot do without air for more than the period of a single breath.(1) If air is withheld for a longer time, death is the inevitable outcome. Breathing is the most important of life's essential needs. Out of His Wisdom and Mercy, Allah does not allow anyone to control air, unlike food and sometimes water because if anyone can control air, it will be fatal for the life of all living beings.

(1) This information is according to the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawy may Allah rest his soul and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily conform to the scientific facts and information proven true.

The Arabic language boasts great vastness and precision that manifests itself in numerous ways, like in the formation of its words. Consider, for example, the three words: nafs (soul), nafas (breath) and nafis (precious) that are all derived from the same root n-f-s. The word nafs refers to the union of spirit and material which causes life with all its manifestations; motion, thinking, etc. The word nafas refers to the air which constitutes one of the most essential requirements of life. Life is a precious gift, and therefore from the name of its basic constituent, nafs (soul), a word for ‘precious’ is derived, namely nafis. Consequently, this gift must not be wasted doing nothing or seeking unworthy gains or transient pleasures. Rather, life must be devoted to striving for a goal which is precious; and what is more precious than faith? Living for the cause of your Creator, Almighty Allah is the most sublime goal.

The Arabic language contains many examples of what is called jinas, or paronomasia that means the use of homonymous words to create a rhetorical effect. Sometimes the words are not homonymous but share the same root, which suggests that they share a common subtle meaning. A poet said, for example:

I left my lands and came to you asiru (walking)!

Love has made my heart to you asiru (a captive)!

The word asiru in the first line is a verb meaning ‘walking’, and in the second line it is a noun meaning ‘a captive’.

A strangled animal is one that has been choked to death, so why does Allah mention it after already mentioning ‘carrion’ since the latter includes all animals that have been killed or have died by any means? The reason is that a strangled animal should be included in another category, since it may be rescued before breathing its last. If a person catches an animal that has been strangled and slaughters it before it loses its life, and blood flows from it when it is slaughtered and its eye flutters or its tail wags, it is lawful to eat it. However, if a strangled animal, when slaughtered, does not emit any blood, it is unlawful to eat. This is because it means that it had already died before being slaughtered. In the verse, Allah also forbids eating an animal that has been beaten to death; that is, an animal that has lost its life because of severe damage. It is also forbidden to eat an animal which has fallen from a height and dies as a result, an animal that has been gored to death by another animal, or the animal which has been '…savaged by a beast of prey…' (al-Ma'ida: 3), meaning the flesh left over by a predator from an animal which it has hunted and killed. This part of the verse, '…except that which you slaughter (in the correct manner before it dies)...' (al-Ma'ida: 3) refers to animals which have been strangled, beaten severely, thrown or have fallen off a high place, or have been gored by another animal but are caught while they are still alive and slaughtered, so blood flows from them and their bodies twitch. These are lawful to eat.

Such was the opinion of the Companion Ali ibn Abu Taleb as well as the Companion Ibn Abbas, two of the most prominent Islamic scholars and exegetes in the history of Islam. They said this part of the verse, '…except that which you slaughter (in the correct manner before it dies)...' (al-Ma'ida: 3) is an exception to all the aforementioned cases (animals which have been strangled, beaten severely, thrown or have fallen off a high place, or have been gored by another animal), excluding carrion, blood and swine-flesh. Some edible animals are too wild to be handled, but the abovementioned exception means one may confine an animal with ropes or strike it with an object to make it lose its balance and weaken for a moment, allowing the butcher to slaughter it in the way Islam has made lawful.

Allah does not specify which part of the animal's body may be beaten, whether it is the belly, the head or the back; an animal may be beaten by stones being flung at it, and these stones might strike it on the head, the belly or the back. This means it is permissible for us to strike a wild animal to be able to control and slaughter it; however, it may not be killed by any other means but the lawful slaughtering Allah has ordained.

The criteria which tell us whether the flesh is lawful or unlawful are ascertained by asking, 'Does blood flow from the animal when it is slaughtered? Does its body twitch or even just its eye flutter?' If these criteria are met when an animal is slaughtered, then it is permissible to eat it. Finally, the Name of Allah must be invoked upon slaughtering, otherwise the slaughtering process is unlawful and the flesh of the slaughtered animal may not be eaten; for even though the animal may be physically sound, the creed based on which it is slaughtered is un-Islamic.

‘…savaged by a beast of prey, except that which you slaughter (in the correct manner before it dies); or anything sacrificed on idolatrous altars…’ (al-Ma’ida: 3). Allah forbids one from eating that which a beast of prey has savaged, unless the prey is still alive and can still be slaughtered according to the way Islamic Law prescribes. He the Exalted generally forbids whatever is not slaughtered according to the proper Islamic method. Hence, an animal may not be slaughtered using a bone or a tooth (as a weapon or tool for slaying), or slaughtered on an idolatrous altar, i.e. on stones set up for idols. The latter is prohibited because it bears resemblance to the slaughtering of offerings for idols. Again, even though the animal is physically sound, the manner of slaughtering is un-Islamic.

‘Idolatrous altars’ refers to the stones that used to be placed around the Ka’ba upon which the idolaters would slaughter offerings to express devotion to their gods. This manner of slaughtering is at variance with the monotheistic creed and this is why it is forbidden. This is also the reason why it is forbidden to slaughter an animal without invoking the Name of Allah or by mentioning the name of any false god. To invoke a name other than Allah’s on slaughtering an animal is a form of polytheism that is associating partners with Allah. He the Exalted and Almighty has made these animals subservient to man’s will and has made them lawful to be eaten even though they are living beings that have faculties of motion and sensation. The so-called gods for which offerings used to be made on altars never had and never will have any power over any creature, or any ability to bestow or withhold anything. We must direct our devotion to the One Who has created all things and the Bestower of all favours on His servants.

‘…You are also forbidden ‘an tastaqsimu (to allot shares) (of meat) by al-azlam (drawing marked arrows)…’ (al-Ma’ida: 3). The Arabic word tastaqsimu means ‘to determine one’s fate/share’. At that time, distributing shares of a slaughtered animal was a troublesome job. As a result, whoever did it sought to release himself from the responsibility by claiming that ‘al-azlam commanded him'. These were wooden arrows with either 'My lord commands me to do it' or 'My lord forbids me to do it' written on them, but some arrows had nothing written on them. If an idolater wanted to travel, he would go to the custodian of the Ka'ba or a soothsayer, and either of the latter would take the arrows out of a bag and then move them around. The idolater would choose an arrow; if it said, 'My lord commands me to do it', he would travel for the purpose he wanted, and if there was nothing written on the arrow he would return it and choose another. If the chosen arrow said, 'My lord forbids me to do it', he would not travel.

This poses many questions, 'Who is the lord who commanded or forbade them? Did they mean Allah, the True Lord, or the false gods they worshipped? And if this is the case, then which one of them commanded or forbade them? If they meant Allah, then who told them that He commanded such-and-such a journey or forbade it?' That was nothing but telling lies about Allah regarding things of which no knowledge had been revealed to them. On the other hand, if they meant to refer to the false gods they worshipped, then in such a case the creed and the practice were both totally false at the very roots. Drawing arrows was also employed for making decisions about whether to marry or not. The verse we are dealing with particularly mentions drawing arrows for distributing shares of meat.

In the pre-Islamic era of ignorance, pagans had ten arrows, each of which had a name written on it. The arrow picked up by each person determined his share of the flesh of a slaughtered animal based on that name. The arrow named al-fadh corresponded to a single share. The one with at-taw'am written on it gave the one who drew it two shares. The one called ar-raqib meant that three shares will be given. The one with al-hels allotted four shares for whoever picked it. The arrow named an-nafer gave five shares. The one with the name al-musbel corresponded to six shares and al-mu'alla to seven shares. The remaining three arrows were: al-manih, as-safih and al-waghd. A slaughtered animal was divided into twenty-eight portions which were distributed among those who drew one of the first seven of the aforementioned arrows. As for the three arrows mentioned at the end, those who drew them received no share and had to pay for the slaughtered animal.

So, Allah commands us: '…You are also forbidden' an tastaqsimu (to allot shares) (of meat) by al-azlam (drawing marked arrows)…' (al-Ma'ida: 3). Distributing shares by drawing marked arrows is forbidden and is a kind of gambling. The outcome results in allotting undeserved shares to some, while wronging others. This is different from casting lots to make random selections; in the latter case, lots are cast to make an unbiased decision where no personal desire or caprice interferes.

Suppose two people owned a house and wanted to share it equally. They divided it into two equal shares, wrote their names on pieces of paper, and let a young child draw one of the two pieces of paper out of a jar. This way, each received a share of the house equal to that of the other based on the lot drawn for him.

Consider this example as well. If a man has more than one wife, he has to cast lots to decide who of them will accompany him on a journey. The purpose of casting lots in this case is to ensure that none of the wives became angry for not being chosen. Since desire of the husband plays no part in making the decision, he is not to blame for whoever of his wife is not chosen for his company in the journey.

This reminds me of Prophet Muhammad's arrival at Medina. We have an excellent example in him to follow peace and blessings be upon him. When he reached Medina, he did not want to offend any of Al-Ansar (the Helpers: Medinan Muslims), knowing that each of them was hoping that he would choose to stay in his house. Everyone tried to take hold of the reins of the Prophet's she-camel to make it stop before his house, but the Prophet said to them, 'Let her go her way, for she is commanded by Allah (regarding where to stop).'(1)

As the choice depended on where the she-camel stopped, there was no room for anyone to say or feel that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him favoured one person over another. The decision was in the Hand of Him Who cannot be contradicted by anyone.

It is clear that casting lots in such cases is not any form of gambling, which Islam forbids. Allah has also prescribed for us istikharah (a prayer observed to ask Allah for guidance) when we want to make a decision regarding any matter. As for gambling in order to allot shares or determine future actions, this is forbidden by the Sacred Law of Allah because it is improper and unfair.

After stating those unlawful practices and the food which is forbidden to eat, He says that whoever commits any of these has thus done '…fisq (a heinous practice)…' (al-Ma'ida: 3). The word fisq means 'refraining from obedience'. We have previously pointed out that the Quran sometimes uses tangible things to explain abstract notions. We perceive physical things through the senses, and then from such perceptions we infer and comprehend intellectual matters.

The basic sense of the word fisq indicates a ripened date breaking free from its skin. When the fresh date softens, it shrinks inside the skin and then breaks out of it. This is the process originally described as fisq (coming out/breaking free). When a date leaves its skin, flies swarm around it and dust taints it. Consequently, it becomes unfit for a human being to eat. Likewise, the Law ordained by Allah is a form of protection for people from corruption, and whoever discards it or forsakes it will become a vulnerable prey to evil insinuations and misguidance; hence the correlation between these two denotations of the word fisq.

The Law Allah has ordained constitutes religion. It establishes the creed pertaining to divinity and monotheism, the divine Revelations imparted to people through Allah's Messenger–Prophet Muhammad–and the rulings regulating society, with regards to acts of worship, transactions, relationships, and all aspects of life. All these rulings built the general structure of Islam in two stages: the Meccan stage when the purpose of the revealed verses were to focus on the essence of faith, monotheism, prophethood and divine Revelation, and the Medinan stage when the verses of the Quran started to focus on and outline the rulings regulating life.

By sending down the Book–the Noble Quran–that teaches people the creed and rulings of Islam, the religion was completed, and this is why Allah says: '…this day the disbelievers have lost all hope that you will give up your religion…' (al-Ma'ida: 3). The disbelievers had some hope that the Muslims would distort or abandon their religion. People of the Book wished the Muslims would do to the Quran what they had done to their own books, forgetting, abandoning and falsifying them, as Allah tells us about them: '…They have forgotten some of what they were told to remember…' (al-Ma'ida: 13).

Their hopes, however, were all destroyed. The Companions learnt every verse of the Quran by heart and wrote it down directly after hearing it from Prophet Muhammad. The previous scriptures were not recorded until three or four centuries after they were revealed. With the Quran, the case was completely different: the verses were immediately recorded and arranged as Prophet Muhammad ordered his Companions.

The people of the Book did not only forget much of what they had been told to remember, but they also distorted much and concealed much: 'As for those who conceal the Scripture that Allah has sent down and sell it for a small price, they only fill their bellies with Fire…' (al-Baqara: 174).

Allah sent down certain verses that abrogated other verses which had been sent down before them. Prophet Muhammad could have been reluctant to tell people that a ruling he had told them before had been changed by Allah. Allah knew best what suited the believers at every stage following the advent of His Message, and can anyone deny Him the right to change anything He wills? This was proof that Prophet Muhammad was completely honest in delivering all that Allah had revealed to Him. This, too, stripped the disbelievers of every hope that Islam may ever be forgotten, distorted, or concealed by its adherents.

Some of the disbelievers of Quraysh imagined that the Quran would meet the same destiny as the Torah; for despite the fact that the Jews had a remainder of the Truth in the Torah, they did not follow it. They wished Muslims would likewise ignore what had been revealed to them in the Quran, but Muslims were very steadfast and Allah reassured them: '…This day the disbelievers have lost all hope that you will give up your religion…' (al-Ma'ida: 3).

The word 'this day' refers to the time which has passed as well as to the future. The Quran is a timeless Message that will continue to be recited and will continue to be evidence for the Truth. The words 'this day' will continue to refer to every time when it is recited until Allah brings time to an end. Allah has completed the religion of Islam and willed it to be the religion of His servants. He has sent down the Quran and has undertaken to preserve it against distortions or concealment ever since it was revealed over fourteen centuries, and He will continue to do so until the end of time. All this deepens and confirms the disbelievers' despair that the Quran would ever be forgotten or concealed. Prophet Muhammad delivered every word. Even when Allah reproached him, he did not conceal anything and recited every verse to His Companions, who wrote and memorized what they had heard from him. For example, on one occasion the hearts of the Muslims inclined to acquitting a Muslim who had committed theft and condemning an innocent Jew for the crime; hence Allah revealed to His Prophet Muhammad: 'We have sent down the Scripture to you (Prophet) with the truth so that you can judge between people in accordance with what Allah has shown you. Do not be an advocate for those who betray their trust'(1) (an-Nisa': 105).

In this verse, there is a command to Prophet Muhammad to judge justly, even if that judgement was against a Muslim. It also implies a call for repentance and imploring forgiveness for inclining to judge in favour of the guilty Muslim against the innocent Jew. Such is the tolerance of Islam!

People of the Book distorted the truth that was stated in their books by replacing it with other than the words of Allah and alleging they were revealed by Him. This was their crime, and they wished Muslims would do the same, but they lost all hope when they saw that the Muslims did not stray into such deviations as the adherents of the previous Books had.

'…This day the disbelievers have lost all hope that you will give up your religion…' (al-Ma'ida: 3). They hoped Islam would be defeated, but they saw it was triumphant at the hands of the believers. They wanted to extinguish Allah's Light with their mouths, but Allah lets His light be completed even though the disbelievers may hate it.

After thus reassuring Muslims, Allah tells them: '…Do not fear them, but fear Me…' (al-Ma'ida: 3). Allah has decreed that nothing will allow the enemies of Islam to demean or destroy Islam. Consequently, there is no reason for Muslims to fear their enemies so long as they fear Allah and are mindful of their duty to Him. Allah has promised to grant victory to the believers if they remain steadfast in faith and fear none but Him.

(1) 'A man from Medina stole a suit of armour and accused a Jew of stealing it. He brought his family to ask Prophet Muhammad to rule against the Jew and he was about to do this when these verses were revealed (Razi)', Abdel Haleem, The Quran, A New Translation.

Being Muslims, however, is not a guarantee that victory will be their share; Allah does not change the state of a people until they first change what is within themselves. Muslims receive victory only when they abide by the Book of Allah and the Sunnah (teachings) of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When they act at variance with this guidance, Allah will not help them, just as He caused the believers to be defeated at the Battle of Uhud by the idolaters because they disobeyed the commands of Prophet Muhammad. It did not avail them at all that they were Muslims as long as they did not comply with what Islam enjoined on them. To continue, they (the disbelievers) are not enemies that should be feared; a believer should fear none but Allah. It is only Him we should be mindful of and only His guidance to which should be adhered. He has sown despair in the hearts of your enemies, and as a result they have lost all hope that you, the Muslims, will forget what you have been guided to or attempt to distort or conceal it. Allah has guarded His religion against the like of this; the fault its adherents may commit only entails straying from its Straight Path by disobeying or neglecting what Islam prescribes.

'…This day I have perfected your religion for you, completed My blessing upon you, and chosen for you Islam (total devotion to Allah) as your religion. But if any of you is forced by hunger to eat forbidden food, with no intention of doing wrong, then Allah is most Forgiving and Merciful' (al-Ma'ida: 3). When we say that a thing is perfect, it means all its parts are in the correct place and each part does what it is supposed to do. Allah has bestowed His blessings fully on us by sending down to us the perfect religion that fits all times, places, and conditions of life, and prescribes rulings regulating every aspect of life: spiritual, social, economic, etc.

Allah has willed that Islam should be the religion of His servants until the end of time. Therefore, claiming that Islam is no longer fit to be applied here or now is a claim that Allah needs to be corrected! However Allah says: '…I have perfected your religion…' (al-Ma'ida: 3), that is, nothing is defective in it, and He says '…I have…completed My blessing…' (al-Ma'ida: 3), that is, nothing is missing. To think that Islam was appropriate only for the past implies a belief that there are matters that escaped the Knowledge of Allah, and hence His ordinance does not include or suit every time or place. Allah says: '…I have…chosen for you Islam as your religion…', so anyone who questions or defies this actually gives preference to his own choice above that of his Lord and Creator.

Knowledge of the Creator encompasses all His creatures. Allah Glorified is He knows that people are subject to vicissitudes and that situations may arise which make it difficult or impossible for some to adhere strictly to every ruling. Consequently, He does not leave them to invent their own dispensations, but rather, He makes dispensations for them. No one, therefore, can give an excuse by saying' We are unable to act on such-and-such ruling', for when Allah knows there is a thing that His servants may not be able to do, He already ordains an alternative lenient ruling to make things easier for them. As long as we are subject to variations in circumstances that take one from strength to weakness, from wealth to poverty, or from dignity and domination to humiliation, Allah the Exalted has allowed for the fact that some of those who believe in His religion may be prevented by causes out of their control from adhering to any of His commands because of illness or dire necessity; He says: '…But if any of you is forced by hunger to eat forbidden food, with no intention of doing wrong, then Allah is most Forgiving and Merciful' (al-Ma'ida: 3).

Sustenance is essential to preserve life. Consequently, in case of severe hunger which is likely to cause death, Allah allows a person to eat the flesh of a dead animal or the like of what is normally prohibited–as long as his life depends on it. No one can say, for example, 'I am driven by necessity to take a usurious loan from a bank because I want to trade with a large capital of a hundred thousand and I have only one thousand'! Many people believe this is what' necessity' means. No, you must invest only the one thousand you possess, and there is no necessity in this case to deal with usury. 'Necessity' means a case where one's life, or the lives of those under his care or guardianship, is at stake. Islam permits a person who has no money at all to take a usurious loan–if he cannot find anyone to give him a fair loan–to buy medicine, food or something he disparately needs to save his life or that of his dependants. In this case, the usurious creditor is the one who bears the sin of the transaction, not the debtor because he acted in a case of necessity.

The verse we are dealing with refers to a person driven by extreme need to eat what is otherwise unlawful while he hates having to do it, not a person who enjoys doing a sin and indulges himself in it. It is about resorting to unlawful food after all other means have failed and consuming of it only according to the extent of one's need. Scholars of jurisprudence even say that a man in such a situation–lost in a desert, for example–must eat only as much carrion or the like as is necessary to keep himself alive, not until he is full, as long as he cannot find anything else to sustain himself.

A person may resort to this choice only when driven by dire necessity, not by any inclination towards sin. It follows that he must only take as much as is essentially needed to preserve his life. To be in dire necessity means to grow bereft of all means. Allah has created means and causes, dispersed them in the world and commanded them to respond to whoever does the necessary effort to make use of them, be they a believer or a disbeliever. Whoever ploughs a land, sows seeds in it and irrigates it will receive its yield, and a clever trader will make money and prosper, whether he is a believer or not.

'If anyone desires a harvest in the life to come, We shall increase it for him; if anyone desires a harvest in this world, We shall give him a share of it…' (ash-Shura: 20).

People employ all the possible means in order to achieve the outcomes expected of them. Desperate need or dire necessity is when a person has no access to any means; this is why Allah says: 'Who is it that answers al-mudtarr (the distressed) when they call upon Him? Who removes their suffering?' (an-Naml: 62). The word mudtarr means someone who is bereft of all possible means, i.e. there is nothing he can do to fulfil his need. Someone might say, 'I pray to Allah, but He does not answer my prayers'. Perhaps you are not in a real need. Maybe you ask Him to give you a palace to live in instead of your apartment, a luxury car instead of the ordinary one you have. Such are not cases of extreme necessity.

Ponder this example–which is only for clarification, for Allah is far Exalted above any comparison. A foreman seeing one of his workers carrying a large box that is too heavy for him would rise and help the worker with that box. Such is the kind of help to be expected of one another in times of need. Likewise, Allah assists those who do their best. As for those who do not make use of the means Allah grants them and then implore His help, they are not likely to receive it. So long as Allah has made the means available to you, you have to employ them and work while praying to Allah for assistance. Only when you are short of the possible means and are therefore unable to take any action will you be excused. When this is the case, invoke Him and He will relieve your distress and compensate you for your want of means and causes.

After making this dispensation, Allah concludes the verse by saying: '…But if any of you is forced by hunger to eat forbidden food, with no intention of doing wrong, then Allah is most Forgiving and Merciful' (al-Ma'ida: 3). Allah has made this dispensation for us, but why does He end the verse with a statement confirming His Forgiveness and Mercy? Allah bestows His Forgiveness on His servants in two ways: either by excusing His servant from being punished for a sin, or by guarding him against committing a sin. This explains to us why Allah says to Prophet Muhammad: 'so that Allah may forgive you your past and future sins…' (al-Fath: 2). Such is the kind of Forgiveness Allah bestows on His servant to prevent him from committing the sin in the first place. In the following verse, Allah says:

يَسْـَٔلُونَكَ مَاذَآ أُحِلَّ لَهُمْ ۖ قُلْ أُحِلَّ لَكُمُ ٱلطَّيِّبَٰتُ ۙ وَمَا عَلَّمْتُم مِّنَ
ٱلْجَوَارِحِ مُكَلِّبِينَ تُعَلِّمُونَهُنَّ مِمَّا عَلَّمَكُمُ ٱللَّهُ ۖ فَكُلُوا۟ مِمَّآ أَمْسَكْنَ عَلَيْكُمْ
وَٱذْكُرُوا۟ ٱسْمَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيْهِ ۖ وَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ سَرِيعُ ٱلْحِسَابِ ﴿٤﴾

They ask you, Prophet, what is lawful for them. Say, 'All good things are lawful for you.' [This includes] what you have taught your birds and beasts of prey to catch, teaching them as God has taught you, so eat what they catch for you, but first pronounce God's name over it. Be mindful of God: He is swift to take account [4] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 4)

After Allah has made clear what He has made lawful and unlawful, we find that lawful things are unlimited, for when Allah mentions ten things that are unlawful, these ten things, needless to say, do not constitute everything in existence. When Allah Glorified is He created Adam peace be upon him and made him procreate to fulfil his role as a vicegerent on earth, He placed within this earth enough sustenance to preserve the life of humankind.

Allah has made preservation of human life in two ways: protection of an individual's life and preservation of mankind as a whole. The former is fulfilled through the basic needs of life: air, water and food, and the latter through marriage and procreation. For these two essential goals to be achieved, certain factors must exist to serve humankind and provide them with power.

Accordingly, Allah Almighty reassures us that what we need for life to continue is already guaranteed by Him: 'Say, "How can you disregard the One Who created the earth in two Days? How can you set up other gods as His equals? He is the Lord of all the worlds!" He placed solid mountains on it, bestowed abundant blessing in it, measured out all its varied provisions for all who seek them—all in four Days. Then He turned to the sky, which was smoke—and He said to it and the earth, "Come into being, willingly or not," and they said, "We come willingly"' (Fussilat: 9-11).

Allah informs us that He has created on the earth its means of subsistence and made them subservient to humankind for this life to continue. Whoever tries to count the blessings with which Allah has favoured humankind, he would find they are too many to comprehend. Since the dawn of human history, no one has ever tried to count the blessings Allah has created on earth. People have always known that the favours of Allah are beyond calculation. Allah says: '…If you tried to count the blessings of Allah, you could never calculate them…' (Ibrahim: 34).

This is why Allah specifies in the Noble Quran the things that are unlawful for humankind, since the lawful things are countless. In the preceding verse, He tells us about ten unlawful things to bear in mind and avoid. (Are they) only ten? Yes, just this small number of things compared to the endless number of His blessings. It is also worthy of notice that Allah says in one verse: '…If you tried to count the blessings of Allah, you could never calculate them: man is truly unjust and ungrateful' (Ibrahim: 34). And in another verse, He says: 'If you tried to count the blessings of Allah, you could never calculate them: He is truly Most Forgiving and Most Merciful' (an-Nahl: 18).

Some may think we have before us a case of redundancy, but let us examine the two verses to see if this is true. We have the Giver of blessings, the recipients and the blessings themselves. As for the blessings, they are countless. As for the Giver of blessings, He is Forgiving and Merciful, and as for the recipients of blessings, they are unjust and ungrateful. Why does Allah tell us these truths in the Quran?

If Allah treated us in the way we deserve for our ingratitude and wrongdoing, He would withhold His blessings from us, but He continuously bestows His favours on us, all due to His Mercy and Grace. Each of these two verses conveys an important truth; Allah is Forgiving and Merciful, and He showers His countless blessings on humankind even though they are ungrateful and sinful. Thus, when one commits a sin, he should not despair; your Lord is always He Who is Forgiving and Merciful, irrespective of who you are. Do not despair, but keep imploring your Lord's Pardon and blessings despite your sins.

Allah has created the means of sustenance on earth and created with them the factors that make them fit for the service of humankind. For example, we sift wheat grains to make flour and bake bread. For wheat to grow, other factors are required: regular irrigation, ploughing, etc. Allah has created this for us and guaranteed for us our means of sustenance. He is our Lord and Provider and we must, therefore, obey His ordinance. He has told us what is lawful and what is unlawful for us; not everything He has created is lawful for us. There are things on earth which have been made to perform other functions but are not fit to be consumed by human beings. Some may wonder, 'Since Allah has created these things, why does He forbid them?'

Consider this example. Suppose an inventor made a machine to run on diesel but we used petrol instead, what would happen to it? It would break down. Allah has created humankind, so should we not believe Him when He tells us what is most suitable for us? Allah knows best what is good for our well being, and hence we should abide by what He commands; otherwise, life will become ruined. When electric wires are connected in the right manner, they give us light and power. When they are not, power will be cut off or a fire may even be caused.

What I want to say by these examples is that obedience to the Law set by Allah is the only way to set life right. In the realm of relationships, Allah has prescribed marriage for the preservation of humankind. If men and women seek any form of relationship other than lawful marriage, the world will be immersed in corruption.

A wedding party is a pleasant scene. The bride's father is seen happily smiling to everyone as he celebrates the unique occasion of his daughter's marriage to her suitor. He welcomes everyone attending the wedding, orders food and desserts to be served to them, and his heart is full of pride and elation on the pleasant occasion. Suppose, on the contrary, the same young man, instead of proposing to her by lawful means, tried to sneak into the house to see the daughter; how would her father feel about that? He would be enraged and would kill that intruder if he could! Such is the great difference between seeking lawful means and daring to slide into unlawful ones. As the saying goes, 'When lawful ways are sought, there will be no room for jealousy (on the part of the woman's family).'

What takes the father from protective jealousy to joyful happiness? It is abidance by the Law of Allah. A daughter's marriage is a source of happiness and satisfaction to both her parents, whereas it enrages them if a stranger seeks to have her by any other means. Consequently, no one should question why Allah has made things lawful or unlawful.

Allah says in reply to the question that the believers asked Prophet Muhammad: 'They ask you, Prophet, what is lawful for them. Say, "All good things are lawful for you."…' (al-Ma'ida: 4) However, 'all good things are lawful' does not mean it is for us to decide whether a thing is good and useful, and therefore lawful. Rather, we should know that whatever is lawful is therefore good and useful, not vice versa. The Creator of all things is the One Who best knows what is good and what is harmful. Our knowledge cannot encompass all the good or harm hidden in everything. Harmful things may appear good to us, and judging whether things are useful or otherwise cannot be based merely on how we feel about consuming or practicing them, or else drugs and alcohol would be considered good things. A thing may appear good, but we may not know what harm or evil lies in it. Since this is the case, we should listen to the Creator of the heavens and earth when He tells us what to enjoy and what to avoid of the things He has created in the world. Know that whatever Allah makes lawful is good and whatever He forbids is for our own good. He has created everything in due measure and His Knowledge encompasses all things. He is the All-Wise.

A doctor prescribes medication and the patient just follows his instructions. He tells a diabetic to reduce starchy and sugary foods to a minimum, and the patient listens without questioning anything. We listen to doctors as we know they are experts. We trust them, even though they are subject to error like any human being. Should we not, then, be humble before our Creator? Sometimes we have the audacity to question why Allah has made such-and-such a thing unlawful to us. Allah is our Trusted Lord; whatever He commands is wise and it is our duty to comply. Some try to avoid performing some of their duties to Allah by twisting the meaning of His words: 'Allah does not burden any human being with more than he is well able to bear…' (al-Baqara: 286).

One may say that his job takes up so much of his time that he has no time left to observe salat (the Daily Prayers). As a result, he abandons this essential worship on the pretext that Allah does not burden anyone with more than he can bear! We say, 'Are you able to ascertain your capability and assess your moral responsibility based on your own evaluation?' No. So long as Allah has made salat mandatory, then He knows every person is capable of complying. This is the meaning of the aforementioned verse. Since Allah has enjoined something on His servants, then we all have the capacity to perform it, for He does not burden a soul with more than what it can bear. To continue, Allah says: 'They ask you, Prophet, what is lawful for them. Say, "All good things are lawful for you."…' (al-Ma'ida: 4) Thus, we understand that' all good things' mean whatever Allah has made lawful. Perhaps the believers meant to ask Prophet Muhammad about a particular thing, whether it is lawful or not, but Allah has given this answer to be appropriate for any similar question about what is lawful and what is unlawful.

Then comes the question of hunting with dogs. This was something well known to Arabs during the pre-Islamic era of ignorance, and they used to also hunt with birds of prey. In this respect, Allah says: '…Say, "All good things are lawful for you." (This includes) prey of your hunting birds and beasts you have taught to catch…' (al-Ma'ida: 4). This is the general ruling and it is explicated afterwards.

The verses of the Quran were sent down to Prophet Muhammad on particular occasions to teach the Companions and the entire community of Muslims about the rulings of their religion. Such was the best way for them to comprehend the Message and pass it down to the following generations. Allah revealed this verse to the Prophet when Companion Adi ibn Hatem may Allah be pleased with him asked about hunting with dogs and birds. Let us examine the verse. Allah says: '…Say, "All good things are lawful for you." (This includes) prey of al-jawarih (your hunting birds and beasts) you have taught to catch' (al-Ma'ida: 4). Allah makes a general statement that all good things are lawful for us, and then He highlights that what we train animals and birds to hunt is among the good lawful things. The word jawarih is the plural of jarih, which literally means 'gainer': someone or something that gains. This is why we also use this word to refer to parts of the body, such as hands, eyes, ears, nose, etc. because we gain perception through them: we acquire vision through the eyes, hearing through the ears, smell through the nose and we feel things by touching them with the skin. Also, Allah says: 'It is He who calls your souls back by night, knowing what you have jarahtum (done) by day…' (al-An'am: 60).

The verb jaraha is another derivative of the same root and it denotes 'acquire', 'gain' or 'do'. This verb also means 'to wound'. Hence, the word jawarih in the verse we are dealing with may either mean 'gainers/acquirers' since the trained hunting birds and beasts are a means of gaining preys through hunting, or it may denote' wounding' since when these animals hunt preys, they injure them in order to catch them; both of these meanings are sound and appropriate.

Dogs are mainly used for hunting, and leopards, cheetahs or hawks may be used as well. Allah says: '…(This includes) prey of your hunting birds and beasts you have taught to catch, teaching them as Allah has taught you…' (al-Ma'ida: 4). That is, it is lawful for us to eat the catches we gain by the effort we expend in training these animals to hunt. One does not simply release the dog or the hawk to hunt, but rather, he first must train the animal to do this.

A monkey can be trained to perform amazing tricks. A circus performer can train a huge elephant to stand on all fours on a platform whose diameter does not exceed one metre. All this is possible because of the training imparted to them by human beings whom Allah has endowed with this skill and intelligence.

A person can train an animal to do various tricks and tasks, but that animal cannot train its own offspring to do the same tricks. This is a difference between humankind and animals: a human child learns and acquires skills from his parent, but animal training can only be given to the individual animal, which cannot pass on its acquired skills to other animals of its kind or to its offspring.

The original Arabic verse makes a particular mention of the word mukallibin (plural), which is a person who trains dogs to hunt. Some say that mukalleib (singular) means a dog breeder; however, a man may breed dogs but not train them to do any special skills. Hence, the word means someone who trains dogs professionally. He is like a stableman who trains horses, since a horse must be trained before it can be ridden or used to pull coaches. Allah mentions dog trainers in particular since hunting with dogs is more common, perhaps because some species are less fierce and easier to tame compared to other beasts of prey. A trained dog is tempted when its attention is called to a target prey. It obeys its master when he sends it to catch the animal, stops and turn backs when he calls it, and brings the quarry to its master unspoiled, without eating any of it. If a dog eats part of the quarry, then it is not well trained yet; in such a case it has caught it for itself, not for its master. This is why Allah defines the activity of hunting by saying about the hunting animals: '…so eat what they catch for you...' (al-Ma'ida: 4).

Part of the process of hunting is also connected with faith: it involves mentioning the Name of Allah over the quarry: '…but first pronounce Allah's name over it…' (al-Ma'ida: 4). This is what makes the hunted animal lawful to eat, and also makes it not belong to the category of '…any animal over which any name other than Allah's has been invoked...' (al-Ma'ida: 3). If a dog attacks the quarry and kills it, the quarry is lawful to eat as long as the dog's master said, 'In the Name of Allah, Allah is the Greatest' before he unleashed the dog against the prey. If he does not mention Allah's Name at this point but the hunted animal is still alive, he must slaughter it and mention Allah's Name over it. However, if it dies before he can do this, it is unlawful for him to eat it. The same applies when one hunts with a gun: the hunter has to mention the Name of Allah before he fires the bullet, and only then may he eat the hunted prey.

Mentioning the Name of Allah is a prerequisite for making the hunted animal permissible to eat. It is a form of acknowledgement of the favour of Him Who has made that animal subservient to our will. It is ingratitude to enjoy a blessing without acknowledging the favour of Him Who has bestowed it.(1)

Allah concludes the verse by saying: '…And be mindful of Allah: He is swift to take account' (al-Ma'ida: 4). A believer must be mindful of Allah by obeying His commands sincerely and thoroughly because He is swift in reckoning, in many ways. However long your worldly life may last, it will inevitably end indicating that it is but a short life. No one knows when death will come to him; it may be sooner than one expects. As long as this is the case, every believer must bear in mind what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'When one of you dies, this is his day of reckoning.'(2) This is one way to interpret the verse '…He is swift to take account' (al-Ma'ida: 4). Death is also like sleep; no one can tell how many hours he has slept unless he is told the time. The Quran tells us that the People of the Cave asked one another: 'In time We woke them, and they began to question one another. One of them asked, "How long have you been here?" and (some) answered, "A day or part of a day", but then (others) said, "Your Lord knows best how long you have been here…"' (al-Kahf: 19). They had no idea they had slept for three hundred and nine years. Likewise, when we are resurrected, no one will have an idea how long he had been dead. Since no one feels the passage of time after death, when Judgment Day comes, we will feel we had been dead for but a little time. Another way to interpret: '…He is swift to take account' (al-Ma'ida: 4) is that Allah also recompenses His servants for their deeds in this worldly life before the reckoning in the Hereafter. When we commit sins, Allah may punish us in this life through afflictions: illness, gloom, etc. Thus, the verse may refer to reckoning in this worldly life.

(1) Some scholars of jurisprudence say it is permissible to eat the slaughtered or hunted animal over which the Name of Allah was not mentioned on condition that we mention His Name before we eat it, as long as no name other than Allah's was mentioned on slaughtering or hunting it.

(2) Narrated by Ibn Abu Ad-Dunya in Al-Mawt, Al-Hindi in Kanzul-' Ummal and Az-Zubaydi in It-haf As-Sada Al-Muttaqin

It may also refer to the reckoning in the Afterlife. Allah is swift in reckoning in that He can reckon all mankind in the blink of an eye. When Companion ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb was asked how humankind can all be called to account at one time, he replied, ‘Just as He provides for them all at one time, He can call them all to account at one time’.

People stand up in a queue to be given sustenance! We are all provided with air to breathe, food to eat, and means to work and seek through our efforts the endless bounties and blessings Allah has created in the world; however, Allah Almighty is not subject to the boundaries of time. We need time to perform actions since our abilities are limited; but He is the Almighty and All-Powerful Who, when He wills anything, only says to it, ‘Be’, and it is.

When we move a medium-sized stone from its place, this requires a strong man to use only part of his strength, but for a little child, it takes a long time; so what should we think about the Creator of man and the universe, the One Who has Absolute and Ultimate Power? Indeed, the laws of time do not apply to Him Glorified is He. Thus He the Almighty is swift in reckoning, in the broadest sense of the word. He Glorified is He and then says:

ٱلۡيَوۡمَ أُحِلَّ لَكُمُ ٱلطَّيِّبَٰتُۖ وَطَعَامُ ٱلَّذِينَ أُوتُواْ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ حِلّٞ لَّكُمۡ وَطَعَامُكُمۡ حِلّٞ لَّهُمۡۖ
وَٱلۡمُحۡصَنَٰتُ مِنَ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنَٰتِ وَٱلۡمُحۡصَنَٰتُ مِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ أُوتُواْ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ مِن قَبۡلِكُمۡ إِذَآ
ءَاتَيۡتُمُوهُنَّ أُجُورَهُنَّ مُحۡصِنِينَ غَيۡرَ مُسَٰفِحِينَ وَلَا مُتَّخِذِيٓ أَخۡدَانٖۗ وَمَن
يَكۡفُرۡ بِٱلۡإِيمَٰنِ فَقَدۡ حَبِطَ عَمَلُهُۥ وَهُوَ فِي ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ مِنَ ٱلۡخَٰسِرِينَ ٥

Today all good things have been made lawful for you. The food of the People of the Book is lawful for you as your food is lawful for them. So are chaste, believing women as well as chaste women of the people who were given the Scripture before you, as long as you have given them their bride-gifts and married them, not taking them as lovers or secret mistresses. The deeds of anyone who rejects faith will come to nothing, and in the Hereafter he will be one of the losers [5] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 5)

Allah the Almighty begins this verse by repeating what He says before in the previous verse, that is: ‘All the good things of life have been made lawful to you (O mankind!)'. In fact, He the Almighty does this in order to direct the attention of people to the fact that one may only deem something to be good if it has been made lawful by Him the Almighty.

After He Glorified is He sheds light on the way how lawful foods are to be procured and how hunting is to be conducted, we come now to another important point which is that He the Almighty says: '…The food of the people of the Book is lawful for you…', but there is a very important question to be asked in this respect, that is, does this saying of Allah really mean that all the food of the people of the Book is lawful for us, even if this food contains something unlawful like pork?! The answer is definitely' No'. In fact, this verse makes it lawful for Muslims to eat only the lawful food of the people of the Book which is of the same kind as that which Allah has made lawful for them, i.e. Muslims. In this regard, it is important to know that it is not right for one to disdain from eating such a food of the people of the Book because Allah Glorified is He wants to establish connections between the followers of the heavenly revealed religions, irrespective of the fact that they may have different conceptions about Him the Almighty. In other words, He the Almighty wants them, i.e. followers of the heavenly revealed religions, to interact with each other in such a way which reflects their belief. As a result, you (O Muslims!) are by no means supposed to shun the people of the Book; rather, you are allowed to eat their food if it belongs to the same kind of lawful food Islam allows you to consume. In this vein, it is not right for you to refuse to give any of the people of the Book your food because Allah the Almighty wants to make amity among the followers of the heavenly revealed religions who believe in Him the Almighty even if, as we said before, they have different conceptions about Him Glorified is He.

In this regard, Allah the Almighty gives us a striking example to illustrate this point for us. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to people, Islam was faced and challenged by two Empires; one of them was atheistic as they worshipped fire and did not believe in Allah, namely the Persian Empire; while the second was the Roman Empire which, contrary to the first, believed in Him the Almighty. These two Empires represented the only two powers in the world, east and west, at that time. So, when Prophet Muhammad came to guide people to the Way of Allah, his heart and the hearts of the believers inclined to the Empire that believed in Allah and the heavenly revealed religion, and not to those atheists who worshipped fire.

We can fully realise the greatness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as he preferred for those who believed in Allah, i.e. the Romans, to be granted victory over those who did not, i.e. the Persians, even though the former did not believe in him peace and blessings be upon him. Consequently, when the war broke out between the Persians and the Byzantines and the first victory went to the Persians, the sympathies of Prophet Muhammad and the believers were with the Byzantines because they were closer to the new religion. Even though they did not believe in him peace and blessings be upon him, they believed in Allah, their heavenly revealed religion and the Day of Resurrection. As such, it is now clear to us that Allah the Almighty wants to tell us that Muslims must incline to those who have some kind of faith, even if only a little. This incident is manifestly clear in the chapter of ar-Rum in which Allah the Almighty says that the believers, i.e. Prophet Muhammad and his followers, will rejoice over the succour Allah the Almighty grants to the Byzantines over the Persians (ar-Rum: 1-5).

These aforementioned verses of ar-Rum begin by recounting news on the Byzantines' defeat, and they then tell us about a prophecy made by Allah the Almighty that they, i.e. the Byzantines would be victorious within a few years. They furthermore state clearly that on that particular day when the Byzantines gain victory over the Persians, the believers will rejoice in Allah's Succour. If we reflect carefully on the position of the Muslims regarding that war between these two most advanced powers at that time, we will realise that the sympathy of the Muslims was with the Romans to the extent that they grieved over their defeat. At that point, Allah the Almighty announces the sure news that the Byzantines would be victorious over the Persians.

Can anyone, by any means, predict the final outcome of a battle between two great powers? As a matter of fact, such a prediction could not be confirmed within just a single day, even if the one who made it knew that reinforcements were on their way to aid and support the side which would gain victory according to his/her expectation. As for the prediction made regarding the victory of the Byzantines, these verses of ar-Rum clearly say that it will be fulfilled within a few years. Who can predict the outcome of a battle which will take place after the passing of several years?! Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself could not possibly have dared to make this prediction, especially if we take into account the fact that he did not know how well each side was equipped or what the size of their forces was. All of this tells us undoubtedly that Allah the Almighty is the One Who made and confirmed this prediction about the defeat of the Persians at the hands of the Romans.

It goes without saying that this prediction in question will actually take place because it was recorded in the Quran whose recitation is an act of worship. That is why when Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him heard this verse, he said, 'I lay a wager that the Byzantines shall be victorious in three years', yet Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told him to extend the period mentioned in the wager because Allah the Almighty says that they will be victorious within a few years. In fact, he peace and blessings be upon him ordered Abu-Bakr to do so because the word Bida' (few) in Arabic refers to the period of time from three to nine years. As a result, Abu-Bakr Allah be pleased with him firmly believing in what Prophet Muhammad told him, increased the wager to one hundred she-camels and the time limit to nine years. Actually, this clearly means that the believers were completely certain of the fulfilment of this divine prophecy made by Allah Glorified is He.

We have mentioned the interpretation of these verses here to show that the sympathies of Prophet Muhammad were with those who believed in a heavenly revealed Scripture and in a Messenger. Similarly, Allah the Almighty makes lawful for us the food of the people of the Book in order that there will be a connection between us and those who believe Allah the Almighty, and in a heavenly revealed religion. This is proved by the saying of Allah: 'The food of the People of the Book is lawful for you as your food is lawful for them'.

In the same vein, Allah Glorified is He instructs Muslims how to deal with the people of the Book. In the chapter of al-Mumtahana, He the Almighty tells us that believers are allowed to show kindness and to behave with full equity with the people of the Book as long as they do not fight against the Muslims or drive them out of their houses. Yet, if they, i.e. the people of the Book, do any of this, Muslims are then not allowed to deal with them or even show them kindness (al-Mumtahana: 8-9). As such, Allah the Almighty wants us to establish balanced relationships with non-Muslims in our daily life. Furthermore, we, Muslims, should not deal with the atheistic polytheist in the same way we deal with those who believe in Allah even if these believers in Allah deny the Message of Prophet Muhammad. In other words, He Glorified is He wants a connection to be established between Muslims and the people of the Book. Thus, Muslims are allowed to eat the lawful food of the people of the Book as long as it is judged lawful in Islam. In this respect, Muslims must be fully aware of the fact that some of the food of the people of the Book contains alcohol, and that they must refrain from everything that is forbidden in Islam; they, i.e. Muslims, are not allowed to drink alcohol or eat pork.

We know for certain that food is a means for preserving and maintaining life. Having shed light on the permissibly of eating the lawful food of the people of the Book as long as it is judged lawful in Islam, He Glorified is He directs our attention to another lawful act that we are allowed to do with the people of the Book, that is, marrying their women. He the Almighty says: 'Moreover (lawful for you in matrimony) are chaste, believing women as well as chaste women of the people who were given the Scripture before you, as long as you have given them their bridal gifts and married them, not taking them as lovers or secret mistresses' (al-Ma'ida: 5).

The word Muhsana (translated here as' chaste') have two other meanings: it may refer to a free woman, i.e. not slave-women, or it may refer to' a woman who is married.' The Arabic word Ihsan means 'protecting oneself from unlawful relationships'. It is historically recorded that free women shunned committing unlawful relationships to the effect that it is said that prostitution was only committed by slave-women because they had no father and no brother to protect them. In addition, people believed that they, i.e. slave-women, were not as honourable as free women. Hence, when Hind bint 'Uttbah, wife of Abu Sufyan, heard Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him telling people about the impermissibility of adultery, she said, 'O Prophet Muhammad, would free women commit adultery?!' This statement of Hind tells us clearly that free women in the pre-Islamic period did not commit adultery because they were able to restrain themselves from committing such a crime, unlike others.

The word Muhsana, as we previously explained, also refers to ‘a woman who is married’. It is of great importance here to know that Allah the Almighty declares the free, chaste women from among the believers and their counterparts from among the women of the people of the Book to be on equal footing with each other with regards to marriage to Muslim men. If a chaste Muslim man wants to marry any of these free, chaste women, be they Muslim or from the people of the Book, he is obliged to pay the dowry for her. Some scholars even opine that when one wants to marry a Muslim woman, it is sufficient for the husband to specify the dowry for the wife, that is, he does not have to pay it at the time of the marriage due to the close connections between the followers of the one religion, but the case is different when one wants to marry a woman from the people of the Book. In this regard, Islam sets conditions that the Muslim man must specify the dowry and have a witness present when it is given. He is not allowed to betray the trust at all. This is actually the true meaning to be understood from the saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘…give them their dowers....’

Allah the Almighty then tells Muslim men that they are not allowed to marry any but chaste women from the people of the Book; those who are not taken as mistresses.

The word Safh literally means (‘pouring’ or ‘passion’); the prostitute woman is the one who allows any man to have sex with her. As for the word Khadn or (secret love-companion), it means a girlfriend or lover to whom one is not married, and it can be used to refer to a man as well as a woman. Furthermore, Muslims must pay attention to the ruling that they are not allowed to engage in a ‘temporary marriage’; rather, when one decides to marry, his intention should be to remain married forever, and not only to remain married long enough to take his pleasure.

Allah Glorified is He then concludes the verse with His saying: ‘The deeds of anyone who rejects faith will come to nothing, and in the Hereafter he will be one of the losers’. This is because the believer fully realises that the essence of faith is to accept the Laws enacted by Allah the Almighty and to carry them out. Thus, whoever denies any of these divine laws will be denying faith. People must remember the fact that Allah the Almighty will not be afflicted with any harm if all the people turn disbelievers. This is because He Glorified is He is the One Who created man. In addition, He the Almighty possesses all Attributes of Power and Perfection.

Consequently, Allah the Almighty does not need any help from any being. In this regard, we must know that He the Almighty possesses all the Attributes of Perfection and Power–even before He has created mankind and the whole world. Thus, it becomes clear that man is the only one who enjoys all the fruits of his/her obedience, worship, and faith. However, if a man denies any of the Laws laid down by Allah the Almighty it is as though s/he has rejected all aspects of faith; but if man denies any aspect of faith, s/he is viewed as committing a kind of unbelief. I wish a person who does this would simply say, 'This aspect of faith is correct, but I cannot control myself'.

In fact, concerning this particular case in which the person confesses his/her mistake, s/he would be judged a sinful believer who may seek Allah's Forgiveness or even show repentance; two results that do not take place with disbelief. Disbelief undoubtedly causes all one's works and deeds to be in vain. This plainly indicates that Allah the Almighty in this verse addresses those who obey Him in some matters but not in others. As such, He Glorified is He clarifies and illustrates the situation to people as follows, 'The reward of the good deeds you do in this worldly life will be in vain and come to nothing as a result of your refusal to carry out and obey the Laws of Allah the Almighty'. As a matter of fact, the word Habita (the Arabic word translated here as' come to nothing') used in this verse indicates that the reward of the act is nullified and comes to nothing. This meaning may yet be examined in the light of the fact that when grazing animals eat food which is not ripe, even if it is the same kind of food it normally eats, such as unripe clover, the bellies of the animals swell to the extent that they die. Arabs call this malady al-Hubat, which means the swelling of the belly of the animal when it eats something that is not good for it to the extent that its owner mistakenly thinks it has become fat when really it is dying.

The same ruling of frustrating the reward of the good deeds applies to those actions that are not in accordance with divine ordinance. Directing the attention of the believers to the great importance of faith, He the Almighty starts this chapter by His saying: 'O you, who believe, be true to your covenants!' (al-Ma'ida: 1) Actually, this clearly tells us that all the obligations under Islam have to do with the Oneness of Allah the Almighty and with conveying His Message. This applies to all the covenants made between the believers themselves, and even between man and himself. All of these covenants must be honoured and fulfilled. Whoever denies these obligations and ordinances, his/her works and deeds will all be in vain. In fact, the reward of man's deeds comes to nothing if s/he ends her/his life with this kind of unbelief, even if she believes s/he has done good. The reward of the deeds of such a person will surely come to nothing, just like when the animal grazes on something that is not good for it; its belly swells to the extent that the one who sees it imagines that it is full of food and healthy, yet it is really dying. This is the same for the deeds of those who reject faith; such people think they have done something good, while, in fact, their deeds are entirely wasted. This ruling under discussion has been mentioned very many times in the Quran. In the chapter of an-Nur, He the Almighty tells us that the good deeds of the disbeliever are like a mirage in the desert which the thirsty person supposes to be water, but when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing (an-Nur: 39).

We know that' mirage' is an effect caused by hot air in the desert which makes the traveller think that s/he can see water, yet on reaching it, s/he finds nothing. The same is true of the deeds of those who disbelieve in Allah's Revelations; they mistakenly think their deeds will benefit them. The saying of Allah the Almighty in the chapter of an-Nur that this thirsty person, upon reaching the place where he expected to find water, will find nothing but Allah Glorified is He points out that this man is astonished at finding Allah there, as though he never before imagined that Allah really exists. It is taken for granted that a man only takes his reward from the one for whom he works. Hence, the question to be asked here is, 'Did any of these people work for the sake of Allah the Almighty in order to receive a reward from Him?' No, they did not. At this point, we should correct a common misconception aroused by some orientalists who do not understand Islam properly. They say, 'Why would Allah not generously reward those scientists who discovered cures for diseases, and those scientists who invented things which benefit mankind?

Why would He not fully reward them in the Hereafter?' We say, 'Those scientists did all of this seeking the pleasure of the people and not the Pleasure of Allah the Almighty. In addition, people praised them highly for this, to tan extent that they immortalised their memories, built statues for them, gave them medals and wrote books in praise of their efforts.' In this way, such scientists sought the pleasure of the people and they received it. Ironically, Allah the Almighty enables the believers to benefit from all the inventions and discoveries made by the disbelievers. For example, Muslims make use of electricity to read the Quran, acquire knowledge, etc. In the same connection, planes, which were invented by non-Muslims, carry Muslims to Mecca to perform pilgrimage and to Medina to visit Prophet Muhammad's grave. In addition, Muslims achieve considerable benefit from planes with regards to worldly affairs. However, the believers should utilise the means at their disposal in order not to become meek and dependant on others. To continue, it becomes clear that Allah Glorified is He allows the believers to benefit from the disbelievers' advancement and progress, yet Allah Glorified is He will not reward them (the disbelievers) for these deeds and acts. This fact is clearly explained in a number of positions in the Quran. For example, He the Almighty says in the chapter of an-Nur that the good deeds of the disbeliever are like a mirage in the desert which the thirsty person supposes to be water–but when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing (an-Nur: 39).

In the chapter of Ibrahim, He Glorified is He clearly tells us that the actions of the disbelievers are like ashes on which the wind blows hard on a stormy day; they shall not have power over anything of what they have earned (Ibrahim: 18). In the chapter of Al-Kahf, He the Almighty tells us about the characteristics of the great losers with regards to their deeds. Then He Glorified is He counts these characteristics as follows: the labour of such people is lost in this worldly life although they think that they are doing commendable work; they disbelieve in the communications of their Lord and His Meeting; their deeds are rendered null; and no balance will be set up for them on the Day of Resurrection. (al-Kahf: 103-105)

From the above it becomes clear that the deeds of such a person who denies part of the faith or any of it will come to nothing. As well, such a person will be one of the losers in the Hereafter. Success in the Hereafter is mainly based on a person's deeds in this life. Thus, as long as a person's deeds in this life do not have the intention to seek the Pleasure of Allah, s/he will inevitably lose in the Hereafter.

In the same vein, the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'And in the Hereafter he will be one of the losers' explains to us how important it is that we do not allow ourselves to be deceived and deluded by the fame, wealth and glory of those disbelieving scientists; for the pleasures of this life will not last forever. The final Reckoning will surely take place in the Hereafter, and hence it is important here to stress a very important fact; that is, even though the disbeliever may have gained some benefit in this worldly life, s/he will certainly lose in the Hereafter.

Allah the Almighty then sheds light on the importance of establishing a close connection between all the worldly affairs. Thus, having told us about the essential constituents of life and how to maintain the human race by showing the importance of lawful marriage, He the Almighty clarifies that He bestows all these blessings upon us so that we will become close to Him the Almighty. For this reason, He the Almighty wants us not to be distracted by the pleasures of this worldly life. Hence, we must not occupy our minds with anything that may prevent us from meeting Him the Almighty. Such a meeting is, in fact, not a spontaneous matter but rather something which requires spiritual, physical, spatial, and temporal preparation. It is important to realise that this special meeting between Allah the Almighty and the slave is nothing but 'Prayer'. Islam tells us that Muslims must meet a number of conditions and requirements for their Prayer, i.e. their meeting with Allah, to be valid. First of all, they must be physically pure. Second, they must perform the obligatory Prayers in their due time. Third, prayer must be performed in a clean and purified place. They, furthermore, must direct their faces to the Ka'ba in Mecca. All of these requirements undoubtedly serve to prepare the human soul to stand before Allah the Almighty Who bestows all these blessings upon man. That is why we all the time state clearly that 'prayer is a declaration of one's constant full allegiance and absolute loyalty to the Bounteous Creator, Who creates out of nothing and provides out of nothing'. Muslims under Islam are obliged to offer five daily prayers; He the Almighty wants them not to be fully distracted by the pleasures of this life. Yet, for man to 'meet with' (be close to) Allah in the times between the prescribed prayers and to exhibit constant faith, s/he must remember Him Glorified is He. This is actually based on the Sharia maxim stating 'That which is essential for the fulfilling of an obligation is itself obligatory'.

Let us illustrate this aforementioned maxim by offering the following example: man needs energy to perform prayers and fulfil the other acts of worship. But it is taken for granted that food is the main source of man's energy and power; thus, Islam views the process of manufacturing food, during all its different stages, as an obligation. Consequently, when someone says, 'I want to devote myself solely to worship and to live in isolation', we say to him, 'You may do this on condition that you do not benefit from the work of a single person who is involved in the motions of life and thus you should not eat any food, for the bread you eat, for example, is the outcome of a lot of people's efforts'. Similarly, we say to such a person, 'You should also not wear garments which are the result of many people's labour: someone grew the cotton; another ginned it while a third spun it; a fourth stitched it while a fifth tailored it, not to mention all the machines which were used to do this. Consequently, you must not benefit from the work of a single person who is involved with the means of life as long as you have decided to withdraw from life's motions and live in isolation'.

As a matter of fact, utilising the means is an act of worship because worship cannot be fulfilled and perfected without it. We have just explained, 'That which is essential for the fulfilling of an obligation is itself obligatory'. Hence, Muslim scholars opine that learning such skills which benefit man's life is a communal obligation. In Islam, there are two kinds of obligations: the first is the individual obligation which every individual is responsible for fulfilling and no one else can do it on his behalf, such as prayer; the second is the communal obligation which is what is needed in order to fulfil an obligation and is therefore itself obligatory.

Undoubtedly, each one of us needs food. The work must be divided among people: one person should learn how to farm, while another should learn how to manufacture goods and products. Wheat must be farmed and thus, mills must be established to grind it. In addition, ovens must be made to bake bread. Furthermore, there must be engineers to make these machines. All of these actions make it possible for a man to have the necessary energy to pray and to stand before Allah the Almighty. Hence, all these actions fall under the category of communal obligations. That is, they are obligations that, if fulfilled by some, the rest will not be asked to perform them. Yet, if none fulfils them, we are all sinful.

Another example of a communal obligation is the Funeral Prayer; the person who prays over the dead man fulfils this obligation for the rest of us, but if no one prays over the dead person, every single Muslim is guilty of sin. Once again, every action that is essential for the fulfilment of an obligation is itself obligatory. And scholars believe that offering the Funeral Prayer is a communal obligation; if fulfilled by some, the rest will not be blamed for not performing it, but if no one fulfils it, everyone sins.

But what is the position of the ruler or those in authority regarding communal obligations? They must ensure that someone fulfils each communal obligation; otherwise a number of religious obligations will go unfulfilled. In fact, when the Muslim goes to the market and finds no bread to eat, s/he becomes weak and unable to satisfy her/his hunger. As a result, s/he will be unable to pray, work or even save money to perform pilgrimage. That is why we find Allah the Almighty in the Quran calling upon the believers to leave all worldly commerce for the sake of performing the Friday Prayer (al-Jumu'a: 9). In this aforementioned verse of the chapter of al-Jumu'a, He Glorified is He orders us to leave all worldly commerce for the sake of performing the Friday Prayer; He does not order us to move from inactivity to prayer. If we carefully reflect upon the meaning of this verse, we will fully realise the accuracy of the style used in the Quran. He the Almighty orders Muslims to forsake all practises of selling; an order that clearly also implies forsaking the process of buying. As a matter of fact, buying and selling are two sides of the same transaction; the only difference is that the buyer might be reluctant to buy the item because s/he has to spend her/his money to buy it, whereas the seller always wants to receive the price for her/his commodities immediately. The seller usually makes profit from this, and this is actually the best way to earn money. That is because the earnings of the farmer, for example, only come after several months of farming. This is also the case for the employee who receives his/her salary at the end of every month. As for the case under discussion, the seller receives his/her earning straight away. That is why He the Almighty orders us to leave all worldly commerce once we hear the call for the Friday Prayer. But what shall Muslims do after performing the prayer? He the Almighty tells us that the believers, having finished their Friday Prayer, must disperse freely on the earth and seek some of Allah's Bounties. As well, they must remember Allah much (al-Jumu'a: 10).

From the above, it is now clear that no one should say, 'I will devote every moment of my life to prayer', for no one can pray unless s/he possesses her/his life's basic needs; and it goes without saying that man must disperse in the earth to attain her/his life's basic needs. In addition, s/he must seek the Bounties of Allah. Consequently, dispersing in the earth to gain livelihood is itself an act of worship because that which is essential for the fulfilment of an obligation is itself obligatory. In this vein, He the Almighty does not want to separate the essential constituents of life, like food and marriage, from the topic of prayer, and hence He casts light on the conditions of ablution which must be fulfilled before the performance of prayer directly after clarifying the rulings on eating the food of the people of the Book and marriage to the women from the people of the Book. This is for us to know that all the topics and articles of faith are closely correlated to each other and thus, it is not right to divide acts into acts of worship and others that have nothing to do with worship.

Yet, when scholars write books of jurisprudence, we see them dividing the sections of their books into 'Acts of Worship' and 'Transactions'. This is, in fact, only a literary classification concerned with the arrangement of the material in the book. But I reiterate that every action which is required for the good of the world is judged as an act of worship to the Creator of this world. This is borne out by the two consecutive divine orders in the chapter of al-Jumu'a in which Allah the Almighty commands the believers to hasten to the Remembrance of Allah, i.e. prayer, and to leave all worldly commerce, and then to disperse in the earth to seek out the Bounties of Allah after prayer has ended (al-Jumu'a: 9-10)

In Islam, one cannot obey one divine command and ignore another, but rather, people, out of faith, are obliged to carry them both out; if a person is remiss in either one of them, s/he is at fault. That is why, having told us about the Blessings He bestows upon us which include making cattle lawful to us and after informing us of our right to marry chaste women from the people of the Book, He the Almighty welcomes us into His Presence by telling us how to prepare to offer prayer to Him. He commands us all to prepare for prayer. As a matter of fact, this preparation makes man fully qualified to meet Him the Almighty. But how shall man prepare himself for such a meeting with Allah? He the Almighty says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ إِذَا قُمۡتُمۡ إِلَى ٱلصَّلَوٰةِ فَٱغۡسِلُواْ وُجُوهَكُمۡ وَأَيۡدِيَكُمۡ إِلَى ٱلۡمَرَافِقِ
وَٱمۡسَحُواْ بِرُءُوسِكُمۡ وَأَرۡجُلَكُمۡ إِلَى ٱلۡكَعۡبَيۡنِۚ وَإِن كُنتُمۡ جُنُبٗا فَٱطَّهَّرُواْۚ وَإِن كُنتُم
مَّرۡضَىٰٓ أَوۡ عَلَىٰ سَفَرٍ أَوۡ جَآءَ أَحَدٞ مِّنكُم مِّنَ ٱلۡغَآئِطِ أَوۡ لَٰمَسۡتُمُ ٱلنِّسَآءَ فَلَمۡ تَجِدُواْ مَآءٗ فَتَيَمَّمُواْ
صَعِيدٗا طَيِّبٗا فَٱمۡسَحُواْ بِوُجُوهِكُمۡ وَأَيۡدِيكُم مِّنۡهُۚ مَا يُرِيدُ ٱللَّهُ لِيَجۡعَلَ عَلَيۡكُم مِّنۡ
حَرَجٖ وَلَٰكِن يُرِيدُ لِيُطَهِّرَكُمۡ وَلِيُتِمَّ نِعۡمَتَهُۥ عَلَيۡكُمۡ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تَشۡكُرُونَ ٦

You who believe, when you are about to pray, wash your faces and your hands up to the elbows, wipe your heads, wash your feet up to the ankles and, if required, wash your whole body. If any of you is sick or on a journey, or has just relieved himself, or had intimate contact with a woman, and can find no water, then take some clean sand and wipe your face and hands with it. God does not wish to place any burden on you: He only wishes to cleanse you and perfect His blessing on you, so that you may be thankful [6] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 6)

This verse indicates clearly that if Muslims are about to perform prayer, they must make ablution. The verse sheds light on the main pillars of the ritual act of ablution. In reality, some people may be unable to distinguish between the pillars and the recommended acts of ablution. The list of the recommended acts of ablution includes, but is not limited to washing one's hands, mouth and nose, etc. These are recommended acts which complement the essential pillars of ablution. Allah Glorified is He starts counting the essential pillars of ablution in the following order: 1) Wash the face; 'wash' means to make the water flow over the body part so that it then drips from it, while' wipe' means to touch the body part with wet hands so that water touches it but does not drip from it because it is only slightly dampened. At this point, it is of great importance to know that Allah the Almighty differentiates between two particular acts in ablution, namely, washing and wiping. That is, there are certain body parts that must be washed and there others that must be wiped. The list of the body parts that must be washed includes the face, the arms up to the elbows and the feet up to the ankles. As for the list of the body parts that must be wiped, it is restricted to some part of the head. The washing may be repeated twice or thrice to ensure that it has been done properly, but if one has only a little amount of water, it is enough for him/her to wash the required parts once and to make sure that one has washed the required area properly. To wash more than once, up to three times, is a recommended Sunna act and not an obligation.

Washing the face is something known to everyone. The face is that part of the head by means of which we directly confront objects. Boundaries of the face start from the hairline to the chin, that is, the lower side of the edge of the jawbone–the bone from which the lower teeth grow. This is regarding the length of the face. As for the breadth, it extends from ear to ear. No one differs about the definition of the face, and therefore He the Almighty simply says: 'wash your face' without specifying its limits. He does not say, 'wash your face from here to here', but simply commands us to wash the face since no one differs about the meaning of the word 'face'; people unanimously agree on this point. This is the first of the obligatory actions of ablution, but if we begin with the Sunna (recommended actions), we will first wash the hands up to the wrists, and then rinse the mouth and nose.

Commenting on these recommended acts of ablution, one of the most pious Muslims opine that they were not enacted haphazardly. He said that' water' is defined as the liquid which has no colour, taste, or smell. In fact, if any of these attributes change, the liquid is no longer considered pure water. And when you take water in your hands, you can see for yourself that it has no colour. Also, when you put it into your mouth, you can be sure that it has no taste. Furthermore, when you rinse your nose with it, you can be sure that it has no smell. In this way, you can be sure that the water you are using for ablution meets all the necessary criteria before you begin performing the pillars of ablution Allah ordains. As such, it is of great importance here to know that the Sunnah (recommended acts) of ablution is performed before the pillars in order for man to be able to recognise the eligibility of the water to be used in ablution.

Having washed their faces in ablution, Muslims are then asked by Allah the Almighty to 'wash your hands to the elbows'. Clarifying the matter on this particular pillar of 'washing the hands', He Glorified is He specifies the area of the arms which must be washed stating that they must be washed up to the elbows; He thereby provides details which He does not make while speaking about the face. As a matter of fact, He the Almighty defines that the arms must be washed up to the elbows because the Arabic word Yadd may be understood as the word 'hand'; a point which is proved by the Quran, particularly in the chapter of al-Ma'ida where Allah the Almighty orders the hands of the thief to be cut off. (al-Ma'ida: 38)

In the same connection, the word Yadd can also be used to give the meaning of the hand and the arm up to the elbow. It can furthermore be used to refer to the entire arm up to the shoulder. Consequently, it is clear that the word Yadd may indicate three different meanings. Had Allah the Almighty simply commanded that the Yadd be washed without providing any further details, some people would have only washed their hands while others would have washed their arms up to the elbows; and still a third group would have washed their entire arms up to the shoulders. Due to the fact that He the Almighty wants all people to do the same act, Allah Glorified is He specifies the washing of the hands to be up to the elbows.

Actually, when Allah the Almighty wills to ordain a particular command with specific features, Allah Glorified is He puts it forward in such a way which eliminates the need for further personal reasoning. As for the proposition Ila (to) used in this context, it indicates the end of something. This is actually opposite to the preposition Min (from) which indicates the beginning of an activity. The question that can be asked here is: 'Should elbows be included in the washing of the hands or not?' Here it is of great importance to know that Ila can sometimes be used to indicate the inclusion of something within the activity, while other times it does not.

These two cases have already been mentioned in the Quran. Concerning the first case, i.e. the use of Ila to indicate the inclusion of something within the activity, Allah the Almighty tells us that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had been transported by night from the Sacred Mosque in Mecca to the Al-Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem. (al-Isra': 1) The question to be asked here is, 'Did Allah the Almighty transport His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to Al-Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem but he (Prophet Muhammad) did not enter it?' The answer is definitely 'No', for no one could seriously suggest this. This example indicates clearly how Ila is used to indicate the inclusion of something within the activity. In fact, Prophet Muhammad was taken to Al-Aqsa Mosque which he entered and wherein he prayed.

As for the second case where Ila indicates until the beginning of an activity, Allah the Almighty orders us in the Quran to complete fasting until night (al-Baqara: 187)

Does this truly mean that we must continue fasting through the night?! No, because if the fast continued through the night, this would mean that we do not break our fast, i.e. we would have to fast day and night. This means the action of fasting through the night is not implied in this divine order. As a result, it is now clear that Ila can be used to indicate either of the two cases. Based on the above, some scholars differ as to whether the elbows are included in the order of 'washing the hands' or not. There is a general agreement among them all that the elbows should be included as a way of avoiding doubt because no one can be certain whether the elbow is included in this divine order or not. We know for certain that we must be cautious while deciding on Sharia matters, either by widening the scope of the order or by restricting its sphere.

An example of this concerns praying in the Sacred Mosque. We all know very well that the Ka'ba is a building whose walls are clearly visible. Next to one of the walls of the Ka'ba lies a semi-circular wall which marks the spot called Hijr Isma'il which is considered to be an original part of the Ka'ba. But when a person prays near the Ka'ba, should s/he direct her/his face to Hijr Isma'il or to the building of the Ka'ba itself? Muslim scholars opine that one must intend to direct his/her face to the tall building of the Ka'ba and not to Hijr Isma'il, even though circumambulation around the Ka'ba while performing pilgrimage or even minor pilgrimage, i.e.'' Umra, is not valid if the Hijr is not included in it. This shows how Muslim scholars widen the scope of the divine order and command as a way of avoiding doubt.

It is now clear that avoiding doubt may be fulfilled by either widening the scope of the divine command or by restricting its scope. As for washing the elbows in ablution, it is viewed as a way of avoiding doubt by widening the scope of the divine order. He Glorified is He then orders us to wipe our heads. The divine command here is different, for He the Almighty does not order us to wash the heads, but rather to wipe them. In the very beginning of ablution, He the Almighty orders us to wash the face and He Glorified is He does not specify which part of the face has to be washed because there is no difference over the definition of the face. Then came the washing of the hands and arms up to the elbows; we explained that Muslim scholars have agreed that the elbows must be included in the order to wash the hands and the arms, and thus there is no room for personal reasoning or even controversy. As a matter of fact, if He Glorified is He orders us to wipe our heads in the same way He orders us to wash our faces, then, there will be no difference at all. Yet, had He the Almighty said, ‘Wipe part of your heads’, would there have been any difference or disagreement among scholars in this regard? Yes, scholars would have differed concerning specifying what particular part of the head is to be wiped. Similarly, they would have differed if He the Almighty had ordered us to wipe a quarter of the head because accurately and exactly defining this quarter is exceedingly difficult.

We may ask here, ‘What is the divine wisdom behind using this particular style in this verse’ even though several different word patterns are used in the verse, some of which do not specify the exact area to be washed since there is no difference whatsoever concerning its definition, while others do? That is why we are supposed to search for the wisdom behind using the particle Bi in this particular pattern.

As a matter of fact, the particle Bi has many different meanings in Arabic. The great grammarian Ibn Malik said in his Al-Fiyya: Bi can be used to mean aiding, or to designate a direct object, or to mean compensation, adjoining, and to mean the same as with, of and about.

In this way, the use of this particle Bi here in this verse under discussion plainly indicates that the Lawgiver Glorified is He wants to widen the area and the scope of permissibility with regards to this particular divine command of 'wiping the head'. As a matter of fact, the particle bi can indicate various meanings, as follows: aiding, for example, 'I wrote with (bi) a pen'; to designate a direct object, for example, 'I took the patient to the hospital' (where the particle bi appears before the patient–this cannot be rendered into English); compensation, for example, 'I bought the pen for (bi) twenty pounds'; adjoining, for example, 'I passed by (bi) Khalid'; with, for example, 'I sold you the house with (bi) its furniture'; of,. for example, 'I drank the water of (bi) the Nile'; about, for example, when Allah the Almighty says in the Quran: 'A questioner asked (mockingly) about (bi) the suffering which (in the hereafter) is bound to befall'; (al-Ma'arij: 1) during, for example, 'I visited so-and-so during (bi) the night'; because of, for example, 'Mohamed won the prize because of (bi) his hard work'; and accompanying something/body, for example, when it is said, 'Glorify your Lord and (bi) celebrate His Praises', this means that glorifying Him the Almighty must be accompanied by celebrating His Praise.

Thus, if a group of scholar opine that wiping a single hair will fulfil the divine command in this verse under discussion, their opinion, based on the various meanings indicated by the particle Bi, is judged valid and true. In fact, to wipe means to adjoin and the hand is the organ that will be used in fulfilling this divine command. Yet, if another group hold the position that wiping the head should be done with the palm of the hand and not less than this, their opinion will also be judged valid and correct.

Consequently, it becomes clear that each of these scholarly opinions may be eligible in order to properly carry out this divine command of 'wiping the head' in ablution. In truth, had He the Almighty willed it, i.e. washing of the head to be done in one specific way, He would have specified it to us. Had He Glorified is He meant wiping of the entire head, He would have said explicitly' Wipe your head' without using the particle Bi, in the same way He orders us to wash our faces without specifying the definition of the face. In addition, had He the Almighty wanted a specific area of the head to be wiped, He would have specified it just as He specified that the hands and arms have to be washed up to the elbows. Yet, as long as Allah Glorified is He uses the particle Bi in this context, which has many different meanings, it is enough for anyone to understand it according to one of these meanings as any one of the possible meanings in the light of the presence of the particle Bi must be correct.

In fact, the most important and essential point to be deduced from this topic is that we must accept other's opinions which may be different from ours; that is, if one understands something in a certain way, s/he must not think that all those who understand it differently are wrong–rather, s/he should admit, 'This is my personal reasoning with regards to Allah's Ruling'. This is logically deduced from the fact that He the Almighty uses the particle Bi in this context even though it indicates different valid meanings. As a matter of fact, man has no choice with regard to the movements of her/his body parts. This is to mean that a person does not have the authority to ask the heart to stop pumping the blood for a while, nor can s/he choose the place in which to die.

However, a person still has the free will to do certain acts and practices. It is because of this free will that He the Almighty legally charges man with divine commands and legislations. That is why Muslim scholars believe that all the legal obligations and ordinances are viewed in the light of the two commands: 'Do's' and 'Don'ts'; yet, they also believe that there are other acts which man is allowed to deal with based on his/her free will. For this reason, At-Taklif, i.e. legal obligation, is in line with human nature. The conduct of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him whom Allah has commissioned to explain the religious obligations to us, offers us the best and most striking example in this regard. He the Almighty tells him peace and blessings be upon him that He has revealed the Quran to him so that he will clarify it to people (an-Nahl: 44).

To continue, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was with the believers in the battle of al-Ahzab, referring to which Allah the Almighty describes the believers as being shaken with a severe shock (al-Ahzab: 11). This battle was so fierce that the believers thought they would be defeated, yet Allah the Almighty has granted them victory by sending a strong wind that caused the enemies of Islam to flee. Upon the end of the battle, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him returned to Medina along with his Companions. The believers were now supposed to relax, yet the Archangel Gabriel went down to Prophet Muhammad and ordered him not to sheathe his sword because Allah wants him to head for the Jews of Banu Qurayzhah to take revenge from them as a result of their betrayal of Prophet Muhammad and the group of believers. Gabriel also told Prophet Muhammad that he will go to them to cast fear into their hearts. That is why he peace and blessings be upon him ordered someone to call to the people, 'Whoever believes in Allah and His Messenger, let him not offer the Afternoon Prayer, i.e. A'sr, except in the territory of the Jews of Banu Qurayzhah'. Yet, when it was the time of the Afternoon Prayer, some of the Companions, thinking that he peace and blessings be upon him just wanted to urge them to hasten to Banu Qurayzhah, performed the 'Asr Prayer before they reached their destination. However, the other group thought that they had to literally carry out the order of Prophet Muhammad and thus they did not pray 'Asr until they reached the territory of Banu Qurayzhah. When he peace and blessings be upon him was later informed of what had happened, he accepted both views and did not censure any of them.(1)

This incident is very important in the history of Islamic Legislation. In fulfilment of Prophet Muhammad's command, the Companions went out to fight against the Jews of Banu Qurayzhah, but the sun drew close to setting, while they were still on the way. The Companions divided into two groups: one saying, 'The sun will soon set and we have not prayed the Afternoon Prayer yet, and therefore we must pray it now before the sun sets'; the other group saying, 'Prophet Muhammad commanded us not to pray the Afternoon Prayer until we reach the territory of Banu Qurayzhah, and therefore we will not pray it until we get there, even if the sun sets.' Consequently, the first group prayed, while the second did not.

When they went to their legislator Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and told him what had happened, he did not censure either side and declared that both were correct. This situation obviously indicates hissagacity and intelligence, for he peace and blessings be upon him knew perfectly well that every event requires a due time and a due place. Those who performed the 'Asr before their arrival at Banu Qurayzhah took into account the importance of the time and feared that the sun would set before they offered the Prayer. However, those who did not pray until they had already arrived in Banu Qurayzhah took into consideration the importance of performing the prayer in the place defined to them by Prophet Muhammad, and therefore they did not offer their Prayer until they reached the territory of Banu Qurayzhah. But Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him approved both positions.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

This clearly shows us that there are some divine commands which Allah the Almighty deliberately leaves without any definitive specification, i.e. He leaves them up to man's personal reasoning, because He Glorified is He is pleased when they are carried out any way. For example, scholars view that wiping a quarter of one's head in ablution is correct, and also wiping the entire head. This is indicated by the fact that He the Almighty uses the particle Bi that could suggest any of these forms of wiping the head.

This rule applies to all topics and matters subject to reasoning. As for the legal principle stating' No reasoning can be applied to a text', this only applies to those texts which are so clear and decisive that they cannot possibly be subjected to reasoning.

In reality, it is of great importance to realise that not every matter in the Islamic Shari'a is subject to personal reasoning, for Allah the Almighty; makes clear those things which cannot be subjected to personal reasoning and those which can. In the same vein, when He the Almighty assigns legal obligations and ordinances to man, He Glorified is He takes into consideration his/her nature. In the light of the fact that man has the free will to do certain acts, while other times s/he is compelled to do other acts, different opinions deduced from personal reasoning are to be judged true and valid. As such, the scholar has to view the conclusion of his reasoning as being true and correct with the possibility that it may be wrong. In addition, he has to view the conclusion of his counterpart as being wrong with the possibility that it may be correct. As a matter of fact, if the process of personal reasoning is conducted properly in the light of its due conditions and requirements, then all the opinions inferred from this process will be valid. This is mainly based on his peace and blessings be upon him approval of both actions of the Companions in the incident of Banu Qurayzhah.

Having ordered us to wipe the head, He Glorified is He commands us to wash our feet. The order of the wording of the text might cause one to assume that the feet are connected to the head and hence should be wiped, but the fact that the word 'feet', syntactically is in the accusative case and not the genitive, tells us that it is essentially connected to the face and hands, and not to the words 'your head' (which are in the genitive case because of the preposition Bi); this clearly means that the feet are not meant to be wiped, but rather washed.

In this regard, there is a very important point that we must take into consideration, that is, He the Almighty does not mention the body parts to be washed consecutively under a particular list, nor does He the Almighty mentions the parts to be wiped in a similar manner; this is to tell us that ablution is an act of worship that must be performed as ordained by Allah. In the same connection, He the Almighty specifies and ordains that the feet must be washed up to the ankles; He the Almighty says: '…and (wash) your feet up to the ankles….' This is because the word Rijl in Arabic can mean either the foot by itself or the foot and the shin up to the thigh. Thus, He Glorified is He wants us to wash our feet up to the ankles.

Once again, we assure you that ablution is a pure act of worship. It is not subject to any kind of reasoning or analogy. This is based on the fact that Allah the Almighty ordains and specifies that hands must be washed up to the elbows even though one's hand starts from the fingertips and continues to the shoulder. In the same connection, He Glorified is He ordains that feet must be washed up to the ankles even though one's feet (Rijl) includes the shin and the thigh.

He the Almighty makes clear to us here that if He wants something in a precise way, He specifies it for us in order for there to be no different opinions about it. On the other hand, if He the Almighty gives us the order in a general way, this means that He gives us permission to apply our own personal reasoning to that order, in order for us to feel that we have some kind of choice in defining some of the acts of worship we offer Him the Almighty. All of this is undoubtedly part of Allah's Will because He the Almighty is the One Who carefully phrases the structure of this order in such a way which makes it indicate these various meanings.

The saying of Allah the Almighty: '…Wash your face, and your hands and arms up to the elbows, and pass your (wet) hands lightly over your head, and (wash) your feet up to the ankles. And if you are in a state of sexual impurity, purify yourselves…' (al-Ma'ida: 6) plainly indicates that ablution is not sufficient in the state of sexual impurity. In other words, Allah Glorified is He legislates ablution to purify oneself from minor impurity. In fact, there is a difference between this bodily emission that causes one to be in a state of minor ritual impurity and thus nullifies his/her ablution, and that emission which is discharged due to pleasure. Ejaculation or sexual intercourse requires total ablution (Ghusl). We know that when one enjoys food or perfume and the like, the process of enjoyment itself is limited to the organ which experiences pleasure. However, for the enjoyment attained from sexual intercourse, no one knows for certain which specific part of the body experiences pleasure, to the extent that today's scholars are unable to provide further details about this point; a matter that obviously indicates that every cell of the human body participates in enjoying this pleasure. As a result, if a person wants to purify him/herself from sexual impurity, s/he must wash every part of his body.

Concerning the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…And if you are in a state of sexual impurity, purify yourselves. But if you are ill or are travelling, or have just satisfied a want of nature or have cohabited with a woman, and can find no water–then take resort to pure dust, lightly passing over your face and your hands with it…', someone might say, 'Does the saying of Allah: '…or have cohabited with a woman…' not simply repeat what was just said about being in a state sexual impurity?'

We say that He the Almighty refers in this context to another ruling which tells us how to purify ourselves in preparation for the prayer in the absence of water. This is viewed in the light of the fact that He the Almighty teaches Muslims how to prepare themselves for such an act of worship that is never waived and thus He the Almighty will not hold a person responsible for something that s/he might not find. So, when one is unable to find any water, a person is allowed to perform dry ablution (Tayammum) because prayer is an act of worship, as we have just explained, which is never waived for those who are legally charged to perform it, even when the person is so ill that s/he cannot move any part of her/his body, Allah the Almighty allows such a person to pray seated or reclining, or to pray by gesturing with the head or even with the eyes. In this regard, we stress once again that even the paralysed person must perform prayer by imagining its motions in his/her head.

We know for certain that 'prayer' is the only pillar of Islam which must be offered at all times. In fact, it is enough for one to declare the Testimony of Faith just once in his/her life and a permanently ill man is excused from the obligation of fasting and may compensate for this by feeding the poor. However, if the illness is temporary or one is on a journey, a person may make up the days s/he broke her/his fast. In the same connection, one might not pay out zakat, i.e. the obligatory charity to the poor, and also for pilgrimage because he himself is poor; one is not obliged to perform it as long as s/he cannot afford it or does not have the power to do it. However, as for prayer, man is not allowed to leave it at any time.

The greatness of prayer is clearly manifested by the way it was legislated. As a matter of fact, all the pillars of Islam were legislated by revelation, whereas prayer is the only pillar that is given directly by Allah the Almighty to Prophet Muhammad. In other words, Allah Glorified is He does not say to Gabriel, 'Deliver this obligation of prayer to Prophet Muhammad', but rather, He the Almighty has called him peace and blessings be upon him to Himself to deliver him the obligation of prayer Himself.

We previously explained that when an employer wants to tell his employees something the information might reach them by means of the daily memos which are sent to them from him; but if the issue is important, he telephones the supervisor and tells him how important it is. And if the matter is of great important, the boss sends for the supervisor and tells him about it in person. Similarly, legal obligations are revealed in a manner which is commensurate with its level of importance–so what do we think about an obligation that was delivered directly from Allah the Almighty to Prophet Muhammad in the Heavens?

We have previously learnt that some commandments were delivered to Prophet Muhammad by inspiration, while others came to him peace and blessings be upon him by revelation through the Archangel Gabriel. As for prayer, Allah the Almighty has made it obligatory upon him peace and blessings be upon him in the Heavens. Consequently, Muslims must offer five prayers a day. Due to the fact that man is never excused for not performing prayer, Allah the Almighty has made it the dividing line between the believer and the disbeliever. When the Muslim hears the call to prayer, s/he hastens to offer it. In reality, prayer is a summons from the Creator to those whom He has created to enter into His Presence five times a day. Having fulfilled the obligation of performing the Daily Prayers, one is free to meet her/his Lord whenever s/he wills. Indeed, Allah the Almighty never becomes tired of giving rewards till you become tired of doing good deeds.

Beware of allotting certain times for mentioning the Remembrance of Allah the Almighty saying, ‘This is the time for work, and that is for the Remembrance of Allah’. In fact, when you work to seek Allah’s Bounty, you must not forget Allah at all because His Glorified is He Remembrance must be continuous during all of man’s actions. Bringing us into existence, He the Almighty wants us to worship Him alone without ascribing any partner to Him. In the Quran, He the Almighty tells us that He has sent Prophet Saleh to the people of the Thamud. Allah peace be upon him ordered them to worship Allah alone, for He the Almighty is the One Who has brought them into being from the earth. He peace be upon him also ordered them to ask Allah for forgiveness and to show repentance to Him the Almighty. (Hud: 61)

Consequently, everything that leads to thriving and making progress in the world is viewed as an act of worship. This is based on the fact that He the Almighty extends the jurisprudential term ‘worship’ to apply to all the different motions of life. This point has been previously explained in the chapter of al-Baqara when He the Almighty tells Muslims that they, i.e. men, will incur no sin if they divorce women, while they have not yet touched them nor determined a dowry for them; but (even in such a case) they must make provision for them–the affluent according to his means, and the straitened according to his means–a provision in an equitable manner: this is a duty upon all who do good. He the Almighty then states that if they divorce them before having touched them, but after having determined a dowry for them, then they must (give them) half of what they have already determined–unless it be that they forgo their claim or he in whose hand is the marriage-tie forgoes his claim (to half of the dowry). He the Almighty then clarifies that to forgo what is due to you is more in accord with Allah-consciousness, demanding them at the same time not to forget (that you are to act with) grace towards one another (al-Baqara: 236-237).

This verse discusses one of the worldly matters concerning family affairs. Having shed light on this affair, He the Almighty immediately speaks of an act of worship; a matter which indicates the correlation between acts of worship and worldly affairs. Allah Glorified is He orders Muslims to be ever mindful of the prayers, and of the midmost prayer in particular; and to stand before Him in devout obedience. He Glorified is He then states that if they, i.e. Muslims, are in danger, they can (pray) walking or riding, adding that when they are again secure, they must remember Allah–since it is He Who teaches them what they did not previously know (al-Baqara: 238-239).

After that, He the Almighty returns to shed more light on family affairs, saying that if any of the Muslim men die and leave wives behind, they bequeath thereby to their widows (the right to) one year's sustenance without their being obliged to leave (the dead husband's home)…(al-Baqara: 240).

And He the Almighty does the same again here in this chapter of al-Ma'ida; having shed light on the blessings He Glorified is He bestows upon us, He then takes us in to His Presence; a matter that requires man to purify himself/ herself before entering into this meeting with Him the Almighty. He tells us that certain parts of the body must be purified. This obligation of purification is called wudu' (ablution) in which man is supposed to wash the face and the two hands up to the elbows, wipe the head and finally wash the feet up to the ankles. Concerning this particular process of purification, i.e. ablution, it is important to know that Allah Glorified is He has defined the exact area to be washed for some parts of the body while leaving the others subject to personal reasoning. He gave explicit instructions for three things: the washing of the face, the washing of the hands and arms up to the elbows, and the washing of the feet up to the ankles. Concerning the wiping of the head, He Glorified is He does not specify the exact area to be wiped. In other words, He does not order us to wipe the entire head, and nor does He order us to wipe a quarter of the head. This matter clearly indicates that the scholar who exercises his personal reasoning on this particular matter, i.e. wiping of the head, may understand the particle bi here according to any possibly acceptable lexical meanings. To sum up, it is clear that He the Almighty gave us explicit instructions for some rulings and left others up to our personal reasoning. Having finished speaking about ablution, He Glorified is He and then moves to tell us that we must purify ourselves from sexual impurity before being in His Presence.

At that point, careful reflection upon the aforementioned two verses reveals that Allah the Almighty casts light on different topics, including' the kinds of cattle we are permitted to eat' and 'marriage'. As for the second topic, i.e. marriage, He Glorified is He widened the scope of permissibility, to allow a Muslim to marry women from among the people of the Book.

Due to the fact that the food we eat results in our excretion of urine and faeces, while sexual intercourse causes chemical changes in the body, He the Almighty therefore ordains us to purify ourselves from the minor body impurity, i.e. urine and faeces by performing ablution and to purify ourselves from the major body impurity, i.e. sexual impurity by performing total ablution. He Glorified is He says: '…And if you are in a state of sexual impurity, purify yourselves….'

Due to the fact that He the Almighty wants us to be constantly connected to Him, He does not limit the means of preparation and purification for prayer to water alone because we sometimes may not have any water or we may have it but are unable to use it. As such, He the Almighty does not want to break the connection between man and Him by limiting the means of purification for prayer to water alone. Hence, He makes it lawful for us to make purification by another means, that is, Tayammum or dry ablution. That is, if you do not have any water to purify yourself for prayer, you can purify yourself by another lawful means of purification; namely, dry ablution (Tayammum) with dust. It goes without saying that dust exists everywhere on the surface of the earth and that one will be able to find it at all times. He Glorified is He says in this regard: '…But if you are ill or you are travelling, or have just satisfied a want of nature or have cohabited with a woman, and can find no water–then take resort to pure dust….' Hence, if one is ill and unable to use water, or if s/he is on a journey and can find no water, or if s/he satisfies a call of nature by going to Al-Gha'it–the word 'Al-Gha'it' means a place which is low and concealed; Arabs, men and women, used to go to such places for the particular purpose of answering the call of nature so that no one would see them–and even after cohabiting with women, and one does not find water after these things, the alternative is dry ablution. As a matter of fact, those who think that water is the only means of purification are wrong, for Allah the Almighty has provided a substitute for it, i.e. dust which is more prevalent than water. This plainly indicates that He the Almighty wants us to be in constant contact with Him all the time; and this is achieved by Him allowing us to purify ourselves with dust in the absence of water or when one is unable to use it.

In this respect, I do not want to exhaustively discuss scholars' different opinions concerning the difference between 'touching' (Lams) and 'cohabitation' (Mulamasa); it suffices to say that the word Lams does not imply any interaction, while the word Mulamasa does. In other words, this means that Mulamasa indicates that there are two parties involved in a particular action, which means that it refers to more than the process of touching, i.e. it refers to sexual intercourse. When one is in a state of sexual impurity and there is no water available, s/he is allowed to perform dry ablution with dust. Allah the Almighty says: 'Take resort to pure dust (Sa'id).' The word Sa'id means what lies on the surface of the earth; it is made of the same material as the earth and is unadulterated by man-made substances. Examples of Sa'id are dust and rock. As for the red bricks we make, they are not appropriate for dry ablution since they are adulterated by man-made substances.

It is obligatory to purify four parts of the body in ablution; for total ablution, the entire body has to be purified. With regards to dry ablution, He the Almighty allows us to wipe only the face and the hands. The same also applies for purification from sexual impurity. We may observe here that Allah Glorified is He includes the wiping of the head in the ablution in order for us to be familiar with the action of wiping when we come to make dry ablution.

He the Almighty then says: '…Passing lightly over your face and your hands with it. Allah does not want to impose any hardship on you….' This verse clearly indicates that He the Almighty does not want to impose any hardship upon us and because of this He allows us to purify ourselves with water or with dust when water is not found or when one is unable to use it. It goes without saying that the person who does not find water to purify herself/himself with will indeed undergoes hardship because s/he does not find a means with which to purify himself. Consider the case of having only a little water to drink; would a person use it for ablution or keep himself/herself alive by drinking it? Allah the Almighty does not want to make things difficult for His Creatures or impose hardship on them, and therefore He made things easy for them by making dust a good and satisfactory substitute for water. He the Almighty says: '…but (He) wants to make you pure….'

Indeed, those who think that cleanliness is the ultimate purpose of ablution are wrong; if ablution were only meant for cleanliness, then it would only be possible to do it with water. Furthermore, we are faced with the following question: 'Why do we wipe our faces with dust?' This clarifies that cleanliness is not the ultimate objective of performing ablution. Moreover, if someone says, 'I will clean myself with cologne', we say, 'This is not what you are legally obliged to do. Allah does not want you to clean yourself this way, but rather, He wants you to purify yourself. It is taken for granted that the conditions for purification are set by the One with whom you wish to meet, i.e. Allah the Almighty. He Glorified is He has made two ways in which this process of purification can be done, either with water or with dry ablution with dust'. And it is clear that purification makes one worthy to be received by his Lord in the way He has ordained. Once again, it is Allah the Almighty Who lays down these rules and not you (O man!). Ordering man to purify himself/herself with either water or dust indicates that Allah the Almighty wants man to remember these elements from which s/he has been created, which will make him/her constantly humble to Him.

He Glorified is He then says: '…and to complete His blessings on you….' In truth, man is surrounded by many blessings. But suppose that a person's father is far from him/her, and news of his/her father comes to him/her every day in the form of money, food, drink and other comforts. In this way, the person takes all the blessings which a father is meant to give her/him, yet s/he yearns to be with this absent father whose blessings s/he enjoys. Clearly, being with his father is the complete and perfect blessing from the father to his son–and if this is the case with Allah's creatures, then you can imagine how great the favour is when Allah bestows His Complete and Perfect Blessings on His servants.

In fact, the pious servant hopes to see the One Who bestows all of these blessings upon him/her. And He the Almighty conditions purification as a necessary prerequisite for meeting with Him. When one comes to prayer and says, 'Allah is the Greatest', this means that s/he enters the Presence of His Lord. If we take into account how happy man is with the material blessings including food, drink and clothes, bestowed upon him/her by another creature, such as a father, a brother, or a relative, what do we really think of the Blessing He the Almighty bestows upon man while in His Presence? These blessings in actuality will be unknown but to the person who is in His Presence.

So, when He the Almighty says: '…and to complete His blessings on you…', this means that His Blessings are completed on you (O believers!) by calling you to meet Him Glorified is He and to be in His Presence. To fully illustrate this point, let us refer to the previous example of the son and the absent father. It is in this example that we find that the son looks at the gifts his absent father sends and says, 'I do not want these things; I just want my father!'

The complete and perfect blessing–on the human level–is for a person to see the one who bestows his/her blessings upon him/her, and he is a human being just like him/her. As for the complete and perfect blessing from the Creator to the creature, it requires that one must purify himself/herself in the way He the Almighty has ordained, and then enter the prayer and thus meet Him and be in His Presence.

He the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying, '…and to complete His blessings on you, so that you may have a reason to be grateful'. When we hear Allah the Almighty saying, 'I did this for you to have a reason to be grateful', this means, 'If you do what I tell you, you will get something wonderful in return, for which you will naturally be grateful'. This indicates that man must be deeply thankful for Him the Almighty for the Blessings He Glorified is He bestows upon him/her. Similarly, He the Almighty tells us that man must be grateful to Him the Almighty for the blessings of hearing, sight and intellect which He endows him/her (an-Nahl: 78). Hearing, sight and intellect are undoubtedly the channels of perception. Consequently, He the Almighty orders us to be grateful for the fact that He the Almighty has created us, and we had no knowledge, and then has given us means of perception.

وَٱذۡكُرُواْ نِعۡمَةَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيۡكُمۡ وَمِيثَٰقَهُ ٱلَّذِى وَاثَقَكُم بِهِۦٓ إِذۡ قُلۡتُمۡ
سَمِعۡنَا وَأَطَعۡنَاۖ وَٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَلِيمُۢ بِذَاتِ ٱلصُّدُورِ ٧

Remember God's blessing on you and the pledge with which you were bound when you said, 'We hear and we obey.' Be mindful of God: God has full knowledge of the secrets of the heart [7] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 7)

A person may ask, 'What does "remembrance" (Ad-Dhikr) mean?' It means to memorise something, or to bring it to mind. As a matter of fact, the process of memorisation entails that only the object itself should be kept in the mind, just as it is. As for the word 'Istihdar', it refers to recalling the actual meaning of what one has in the mind. Consequently, there is a difference between memorising something and bringing it to mind. This is actually the true meaning of remembrance. Moreover, 'remembrance' may indicate the act of 'mentioning' something, because you do not mention something unless you first bring it to your mind. Actually, we find that the brain performs the functions of remembering, memorising, and imagining facts.

One of the wonders of the creation of the human being is that a person may be unable to remember particular events that took place decades ago, but then may suddenly remember them due to the occurrence of a particular incident that reminds him/her of them. Consequently, it is clear that man does not totally forget an event that s/he experienced twenty years ago; rather, this particular event was just absent from her/his mind for twenty years or more, and then certain things happened that reminded her/him of it. This means that this information was stored by the person even though s/he forgot about it for a long period of time.

And 'remembrance' means to call to memory such information that was previously stored in the mind so that it comes to the forefront of the consciousness. For example, two people might have experienced something twenty years ago and then forgot it, but when they meet one another and sit and speak about the past, they remember the event which they experienced more than twenty years ago. This indicates clearly that the event did not leave the memory forever but was stored somewhere in the subconscious of the mind, to the extent that the more time passed, the more it seemed that the person had forgotten about the incident. Yet, when s/he undergoes certain circumstances, s/he will be able to recall it to the subconscious of the mind where one is able to remember past memories. This actually tells us how Great and Powerful Allah the Almighty is.

To elaborate, one of us might record some speech on a cassette, but when s/he wants to record something else on the same cassette, s/he has to erase what has been previously recorded; however, human memory does not function like this. As a matter of fact, when events are in the conscious part of the mind, one is able to remember them, yet if another event will be stored in the mind, the previously stored incident will have to move to the subconscious mind to give room for the new one, and so on. This is because the conscious part of the mind can only accommodate one thought at a time; if it is occupied with another thought, the previously stored event will leave to the subconscious mind. It is important here to realise that thoughts are not erased by one another within the human mind. As a result, one is able to recall past events whenever s/he wishes. This actually indicates the great difference between Allah's Creation and the production of man.

Moreover, it is of great importance to realise that human minds store nothing but abstractions and that physical objects can never be stored in man's memory; otherwise, the brain would not be able to contain them, i.e. all these physical objects. Consequently, these abstractions do not jostle for space in the mind, but rather, they build up within it so that if a person searches through the abstractions in her/his mind, s/he can recall minding what s/he wants to remember. This could not be the case if the brain were not created by the Almighty Creator. As long as abstractions do not take up any physical space, man can easily store them in his/her memory.

A person might sit down and revise the names of the world's mountains, saying, 'The world's mountains include Mount Everest, the Himalayas, Mount Uhud, and Mount Thawr'. In fact, when the person mentions these names, s/he indeed pictures what they mean. In other words, what exists in her/his mind at the time of uttering these words are their meanings and not the physical realities they designate. Consequently, these abstract meanings never jostle or expel one another, but rather they remain stored in the memory and the subconscious of the mind.

In truth, those who think that people have different levels of intelligence are wrong. Unfortunately, people may mistakenly think that someone has high intelligence and is thus able to memorise things from the first glance, while another who has less intelligence, as they think, will not be able to memorise it except after reading it twice or thrice. This is wrong because every man has a mind that functions like a camera which can take a photo from the first shot. But if a man takes a picture with a camera and something clouds over the lens of the camera, s/he takes the picture again. The same is true for the human mind: if a person wants to memorise something while her/his mind is occupied with something else, information will not perfectly settle in the conscious part of the mind and therefore s/he will have to repeat the action of reading to confirm the information therein in order for it to be imprinted in the conscious part of the mind.

The following is an illustrative example of this point: a student may enter the school’s examination hall, and five minutes before the bell rings to start the exam, one of his colleagues may say to him, ‘Did you revise such-and-such a topic?’ The student replies, ‘No, I did not’, and his friend says, ‘There will be a question about this topic in the exam’. As a result, the student opens a book and reads about this topic just once. At this moment, the student will not think about what he will eat for lunch today, or whom he will meet, but rather, he will be well aware that his chance is slim, which will force him to concentrate fully on what he is reading. For this reason, he is able to memorise the subject at the first glance, to the extent that he will be fully able to answer a question on this particular topic. On the other hand, we may find another student who studies the same topic for several days but is still unable to answer questions on it. As such, it becomes clear that the mind can imbibe something in a single moment as long as the person does not receive the information while his/her mind is occupied with something else. This point is proved by the fact that man might hear a poem or a speech only one time and yet memorise more than just one verse of the poem or more than just one sentence of the speech. Why is this?! It is because at that particular moment her/his mind was not occupied with anything, and as a result s/he was able to memorise very easily. As for the rest of the poem or speech, her/his mind might have been occupied with other topics at that time, and thus was unable to store the information it received. Hence, one tries to repeat the process of listening or that of reading more than once in order to prepare her/his conscious mind to easily memorise all what s/he wants to store.

Based on the above, it is clear that the mind can imbibe something in one moment. As for the memory, it evokes the notions which are stored deep in the mind. Concerning that point, we stress that nothing is ever lost from the memory and therefore man is able to recall minding all that s/he wants. It is as though these impressions of Allah's Blessings are painstakingly recorded in man; s/he just has to evoke them from the stores in the memory and seek them out.

Careful reflection on the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'And (always) remember the blessings which Allah has bestowed upon you…' (al-Ma'ida: 7) indicates that He Glorified is He uses the word Ni'ma here, which literally means 'a blessing' in the singular, even though His Blessings are countless. Why is this? This shows man that s/he should remember every single blessing which is bestowed upon her/him by Allah the Almighty in every aspect of life. Allah's Blessings are indeed manifold, but man must remember every single blessing in itself in order to fully express gratitude to Him the Almighty; a person is thus supposed to remember the blessing of being created out of nothing, the blessing of sight, and that of hearing. In reality, each one of these blessings should always be remembered by man. Moreover, we should know very well that no one divine blessing cancels out any other. If man gives consideration to every blessing, s/he will find that s/he has to remember them all the time. Another possible interpretation for this word is that it, i.e. the word 'blessings', is a generic noun that includes all that can be referred to as a blessing. For example, the word 'man' may refer to any human being; it may refer to Khalid, Mohammed, 'Ali, etc.

Moreover, this particular word 'Ni'ma' could be attributed to its cause. For example, a blessing caused by the chivalry of a single human being may be attributed to him/her. Here, it is of great importance to know that the effect of these blessings provided by mankind is in relation to their limited human abilities. The matter is totally different when it has to do with those Blessings which are provided by Allah the Almighty since they, i.e. such divine Blessings, must also be in correlation with His Glorified is He Infinite and Unchallenged Power.

Allah the Almighty says: ‘And (always) remember the blessings which Allah has bestowed upon you, and the solemn pledge by which He has bound you to Himself….’ The word ‘to bind’ entails the interaction between two particular parties: man and Allah the Almighty. Man is in constant need for the sustenance provided to him/her by Allah the Almighty; however, Allah Glorified is He is the Absolute Sustainer. It is a relationship between the Lord and His slaves. In another position in the Quran, He the Almighty tells us to fulfil our promise to Him so that, in return, He will keep His Promise to us (an-Nisa’: 20).

Again, it is clear that the phrase wathaqkum (He has bound you to Himself) indicates that there is interaction by two parties; a point of view which is supported by the fact that the verb wathaqa (has bound) is in the morphological form (fa’ala), which implies the interaction of two parties, just like the verb sharaka (to participate), which indicates that two or more people work together, or qatala, which means ‘to fight one another.’ As such, when He the Almighty says that He ‘has bound’ (wathaqa) His slaves, this means that He participated with them in this pledge and accepted it from them. But what pledge is this?

We should know that there are a number of pledges which have been given by man to Allah the Almighty; the first of which was taken from the children of Adam, while they were still in his (Adam’s) loin. The text of this particular pledge is mentioned by Allah in the chapter of al-’Araf in which He Glorified is He states that He has brought forth the descendants of Adam from their fathers’ backs, and has made them bear witness against their own souls: ‘“Am I not your Lord?” They said, “Yes! We bear witness (to this).” Lest you should say on the day of resurrection, “Surely, we were heedless of this”’ (al-A’raf: 172).

As a matter of fact, this is the pledge of natural disposition which was taken before the soul and its passions existed. There is also another pledge known as’ the pledge of the intellect’. It is by means of this pledge that man ponders over the universe and is thus able to adduce that the universe has been created in a very precise way, which clearly indicates the Existence of Allah the Almighty. There comes after this the pledge which has to do with faith in Allah. When Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him presented the teachings of Islam, some people believed in them, that is, he took from them a pledge that they will follow Allah’s Directions and Commands.

This point is definitively proven by the fact that he peace and blessings be upon him took a pledge from the people of Medina at Al-'Aqaba when they said to him, 'Take whatever pledge you want for yourself and your Lord'. As a result, Prophet Muhammad spoke, recited the Quran to them, called them to Allah and Islam and then said, 'I take a pledge from you that you will protect me like you protect your womenfolk and your children', whereupon Al-Barra' ibn Ma'rur took his hand and said, 'Surely, I swear by Him Who has sent you with the Truth that we will protect you like we protect our kin. Indeed, we pledge this, O Prophet Muhammad, for we are men of war, having arms that have been handed down from father to son.'(1)

The same also occurred at the Pledge of Allah's Pleasure (Bai'at Ar-Ridwan) which took place under the tree. To conclude, the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…the solemn pledge by which He has bound you to Himself…' may refer either to the general pledge of faith made at the time of the seed or to the pledges of faith which were made by the intermediation of the Messengers and Prophets.

He the Almighty then says: '…The solemn pledge by which He has bound you to Himself when you said, "We hear, and we obey…."' In fact, when a person has faith, s/he says, 'I have heard the Commands of Allah and I obey them', and in this way her/his pledge to Allah the Almighty is completely fulfilled. He the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying: '…So, be mindful of Allah: verily, Allah has full knowledge of what is in the hearts'. To be mindful of Allah (At-Taqwa) means to place a protective barrier between Allah's Attributes of Majesty and ourselves. In other words, even though we are all required to strictly adhere to Allah's Way of Guidance, we must also place a protective barrier between His Anger and ourselves. We have previously explained that the meaning understood from being mindful of Allah the Almighty is the same as that understood from His Order to be mindful of the fire. Yet, someone may ask, 'Does the hellfire issue commandments and prohibitions?' We say to such a questioner, 'You do not understand this point properly. Our statement means that you should place a protective barrier between yourself and Allah's Wrath because the hellfire is one of Allah's soldiers'. That is why He the Almighty tells us to be cautious and to' place a protective barrier between ourselves and His Attributes of Majesty'. In relation to this, we should know that Allah's Attributes are of two kinds: Attributes of Majesty and Attributes of Beauty. The list of His Attributes of Majesty includes Absolute Power, Vengeance, and Compulsion, whereas the list of the Attributes of Beauty includes Mercy, Forgiveness, Sustaining His Creatures, and Wisdom, etc. To conclude, we must place a protective barrier between ourselves and His Attributes of Majesty to protect ourselves from the soldiers through which Allah's Attributes of Majesty are exhibited, one of which is the hellfire.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad

We previously explained that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told us that Allah, the All-Compelling, showers His slaves with His Mercy in the last night of Ramadan. Concerning this, someone may ask, 'Why did he no the use the word "the All-Forgiving" instead of the word "the All-Compelling"?' This is because this Most Beautiful Name, i.e. 'the All-Compelling' indicates one of Allah's Attributes of Majesty, which implies that the sinner will be punished. As a matter of fact, sins are closely related to the Attributes of Majesty and not to those of Mercy. Logic dictates that the sinner shall stand before Him the Almighty whose Vengeance is severe because the situation corresponds more closely to the Attributes of Majesty. But we must take into account the undeniable fact that He the Almighty postpones the infliction of His punishment to allow the sinner to show repentance. In addition, we should bear in mind that He rejoices in His slave's repentance and that His Mercy overcomes His wrath.

He the Almighty concludes the verse with His saying: '…verily, Allah has full knowledge of what is in the hearts'. Allah-consciousness, as we know, does not only apply to physical actions, but it also applies to inner states of consciousness. Good intentions and bad intentions are best examples in this regard. As a matter of fact, envy, hatred, plotting, and scheming are all bad attributes which have to do with man's inner consciousness. Hence, you should not think that Allah-consciousness only applies to physical actions, for it also applies to feelings. In the same connection, the deeds of the heart also fall under the category of Allah-consciousness. He the Almighty then says:

يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ كُونُوا۟ قَوَّٰمِينَ لِلَّهِ شُهَدَآءَ بِٱلْقِسْطِ ۖ وَلَا
يَجْرِمَنَّكُمْ شَنَـَٔانُ قَوْمٍ عَلَىٰٓ أَلَّا تَعْدِلُوا۟ ۚ ٱعْدِلُوا۟ هُوَ أَقْرَبُ
لِلتَّقْوَىٰ ۖ وَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ خَبِيرٌۢ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٨﴾

You who believe, be steadfast in your devotion to God and bear witness impartially: do not let hatred of others lead you away from justice, but adhere to justice, for that is closer to awareness of God. Be mindful of God: God is well aware of all that you do [8] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 8)

We know perfectly well that when Allah the Almighty wants to issue an order to the group of believers, He the Almighty does this with His saying: 'O you who believe….' He the Almighty does not deny people their free will by forcing them to follow His Way, but rather, He issues commandments and obligations to those who believe in Him. He is telling us' O you who believe in Me as the All-Wise and All-Powerful, follow My Way of Guidance'. In fact, when He the Almighty wants to address mankind, He calls upon them with His saying: 'O Mankind'. This means that He wants to direct the attention of all humanity to His Existence. As for those who believe in Him, they are included in His words: 'O you who believe….' Having heard this particular call from Allah the Almighty to the group of believers, they must carry out His commands and orders.

We know for certain that there is a great difference between being Allah's slaves and being Allah's Worshippers. We can state that all mankind are Allah's slaves but not all are His the Almighty Worshippers. The difference between being 'slaves' ('Abid) and being 'worshippers' ('Ibad) is that the former indicates that people are compelled in certain matters of their lives and that they cannot apply their free will to these particular matters. A rebel may say, 'I do not believe in Allah', but can s/he rebel against Allah's fate upon her/him! If such a person falls ill and then claims that s/he is not actually ill, what will happen to her/him?! Could any of these rebels dare to refuse to die?! Definitely, no one could; no one can do such a thing. As such, it is clear that Allah's slaves are naturally compelled by Allah and thus we all are slaves to Him the Almighty. Hence, He the Almighty can summon us whenever He wants. In addition, He Glorified is He can afflict us with any punishment that we are not able to ward off. As for Allah's Worshippers ('Ibad), they are the ones who say to Allah, 'We relinquish our own free will and are happy with whatever you may command us with, either to "Do" or "Do not"'. This is actually the difference between the two terms.' Allah's slaves' are compelled to submit to His Will, whereas 'Allah's Worshippers' are those who are pleased to relinquish their free will in favour of what He the Almighty loves and chooses for them; they surrender themselves to Him. That is, they are compelled by free choice, while the slaves are compelled by force.

He the Almighty says: 'O you who believe! Be ever steadfast in your devotion to Allah….' The Arabic word Qawwam (steadfast) is an intensive adjectival form of the word Qa'im, which means 'one who stands'. If a person stands frequently for long periods of time, he is called Qawwam. Similarly, when a man who is not skilled in carpentry takes a plank of wood and uses it to cover a hole in his door, we do not call him Najjar (carpenter), but rather, we call him Najir, i.e. the one who performs an act of carpentry even though he is not specialised in it. However, the word Najjar refers only to that person who makes his living out of carpentry. Likewise, we call the one who goes out to sea in his boat and catches a couple of fish 'Sa'id', i.e. the one whose hobby is to catch fish. And of course, we do not call him Sayyad (fisherman) because fishing is not his profession.

Here, the verse under discussion indicates clearly that Allah the Almighty does not want every believer to just' stand up' for Him; rather, He Glorified is He wants them to be steadfast, i.e. to be especially diligent in their devotion to Him the Almighty. The opposite of 'standing' (Qiyam) is 'sitting'. Naturally, sitting is followed by reclining, that is, to place one's side on the floor, and after that comes lying down which is eventually followed by sleeping; Man's body can undergo different positions, as follows: standing up, sitting, reclining and sleeping. In Islam, a person who is asleep is not responsible for her/his actions; s/he is not held accountable for legal obligations and ordinances while sleeping. As a matter of fact, these different positions are mentioned by Allah the Almighty in the chapter of an-Nisa' in which He Glorified is He orders us to remember Him–standing, sitting and lying down (an-Nisa': 103).

That is, (O believers!) you must constantly remember Allah the Almighty. A man's natural state involves actions, that is, s/he may stand and sit, etc.

As a matter of fact, when Arabs say, 'Qam fulanun bi Amr al-Qawm (so-and-so was steadfast in fulfilling the needs of the people), this means that he exerts his utmost efforts to run the affairs of the people, which is viewed as the most difficult thing that is undertaken. In this regard, it is important to know that He the Almighty does not want us to just stand before Him, but rather, He wants us to be steadfast and therefore always devoted to Him. However, we should fully realise the fact that our obedience to Him Glorified is He never means that He attains benefit from it, for He the Almighty created His Creatures due to His Attributes of Perfection. Moreover, we must know for certain that the creation of His Creatures never produced any new Attribute of Beauty or Perfection for Him. To continue, when man carries out Allah's Commands, s/he does this so as to be obedient and devoted to Him. Indeed, He the Almighty wants the believers to be steadfast in their devotion to Him, because all the actions of the Muslim society must be devout, complementary, and constructive. In truth, if these are really the actions of the Muslim society, they will bring about the happiness of mankind; for if this is really the case, man with his/her steadfastness will benefit him/herself along with the entire society. This means that all Muslims must always be devotedly obedient to Allah's Commands. Thus, we must realise that all legally charged Muslims must submit to and carry out the divine orders and commands by means of which rights of all the members of the society are protected. In fact, if you are required to be honest, everyone else in the Muslim society is also required to be honest. In the same connection, when He the Almighty forbids you from being treacherous, He similarly commands everyone else to refrain from being treacherous to you.

Hence, if we carefully reflect upon the divine obligations, we will find that they serve one's own interests. No one should thus think that s/he is the only one asked to carry out the religious obligations and commands. As a matter of fact, all people are asked to carry out these divine obligations and commands, in the same way as one person is ordered to do them. Consequently, when Allah commands you not to take the possessions of others, He the Almighty also prohibits them from taking your possessions unlawfully. This plainly indicates that the divine obligations serve the interests of the entire society and not just the individual. That is why one is asked to be steadfast in devotion to Him the Almighty. Concerning this, we stress the fact that the one who intends to show off with his/her deeds will be deprived of the reward, but one who sincerely works for the sake of Allah will be continuously provided with blessings. As an example, someone may say, ‘I did all these things for so-and-so, yet s/he does not acknowledge them!’ We say to him, ‘This is a natural result, since you did not do them for the sake of Allah. But had you done them for the sake of Him the Almighty He will recompense you for it in full’. Referring to those who seek the pleasure of Allah with their deeds, He the Almighty orders us in the Quran to remember the Day of Judgement in which every human being will find himself faced with all the good that he has done (Al-’Imran: 30).

It is now clear that the believer must seek the pleasure of Allah the Almighty by dedicating all his/her actions to Him the Almighty. In fact, if one’s actions are intended for the sake of Allah, then He Glorified is He does not squander the reward of those who do good deeds. In the same connection, losers are those who act for the sake of people even though people cannot benefit them in any way. They might even desert them or harbour hatred and bitterness towards those who treat them kindly. They, i.e. people, might even become their enemies. For example, if one confers favour upon another who might then be given a prestigious position by Allah, when this particular person meets the one who did him a favour, he might feel embarrassed and ashamed, to the extent that he may wish if this meeting had not taken place. Similarly, if he encounters him afterwards in the street, he turns his face away from him to avoid him. This is because the one who did him a favour makes him feel ashamed and weak, but he himself wants to act proudly with the people. To conclude, He the Almighty wants us to seek His Pleasure alone, because nothing is ever lost with Him. In addition, we must fully realise that Allah is watching over you and no action of yours escapes Him.

At this point, it is important to know how Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him defined Ihsan (‘perfection’ or ‘benevolence’). He said, ‘Ihsan is to worship Allah as if you see Him, and if you do not achieve this state of devotion, then (know that) Allah sees you’ (1). Could you, as a human being, do an ill deed to someone in front of his eyes? In fact, you cannot do any ill deed to anyone except behind their backs. Hence, why do you do evil deeds and disobey Him the Almighty when He is watching you all the time?!

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

Consequently, as He the Almighty wants you to treat yourself and others well, this means that you must take into account that all of your deeds and actions must be intended for the sake of Allah the Almighty. Indeed, Allah the Almighty has made all of the creatures subservient to mankind. In addition, He the Almighty has given us all the constituents of life, and as a result He asks us all to be steadfast in devotion to Him. In truth, man is required to be steadfast (Qawwam) in devotion to Him the Almighty all the time. This means that as long as you are healthy enough to work, then work; and do not only work as much as you need to, but also work as much as you are able to because if you only worked as much as you needed to, then those who are unable to work would not have anything to live on.

As such, it is clear that one must work as much as s/he is able to for her/his work to be of benefit to all the people. In fact, when He the Almighty says: '…Be ever steadfast in your devotion to Allah, bearing witness to the truth in all equity….' this means that He Glorified is He teaches us not to render our deeds as scattered floating dust, but rather to entirely devote our deeds to Allah, because He the Almighty never forgets to reward His slave and He returns every favour; in the Quran, He the Almighty tells us that the reward of good must be good (ar-Rahman: 60). And in another position, Allah Glorified is He says that He does not fail to requite the doers of good (at-Tawba: 120).

When one of us is steadfast in devotion to Allah, s/he uses the motions of her/his life for the good of Allah's Creatures. In fact, man is required to do so. In addition, it is not enough for you to do only this, but rather, you must also be a just witness to the truth and guide those who incline towards deviancy back to the path of justice. When you are steadfastly devoted to Allah, this is a good thing. In the same connection, you must try to convince others to be steadfastly devoted to Allah by bearing witness to the truth in all equity and justice. When this is actually done, i.e. bearing witness to the truth in all equity and justice, the wrongdoer will not continue his/her wrongdoing. It goes without saying that the main reason that makes a wrongdoer continue her/his wrongdoing even more is that s/he sees people circumventing justice, concealing faults and cheating people.

But if there are people who work hard to maintain justice, there will be no wrongdoing. In fact, the wrongdoer loves to see people circumvent justice; he thinks, ‘So-and-so committed the same crime as me and got away scot-free!’ It goes without saying that an unjust testimony leads to the breakdown of the society. If a society sees that the testimony given within it is just and equitable, all its members who wanted to commit a wrongdoing will restrain themselves from doing so. In addition, in such a society, the wrongdoers are punished, and in this way, others will be deterred from committing wrongdoings. The believer is first required to be steadfastly devoted to Allah by rectifying her/himself. S/he is then required to be an equitable and just witness for the truth in order to rectify others.

The Arabic word for ‘equity’ is (Qist), from which many other words are derived. Surprisingly, this word may be used to refer to both ‘justice’ and ‘injustice’. It is one of those Arabic words which can give the meaning of the word and its opposite. This is actually one of the interesting phenomena of the Arabic language. Such words of this special phenomenon require the listener to examine them and deduce their meanings based on the context. The verb Qasata/Yaqsitu means ‘to be just’, and the verbal noun is either Qist or Qusut. As a matter of fact, it is the verbal noun that indicates the exact meaning of the word in question, that is, whether’ justice’ or ‘injustice’ is meant: the verbal noun Qist means ‘justice’, while the verbal noun Qusut indicates ‘injustice’. As such, we see that this verb may indicate a particular meaning and its opposite which means that the listener must be fully attentive to know how to determine the correct meaning of the word based on the context, that is, whether it indicates ‘justice’ or ‘injustice’.

As for the verb Aqsata, it means ‘s/he made justice’. With regard to this, we must fully realise that there is a great difference between’ being just at the outset’ which is Qist, and ‘being just after injustice had been committed’ which is Aqsata that means ‘to remove injustice’.

Allah the Almighty says in the Quran that the wrongdoers (al-Qasitun) will be the fuel of the hellfire (al-Jinn: 15). But back to this particular verse under discussion from the chapter of al-Ma’ida, Allah the Almighty says: ‘…bearing witness to the truth in all equity….’ This means that we all must bear witness for justice. As a matter of fact, the listener to or the reader of the Quran must be fully attentive to be able to determine the correct meaning of the word based on the context. In other words, s/he must have enough fluency in the Arabic language to be able to distinguish between the synonym and the antonym. Hence, it is clear there is difference between Qist which means 'justice', Aqsata which means 's/he maintained justice after removing injustice', and al-Qusut which means 'injustice'.

In the Quran, Allah the Almighty tells us that He loves those who act equitably, i.e. Al-Muqsitun (al-Ma'ida: 42). The word 'Muqsitun' is the plural of 'Muqsit' and is derived from the verb 'Aqsata' which means 'to remove injustice'. Once again, it is the context and the verbal noun of a word that indicates its exact meaning. Incidentally, the verbal noun may be used in place of an adjective. For example, the word 'Adl (justice), which is a verbal noun can also be used as an adjective to refer to 'someone who is just', in which case it is always written and pronounced 'Adl and never changes, irrespective of the fact that it refers to a masculine or feminine, or to a singular, dual or plural noun (although an ordinary adjective would change its form in these cases). In the Quran, Allah the Almighty says that He shall set up just (al-Qist-singular form) balance-scales on the Day of Resurrection (al-Anbiya': 47). In another position, Allah Glorified is He orders us to weigh with true (al-Qistas-singular form) scales (ash-Shu'ara': 182).

In the Egyptian countryside, the merchant makes his own weights out of stones, gauging a certain stone to weigh one kilogram and gauging other stones to weigh certain fractions of a kilogram. Due to the frequent use of these stones, the merchant knows that they will wear down. To allow for this, he reweighs them every now and then; it is said that he 're-gauges his weights'. This is actually called al-Qistas. That is, al-Qistas is the standard against which the weights are gauged. If a person makes weights out of material that wears down or is affected by being touched, he has to re-gauge them every now and then in order not to wrong anyone in the least. He the Almighty says: '…this is more equitable (Aqsatu) in the sight of Allah….' Here, the word Aqsatu means 'being more equitable'. In truth, Allah's Standards of judgement are not as those of man, for man's standards may be subject to differences of opinions. In addition, we see that some merchants decrease their measures by putting something under one of the balances to trick people. As for Allah the Almighty He is the All-Just and His Standards of measure are the most just.

This particular verse (in the chapter of al-Ahzab) was revealed because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him made a judgement which was correct and just according to human standards, yet Allah the Almighty tells him that there is another judgement which is even more equitable than his. It is as if Allah the Almighty wants to say to him ‘It is true, O Prophet Muhammad, that your judgment cannot be subject to human caprice, interest or desire, but Allah’s Justice is even more precise and exacting’. He peace and blessings be upon him made this judgement according to human equity; it concerned Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him who was the freed slave of Prophet Muhammad. The Mother of the believers Khadija bint Khuwayled Allah be pleased with her had gifted Zayd to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Zayd’s family knew that he had been captured and sold as a slave, and that he was finally owned by Prophet Muhammad, so they went to him peace and blessings be upon him and asked for their son. But Zayd refused to go with them and preferred to stay with Prophet Muhammad. That is why he peace and blessings be upon him wanted to honour Zayd who preferred him to his own father and family. He peace and blessings be upon him did this due to the point mentioned clearly in the Quran where Allah the Almighty states plainly that Prophet Muhammad has a higher claim on the believers than (they have on) their own selves (al-Ahzab: 6).

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him naturally had a high esteem for Zayd ibn Haritha, to the extent that he freed him and named him ‘Zayd, son of Muhammad’ as a way of honouring him. This was actually the usual practice of the Arabs at that time. But Allah the Almighty wanted to abolish the practice of adoption telling the believers that their adopted sons will never be like sons from their loins (al-Ahzab: 4).

In this regard, He the Almighty ran the affairs very precisely to abolish this act forever. Allah Glorified is He started with Prophet Muhammad; He ordered him to call Zayd by the name of his real father. In the Quran, He the Almighty orders the believers to call their adopted sons by their (real) fathers' names since this is more equitable in the sight of Allah (al-Ahzab: 5).

Allah the Almighty did not deny that Prophet Muhammad was equitable, but rather, He Glorified is He wanted to tell us that His Verdict is even more equitable. Allah the Almighty having ordered Prophet Muhammad to call Zayd by the name of his real father, He consoled Zayd by mentioning his name in the Quran. As a matter of fact, Zayd Allah be pleased with him is the only Companion whose name is explicitly mentioned in the Quran. In the chapter of al-Ahzab, He the Almighty states that when Zayd had come to the end of his union with Zaynab, He Glorified is He ordered Prophet Muhammad to marry her (al-Ahzab: 37). In this way, Zayd's name was recorded in the Quran, and as a result Muslims will recite it to the end of time. In fact, this was more than enough to remove his sadness. As such, the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…more equitable in the sight of Allah…' is used in its proper place. Furthermore, if Allah the Almighty asks us to be as steadfast as we can in devotion to Him, i.e. to let no opportunity to do good without taking full advantage of it as best as we can, and asks us to be just in the society by being witnesses to the truth in all equity, this will mean that everyone can claim his/her rights. In addition, the strong will not be able to wrong the weak because the weak will find people to, truthfully, bear witness for him.

He the Almighty then warns Muslims not to let caprice negatively affect their standards of justice. Even if the matter has to do with your enemies or rivals, justice is more important and more essential. In this regard, He Glorified is He says: '…And never let hatred of anyone make you deviate from justice….' That is, do not let the hatred you feel for people prevent you from treating them equitably and do not let it cause you to transgress against them; for everyone has his/her rights. We know perfectly well the story that happened when a Muslim stole a shield from another Muslim but accused a Jew of committing this crime. Concerning this incident, He Glorified is He has revealed verses of the Quran in which He says that He reveals the Quran upon the heart of Prophet Muhammad for him to judge among the people with what Allah has taught him. In addition, He the Almighty orders him not to contend with those who are false to their trust (an-Nisa': 105).

Moreover, He the Almighty orders him peace and blessings be upon him not to support those who are treacherous against those who are innocent. In the same connection, the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…and never let hatred of anyone make you deviate from justice…' means that Muslims must not let their hatred for people cause them to be unjust; otherwise this hatred will be for the good of their enemy. This is because when Muslims allow their hatred to make them follow their caprice, Allah will punish them for the injustice committed against this enemy. In this way, it is clear that basing one's judgment on hatred, enmity, and caprice only helps the enemy of Islam. That is why He the Almighty orders the believers not to let their hatred for enemies cause them to deviate from justice.

He the Almighty then says: '…Be just: this is closest to having Allah-consciousness….' In fact, when an enemy is treated justly, this actually rebukes and reproaches this enemy for going against the Faith to the effect that s/he will surely wonder: 'This Muslim is too just to say anything but the truth; his/her belief must make him/her strong. Furthermore, the religion which commands him/her to act as such must be the best of religions!'

As a result, when you, as a believer, judge your enemy justly, you thereby rebuke him/her for being an unbeliever. But if your enemy were to see you act unjustly and go against the truth, you will only encourage her/him to remain a disbeliever because s/he will know that you were only following your caprice. If, on the other hand, s/he sees you taking such a stance which pleases Allah even though it benefits the enemy, s/he will reach the conclusion that the creed in which you believe must be true, and that you uphold the truth even if it benefits your enemies. Consequently, this person will rebuke himself to an extent that s/he might convert to Islam.

He the Almighty says: '…Be just: this is closest to having Allah-consciousness….' But the question to be asked here is: 'Which kind of Allah-consciousness will the person be closer to? Is it the enemy that will be closer to attaining piety when s/he sees that the believer upholds justice and truth?!' As a matter of fact, this may happen; the enemy may come to her/his senses and say, 'Faith has allowed this believer to overcome her/his hatred and to judge according to the truth even though s/he knows for certain that I am her/his enemy'.

The story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) offers us the best example in this regard when a stranger came to him and asked for food or lodgings, yet he peace be upon him did not give him what he asked for because this stranger was a disbeliever. The man went away. At that point, Allah the Almighty revealed to Abraham peace be upon him 'I know perfectly well that he is a disbeliever, yet I do not withhold My Blessings from him; however, he asked you for something to eat or a place to stay the night, but you did not give any to him!' Upon hearing this, Abraham peace be upon him went running after the man until he caught up with him. The man was surprised and asked Abraham, 'Why did you change your mind?', whereupon he peace be upon him replied, 'My Lord censured me for what I did'. The man then replied, 'Indeed, great is that Lord Who censures His beloved on behalf of His enemies!' He then became a believer. This story actually illustrates to us the meaning of His saying: '…closest to having Allah-consciousness….' It clarifies that the disbelieving man came closer to Allah-consciousness. To sum up, the psychological impact exerted on your rival or the one who hates you or is at odds with you when s/he sees you giving precedence to the truth over your hatred for her/him will make such a person become closer to attaining the faith which instructs its followers to give precedence to the truth over caprice. S/he will therefore become closer to Allah-consciousness, and in this way s/he is the one who bears witness to the truth with equity.

Allah Glorified is He finally concludes the verse with His saying: '…So be mindful of Allah: verily, Allah is aware of all that you do'. This indicates that He the Almighty is fully aware of all that we do. Here, it is of great importance for the believers to take into consideration the fact that their deeds must be intended for the sake of Allah the Almighty. In other words, they must not show off with their good deeds.

In fact, many people judge unjustly in order to become famous for being just, but how does this happen? Suppose a dispute arises between your son and your neighbour's son: it might seem courageous for you to rule in favour of your neighbour's son even though he is not in the right, but in reality, it is more courageous for you to rule in favour of your own son if he indeed is in the right. If you rule in favour of your neighbour's son even though he is not in the right, you thereby rule unjustly simply in order to become famous amongst the people for being just!

That is, the truth must be dearer to you than both your son and your neighbour's son. Consequently, you (O Muslims!) must be wary of doing things which apparently seem to be just when really they are intended to show off. And we know that every part of the body has a particular role to play: the tongue's role is to speak; the ear's role is to hear and the role of the nose is to smell. Indeed, an action can be done by either word or deed; in the Quran, He the Almighty orders the believers to say what they do (as-Saff: 2-3). Consequently, it is clear that speech is performed by the tongue and deeds are performed by other body parts, and together these two make action. He the Almighty then says:

وَعَدَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ لَهُم مَّغْفِرَةٌ وَأَجْرٌ عَظِيمٌ ﴿٩﴾

God has promised forgiveness and a rich reward to those who have faith and do good works [9] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 9)

When we carefully reflect on the word Wa'ada (to promise), we find that another word in Arabic is similar to it, which is Aw'ada. If the thing which is promised is not mentioned, Wa'ada means a promise of good tidings, but Aw'ada indicates a warning of something bad. But if the thing promised is explicitly mentioned, the meanings of the two words are equivalent. As a result, you can use the word Wa'ada to mean either 'promise' or 'warning'. But if you do not explicitly state what the thing being promised is, Wa'ada means a promise of glad tidings and Aw'ada means a warning of something bad. In this regard, a poet says:

If I threaten (aw'ada) him or promise (wa'ada) him,

I break my threat but keep my promise.

When He the Almighty says: 'Allah has promised (wa'ada)…', this is an unassailably firm promise which cannot be broken, for the one who breaks promises is man who is subject to vicissitudes; the time might come to fulfil the trust, but man finds him/herself unable or no longer willing to fulfil it. However, when Allah the Almighty is the One Who promises, He cannot be affected by vicissitudes, for He is the One Who causes vicissitudes to occur, and therefore His Promise is absolutely true and no power can prevent it from being fulfilled. As for human promises, any other power may cause them to be unfulfilled.

He the Almighty says: 'Allah has promised to those who believe and do good works (that) for them there is forgiveness of sins….' In this verse, He the Almighty makes it clear that His Forgiveness covers and includes all His servants, not only the especially pious and virtuous among them; rather, He the Almighty is directing His speech here to those who commit sins, telling them that if they repent, they will be forgiven. This is because preventing what is bad is given priority over gaining what is good. For example, if you are sitting somewhere and someone comes from the right and offers you an apple, and just as you are reaching out for the apple you see that another person is about to strike you, what action will you be more likely to take? Of course you will first defend yourself against the one who wishes to strike you. The same applies here; He the Almighty tells us that He effaces sins first by forgiving them and then admits people into His paradise. In the Quran, He the Almighty tells us that the prosperous in the Hereafter will be those who shall be drawn away from the Fire first and then admitted into Paradise. (Al-'Imran: 185)

Clearly, the first step of gaining the attained object is to be drawn away from the Hellfire, and then to be admitted into Paradise. That is, Allah Glorified is He gives precedence to the prevention of what is bad over the gaining of what is good. Accordingly, He the Almighty states in this verse under discussion that He will first grant them forgiveness. As a matter of fact, the human mind always thinks of what it fears first: it fears harm; it fears that its hopes will not be fulfilled. Hence, preventing what is bad has a higher priority than attaining what is good.

Allah the Almighty then concludes the verse by His saying: '…for them there is forgiveness of sins and a mighty reward'. In truth, every worldly reward for an action lasts for a defined period of time. That is why we reiterate that man's rewards for his/her work in this worldly life always come to an end because even the man him/herself comes to an end by dying. As for the reward of the Hereafter, it lasts forever. In addition, it never leaves man, nor does s/he leave it–and this is the truly mighty reward.

Of course, when Allah the Almighty speaks about a concept pertaining to faith and good deeds, the soul is actually fully prepared for it; that is, there are ways that encourage what is good and others that cast fear about what is bad.

وَٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ وَكَذَّبُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَآ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ أَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلۡجَحِيمِ ﴿١٠﴾

those who reject faith and deny Our revelations will inhabit the blazing Fire [10] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 10)

In the verse, we hear the saying of Allah: '…they will be companions of the Blazing Fire', and our souls are moved with dread at this 'companionship' in which we would never wish to partake; for the word 'companionship' indicates closeness and a connection, and that one of the companions never leaves the other. It is as though the blazing fire will never leave them, and nor will they be able to leave it; it even indicates that the blazing fire will yearn for them. On the Day of Resurrection, the hellfire will have two functions to perform: the first will be the 'companionship' from which the disbeliever will not be able to extricate him/herself, while the second is that it will not give the disbeliever any opportunity to escape. Speaking about the hellfire, Allah the Almighty tells us that He will ask it on the Day of Resurrection whether or not it is full and it will reply by asking for more (people) to torture (Qaf: 30). He Glorified is He then says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ ٱذۡكُرُواْ نِعۡمَتَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيۡكُمۡ إِذۡ هَمَّ قَوۡمٌ أَن يَبۡسُطُوٓاْ إِلَيۡكُمۡ
أَيۡدِيَهُمۡ فَكَفَّ أَيۡدِيَهُمۡ عَنكُمۡۖ وَٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَۚ وَعَلَى ٱللَّهِ فَلۡيَتَوَكَّلِ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنُونَ ﴿١١﴾

You who believe, remember God's blessing on you when a certain people were about to raise their hands against you and He restrained them. Be mindful of God: let the believers put their trust in Him [11] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 11)

Remembrance, as we have previously explained, means to call something to mind. As a matter of fact, man is liable to be afflicted with heedlessness, yet s/he must not continue in this state. On the other hand, some people may yet play with people's emotions and say, 'Allah knows that I do not remember Him'. When someone hears these words, s/he might bitterly rebuke and censure the one who said them; but then the person explains what s/he meant by completing the statement, saying, 'For how could I remember Him, when I never forget Him?' Upon hearing this, one is calmed.

Once again, Allah the Almighty says: '…the blessings which Allah has bestowed…' using the singular word Ni'ma (a blessing) rather than the plural Ni'am because He deserves to be thanked for every single blessing He gives, and every single blessing is great enough to merit thanks. It also means that Allah's Blessing refers to every grace He sends to His creatures, the greatest of these blessings being that He is our Lord. He the Almighty says: '…Remember the blessings which Allah has bestowed upon you when (hostile) people were about to lay hands on you, but He withheld their hands from you….' As long as the word 'when' is used, this means that a specific blessing is being referred to here. Allah the Almighty is clarifying the matter to us, to 'Remember how Allah blessed you at the time this event occurred' because He mentions a specific time, and told us to remember His Blessing on that occasion. In fact, He the Almighty is reminding us of the blessing which occurred when people were about to lay their hands on us.

That is, there is a flexing of the hand (qabd) which is a gesture of stillness and immobility, and an extension of the hand (bast) which is an indication of activity. The true blessing we obtain in this life from Allah is to be able to recognise His Bounties. The blessing mentioned in this verse is how Allah prevented further harm from the disbelievers from reaching the believers, after the disbelieving hands had been outstretched with evil and wrongdoings. If we choose to pause at this point in the verse mentioning the disbelievers' extending their hands in evil, some of us may mistakenly think that Allah Glorified is He uses the material means of His creatures as a channel for His decrees to reach us. Some of us may incorrectly assume that Allah's Blessings reach us by material means through the physical bodies of His Creation. However, this is not the meaning of these noble words. When we continue to read the rest of the verse, we clearly see that the Divine Blessing granted by Allah was that He arrested their hands from continuing to do wrong. In Arabic, the word 'bast' (to stretch out) is commonly used to refer to a tongue uttering obscene language, and this verb 'bast' is similarly used when describing a hand that commits mischief.

We can see that Allah Glorified is He uses the phrases ‘on you’ and ‘from you’ in these verses, both of which refer to the believers and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The believers closely adhered to the teachings of Prophet Muhammad, and any harm reaching Prophet Muhammad also harms those who believe in him. It is possible that these verses are referring to the events of the tribe of Banu An-Nadir. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had signed a treaty with Banu An-Nadir stating that they would not aid the enemies of Islam in any way, and that if one of the Muslims mistakenly killed a man from outside Medina, Banu An-Nadir would help to pay the compensation. Prophet Muhammad had sent a Muslim on a raiding party, and two men who had a treaty with the Muslims were inadvertently killed. Indemnities were demanded for the two men, but Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not have the money to pay them, so he went to Banu An-Nadir to ask for help in paying them. They welcomed him and said they would give him food and drink before giving him what he asked for. Then, they sent one of them to climb a wall in order to drop a boulder onto Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as he sat next to one of their houses. However, Allah Glorified is He told His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings of Allah be upon him what they had planned, and therefore he stood up and left without delay.(1)

‘When (hostile) people intended to stretch out their hands (yabsuto) against you and He (Allah) withheld their hands from (harming) you’ (al-Ma’ida: 11). The Arabic word used here for ‘intended’ is’ ‘hamma’, which means ‘to consider doing something’. If the idea then moves on to the next stage of action, it becomes a ‘purpose’ (qasd). The Arabic word ‘hamm’ (insistent thought) can be identified as something that overwhelms a person’s hidden thoughts, and is accompanied by’ anxiety and apprehension’ (ghamm). We often hear people saying that they are weighed down by an insistent thought (hamm) and apprehension (ghamm), or ‘concern and anxiety’ because an idea that does not leave the mind alone will cause anxiety. An insistent thought is an enemy which no one can conquer because it infiltrates the heart, whereas the mind might be able to repel any other enemy. We know that Imam 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb (Abu Al-Hassan) Allah be pleased with him was well known for his clear rulings in religious jurisprudence[1], and that he had sufficient knowledge to answer whatever question he was asked. The extent of his knowledge led 'Umar Allah be pleased with him to say about a particular matter, 'Indeed, this is a vexing problem in the absence of Abu Al-Hassan! 'Umar Allah be pleased with him considered complicated problems worrisome if Abu Al-Hassan Allah be pleased with him was not there to solve them. 'Umar Allah be pleased with him would even seek refuge (from Allah) from a place where 'Ali Allah be pleased with him was not present. When people came to know this about the breadth of his knowledge, they started wondering, 'Where does he get these answers from?' They came up with a puzzle to observe how he would solve it. They started by posing the question among themselves, 'The universe is immense and contains some objects that are stronger than others. Certain powers in our world can certainly defeat all other powers'. Then, they tried to think of a particular force that is stronger than everything else. One of them said, 'The mountain is the strongest creation', but another replied, 'Yet we can cut stones from it with an axe made of iron'. As they continued to try to select the strongest object in creation, 'Ali Allah be pleased with him came along. They directed their problem towards him, 'O Abu Al-Hassan, what is the strongest force in Allah's creation?' Imam Ali Allah be pleased with him answered as though he was reading from a book, showing that he had thought of the matter beforehand. He specified the strongest force, stating a number of forces that were the strongest. He said, 'The strongest of Allah's created forces are ten in number': 'The firm mountains are strong, but iron can break through these mountains. Fire melts iron, but water puts out fire. The clouds that are suspended between the sky and the earth carry water, but the wind breaks up these clouds. The Son of Adam can deter the wind and keep moving in order to carry out his worldly affairs, but drunkenness overpowers the Son of Adam. Sleep overpowers drunkenness, but concern and grief (hamm) can overpower sleep. Consequently, the strongest of Allah's forces are concern and grief'.

(1) The story of Imam 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him about the strongest soldiers of Allah

We cannot pass by the word ‘hamm’ in the Quran without mentioning the other instances in which it is mentioned in Allah’s Book. One of these occasions is found in the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him and people frequently ask about it in public meetings and in letters.(1) In the following verses, Allah Glorified is He describes the attempt of Al-’Aziz’s wife (Zulaykha) to seduce Yusuf (Joseph): ‘And, indeed, she desired him (hammat bihi). And he would have desired her (hamma biha), if he had not been shown the proof of his Lord. But We turned him away from evil and abomination, for he was one of Our sincere worshippers’. (Yusuf: 24)

Let us examine this matter. Some people find it hard to believe that Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him could ever think of such a thing. However, we can primarily argue that a thought running in the mind is not an actual action and that it can be possible. Indeed, to think of something and then correct oneself might even require more power than not thinking of it at all. Resistance requires one to fight the soul’s impulse, and fighting temptation is hard. We can also add the fact that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him had not yet received any revelation, and was not yet an actual Messenger at that time. Here, the verse says: ‘And, indeed, she desired him (hammat bihi). He would have desired her (hamma biha), if he had not been shown the proof of his Lord’ (Yusuf: 24). Thus, we can see that the wife of Al-’Aziz (Zulaykha) was the one who initiated the attempt to seduce Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him. Did this lead to any action? No. This would have required the assent of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him. So: ‘she desired him’ means that she would have liked to move on to the stage of action, but Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him refused to allow that. Regarding the one who was being seduced, namely Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He says: ‘He would have desired her (hamma biha), if he had not been shown the proof of his Lord’. (Yusuf: 24)

Let us give an example to make this easier to understand. If someone says to you, ‘I would visit you, but only if that person was not with you’, this means that the speaker will actually not visit you. In the same way, we find that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him saw the evidence of the truth from his

(1) The story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him and the nobleman’s wife (Zulaykha)

Lord, and therefore did not desire her. This distinction can be used to confirm the argument that chooses to absolve Yusuf (Joseph) of even thinking in that way. She desired him, but in order for the act to be carried out, there had to be acceptance from the other party. Thus, the action did not occur, not because she refused it, but because he refused to comply. He would have desired her, had he not seen an evidence of the truth from his Lord.

Why does Allah say that Yusuf (Joseph) would have desired her had he not seen an evidence of the truth from his Lord? Allah Glorified is He tells us this story to show us the reason why Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him refused the seduction. This refusal was not due to physical impairment on his part. In fact, were it not for the revelation he received from His Lord, the misdeed could have continued. Allah Glorified is He wanted to tell us that Yusuf's masculinity was sound and that his virility was unimpaired. It was devout abstinence, and not a biological restraint. This is how we understand the nature of the account between the nobleman's wife (Zulaykha) and Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him.

Let us return to the verse we are currently examining: 'When (hostile) people were about to stretch out their hands against you' (al-Ma'ida: 11). The word 'qawm' (people) is derived from the word 'qiyam' that means 'to stand'. Standing is a position of activity and fervour. As we clarified before, a man's levels of activity can include standing, sitting, reclining, being recumbent or sleeping. These levels are in ascending order of comfort. Standing is the most exhausting level because the weight of the body is carried by the feet over a small area. Sitting distributes the weight over a larger area, and when a person reclines, the area which bears his weight is even larger. Consequently, the word 'qawm' is used to mean 'a group of men' because it is a man's nature to stand to attention, whilst a woman's nature tends to be calm and concealing. As such, 'qawm' means 'men' in contrast to the word 'nisa' which means 'women', for it is not in the nature of women to rise vigorously. An Arab poet said, 'I do not know, nor am I close to knowing, if the tribe of Hisn are men (qawm) or women (nisa')!'

When the Lord Glorified is He says: 'When (hostile) people (qawm) were about to stretch out their hands against you' (al-Ma'ida: 11), this means that no women thought about harming Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in this incident. We also find that the Arabic word' bast' (to stretch out) raises a question. Does 'bast' mean 'to extend the hand to harm others' or 'to extend the hand to provide for others'? Allah Glorified is He says: 'For if Allah were to grant (yabsut, the verb of bast) (in this world) abundant sustenance to (all of) His servants, they would behave on earth with wanton insolence' (ash-Shura: 27). In this case, the Arabic word 'bast' means 'to give'. As for the opposite meaning of the word 'bast' (i.e. 'to harm'), Allah Glorified is He tells us that Abel said to Cain: 'Even if you stretch out your hand (basat) against me to slay me, I will not stretch out my hand against you (basit) to slay you' (al-Ma'ida: 28).

'Stretching out a hand' is a phrase that refers to physical action. This active physical movement is the tangible expression of an intangible thought that had already passed through the mind; to stretch out one's hand requires prior planning and deliberation. Thus, we learn from these verses that these people stretched out their hands (to harm) Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers.

And when we look at the experiences of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with his enemies, we find that Allah Glorified is He says: 'And remember (O Prophet Muhammad), how those who were bent on denying the Truth schemed against you in order to restrain you (from preaching), to slay you or to drive you away. They plotted and planned and Allah too had planned, but Allah is the Best of planners' (al-Anfal: 30). They sat together and made schemes and plots, but how can witnesses ever be able to see such schemes until the scheming hands have become stretched out to carry out their plans? In their evil plans, this group of disbelievers wanted to restrain Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by any of several methods. These included restricting him to his home, imprisoning him, inflicting injuries to incapacitate him from moving, killing him or banishing him from his land. But what was the outcome of their schemes?

For anyone to harm Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was an offence to all the believers because the believers could not be guided without their Prophet. Consequently, because harming Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was like harming all the believers, Allah stopped the disbelievers' hands and turned their plans against them.

The word 'makr' (translated as 'to plot and plan') in Arabic literally refers to a tree whose branches are intertwined in a manner that conceals which leaf grows from which branch. Metaphorically, 'makr' means to plot secretly. It is evidence of weakness and not strength. Strong people face their obstacles directly and do not choose to plot. Therefore, it is said that only weak people plot against others. Moreover, some people think that women's weakness motivates them to plot cunningly. They find evidence for these views from two Quranic verses. The first are Allah's words about Satan: 'Verily, Satan's plot is always weak' (an-Nisa': 76). The second verse narrates how a man described the plot of Zulaykha (to seduce Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him): 'Verily, your plot is great!' (Yusuf: 28)

To sum up, only weak people choose to plot schemes, as they are unable to face problems directly. However, even if human beings conceal their plots from others, they cannot conceal them from Allah, for He knows all that hearts conceal. The Lord's planning is more powerful than that of any human being, which is why He Glorified is He says: 'They plotted and planned and Allah too had planned, but Allah is the Best of planners' (al-Anfal: 30).

We notice that Allah's plans are always good. The Lord Glorified is He wanted to let the enemies of Islam know that despite all their plotting, they could not harm Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by any means, either by persecuting his people or by plotting against him. Despite their never-ending schemes, the Messenger of Allah, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him left his house in Mecca and set out for Medina as they lay sleeping.' And We have enveiled them, so they cannot see.' (Ya Sin: 9)

We are amazed by all the ways in which Allah kept the hands of the disbelievers from harming Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Allah protected His Messenger, Muhammad, by mobilizing inanimate objects, plants, animals, and human beings to guard him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him threw dust (1) and covered the sight of the disbelievers, and thus dust became one of Allah's soldiers. Asma' (1), the daughter of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with them carried food to Prophet Muhammad and her father in the cave(2) as she tended her flock and the sheep ate the grass, thereby covering the tracks made by the caravan of Prophet Muhammad. As a result, plants also joined this troop protecting Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from the disbelievers' harm, as did this herd of sheep. The hooves of a horse (belonging to Suraqa ibn Malik(3) sank into the ground, doves built a nest outside Prophet Muhammad's cave and a spider spun its web over the cave's entrance(4). All of Allah's soldiers responded to His Divine Command and participated in guarding Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from the disbelievers' grasp.

(1) The story of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him throwing dust over the heads of the disbelievers.

Even more remarkable than that, Allah Glorified is He arrested the disbelievers' hands by using other disbelievers; we find that Prophet Muhammad, who came to guide mankind from the glooms of darkness into light, was shown the way to his abode of immigration (Medina) by a disbeliever. Consequently, we can see that spiritual guides can utilize worldly, material guides; here, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who is the bearer of the spiritual light for mankind, made use of material assistance provided by a disbeliever. We know that another group of Allah's soldiers in the city he immigrated to (Medina) were Jews despite their obstinacy. Did they not previously taunt the Aws and Al-Khazraj tribes, even before Prophet Muhammad had been sent by Allah? They would say to the Aws and Al-Khazraj tribes, 'A prophet will arise amongst you (the Arab tribes). We shall follow him and slay you as 'Ad and Iram were slain'.

(2) Reference is to the Cave of Hira'.

(3) The story of Suraqa ibn Malik and his horse while pursuing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him

(4) From the proofreader: The scholars have differed concerning the Hadith about the spider spinning a web over the entrance of the cave. It was classified as hasan (good) by Al-Hafiz ibn Hajar in Fath Al-Bari and by Ibn Katheer in Al-Bidayah wa'Al-Nihayah (3/222), but it was classified as weak by Al-Albani in Al-Silsilah Al-Da'eefah. Ahmad Shakir said in Tahqeeq Al-Musnad (3251), 'There is some dispute concerning it'. The commentators on Al-Musnad said (3251), 'It is classified as weak'. Concerning the Hadith about the doves, it was similarly classified as weak by the commentators on Al-Musnad.

When the Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj heard that a prophet had appeared in Mecca, they said, 'This is the prophet of whom the Jews warned us, so we must not let them reach him first!' Hence, they went to him first, embraced Islam, and swore allegiance to him. However, the Jews disbelieved in his message and denied what they had said before he was sent by Allah. So, Mu'adh ibn Al-Jabal, Bishr ibn Al-Barra' ibn Ma'rur and Dawud ibn Salama Allah be pleased with them said to them, 'O Jews, fear Allah and embrace Islam, for you used to predict your victory over us by means of a prophet when we were an idolatrous people, and you told us he would appear and described him just as we see him now!' Salam ibn Al-Mashkam, one of the tribe of Banu An-Nadir, said, 'He has not brought us anything we recognise, and he is not the one of whom we used to speak to you.'(1) After that, Medina became the destination of the Muslims' Emigration.

Thus, we can see that falsehood may serve truth, and unbelief may serve faith. 'Abdullah ibn 'Urayqat who was a disbeliever offered himself as a guide for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and accompanied him on the Emigration, and he did not seek the bounty which Quraysh had offered to anyone who delivered Prophet Muhammad to them. Consequently, we see that their hands were turned away in many different ways.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was involved in incidents that the Companions witnessed wherein Allah Glorified is He gave him extraordinary wonders that verified his truthfulness. We do not consider them miracles as such because the Noble Book (the Quran) is the miracle of Islam until the end of time. However, Prophet Muhammad's life contained physical miracles, like the ones which were offered to other Messengers before him. The Lord Glorified is He did not want these extraordinary incidents to be witnessed by all the Muslims, but some of the Muslims and disbelievers of that time witnessed them. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him needed wonders that could verify that he was indeed a Messenger. The Prophet's

(1) Ibn Kathir, (Tafsir), narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas Allah be pleased with him

Companion Jabir ibn ‘Abdullah Allah be pleased with him(1) said, ‘There was a Jew in Medina who used to give me a loan of dates that I would repay at harvest time’. (Jabir Allah be pleased with him owned land which was on the road to Ruma).’ The harvest failed one particular year,(2) and when the Jew came to me at harvest-time I had nothing for him, so I began to ask him for a year’s extension. He refused. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was informed of this, and therefore he said to his Companions, “Let us go and ask the Jew to give Jabir more time.” They came to me at my orchard, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him began to speak to the Jew, who said, “O Abu Qasim. I will not give him more time.” When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw this he stood up and walked around the palms, and then he returned and asked him again, but he refused. I brought a few soft dates and placed them before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Prophet Muhammad ate from them and then said, “Where is your hut, Jabir?” I told him where it was and he said, “Spread out a blanket for me in it.” I did so and he went in and took a nap. When he woke up, I brought him some more dates, and he ate them. Then he got up and spoke to the Jew again. The Jewish man again refused to give him more time. Hence, he got up and walked around the fresh date palms a second time, and then said, “O Jabir, harvest and pay (your debt).” He stood in the harvesting area and I picked enough from the trees to pay my debt, still having more than I needed. I went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and told him this good news, and he said, “I testify that I am the Messenger of Allah!”’(3)

In another instance, some of the Companions did not have enough water for their needs (4), and therefore Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him dipped his hands in the water they had and it became ample for all the people to drink from it. Could any of those who witnessed this miracle deny it? Of course no one could! But is this miracle meant for us? If we trust the one who narrated it to us, we will not find it implausible that Allah could have blessed the water for His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, we also know that Allah Glorified is He preserved the Quran to be his lasting miracle, as Allah said: 'Behold, it is We who sent down the Quran, and indeed We will be its Guardian (from all corruption).' (al-Hijr: 9) Allah, Glorified be He, also said: 'Falsehood cannot approach it (the Quran) from before it or from behind it; (it is) a revelation from a (Lord who is) Wise and Praiseworthy'. (Fussilat: 42)

(4) The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him placing his noble hand in the water to make it suffice all his Companions

It was reliably narrated (1) that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him took little provisions on one journey, but he prayed to Allah as He decreed and then fed an entire army with the food. Those who live after the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him can either believe in these miracles or choose not to believe in them, but every believer who knows the rank and position of Prophet Muhammad in his Lord's sight should believe in these wonders when they are reliably narrated with a chain of transmission that is, without doubt, they are sound. Consequently, there is no need to argue with those people who do not believe in the physical miracles, and we say to them, 'None of you are obliged to believe in these miracles, but you are obliged to believe in the miracle of the Quran'. The wonders which occurred were either meant to strengthen Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or to strengthen the faith of his Companions on occasions when they were overwhelmed by grievous events that shook them. Allah Glorified is He says: 'So that We might strengthen your heart,' (al-Furqan: 32) and He says:' (For) there and then the believers were tried and they were shaken with a dreadful fear.' (al-Ahzab: 11) Clearly, the believers were in need of signs from Heaven to make their faith firm. The conclusion is that all the physical wonders which were given to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were not meant for all the Muslims in general, but were rather meant for those who witnessed them. As a result, these wonders do not need to be debated because the only miracle which was meant for all the people was the Book of Allah Glorified is He.

(1) The story of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him feeding all the Muslim army with very little food

Many of the enemies of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were determined to harm him. Did a Jewish woman(1) not want to poison him, but Allah stopped her hand (from doing this)? There was also the incident of Banu An-Nadir(2), when they wanted to drop a boulder on Prophet Muhammad, but the Prophet moved away before the assassin dropped it on him peace and blessings be upon him.

Also, Safwan ibn Ummayya(3) wanted to take revenge on Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him after the battle of Badr. He hired ‘Umayr ibn Wahb Al-Jumahi and said to him, ‘Go to Medina and kill Muhammad, and I will pay your debts and care for your family as though they were mine for as long as they live’. As a result, ‘Umayr went to Medina and approached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The Prophet said to him, ‘What has brought you here, O ‘Umayr? ‘Umayr replied, ‘I have come due to the prisoner you are holding, so treat him well; ‘Umayr’s son was being held as a prisoner of war by the Muslims. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked, ‘Then why is that sword hanging from your neck?’ ‘Umayr answered, ‘Fie upon swords! Have they done us any good?’ The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Tell me the truth. Why have you come here?’ ‘Umayr said, ‘I have come for no other reason than that’. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him, ‘No, for you sat with Safwan ibn Ummayya in the Hijr and spoke of those men of Quraysh whose dead bodies were in the wells (of Badr). Then you said, “Were it not for my debts and my family, I would set out to slay Muhammad.” Consequently, Safwan took it upon himself to care for your debts and sustain your family so that you would slay me. But Allah is the One Who protected me from you’. ‘Umayr said, ‘I testify that you are the Messenger of Allah! O Messenger of Allah; we used to call you a liar when you brought us tidings from Heaven and the Revelation which was sent down to you. There was no one present in that place except Safwan and myself. By Allah, I know that no one but Allah could have told you of it. Praise be to Allah, who has guided me to Islam!'(1)

(3) The story of Safwan ibn Umayya hiring ‘Umayr ibn Wahb Al-Jumahi to kill Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him

Jabir Allah be pleased with him related another example(2) which was about the battle of Dhat Ar-Riqa'. He narrated that a man named Ghawrath ibn Al-Harith approached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said to him, 'Who shall save you from me?' The Prophet replied, 'Allah'. The sword fell from the man's hand and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him picked it up and said, 'And who will save you from me?' The man said, 'Be the better one of those who took the sword!' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Do you bear witness that there is no deity but Allah?' The man said, 'No! But I pledge to you that I will not fight you or join any people who fight you'. Jabir Allah be pleased with him said about that incident, 'We slept for a while, and then Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called us. We found a Bedouin man sitting with him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, "This man took my sword as I slept, and I woke as he held it unsheathed in his hand. He asked me, 'Who will save you from me?' and I said to him, 'Allah'. And here he now sits' ". Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him let him go and did not punish him. (3) And when the Bedouin man went to his companions, he said, "I come to you from the best of people!"'(4)

When the man heard the first time that Allah will save Prophet Muhammad from him, the sword fell from his hand as his body trembled and it returned to his natural instinctive faith. And when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him picked up the sword and asked the man who could save him, he did not say' Hubal', 'al-Lat' or 'al-'Uzza' (idols in Arabia). The man knew that idol-worship was nothing but a string of lies; had he truly believed in his idols, he would have said one of their names. Even if a man lies to all the people in the world, he will not be able to lie to himself. The word ‘Allah’ is what shook the man’s disbelief and returned him to the Truth.

The Prophet picked it up and then said, 'And who will save you from me?' to which the man replied, 'No one.' Al-Waqidi added that the man embraced Islam and then returned to his people and guided many souls.*

(4) Narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Bidaya, iv. 84

At the battle of Badr(1), we find that the Companion of Prophet Muhammad, Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him was on the side fighting with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him, whilst his son, 'Abd Ar-Rahman, was on the side fighting with the disbelievers. Sometime after his son had embraced Islam, the son was sitting with his father and reminiscing. The son said, ‘I saw you on the day of Badr and avoided you’. Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him replied, ‘But had I seen you, I would not have avoided you.’(2) Abu Bakr’s son saw his father, but did not kill him, and there is no doubt that a struggle ensued in his mind and soul between his love for his father and his allegiance to Hubal or those other idols; he realised that his father was worth much more to him than those statues. When Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him said, ‘Had I seen you, I would have killed you’, the inner decision was between his faith in Allah and the love for his son, and faith was dearer to the soul of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him. Both Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him and his son were logical with themselves in this regard.

These actions occur because if innate human nature is not interfered with by anyone, it will shine forth with faith. We can see this clearly in the early days of Islam when the Companions were persecuted in Mecca and made their first emigration to Abyssinia. Did they go there randomly, or did they follow (in faith) a noble plan of Prophet Muhammad? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him first searched for a land where they could go and be accepted by the people as emigrants. He looked at the Arab Peninsula and found that Quraysh were able to control all the tribes of Arabia during the pilgrimage season, and therefore no tribe could protect the emigrants. Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to them, ‘If you went to the land of the Abyssinians, there is a king there under whom no one is oppressed, and it is a land of sincerity. Stay there until a time when Allah shall give you relief from what you are now suffering.’(3)

(2) Narrated by Ibn Abu Shayba and Al-Hakim on the authority of Ayyub

(3) Ibn Hisham, (As-Sira An-nabawiyya)

Indeed, the Muslims travelled to Abyssinia(1) as emigrants. Quraysh attempted to bring the Muslims out of the land of Negus (King of Abyssinia). They even sent an envoy to bring them back, but Negus refused. Negus heard about Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and realised that he was the Prophet the Injeel (Gospel) foretold about. It is certain that Negus embraced Islam because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him prayed for him when he died. His embracement of Islam was indeed a great reward from Allah for protecting the believers. It was a great blessing for Negus to die as a Muslim and for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to lead his Funeral Prayer.

These were all incidents in which Allah protected Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers from harm to verify the Truth for all who witnessed these incidents. Thus, the believers were able to affirm they were on the right path and that Allah was not going to desert them. They should not think their enemy was stronger than they were, for Allah is more powerful than all His creatures. '…And He withheld their hands from (harming) you….' (al-Ma'ida: 11) Allah Glorified is He wanted to prepare the believers for the task of conveying His guidance to mankind. Therefore, the believers have to persevere in obeying Allah's Commandments and remain conscious of Him for Allah to protect them from harm. A disbeliever can only defeat a believer who is negligent in adhering to Allah's Guidance, for the Lord Glorified is He does not state Quranic principles and then let physical laws of nature over-ride such principles. He said, 'And that, verily, Our soldiers will indeed (in the end) be victorious!' (as-Saffat: 173)

Consequently, if you see an army of Muslims being defeated, then know that they have abandoned Allah's way so Allah abandoned them. When some Muslims disobeyed the command of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the disbelievers defeated them. Allah does not change His physical laws of nature for the sake of people who attribute themselves to Him, but they do not obey His commandments and Guidance. Allah Glorified is He says: '…If you help (the Cause of) Allah, He will help you and will make your steps firm' (Muhammad: 7). And He Glorified is He says: 'So remember Me, and I will remember you…' (al-Baqara: 152).

(1) The story of Negus (the king of Abyssynia) with the Muslims

If you attribute yourself to Islam, you must truly adhere to its teachings. If you see believers go to battle and be defeated, be sure that they had abandoned Allah's Way of guidance. He Glorified is He says: 'And how many a prophet fought (in Allah's Cause), and with them (fought) many Allah-devoted men. They did not lose heart because of what they had to suffer in Allah's Cause, and they neither did weaken, and nor did they abase themselves (before the enemy). Allah loves those who are patient in adversity; All that they said was, "Our Lord! Forgive us our sins and our extravagances in our affairs! Make firm our steps and help us against those who deny the Truth!" Whereupon Allah granted them the rewards of this world, as well as the good rewards of the life to come: for Allah loves those who do good' (Al-'Imran: 146-148).

Those who fought alongside Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had to endure some sufferings. They did not weaken, but rather were patient and asked the Lord Glorified is He to forgive their sins. They knew what the source of their weakness was, and they sought Allah's aid against it. Thereafter, what did Allah do for them? He the Almighty granted them rewards in this worldly life and the amplest rewards of the Hereafter, for Allah loves the doers of good. This is the faithful conduct that guards one against being defeated and deceived by the enemy; it is a result of being pious and constantly aware of Allah's Existence and Company. When a Muslim is in Allah's Company, none of Allah's Creatures is able to touch him.

We have an illustration of that principle in the story of Prophet Muhammad's Emigration. The Prophet's Companion, Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him was eager to protect Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him related that on the night they were in the cave, Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him said, 'O Messenger of Allah, let me enter the cave before you, so if there is a snake I can deal with it before you enter'. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him agreed to this, and therefore Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him entered the cave and began to search for any holes there. Every time he found a hole, he would tear a part of his cloak to fill the hole with it, until he used his entire cloak for this purpose.

There was one hole remaining, so he used his feet to cover it and then asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to enter.

When morning came, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Where is your cloak, Abu Bakr?' Abu Bakr told him what he had done, and as a result Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him raised his hands and said, 'O Allah, place Abu Bakr with me on the Day of Resurrection!' Allah Glorified is He then revealed to him, 'Verily, Allah has granted your request'(1) Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him saw the disbelievers as they passed in front of the cave, and said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him' If one of them looks beneath his feet, he will see us!' To that, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'O Abu Bakr, what do you think (of the protection) of two men when Allah is their third Companion?'(2)

This was a perfect response because they were both in Allah's Company. If a believer is in the Company of Allah, whom no sight can encompass, then no harm will be able to encompass the believer either. We may not know how, as we do not know all of Allah's Secrets, but He is the All-Powerful and Almighty.

With regard to people, we find that if a young child goes out by himself he may be harmed by other children, but if he goes out with one of his guardians, such as a father or an older brother, the other children are not able to harm him. Similarly, we should consider ourselves under the Guardianship of Allah, and seek refuge in His Company. When a believer does that, Allah's soldiers will provide protection if anyone seeks to harm him. Allah Glorified is He ends the verse by saying: 'And in Allah let the believers place their trust'. (al-Ma'ida: 11) Consequently, do not say, 'Our numbers and resources are few'. You are responsible for preparing whatever you are able to, and then you must leave success to Allah's aid.

'Hence, make ready for their confrontation whatever force and war mounts you are able to muster.' (al-Anfal: 60) The history of faith shows us many instances in which small forces have defeated larger gatherings by Allah's Will. Someone might say, 'This is a material matter which requires great numbers and resources' to which we reply, 'The Lord Glorified is He told us to make ready whatever we are able to, not more than we are able to; and He Glorified is He possesses subtle soldiers which cannot be seen'.

(1) Abu Na'im, (Hilyat Al-Awliya')

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

'…I shall cast terror into the hearts of those who are bent on denying the Truth…' (al-Anfal: 12). As long as Allah has cast terror into the hearts of the enemies, the matter will be settled, regardless of the numbers and resources involved. One must first prepare whatever he can, and then place his trust in Allah. This is the way of actively ensuring victory.

However, we should be aware that placing our trust in Allah is not the same as being slothfully dependant on Him. The one who places his trust in Allah must be aware that every physical part of his body has a spiritual role; it has to implement Allah's Law. The ear hears the commandments of the Lord Glorified is He and as a result, you should obey these orders. If you hear people mocking Allah's signs, you have to turn away from them. The tongue speaks, so do not use it for anything other than good speech. Every part of the body has its function, and the function of the heart is to have certitude and to trust in Him. Let us remember that the feet are for walking, the hands are for acting, and the heart is for trusting. Therefore, do not assign the work of the heart to the feet or the hands, because to truly trust Allah means to act with your body and trust with your heart.

There are many who work in their lives without trusting Allah, until their actions become all in vain. We find that if a farmer does not place his trust in Allah, his crops grow very well until a storm, or a change in weather suddenly destroys his harvest, driving all is work in vain.

However, beware of neglecting the means because if you neglect the means, then you are not placing your trust in Allah. Some people choose to sluggishly depend on Allah's Assistance by assigning the function of the heart to the limbs. If someone claims, 'I do not work because I simply place my trust in Allah', challenge their argument. Tell them, 'Alright, let us see how you truly trust Allah'. Bring before him a plate of his favourite food, and when he stretches out his hand to bring the food closer, stop him, and say, 'No! Let the food jump from the plate into your mouth'.

Allah Glorified is He told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stories of the other Messengers in order to strengthen his faith and provide him with educational examples. Allah did not want the Prophet’s heart to be aggrieved by the actions of the Jews or the idolaters: ‘If you experience, O Muhammad, any denial and abuse, much of that was directed to the Messengers who came before you’. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدْ أَخَذَ ٱللَّهُ مِيثَٰقَ بَنِىٓ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلَ وَبَعَثْنَا مِنْهُمُ ٱثْنَىْ عَشَرَ نَقِيبًا ۖ وَقَالَ ٱللَّهُ إِنِّى
مَعَكُمْ ۖ لَئِنْ أَقَمْتُمُ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ وَءَاتَيْتُمُ ٱلزَّكَوٰةَ وَءَامَنتُم بِرُسُلِى وَعَزَّرْتُمُوهُمْ
وَأَقْرَضْتُمُ ٱللَّهَ قَرْضًا حَسَنًا لَّأُكَفِّرَنَّ عَنكُمْ سَيِّـَٔاتِكُمْ وَلَأُدْخِلَنَّكُمْ جَنَّٰتٍ تَجْرِى
مِن تَحْتِهَا ٱلْأَنْهَٰرُ ۚ فَمَن كَفَرَ بَعْدَ ذَٰلِكَ مِنكُمْ فَقَدْ ضَلَّ سَوَآءَ ٱلسَّبِيلِ ﴿١٢﴾

God took a pledge from the Children of Israel. We made twelve leaders arise among them, and God said, ‘I am with you: if you keep up the prayer, pay the prescribed alms, believe in My messengers and support them, and lend God a good loan, I will wipe out your sins and admit you into Gardens graced with flowing streams. Any of you who now ignore this [pledge] will be far from the right path’ [12] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 12)

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He reminds His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of the pledge which was taken from the children of Israel. This might mean the pledge of the seed of Adam peace be upon him the pledge concerning which Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And behold, Allah took a solemn pledge from the prophets’ (Al-’Imran: 81), or the pledge concerning which He Glorified is He says: ‘Hold fast with (all your) strength to what We have given you’ (al-Baqara: 63).

Allah Glorified is He also says: ‘When we appointed from among them twelve leaders’ (al-Ma’ida: 12). Let us consider the religious rule that Allah Glorified is He decreed here. He did not represent the different tribes of people with a single delegate (from only one of the tribes) as this could have caused tribal disputes to arise. Hence, He chose twelve leaders to represent the number of the tribes of Israel. In this way, none of the tribes felt estranged and they did not ask, ‘Why was a leader not chosen from our tribe?’ This’ leader’ was an individual who managed the tribe’s social and religious affairs. The Arabic word for ‘leader’ is ‘naqeeb’, which is derived from the root letters (nun-qaf-ba) from which comes the word 'naqb' which means 'crevice', i.e. a deep split in any solid mass.

The fact that the Lord Glorified is He chose the word 'naqeeb' indicates that the true leader must be vigilant and alert when he assigns appropriate roles to each individual. The leader must focus on assigning the work in a way that best serves the collective effort of the group. Therefore, in the tribe, every member should have an appropriate duty and position. This can only be achieved by an insightful, unearthing, and investigative (tanqeeb) procedure. Therefore, the leader should look into the condition of each individual and his inclinations, and then place each person in the right position. He should not stop at the superficial aspects of matters, but rather investigate everything in depth to discover the roots as well as the means of every individual. Consequently, choosing a leader from each tribe prevented the tribal conflicts that could have arisen if a single leader had been chosen for all the tribes. Also, a leader chosen from each tribe will be thoroughly informed about his own people.

In our daily lives we often hear the word 'manaqib' (depths) which is derived from the same root as 'naqeeb' (leader). It is used to refer to the 'virtues' of an individual; if a person is described as having 'depths', it means that he has many virtues of which other people are aware. In fact, the word indicates that a virtuous person should not boast of his virtues himself, but rather leave the people to discover (yanqubu) his virtues on their own accord. Likewise, the treasures of the earth and those of lost civilisations are under the ground and we must dig (nanqub) to find them. On the other hand, remains above the surface of the earth are blown away by the wind and worn down by weathering until nothing is left for anyone to see. The same root gives us the word 'niqab' which means the veil with which a woman covers her face.

The Lord's words: 'Behold, I am with you,' (al-Ma'ida: 12) offers the believers a further aspect of faith, so none of them will imagine they have to face the enemies of Allah on their own. Each believer will realise that they are aided by Allah, and as a result s/he will not weaken or falter as long as they are believers. This is similar to Allah's saying: 'Hence, make ready (for their confrontation) with them any force and war mounts you are able to muster' (al-Anfal: 60). Once the believers have gathered all that they can, they should leave the rest up to Allah. His words: 'Behold, I am with you' (al-Ma'ida: 12) also mean that the leaders of the tribes were not free to do whatever they wanted. Allah informs them that he will accompany their individual actions and witness how each of them manages their tribal matters.

After this, Allah said: 'If (Arabic: la'in) you establish prayer, pay zakat, believe in My Messengers and assist them, and offer to Allah a beautiful loan, I will surely efface your bad deeds.' (al-Ma'ida: 12) The Arabic compound word' la'in' ('if') comprises both a condition and a vow, as though Allah Glorified is He is saying, 'By My Might, I vow that if you are constant in prayer, and you do such-and-such, your reward will be that I will erase your bad deeds'. The Arabic word 'la' indicates a vow and the Arabic word 'in' indicates a condition. Signifying a condition is one of the functions of the Arabic word 'in'.

A vow, as we know, requires a main clause, and a conditional phrase also requires a main clause. One might say to a student, 'If you study, you will succeed', which a conditional statement is. Another person might say, 'By Allah, I will surely do such and such', which is a statement containing a vow. The words 'By Allah' are the vow, and the phrase 'I will surely do such and such' is the main clause of the vow which is emphasised by the word 'surely'. When a vow is found in a sentence on its own, its main clause comes after it, and the same is true for a conditional statement.

However, what if we have a sentence that contains both a vow and a condition? Are there now two main clauses, one for the vow and the other for the conditional phrase? When you have a vow and a condition in the same sentence, look at which one comes first. The one which comes first is the more important element. Thus, its main clause is the phrase which is given later in the sentence, and there is no need for a separate main clause for the other element.

Consequently, in this verse the element which comes first is the vow which lies in the first part of the word (la'in); 'la' is the vow, while 'in' is the condition. This is similar to a person saying, 'I vow that if Zayd stands, I will surely stand'. In this case the main clause belongs to the vow. On the other hand, if we had said, 'If Zayd stands, I vow by Allah to treat him well', the conditional statement comes before the vow.

All of this is proper if there is no element in the sentence that requires a predicate, such as a subject or another component following similar grammatical rules as subjects. But if such an element exists, then the conditional phrase is the more important one, meaning that we should consider the main clause as part of the conditional phrase and not a part of the vow; this is because the conditional phrase is now essential in the sentence, while the vow is only meant for emphasis. The grammarian Ibn Malik states this rule in his Alfiyya as follows: 'When a condition and a vow come together, leave out the main clause for whichever of them comes second, since it is included in the main clause of the other; this is unless they both follow something which requires a predicate, in which case the conditional clause should be considered the more important, whatever order they happen to be in'.

In this verse of the chapter of al-Ma'ida of the Quran, the vow comes before the conditional clause (as is clearly shown by the use of the Arabic compound word 'la'in'), and as a result the main clause refers to the vow. This main clause states: 'I will surely efface your bad deeds' (al-Ma'ida: 12).

Allah's words: 'If you establish prayer', refer to the fact that to be constant in prayer necitates two requirements. The first requirement is that the obligatory units of prayer should be completed. The second is that each unit must take its due right and form. Then, the verse says: 'and pay zakat' (al-Ma'ida: 12). In the books of jurisprudence, the obligations of prayers and almsgiving (zakat) are placed in the section of 'acts of worship' ('ibadat). Although this traditional division used in conventional jurisprudence is meant to make it easier for a Muslim to understand their basic obligations, in reality, everything which Allah commands is an act of worship. Worshipping means to obey all the commands you receive from the One you worship and to refrain from everything He forbids. Consequently, every Divine Commandment is an act of worship.

We said before that the Lord Glorified is He says: 'When the call to prayer is proclaimed on Friday (the day of assembly), hasten to the remembrance of Allah and leave all worldly commerce'. (al-Jumu'a: 9) And He Glorified is He continues: 'and when the prayer has finished, disperse freely on earth and seek to obtain (some) of Allah's Bounties' (al-Jumu'a: 10).

In these verses, we find the first commandment of worship telling us to leave our businesses and commerce to pray in congregation. Then, the next commandment of worship tells us that, after finishing the prayers, it is obligatory for us to disperse freely on earth and seek out Allah's Bounties (in worldly dealings). There is no conflict between the two commandments, for they are both connected to worship. You are commanded to work on earth as much as you can, both to meet your needs and to provide for others.

Allah Glorified is He then says: 'And believe in My Messengers and assist them.' (al-Ma'ida: 12) This means that faith must become firmly set in the heart so that no further deliberation will shake it. The following order to aid the Messengers means to support them and help them. The Arabic word 'azr (to assist) also literally means 'to prevent harm', and in this verse it refers to preventing other people from harming any of the Messengers of Allah in any way.

In your daily life, if anyone tries to harm a loved one who lives in a distant land, you will wish to be able to reach that loved one and protect him from the potential injury. And if the enemy is right in front of you, you will actually prevent him from approaching the one you love. The word 'azr' means to prevent the enemy from reaching the one you want to protect. Believers consider a Messenger's life more precious than their own lives. While protecting a Messenger from harm, one of the believers might be injured or harmed, but this is a believer's way of honouring, assisting, and revering the Messenger.

We are saying all this in order to respond to those who say, 'Muslim scholars do not agree on lexical definitions. Sometimes they say that 'azzartumuhum means 'to assist the Messengers', while at other times they define it as 'preventing the Messengers from being harmed'. Our answer is that both meanings are closely related because the word 'azr' means to both repel and prevent. Consequently, it can be used to indicate the effort to prevent the enemy from reaching a Messenger or the act of preventing a Messenger from being harmed by the enemy. It can also indicate both meanings at the same time. We can also understand the word 'azzartumuhum' to mean 'Honour them' because honour and reverence are the reasons why people assist the Messengers in the first place.

After this, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And offer to Allah a beautiful loan.' (al-Ma'ida: 12) The Lord Glorified is He arranges the financial policy for all the believers. This includes those who are financially able and those who are in need. To those who have money, the Lord Glorified is He says, ‘Do not work only as much as you need to, but work as much as you are able to. Use what you need to provide for yourself and your dependants and give the rest to those who cannot work for themselves’. If everyone only worked as much as they needed for their personal sustenance, those unable to work will not find any provisions to live on. We should never forget that the Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Truly, the believers have already prospered. They are the ones who are submissive in their prayer, and the ones who turn away from idle talk and the ones who unstintingly give the poor-dues (zakat).’ (al-Mu’minun: 1-4)

When He Glorified is He says about those ‘…who unstintingly give the poor-dues’, this does not mean that they only give their due alms to the poor, but rather, they work with the intention of earning extra wealth from which to pay the poor more otherwise, what would the difference be between the believer and the disbeliever? The disbeliever works to provide for himself and his dependants without thinking of Allah. On the other hand, the believer works to support himself and his dependants, and additionally intends to earn excess wealth to give to the weak. The thought of giving to the weak is a driving thought in his mind when he initiated work. This is the meaning of Allah’s words: ‘and the ones who unstintingly give the poor-dues.’ (al-Mu’minun: 4)

There is also another right that should be duly spent, aside from the obligatory poor-dues (zakat). The ruler should use this to meet the needs of the believing society as long as he upholds all of Allah’s Laws (while doing so). Zakat means to give a specifically appointed amount of one’s wealth. On the other hand, Sadaqah (voluntary charity) is not included in the poor-dues but are an addition to it. Following these two payments are loans you give to those in need. A loan is a sum of money which the soul is still attached to. This is because the loaner gave the money on condition that the person will return it after a given time. For this reason, some say that the reward for giving loans may surpass giving charity because one does not ask for a loan unless he has a genuine need for the money, while a person who takes charity might not really need it. Moreover, the soul of the one who gives charity ceases to be attached to what he gives as soon as he gives it, whilst the soul of one who gives a loan remains attached to what he lends, and every time he is patient about it he earns a good deed. Every time he postpones its collection, he earns a good deed. In this way, to lend money to those in need may be better than giving charity.

Consequently, the Lord Glorified is He wants our worldly work to earn ample and surplus wealth. However, how could He Glorified is He say: 'And offer to Allah a beautiful loan' (al-Ma'ida: 12) when He is the Giver of all blessings and the One Who ordains them all? How could the Lordgive blessings to man and then say, 'Loan them to me'? Allah Glorified is He values man's efforts and toil as long as he works and strives on earth. A man's wealth is his, but his fellow man might need some of it. As a result, he should lend it to others, and Allah Glorified is He considers this as a loan from the servant to Him. We find that the provider for a family might say to one of his sons, 'Take some of the pocket-money you have saved and give your brother what he needs, and I will consider this as a loan to me'. The provider for the family gave the money to his dependant in the first place, but he can still consider it a loan to make sure all his dependants are provided for. (If this is the reply of the father), then what do you think (about the reply from) the Lord Glorified is He who created us all? He gave to every one of us the fruits of his efforts, and considered these fruits to be the property of their owners. And if they then choose to lend some of these fruits to the needy, He considers this to be a loan to Him.

The Lord Glorified is He calls this loan 'beautiful'. This means that the lender should not exhibit any pride while giving it away. Similarly, he should not gain any worldly benefit from this transaction; otherwise, it would entail usury. We have the best example(1) of this in the story of Imam Abu Hanifa Allah be pleased with him while he was sitting one day in the shade of his friend's house, when this friend borrowed some money from him. The next day, Abu Hanifa Allah be pleased with him sat at a distance from the shade of the house, and therefore his friend asked him why he was sitting away from the shade. He replied, 'I feared that (enjoying the shade of your house) would count as usury'. The friend replied, 'But you used to sit there before you gave me the loan'. Abu Hanifa Allah be pleased with him replied, 'When I sat there before today, you were the favourable one as you gave me the shade. Now, it may be a repayment for my favour of lending the money'.

---

(1) The story of Abu Hanifa's loan to one of the Muslims, and his abstaining from sitting in the shade of his house afterwards

Consequently, a beautiful loan is one that is not marred by flaunting of favour, insult, or benefit. As this loan creates debt, Allah Glorified is He established rules for recording it: 'O you who believe! Whenever you give or take credit for a stated term, set it down in writing' (al-Baqara: 282).

The Lord Glorified is He thereby protects the borrower from his own self because if he knows that the debt is recorded, he will try his best to work and pay it back, and then society will also benefit from his work. When the loan is written down, this provides motivation and encouragement for it to be repaid. However, if it is not written down, then circumstances might arise that cause it to go unanswered. If this happens to someone, then no one else will help him out of any crisis thereafter. Clearly, the Lord Glorified is He wants to preserve the means by which the fruits of labour are circulated. A popular expression summarizes this concept, 'The one who takes money and gives it back will come to own the world's wealth'. Consequently, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And do not be weary from writing down every contractual provision' (al-Baqara: 282).

This is a way of protecting the soul from vicissitudes; but the Lord the Exalted did not forbid a person from trusting those who are faithful (by not writing any agreement): '…if one of you entrust the other, let the one who is entrusted discharge his trust (faithfully), and let him be afraid of Allah, his Lord' (al-Baqara: 283).

In this manner, the Lord Glorified is He protects economic dealings. We also find that when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who was full of mercy towards the believers, heard that a man had died while owing debts, he said to his Companions, 'Offer Funeral Prayer over your Companion'; he did not pray over the deceased man himself. The people then wondered why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not pray over him and what sin he had committed to deserve this. It was as though Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to teach the people about the importance of repaying debts. He did not prevent them from praying over the indebted deceased, but he did not pray over them himself in order to encourage them and incite them to fulfil their obligations and clear their conscience by paying off their debts. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was narrated to have said, 'Whoever takes people's money with the intention of repaying it, Allah will help him to repay it; and whoever takes people's money with the intention of spoiling it, Allah will spoil him'.(1)

This is because it is possible that the person who died while he was in debt, with nothing in his possession to repay his debt, could have lacked the intention to pay off his debt and his soul might have tempted him not to repay it.

By approaching this matter from a psychological perspective, we may find that sometimes a borrower takes a large amount which he could not possibly ignore or forget, but the lender might not even think of it, or the lender might be so sensitive that he deliberately avoids the debtor in order not to embarrass him. In such a case, it is likely that Allah caused the lender to think and behave this way because the borrower truly intended to repay the loan. On the other hand, if the mind of the lender is occupied with thoughts of the borrower, and he constantly thinks about the amount that he has lent him, this could mean that the borrower has enough to repay the loan. In other words, the borrower has the means to repay all or some of the loan. This is because Allah Glorified is He would not embarrass anyone who strives and struggles to repay his debt.

Regarding the part of the noble verse that says: '…and offer to Allah a beautiful loan…' (al-Ma'ida: 12), someone might say that the lexical context suggests that the word 'iqrad' be used for 'loan' rather than 'qard' since the verb is 'aqrada' and the gerund of this verb is 'iqrad ' (and a verb usually takes its gerund, if the noun needs to be referred to). But in this context, the Lord Glorified is He is speaking of the beautiful loan (qard hasan) itself; however, the word (iqrad) describes the transaction occurring between the one who asks for a loan and the one who gives it to him. Allah Glorified is He places the beautiful loan in His Hand, and it up to us to imagine how great a recompense Allah's Hand can give (for this beautiful loan). An example of this lexical usage is also found in Allah's Words: 'And Allah has caused you to grow from the earth a (progressive) growth' (Nuh: 17).

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Ahmad on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him

The verb ‘anbatakum’ (caused you to grow) expresses the process of causing growth (inbat). However, the earth does not cause the process of growth; rather, it produces growth itself. Therefore, the word ‘nabat’ (‘growth’ or ‘crops’) is used in this verse, and not the gerund ‘inbat’ (the process of causing to grow) –sometimes Allah Glorified is He uses a verb but then uses its gerund because He wants to refer to its noun. The verb ‘anbata’ here in the verse means that Allah causes crops to grow from the earth for mankind.

Similarly, Allah the Exalted says of this loan: ‘…and offer to Allah a beautiful loan. I will surely efface your bad deeds…’ (al-Ma’ida: 12) which is the main clause of the aforementioned vow. After this He Glorified is He says: ‘…and admit you into Gardens beneath which rivers flow (in Heaven)…’ (al-Ma’ida: 12). We have already spoken much about these gardens. The Lord Glorified is He concludes the noble verse by saying: ‘…but if any of you, after this, denies the Truth, he will indeed have strayed from the right path!’ (al-Ma’ida: 12) Yet, has the one who denies the Truth not already strayed from the right path before this? Indeed he has, but the one who denies the Truth after all these bounties and rewards that were mentioned, will be even further astray. The word for ‘right’ here is (sawa’) which occurs often in the Quran with various lexical meanings. For example, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Not all of them are alike (sawa’)…’ (Al-’Imran: 113). Also, (sawa’) can mean ‘middling’ or ‘equal’, and these meanings are closely related because when there is a middle, there are also two sides. And if the divider is in the middle, then the two sides are equal; when we say ‘middle’, this means that this point is positioned at an equal distance from each side. Therefore, we must be aware that there are many words which have more than one meaning. They are termed ‘homographs’ which means that the form of the word is the same, but the meaning is different.

Another example is found in Allah’s Words: ‘…turn your faces (in prayer) in the direction (shatrah)…’ (al-Baqara: 144). The word ‘shatr’ means ‘direction’ and also ‘half’; the half can be said to be the direction which, when a person is facing the Ka’ba, requires that he be standing at a point on the horizon which forms a line that cuts directly through the middle of the circle of the horizon as he sees it. Therefore, if you say that (shatr) means ‘direction’, this is correct; and if you say it means ‘half’, this is also correct.

Concerning the part of the verse saying: '…he will indeed have strayed from the right path' (al-Ma'ida: 12), the Quran was revealed to a community who lived in the desert and whose roads passed between mountains. The road might have been smooth at certain points or might have passed between two valleys or two mountains; and in order to be on the cautious side, a person walks in the centre of the road. In fact, Imam 'Ali Allah be pleased with him said, 'Both right and left cause you to stray; the best way is always the middle course'. This is because one might go to the right and slip, or to the left and slip, or a rock might fall upon him. We find that a father counsels his son, saying, 'Start moving and do not look right or left, but go straight to your goal'. We also find that the Lord Glorified is He describes the path on which the believer will walk on the Day of Resurrection by saying: 'And he will look and see him in the midst (sawa') of the Hellfire' (as-Saffat: 55). The midst of the hellfire means the very centre of it, without any possibility of escaping to the right or the left. Allah the Exalted says:

فَبِمَا نَقْضِهِم مِّيثَٰقَهُمْ لَعَنَّٰهُمْ وَجَعَلْنَا قُلُوبَهُمْ قَٰسِيَةً ۖ يُحَرِّفُونَ
ٱلْكَلِمَ عَن مَّوَاضِعِهِۦ ۙ وَنَسُوا۟ حَظًّا مِّمَّا ذُكِّرُوا۟ بِهِۦ ۚ وَلَا تَزَالُ تَطَّلِعُ عَلَىٰ خَآئِنَةٍ
مِّنْهُمْ إِلَّا قَلِيلًا مِّنْهُمْ ۖ فَٱعْفُ عَنْهُمْ وَٱصْفَحْ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُحِبُّ ٱلْمُحْسِنِينَ ﴿١٣﴾

But they broke their pledge, so We distanced them [from Us] and hardened their hearts. They distort the meaning of [revealed] words and have forgotten some of what they were told to remember: you [Prophet] will always find treachery in all but a few of them. Overlook this and pardon them: God loves those who do good [13] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 13)

When Allah the Exalted refers to the 'covenant', this entails the obligation of honouring and fulfilling the covenant; and did they (the children of Israel) honour their covenant? No, they broke it, so Allah cursed them. Cursing or damnation (la'n) means to be expelled and banished. In this regard, Allah Glorified is He says: 'But because of their breaking of their covenant, we cursed them…' (al-Ma'ida: 13), that is, the curse was a consequence of them breaching their solemn covenant with Allah. The use of the Arabic particle 'ma' here (which cannot be translated, but which occurs in the Arabic before the words 'their breaking') has been explained in various ways. Some of the scholars say that it is an addition which has no meaning (za'ida), while others say that it is meant as a connector. However, only human beings use extra insignificant words, not Allah. Nothing in the Quran could be a superfluous addition. Every word in the Quran is used precisely and exactly. The Lord Glorified is He tells us of how Luqman advised his son: '…and bear with patience whatever befalls you. Indeed, (all) that is of the matters requiring determination' (Luqman: 17). And in another verse, He Glorified is He says: 'And whoever shows patience and forgives–indeed, that is certainly among the foremost Commandments of Allah that require diligent resolve' (ash-Shura: 43).

In the first verse, the word 'certainly' (la in Arabic) is not present, while in the second verse it is present. This is not simply a matter of rhetorical flourish; for when Allah says: '…and bear with patience whatever befalls you. Indeed, (all) that is of the foremost Commandments of Allah that require diligent resolve' (Luqman: 17), this is a call for patience amid calamities that do not involve an adversary such as illness or death of beloved ones. Asking for patience here is meant to give consolation and comfort. As for the saying of the Lord Glorified is He: 'And whoever shows patience and forgives–indeed, that is certainly of the foremost commandments of Allah that require diligent resolve' (ash-Shura: 43), this is a call for patience and also forgiveness which indicates the involvement of an adversary who has inflicted this harm or calamity.

Here, Allah asks the believers to forgive those who harm them and to bear this patiently. Since there is an adversary involved, the soul wants to take vengeance, and therefore such a situation requires that more emphasis be placed on exercising strength of character than that mentioned in the previous verse. In the first verse, there is no clear adversary from whom vengeance can be taken. But the presence of an adversary stirs the desire of revenge within the soul. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He stresses this patient response by saying: '…that is certainly of the foremost Commandments of Allah that require diligent resolve' (Luqman: 17).

In another place in the Quran, Allah the Exalted says: '…lest you say, "There came to us no bringer of good tidings"…' (al-Ma'ida: 19). Before the word 'bashir' (translated in the above verse as' bringer of glad tidings'), there is the preposition' min' which literally means 'of'; the grammarians consider the word 'bashir' to be the subject of the verb 'come', and they deem the preposition 'min' to be a superfluous addition which does not change the meaning but only changes the grammar of the sentence. In fact, there is no superfluous addition here because in Arabic the word 'min' can be used to mean 'at all' to emphasise a negation. Accordingly, if a person says, 'I have no money', he may well have some small sum which he has not counted. But if he says, 'I have no money at all' by using the preposition 'min' before the word 'mal' (money), this means that he possesses absolutely no money of any kind. Consequently, the preposition 'min' here is not a superfluous addition, but rather, it imparts a meaning to the sentence. Hence, '…lest you say, "There came to us no bringer of good tidings"…' (al-Ma'ida: 19) (ma ja'ana min bashir) literally means 'no kind of bearer of glad tidings at all ever came to us'.

Allah the Exalted also says: 'So, due to mercy from Allah, you (O Muhammad) dealt gently with them….' (Al-'Imran: 159) Here, the word 'ma' occurs before the word 'rahma' (mercy). Some people may think that this too is a superfluous addition; but we say, 'What is the root of the derivation of all Arabic words?' It is the gerund (masdar). Sometimes the gerund is used to mean the verb; it can be used as an imperative, such as when you use the gerund darb to mean 'strike' rather than the usual imperative 'idrib'. The same is true of Allah's Words: 'fa bi ma naqdihim mithaqahum' which is literally translated as: 'So, because of their breaking their covenant…' (al-Ma'ida: 13).

Since here the word 'naqd ' ('breaking' or 'breaching') is a gerund, it may be functioning as a verb; and as long as a gerund is functioning as a verb, it is possible to use another verb with it, and therefore the meaning becomes: 'Then, for having broken their covenant, We cursed them…' (al-Ma'ida: 13), (i.e. referring to the act of breaking their covenant). Hence, the word 'ma' here indicates that the gerund is functioning as a verb, and the 'ma' also indicates that the gerund is standing in for an elided verb. Or, it may be that 'ma' here is used to express an exclamatory question, such as, 'How many were the times that they broke their covenant, and so we cursed them?' This would imply that they broke their pledges constantly in many ways.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘But because of their breaking their covenant, we cursed them…’ (al-Ma’ida: 13). The word ‘naqd’ (translated in the verse at hand as ‘to break’) is the opposite of ‘to conclude’ or ‘to settle’ (ibram). Ibram signifies settling and adjudicating a case based on evidence, while ‘naqd’ (‘to unbind’ or ‘break apart’) a case means to unravel its components. It is as though they broke the solemn pledge that Allah took from them. The Arabic word ‘aqida’ (‘doctrinal belief’ or ‘creed’) literally originates from the word ‘`aqd ’ (which means ‘to tie’ or ‘to knot’, and also means ‘a solemn pledge’). Why? That is because it is derived from the concept of tying something securely in order for it not to resurface in the mind to be thought about again. The same is true of a solemn covenant (‘mithaq’): it is confirmed and established. When they broke it, they unravelled it; that is, they released themselves from the obligations of this covenant. And because they broke their covenant with Allah, they brought a curse upon themselves.

The part of the verse saying: ‘…and made their hearts grow hard…’ (al-Ma’ida: 13) signifies that when they broke their covenant, Allah set a seal upon their hearts. He did not seal their hearts to begin with, but rather, they disbelieved first. After disbelieving, Allah left them in their error and delusion and sealed their hearts so that, neither the disbelief within them leaves, and nor could anything enter them from without. The Arabic word ‘qasiya’ means ‘rigid and hard’; although hardness is blameworthy, when it affects the heart, it is not like this when employed in defence of the Truth. We should judge everything according to its function. When everything performs its proper function, the entire world becomes beautiful. For example, we do not criticise a hook for being crooked. A hook must be crooked; its crookedness is what allows it to perform its function. The crookedness of a hook is what makes it proper. Likewise, hardness is not blameworthy if it is shown in the right situations; it is blameworthy only if it is in the wrong place. Hard hearts are blameworthy because the Lord the Exalted wants the hearts to be soft: ‘…then their skins and their hearts soften at the Remembrance of Allah…’ (az-Zumar: 23).

The Arabic word ‘qaswa’ (hardness) is derived from the word ‘qasiy’, which means a hard solid. We know that dinars used to be made of gold and dirhams of silver. A cashier, while examining them, might take one of them and declare it to be fake because he listened to the chiming sound it made, and checked if it was hard or not. Also, when a coin is truly hard, it is described as being 'qasiya'.

Gold is a soft metal, as is silver. When we say that some gold is 24 carat (99. 99 percent pure), this means that it is not alloyed with other metals that enable it to be shaped. Gold in its pure form cannot be moulded into jewellery, and therefore the goldsmith mixes it with another metal to harden it and enable it to be fashioned into jewellery. The level of hardness of gold or silver varies according to the carat value or, in other words, its purity. Items made from high-carat gold, such as gold ingots, are not suitable for use as jewellery.

When another metal is mixed with gold or silver, it makes them hard. Hardness, therefore, is praiseworthy when used in the proper place and blameworthy when used in the improper place, such as is the case with the hardness and cruelty of hearts.

Allah Glorified is He then says: '…They changed the words from their (correct) places…' (al-Ma'ida: 13). An example of this is when Allah commanded the children of Israel to say 'hitta' (forgive our sins), but instead they said 'hinta' (wheat). '…and have forgotten a good share of the Message that was sent to them…' (al-Ma'ida: 13). Abrogation of previous Divine Scriptures before the Quran took place by people forgetting a good share of the Message that was sent to them. Forgetfulness, in this case, may indicate people's failure to adequately understand or comprehend the Message, but it also implies that Allah's Teachings did not really occupy their minds. Had the scriptures been on their minds, they would have continued to remember them. Moreover, they concealed the parts which they did not forget, and distorted and twisted those parts which they neither concealed nor forgot. It would have been bad enough if this was all they did, but they also invented teachings and statements of their own and attributed them to Allah Glorified is He: 'Then woe to those who write the Book with their own hands and then say, "This is from Allah", to purchase with it a little price! Woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for that they earn thereby' (al-Baqara: 79). Thus, four kinds of methods of tampering were applied to the original scriptures: forgetting, concealing, distorting and inserting personal statements and then attributing them to Allah.

Now let us reflect on the beauty of these wise Divine Words: '…and have forgotten a good share of the Message that was sent to them…' (al-Ma'ida: 13) Their wickedness was so immense that they forgot that which could have brought them a great deal of good fortune 'hazh' (translated as good share in the verse) literally means good fortune in Arabic) such as their forgetting and concealing the glad tidings that heralded the advent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Had they believed in them, their fortune will have been great. This is because they forgot something which could have brought them a great reward, and therefore they wronged themselves. Islam will have profited nothing if they had believed in it and followed its guidance; but rather, the loss was all theirs. Still, Allah the Most High aided them with regards to their forgetfulness, which also holds as a proof against themselves, by reminding them of what they had forgotten. This should have caused them to be just to themselves and return to true faith. The Lord Glorified is He reminded them of what they had forgotten in order that they will attain, for themselves, good fortune. This may also suggest that they forgot the Teachings of Allah deliberately, ignoring and turning away from them on purpose.

Allah the Exalted then says: '…And you will not cease to discover treachery in them, except a few of them. But forgive them and overlook (their misdeeds). Verily, Allah loves those who do good' (al-Ma'ida: 13). That is their treachery to you, O Prophet Muhammad, to your followers and to Allah's Law of guidance on the earth will continue. Nothing can testify more clearly to this than their crimes against their own Messengers, although they were from their own people and tribe. They were, like them, from the children of Israel, so what do you think they will do to a Prophet who came from another race to withdraw from them their temporal power?

Therefore, their treachery to Allah Glorified is He was expected. The word 'kha'ina' ('treachery'; the word 'kha'ina' is usually a feminine active participle which means 'she who is treacherous') here means the same as 'khiyana' (treachery), just like the word 'qa'ila' (also in a feminine active participle form) means the same as 'qaylula' (siesta). The word 'kha'ina' can also mean 'a treacherous soul' or 'a treacherous woman', it might be an emphatic adjectival form which seems feminine although it is used for a male, or it might mean 'a treacherous group'.

Consequently, the single word here comprises all the different sources of treachery, whether man, woman, group, or all of them together. The speaker here is the Lord of the worlds. He is speaking to the Arabs, a people of eloquence; hence, the discourse is very lofty in tone.

Owing to the perfect precision and fairness of the Quran, Allah the Exalted says: '…except a few of them…' (al-Ma'ida: 13), in line with the principle of 'allowing for possibilities'. When Allah addressed His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to clarify to him the position of the Jews regarding him, was it not possible that some Jews, endowed with deep understanding, considered believing in this Messenger and so calm down and stop the wild assumptions they had made about him? In fact, some of them thought this way and embraced Islam.

If these people had heard Allah passing a non-exclusive judgement over all the Jews, they will have said, 'Why should we be judged the same as the rest when we are thinking of embracing the true faith?' It is as though His Words: '…except a few of them…' (al-Ma'ida: 13) allowed for the possibility that some of them might have thought about believing. Those who indeed were thinking about believing will hear the Lord's Words: 'except a few of them' and thus would realize that the Quran was truly a revelation and light from Allah. This actually happened and a few of them did embrace Islam.

On the other hand, what was the position of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when the Lord the Exalted informed him that he will experience treachery from the Jews in the future? This certainly could have affected the attitude of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers towards the Jews, and any act of betrayal by the Jews will have been retaliated against according to the basic law of self-defence. But Allah Glorified is He did not want to leave the matter up to the emotions of any human being, and hence He says: '…forgive them, and overlook (their misdeeds). Verily, Allah loves those who do good' (al-Ma'ida: 13).

The Arabic word 'afw' ('pardon' and 'forgiveness') literally means 'effacement of traces'; i.e. your tracks are noticeable on the ground, and then the wind comes and brushes away all traces and marks of them. Consequently, the commandment to pardon the disbelievers means: remove from yourself any effects and vestiges of the sins or wrongs they had committed against you and act as though they never happened. But would the impact of such wrongdoings have remained with Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah? No, because there is a command for forbearance and an overlooking of faults. There is a difference between erasing the ill deed of others utterly, and allowing the impact of such an ill deed to remain in your soul so that you continue to feel rage and bitterness.

Allah Glorified is He here commands that 'Afw' (forgiveness) be shown, which means to wipe off the traces that the misdeed has left, and also to practice forbearance and an overlooking of faults, which means to expel any effects of the misdeed from the mind. In such an experience, every human being goes through several stages: the first stage is when someone sins against him and he controls himself from returning the aggression; this is forgiveness. The second stage is when he does not allow the effect of the sin to continue to work on his heart, but rather, he practices forbearance and overlooks the fault. This frees the believer's heart from being preoccupied with something which he has already forgiven. The third stage provides the opportunity for those who wish to acquire a higher level of moral perfection or excellence (ihsan) and increase their certitude and faith by doing good to the one who wronged them. These three stages are made clear in the saying of the Lord Glorified is He: '…and those who suppress their anger, and who pardon people; verily, Allah loves those who do good' (Al-'Imran: 134).

Yet, is the act of being good to those who abuse or wrong us logical to the human soul? It might be considered illogical, but human beings do not make their own laws for themselves. Rather, their laws are made by One Who is above and beyond the human soul. The Creator says to you, 'If you knew the good that the one who wronged you has done to you, you will be grateful to him. This is because when you wrong one of Allah's creatures, the retribution for and the restoration of the right of this creature is claimed by the Lord of this creature Himself. Allah is always on the side of those who suffer wrong or injustice'.

When your enemy wrongs you, he, in fact, places Allah on your side; hence, does he not deserve to be thanked for this? You should remember the well known saying, 'Should you not be good to the one who puts Allah on your side?' This is Allah's Standard: '…verily, Allah loves those who do good'. (al-Ma'ida: 13) And to do good here means for one's faith to rise above the level of: '…whoever has assaulted you, then assault him in the same way that he has assaulted you. And fear Allah, and know that Allah is with those who fear Him' (al-Baqara: 194).

Ihsan or moral excellence means to do more than what Allah has obliged you to do, but of the same kind of action that Allah has enjoined on you. The one who does good (Muhsin), who reaches the station of moral excellence or perfection (ihsan) is the one who worships Allah as if he sees Him–for although he cannot see Him, Allah Glorified is He surely sees all His creatures. We know that Allah Glorified is He says: 'Verily, the righteous will be in the midst of Gardens and springs (in Heaven) Taking joy in the things which their Lord has given them. Verily, they were before this those who do the good'. (adh-Dhariyat: 15-16) What is it that constituted their moral excellence according to the previous verse? The answer is, 'They used to sleep but little by night (invoking and praying to Allah with humility).' (adh-Dhariyat: 17) Does Allah enjoin His servants to sleep only a small part of the night? No. Allah has enjoined on Muslims to offer prayers and told them that after the Evening Prayer they are free and can sleep until the Dawn Prayer. Then, on hearing the call for the Dawn Prayer, they should wake up and pray. Here the doers of good, who want to take their faith to a higher level, sleep little to offer extra supererogatory prayers during night. In addition, the Lord Glorified is He mentions another attribute of these doers of good: 'And in the hours before dawn they ask forgiveness.' (adh-Dhariyat: 18)

Does Allah enjoin all people to ask for forgiveness during the pre-dawn hours? No, rather, when a man asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the obligatory acts of worship he was required to do, he told him about the five pillars of Islam, including the five obligatory daily prayers to which the man replied, 'By Allah, I shall do no more and no less than this!' Prophet Muhammad replied, 'He will be successful, if he proves truthful (concerning what he has just said).'(1)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in the Book of Iman (Faith)

Allah the Exalted then adds, completing His description of the doers of good: ‘And in their property is a portion due to him who begs and to him who is deprived.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 19) We may observe here that Allah Glorified is He does not say ‘a known right’, but rather: ‘…a portion due to him who begs and to him who is deprived.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 19) The ‘known right’ is the obligatory charity; as for those who do the good, they give a share of their wealth to the poor and needy beyond what is obligatory. In this way Allah the Most High widens the arena for spiritual aspiration. Those who give more shall be recompensed more by Allah. To continue, the Lord teaches us, saying: ‘…forgive them and overlook (their misdeeds). Verily, Allah loves those who do good’ (al-Ma’ida: 13) because being good to these opponents will evoke in them the instinctive feelings of gratefulness. Consequently, this goodness will remove the bitterness from their hearts and open up their ears and hearts to the words of Truth.

‘…Then verily, he, between whom and you there was enmity, (will become) as though he was a close friend!’ (Fussilat: 34) This is because enmity only grows severer if it is reciprocated in some way. But when you treat your enemy in the best way instead of returning his enmity, how long will he remain your enemy? He transgresses against you once, and you do not respond to him, and then he transgresses again and you still do not respond to him; at this point, he will surely calm down. So enmity does not continue unless it is returned. We learned what happened in the confrontation between Pharaoh and our master Musa (Moses) peace be upon him, when Allah willed that the enmity should be on both sides, not only one, for the struggle to be intense because if the enmity only came from one side, the attacking side would soon calm down.

‘And the family of Pharaoh picked him up (out of the river) so that he will become for them an enemy and a (cause of) grief.’ (al-Qasas: 8) Did they take Musa peace be upon him for him to become their enemy? No, they took him so that he would be a source of joy for them, but Allah had already decreed otherwise. The hope was that Musa peace be upon him would become a source of joy for Pharaoh’s household, but Allah willed that he be raised by them and then afterwards become an enemy to them. Thus, it becomes clear to us that the plans of Heaven have precedence over the plans of earth. Musa, the Samaritan, for example, was raised by Heaven through Angel Gabriel peace be upon him. His mother gave birth to him in the midst of the desert, and Gabriel peace be upon him came down with food for him until he reached manhood. However, Musa, the son of `Imran (Amram) peace be upon him was raised by Pharaoh. Yet Musa the Samaritan, who was raised by Gabriel peace be upon him became a disbeliever, while Musa, the son of `Imran, who was raised by Pharaoh became a Messenger to the children of Israel. Both of these destinies were willed by Allah. In this regard, a poet once said:

If it does not coincide with fate,
Then no hope or wish can be fulfilled:
The Moses whom Gabriel raised was a disbeliever,
Yet the Moses whom Pharaoh raised was a prophet.

It was as though the household of Pharaoh raised Musa, the son of `Imran, to be an enemy to them, not a source of joy; and that enmity became mutual between Musa and Pharaoh, as Allah the Exalted says: 'Put him (the child) into the chest and put it into the river (Nile), then the river shall cast it up on the bank, and there, an enemy of Mine and an enemy of his shall take him.' (Ta Ha: 39)

Therefore, enmity was on both sides. The Lord Glorified is He commanded His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to show forbearance in the face of the treachery from the children of Israel, that perhaps this would help awaken in them the instinct of belief and they would say, 'He did not treat us as we treated him'. It could lead them to recognise Prophet Muhammad as a merciful, compassionate, and kind prophet of Allah, and as a result they will no longer stand in the way of his mission. But is pardon and forbearance the only instructions that the Lord Glorified is He gives to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? No, for the Divine Commandments passed through many stages; as Prophet Muhammad draws the human soul by winning it over with kindness, but if it is not won over by kindness then the Prophet must roll up his sleeves and do as Allah commands him. Let us read the following saying of Allah: 'Many of the People of the Scripture wish they could turn you back to disbelief after you have believed, out of envy from themselves (even) after the Truth has become clear to them. So pardon and overlook this until Allah delivers His command.' (al-Baqara: 109)

There is a subtle matter here, expressed by the words: '…until Allah delivers His command…' (al-Baqara: 109). Allah Glorified is He commands His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to leave them and show pardon and forbearance until another stage comes, in which he will be commanded to chastise them. This is a natural human process which was known to the pre-Islamic Arabs. The Arab was kind to his enemy once, twice and thrice, but when this kindness availed nothing, he fought the enemy. The poet said:

Patience, and it if avails not, then a threat;
And if this, too, avails not, this is the end
Of forbearance, and rigour must be employed instead
For rigour comes when forbearance fails.

And another poet said:

We made peace with Banu Dhahl,
And held them as our brothers:
Perhaps in good time they shall Become as they once were.
But when evil came forth
And showed itself plainly,
We became as lions,
And furious lions, what is more!
With a widow-making blow,
Terror and boisterous clamour,
And stabs like the pecks of a bird –
A bird that is well fed!
For evil brings relief,
When kindness relieves naught,
And there are times when forbearance
Brings nothing but disgrace!

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had the same kind of experiences with the Christians that he had with the Jews, as Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse:

وَمِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّا نَصَٰرَىٰٓ أَخَذۡنَا مِيثَٰقَهُمۡ فَنَسُواْ
حَظّٗا مِّمَّا ذُكِّرُواْ بِهِۦ فَأَغۡرَيۡنَا بَيۡنَهُمُ ٱلۡعَدَاوَةَ وَٱلۡبَغۡضَآءَ إِلَىٰ يَوۡمِ
ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِۚ وَسَوۡفَ يُنَبِّئُهُمُ ٱللَّهُ بِمَا كَانُواْ يَصۡنَعُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

We also took a pledge from those who say, ‘We are Christians,’ but they too forgot some of what they were told to remember, so We stirred up enmity and hatred among them until the Day of Resurrection, when God will tell them what they have done [14] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 14)

They said that they were Christians, and the Lord Glorified is He took a solemn pledge from them; this could either mean the pledge taken from all the descendants of Adam peace be upon him when Allah drew the progeny of the children of Adam from their loins and made them bear witness to His Divinity and Lordship; or this could be referring to the pledge they made to their Prophet `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him, the son of Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her. Yet, they forgot much of what they had been taught, abandoned what the Injil (Gospel) had commanded them, and broke their pledge, and as a result they were divided into many hostile sects. After this verse comes reference to what Allah destined, as He had promised beforehand:

يَٰٓأَهۡلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ قَدۡ جَآءَكُمۡ رَسُولُنَا يُبَيِّنُ لَكُمۡ
كَثِيرٗا مِّمَّا كُنتُمۡ تُخۡفُونَ مِنَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ وَيَعۡفُواْ عَن
كَثِيرٖۚ قَدۡ جَآءَكُم مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ نُورٞ وَكِتَٰبٞ مُّبِينٞ ﴿١٥﴾

People of the Book, Our Messenger has come to make clear to you much of what you have kept hidden of the Scripture, and to overlook much [you have done]. A light has now come to you from God, and a Scripture making things clear [15] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 15)

It is as though Allah Glorified is He is giving them the opportunity (to return to Him) as well as proof against them, so that none of them will say that no Message from the Messengers of Allah ever reached him/her, and there was a time during which no Messenger came. But here the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came bearing a complete Message of guidance. The coming of a new Messenger gives them the opportunity to renew their solemn pledge of faith. They concealed some of the laws contained in their scriptures, such as those that prescribed stoning and prohibited usury. As the Quran tells us, some of the children of Israel said about usury: 'There is no blame on us if we betray and take the properties of the illiterate people (Arabs).' (Al-'Imran: 75) That is, they claimed that it was lawful to engage in usurious transactions with those who did not follow their religion, but not with those who did follow it. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to gather the children of Israel together and join their hands to his hand; he was the prophet they had been awaiting for and whose tidings were foretold in their scriptures. He wanted all the believers to stand united against the forces of godlessness on earth in order for the Law of Heaven to rule the life on the earth. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: '…There has come to you from Allah a light….' (al-Ma'ida: 15) This signifies that their concealing some of Allah's Teachings created darkness in the world. As long as darkness had come into the world, especially moral darkness, the world was in need of a light to show it the way. We know that light is what makes things bright and clear.

When the Lord the Exalted speaks to us of material light, He wants to guide us using the concept of material light to that of spiritual light. Material light dispels the darkness from the path in order for us not to collide with obstructions, fall into holes, or break things. When a person carries a light, he can see where he is going. Material light prevents creatures from colliding as they move, and in this way energy is not wasted because when it is wasted, the world is ruined and nothing is achieved.

During the day, the sun lights up the world. The moon comes after the sun and reflects some light. People are also guided by the stars in the darkness of the land and sea. Allah caused these creatures to exist to prevent collision in the motion of physical beings. Just as Allah has made a material light in order for creatures not to collide with one another, He is also capable of providing light for morals and spiritual values. That is, the Lord the Exalted created the light of morality to guide mankind to the right path. Both the disbeliever and atheist equally benefit like the believer from the material light which secures physical motion on the earth. No one ever says, 'I do no need to benefit from physical light'. Consequently, we need to say to the disbelievers and atheists, 'Since you benefit from physical light, you should know that Allah has also provided a moral light which you must follow, too. Allah's System of Guidance condenses this moral light into the principles: 'Do' and 'Do not do'.

The Law of Allah, then, is a light from Him. Let us read the following Words of Allah: 'Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth…' (an-Nur: 35). Allah takes our hands and guides us along the way with the material light from which everyone benefits, whether believer or disbeliever.

In the following verse, He the Most High gives us a similitude of this light: '…The example of His Light is like a niche within which is a lamp…' (an-Nur: 35). A Mishkah (translated in the previous verse as 'niche') is an aperture in a wall. It is different from a window. It is a hollow in the wall where an oil or kerosene lamp can be placed. It used to be found in primitive houses before the invention of electric lamps and chandeliers. The hollow was not more than thirty centimetres in breadth, forty centimetres in height, and fifteen centimetres in depth, while the room it lit was in the range of three metres wide, long, and high.

The Lord Glorified is He speaks about the hollow here, not the room itself; and any lamp which was placed in the hollow lit up the whole room. We should pay attention that this is no ordinary lamp, but rather, it is enclosed in glass. We know that the glass-enclosed lamp is one of the great achievements of human ingenuity. In the past, lamps had no glass and their flames would throw up smoke which blackened the walls and the space around them with soot. The lamp was also easily extinguished by wind. Then man began to place glass around the lamp which protected the flame, concentrated the light, and reflected the beams, and the fire could still draw the air it needed through the glass.

'…The example of His light is like a niche within which is a lamp; the lamp is enclosed in glass…' (an-Nur: 35). That is, the light of this lamp is especially bright because the glass reflects its rays and spreads the light everywhere. The glass in which this lamp is enclosed is not ordinary either: '…The glass as if it were a pearly (white) star…' (an-Nur: 35). A star itself produces light, and the glass is shining like a bright radiant star. As for the kind of fuel with which the lamp is lit, it is described as: '…lit from (the oil of) a blessed olive tree…' (an-Nur: 35). This increases and intensifies the lamp's light for it is lit from the oil of an olive tree; and it is no ordinary tree. It is: '…neither of the east nor of the west…' (an-Nur: 35). Consequently, it is a tree which is distinguished by being totally balanced.

'…Light upon light...' (an-Nur: 35), this is an aspect of Allah's omnipotent power concerning the light of the material world; hence, it would be inconceivable for Him to leave spiritual and moral values bereft of light. Just as mankind is guided in material affairs, s/he must be aware that the Lord the Exalted has the power to guide her/him in spiritual affairs as well. Evidence of this is the saying of Allah: '…Allah guides to His light whom He wills…' (an-Nur: 35).

Allah gives spiritual and moral guidance to those who want it. An atheist might be guided by the light of the sun, but his sight is blind to the light of the Divine Law and moral values. As such, Allah Glorified is He explains that there is a Divine Light, which is His Way and Law, and He puts forth this similitude to illustrate metaphysical concepts by means of material concepts. We all seek light according to our means: a poor man or a country-dweller seeks the light of a small gas-lamp, and a wealthier person may buy an electric generator. Everyone seeks light according to his means, but when the sun rises in the morning, what happens? Everyone puts out these lights, for the sun is a light which Allah has provided for all mankind and to the entire world.

Likewise, if we use our minds to think of something that will give light to our lives, each one of us will think according to the ability of his mind. But when a light comes down from Allah, it eliminates the need for any other light. And we should do the same thing spiritually as we do materially.'…Light upon light. Allah guides to His Light whom He wills. And Allah presents examples for mankind, for Allah is All Knowing of all things…' (an-Nur: 35).

What indicates to us that the second light is the light of ethical and moral values, which are contained in the rules of 'Do' and 'Do not do', is that Allah the Exalted says after this: 'In houses (mosques) which Allah has ordered to be raised, in them His Name is glorified in the mornings and in the evenings' (an-Nur: 36).

If you look for the noun connected with the Jarr wa Majrur (Arabic technical term for the genitive case) 'in houses', you will find that it can only refer back to the words 'light upon light'. This is to signify that the light upon light comes from seeking guidance in mosques; for they are the Houses of Allah to which we come to experience the light which the Lord the Exalted bestows upon His creation.

'In houses (mosques), which Allah has ordered to be raised; in them His Name is glorified in the mornings and in the evenings. Men whom neither trade nor sale diverts them from the Remembrance of Allah' (an-Nur: 36-37). The words '…neither trade nor sale diverts them…' (an-Nur: 37) do not mean that commerce is forbidden, but rather, it stresses that an honest man is not distracted by commerce from the Remembrance of Allah. Allah must be constantly on a believer's mind. When a person remembers Allah, He extends His grace to him.

This brings us back to the point in question. Consequently, O people of the Book, this light has come to you, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has explained to you many of the matters over which you have differed and has overlooked many of your misdeeds. He offers you full conciliation and purification; hence, you must wake up, heed his call, and change your attitude towards this new Message. Search for what Allah intends by these teachings, which Allah illustrates using the parable of light. This light guides by means of 'Do' and 'Do not do'. But who can tell us that this light comes from Allah? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him does. And what can indicate to us that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is truly sent by Allah? The indication of this is Allah's saying: 'O mankind! Verily, there has come to you a convincing proof (Prophet Muhammad) from your Lord, and we have sent down to you a manifest light (this Quran)' (an-Nisa': 174).

Consequently, what your Lord sent first was the firm proof that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was truly sent by Allah to deliver to us the Book containing His Message of guidance. The Quran is distinguished by the fact that it constitutes both the proof of the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad and the luminous, enlightening Divine Message itself. Burhan (translated as' proof 'in the verse at hand) means the strongest evidence or argument that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was truly sent by Allah.

In education, we encounter proofs when we study geometry. When confronted with a geometrical problem, we consider the data that we are provided with and see what we have to prove. After this, we consider the given information once more and use it to derive the proof. If the information does not supply that proof, we then take a further step to attempt to reach it. This universe is filled with data and information. It is an exact, ordered universe. We can witness its perfect order in the natural world over which we have no control: 'It is not possible for the sun to reach the moon, or for the night to overtake the day, for each, in an orbit, is swimming.…' (Ya Sin: 40)

The universe is perfectly balanced by the interplay of the sky, the earth, the wind movement, and all other natural components. We find that the laws governing these systems in which humans play no role function perfectly, efficiently and consistently. In fact, if humans wish to appreciate the information and design of the universe, they should observe the matters over which humans exercise influence. They will find that they are subject to corruption because they are subject to human caprice. But the Creator is far above and beyond any such influences; He the Exalted says: 'And the heaven He has raised high, and He has set up the Balance' (ar-Rahman: 7).

It is a perfect balance that does not allow either the sky to fall upon the earth or the stars to collide with one another. Allah Glorified is He then shows us how to live in conformity with the orderly system of the universe: '…that you may not transgress the (just) balance' (ar-Rahman: 8). If you want your life to be orderly, observe the matters over which you have power and handle them as Allah handles the matters over which you have no power.

'And establish weight in justice and do not make deficient the balance'. (ar-Rahman: 9) You can admire the balance of the greater universe because it was made according to a precise system. Since the Lord the Exalted has given us a precise system of guidance contained in the code of 'Do' and 'Do not do', it follows that if you adopt this guidance and live your life according to Allah's Way, you will not corrupt your freely-willed actions and you will maintain an upright balance. The Lord Glorified is He has supplied us with information which, when contemplated naturally and spontaneously, without predispositions or inclinations, will lead the person to belief. These balanced beings must surely have a creator because humans were brought into being after them; many creatures appeared before mankind, and no human could ever claim that he made this universe.

We must search for the One Who created this precisely ordered universe. When a certain claim is free of any weak points, is it true or false? It is absolutely true. Allah has declared that He created the heavens, the earth, and the entire universe, and no one else has come forward to claim that he created them. Consequently, it is confirmed that this matter (the creation) is from Allah until another claimant comes forth. But no matter how much time passes, no one will ever claim this.

The role of the human mind is to think and use reason to know the One Who created this universe, and it has to show gratitude to the one who came and solved this mystery for him/her. The Messengers came to solve this riddle and to guide us for what pure innate minds search. If we were to follow the chain of existence, we will find that the human is the master of this existence because every other creature works and strives to serve humankind. As we know, the classes of organisms that are made subservient to humankind include animals, above which humans are distinguished by reason and intellect. Next in the chain comes the plant kingdom which exhibits the characteristic of growth, and finally, inanimate creation. All these creatures are made to serve humankind. The class of inanimate beings does not simply refer to motionless entities, but rather includes the air, the sun, the soil, and so on. They all perform their function in existence in order to serve the genera which are higher than them; and humankind benefits from them all. Plants benefit from inanimate beings, animals benefit from both plants and inanimate beings, and the totality of all beings serves humankind.

Is it not appropriate and necessary, then, for humans to ask themselves who placed them in this distinguished position? And, if a Messenger came to answer this question for us, and he also told us that humankind was created by Allah; moreover, he then explained to us Allah's Attributes and informed us of His Message whose truth was strengthened and supported by a miraculous sign, this miraculous sign being proof for us that he and his Message were from Allah as it is a sign and miracle which no human can duplicate even though this Messenger challenged all humankind to produce the like of this miraculous sign–if all this was the case, all humans will certainly believe in him, provided they are honest and sincere in their understanding and intention.

So, what constituted this firm proof? The firm proof was the sign that attested to the Messenger being truly sent by Allah to convey and deliver His Message on His behalf. Conveyance of the Creator's Message is what a pure innate mind demands and searches for, and such a person believes that a Creator must exist even if the name of the Creator–Allah–is yet unknown to that mind. The Messenger is the one with the authority to tell people the name and nature of their Creator and present to them His Message.

Accordingly, the coming of Messengers is a logical issue necessitated by natural human instinct and reason. As a result, the Lord the Exalted sent down the doctrinal light and the code of guidance which protects society from chaos, because Allah Glorified is He says: 'And if the Truth was in accordance with their desires, verily, the heavens and the earth and all those who are in them will have been corrupted…' (al-Mu'minun: 71).

Religion came from Allah to govern all issues in which human inclinations and desires differ and clash. Allah conclusively settled all possible conflicts arising from different inclinations and desires by establishing Himself as the Sole Lawmaker and revealing a law that would resolve and unify these differences. Consequently, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'None of you (truly) believes until his desires (or inclinations) are in line with what I have brought.'(1)

That is, all inclinations and desires must be united under the banner of a single law. For, if every human being followed his own personal caprice, we would inevitably fall into conflict. Let us repeat: human conflicts, whether on the level of the family, the community, the nation, or the entire world, are the result of conflicting inclinations and desires. As for the issues in which human tendencies play no part, the whole world is in agreement on them. This is proved by the fact that we can say that the former Eastern power and the current Western power differed because of two political ideologies, one called 'communism' and the other called 'capitalism'.

---

(1) Narrated by Ad-Daylami

There is no laboratory in which we can analyse communism or capitalism and see which of them is good for us. These are matters of caprice, which is why they have been constantly in conflict. Communism was defeated, although its effects still remain. However, people do not differ about physical issues. As the famous saying goes, there is no Russian or American electricity, or Russian or American physics. There is an agreement concerning all issues which can be empirically verified; differences only occur regarding those issues in which inclinations and desires differ and clash.

It is as though Allah Glorified is He has left open for us all that is in the earth for us to freely interact with it using the minds, abilities, and perceptions which He has endowed us with for this purpose. He made it clear to us that empirical and material aspects will not divide us; rather, we will agree upon them, and each group will even try to obtain the results of the other group's experiments, and some will even attempt to access such information through espionage or theft. But what really brings harm to us and our societies are the differences that arise because of conflicting inclinations and interests. It would have been bad enough if that was where it stopped: material agreement and capricious conflict; but no, humans have even used the things they agreed upon, which were derived from experimentation, invention and discovery as a way of forcing upon others the ideologies by which their inclinations and desires were governed. It is as though we have corrupted matters entirely: we use what we agree on to forcefully impose ideas we differ on.

The Lord Glorified is He gave us all this for life to proceed properly. Life cannot proceed properly unless the final judgement concerning matters involving desires belong solely to the Lord Glorified is He. For this reason, in the countryside people say, 'If the Law of Allah cuts a person's finger (for having committed a crime), it will not bleed'. This signifies the people's belief. That is, when a ruling comes from Heaven, it is received with no hurtful feelings; since it is the judgement of the One Who created us and created this entire universe. Heaven intervenes in matters in which inclinations and desires differ by giving Allah's Way of guidance in the form of 'Do' and 'Do not do'. As for the matters in which inclinations and desires play no part, Allah makes it clear, 'You shall agree on these matters in spite of yourselves–and you will even steal them from one another–so they are not dangerous'.

The danger lies in capricious and whimsical exercise of judgement and decisions; and remember that concerning highly important matters which maintain the balance of society in accordance with Allah's Criteria, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave the example himself by going through the experiences himself. He did not pass this burden to one of the believers. For example, when our Lord wanted to bring an end to the practise of adoption so that no one will call anyone else his son unless he truly was his father, Allah first ended it for His own Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '…so that (in future) there may be no difficulty for the believers in respect of (marriage to) the wives of their adopted sons when the latter have no desire to keep them (i.e. they have divorced them)….' (al-Ahzab: 37)

In the context of speaking about material issues versus those involving desires, we may mention here the Hadith narrated by Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him which states that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him happened to pass by some people who were busy cross-pollinating date-palms (as they usually did), and he said, 'If you were not to do it, it would be good for you'. (Therefore, they abandoned the practice), but the crop did not grow and yield properly. He peace and blessings be upon him later happened to pass by them again, and he said, 'What has gone wrong with your date-palms?' They said, 'You told us such-and-such', to which he replied, 'You know better about your worldly affairs.'(1) Clearly, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him left them to exercise their own discretion for their worldly affairs.

(1) Narrated by Muslim, Ahmad and Ibn Hagar

Heaven, then, does not intervene in empirical matters because Allah the Most High has endowed us with minds and provided us with matter that can be subject to experimentation. We have seen how Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him revised his opinion after he saw that another opinion was better. He did this to affirm an important issue which is that physical, empirical, and experimental matters are outside the scope of religion, and therefore we should not attempt to apply religion to them. For example, we should not say, 'The earth is not spherical', or 'The earth does not revolve'. This has nothing to do with the religion, since religion has absolutely nothing to do with such matters that require experimentation, laboratory testing, inference and the formulation of theories. The purpose of religion is to protect us from the conflicts that result from different inclinations and desires. When we differ on something, religion decisively says to us: 'Do this, and do not do that', and therefore settles the matter. However, if something is not included within the order' Do this and do not do that', this means that whether we do it or not, the world will not become corrupted because of it. We are free in matters which are not covered by 'Do' and 'Do not do'. We are free to differ about them; for differences in views belong to the sphere of natural instinct and disposition.

In this regard, Allah says: '…There has come to you from Allah a Light and a clear Book' (al-Ma'ida: 15). Does this' light' refer to the Divine Revelation or something else? In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: 'O mankind! Verily, there has come to you a convincing proof (Prophet Muhammad) from your Lord, and we sent down to you a manifest Light (this Quran).' (an-Nisa': 174)

These Quranic statements indicate that the 'Light' here refers to the Quran; it combines in itself two characteristics: being a sign, i.e. a miracle, and being a light that shows us our way to live.' Therefore, believe in Allah and His Messenger (Muhammad) and in the Light (this Quran) which we have sent down...' (at-Taghabun: 8). Belief in Allah is a process which is fulfilled in stages; 'Allah' is the pinnacle of faith and 'His Messenger' is the one who delivers Allah's Message on His Behalf. He brought us light. But some people who tend to overstate realities say that the word 'Light' stands for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. We answer by saying that we do not object to him being light because it is also possible that the conjunction 'and' in the text is meant to explain what came before it, not add something to it. We do not wish to enter a labyrinth of arguments with those who say, ‘No, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was not light, but rather, he was a physical being’; and those who respond to them with the Hadith on the authority of Jabir Allah be pleased with him when he said, ‘What was the first thing that Allah created, O Messenger of Allah?’ To which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, ‘The light of your Prophet, O Jabir.’(1)

The Hadith goes as follows: It was narrated on the authority of Jabir ibn `Abdullah that he said, ‘O Prophet Muhammad, may my father and mother be sacrificed for you, tell me about the first thing Allah Almighty created before everything else’. He peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘O Jabir, before all other things Allah created the light of your Prophet from His own Light, and He made this light roam wherever He willed by His Power; and there was not, at that time, a Tablet, a Pen, a Paradise, a Fire, an angel, a heaven, an earth, a sun, a moon, a jinn or a human.’(2) (3)

In order to avoid delving into a matter of the unseen which not all minds can grasp and some will be misguided by and leading to vain arguments, we say, ‘If it appears to anyone that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is light, then he should keep this knowledge to himself; he should not try to convince anyone else of it as he should avoid causing tumults and disagreements. If the Hadith of Jabir is to be examined, we wonder, ‘Did Prophet Muhammad assume that the first thing Allah Glorified is He created was “your Prophet,” or “the light of your Prophet”?’ The Hadith said ‘The light of your Prophet’, not the Prophet himself, a man made of flesh and blood; Muhammad came from Adam, and Adam came from dust. Therefore, we need not delve into issues which can only be understood by those of outstanding spiritual excellence, or else tumults will occur. As a result, if someone says, ‘Do you say that "light" here means Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him?' we say, 'Indeed yes, Prophet Muhammad most certainly is light, for light prevents us from colliding, and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought us guidance to light up our way; the Quran is the theoretical Methodology, while Prophet Muhammad provided the applied Methodology. If you use light to avoid collisions, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Verily, in the Messenger of Allah you have a good example…' (al-Ahzab: 21). To sum up, the theoretical and applied Methodologies should both be followed.

(1) From the proofreader: This is a fabricated Hadith (Fataawa Al-Lajnah Al-Daa’imah, 1/464).

(2) Narrated by’ Abd Ar-Razzaq on the authority of Jabir as mentioned in Kashf Al-Khafa’

(3) From the proofreader: With regard to the narration that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was created from the light of Allah, this is a fabricated Hadith (Fataawa Al-Lajnah Al-Daa’imah, 1/464*)*. Some people claim that’ Abd Ar-Razzaq narrated this in his book Al-Musanna, but this is not true.

'…There has come to you from Allah a Light and a clear Book' (al-Ma'ida: 15). 'Clear' means that it covers every issue and matter, as Allah says: '…No single thing have we neglected in our decree…' (al-An'am: 38). That is, of those matters for which your desires and inclinations might vary. Imam Muhammad 'Abdu (1) was once asked in Paris, 'you say: "…No single thing have We neglected in Our decree…" (al-An'am: 38): do you mean even the number of loaves of bread that can be made from an Ardab (a certain weight measure) of flour?' He asked them to wait a moment, and he found a baker and asked him about the number, and then told them the answer. They said, 'No, you say it is in the Quran'. He replied, 'Indeed, the Quran told me: "…Ask those who know, if you know not" (an-Nahl: 43)'.

As such, Allah's words '…No single thing have we neglected in our decree…' (al-An'am: 38) mean those things wherein mankind's desires and inclinations might vary, or by which the motions of life on earth are corrupted. Our Lord the Exalted has made people have different preferences and like different fields.

'…There has come to you from Allah a Light and a clear Book' (al-Ma'ida: 15). That is, O people of the Book, be aware that this is your opportunity to settle the question of doctrine on earth, end the conflict between the two earlier religions, and return to one universal religion for all people, so that this partisanship will no longer remain on earth and the motions of man's life will be complementary, not conflicting. Furthermore, Allah says: 'Muhammad is Allah's Messenger; and those who are (truly) with him are firm and unyielding towards all deniers of the Truth, (yet) full of mercy towards one another…' (al-Fath: 29).

---

(1) The story of Imam Muhammad Abdu being asked in Paris about the number of loaves of bread made from one 'ardab' of wheat

Look at how Islam brings together two opposing things: Islam did not come to make mankind hard and unyielding because there are many situations which require mercy, and it did not make the person always merciful either because there are situations which require firmness. Islam did not come to cast man in one single mould; rather, it allowed the believer to react to the vicissitudes of life.

And Allah Glorified is He says: '…people who are humble towards the believers, firm with the disbelievers' (al-Ma'ida: 54). That is, Islam did not cast the believer in a mould of humility, nor a mould of pride, but rather, a believer is adaptable and adjustable to the changes of affairs and situations; he is humble and lenient towards the believer, firm towards the unbeliever. And Islam tells us: 'and thus have we willed you to be a community of the middle way (just community)…' (al-Baqara: 143).

That is, you must first know the two extremes and then mark them; for the middle cannot be known unless the two extremes are marked. The Jews went too far in their materialism, and the Christians went too far in their spirituality and monasticism: '…But as for monastic asceticism–We did not enjoin it upon them: they invented it themselves…' (al-Hadid: 27).

When Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was asked about a matter of inheritance, he said, 'I was not sent to teach inheritance' because his purpose was to recharge the religious and spiritual battery. Despite the grave disparity between the Jews and Christians, their scholars decided to compile the Old and New Testaments in one single Book. And there are some who assume that Islam is their arch-foe, but Islam was revealed to give people the freedom of choice. When we examine the materialistic approach together with the spiritual one, we see that the Jews went too far in materialism; they said: '…O Musa (Moses), indeed we shall not believe you until we see Allah face to face…' (al-Baqara: 55).

They took their materialism to the point that when they were straying in the wilderness and their provisions came straight from our Lord as manna and quails–and as we know, 'manna' is a food like white discs which came down from the sky, settled on trees or stones and then dried, and which was sweet-tasting like honey; and Allah sent them quails(1), which are birds similar to chickens–they said: '…We cannot endure but one kind of food…' (al-Baqara: 61).

They wanted the crops which grow from the earth instead. The thing which caused these materialistic impulses to be more apparent is that they started to doubt the unseen: they said, 'Perhaps the manna will not come, or perhaps we will not be able to catch the birds; we want our food to be secure'. Hence, metaphysical matters were far beyond them, and they were excessively materialistic; Allah Glorified is He wanted to redress this extremist materialistic outlook, and therefore He sent down spiritual teachings in the form of the message of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and reinvigorated them with purely religious sentiments which contained no material laws so that they would adopt these elements and the balance would be restored. But dispute broke out between them, and therefore a new religion had to come in order to combine rational and composed materialism with sound spirituality which was neither lax nor excessive: it was a spirituality taken directly from Heaven meaning that there was no need for man to contrive a religion which combined the two elements into one. Consequently, Allah Glorified is He said to us: 'Muhammad is Allah's Messenger; and those who are (truly) with him are firm and unyielding towards all deniers of the Truth, (yet) full of mercy towards one another. You can see them bowing down, prostrating themselves (in prayer), seeking favour with Allah and (His) Good Pleasure: their marks are on their faces, from the traces of prostration…' (al-Fath: 29).

These are all matters of worship. In fact, adherents to Islam follow both a materialistic and spiritual lifestyle at the same time. And Allah the Almighty continues: '…This is their likeness in the Torah…' (al-Fath: 29).

It is as though Allah described the followers of Muhammad in the Torah, 'O you who have gone too far with your materialism! A Messenger will come to redress the balance of beliefs and laws, and his community will be completely different to you. You are materialists, but Muhammad's followers will bow and prostrate seeking the favour and Good Pleasure of Allah, and there are marks on their faces from the traces of prostration. That is what your way lacks and will be found in the Methodology of the adherents of Islam'. Allah then says: 'and their likeness in the Injil (Gospel) is: (they are) like a seed that brings forth its shoot, and then strengthens it so that it grows stout, and (in the end it) stands upright upon its stem, delighting the sowers…' (al-Fath: 29). Hence, their likeness in the Torah was what the Jews were lacking, and their likeness in the Injil (Gospel) was what the Christians were lacking. That is, the religion of Prophet Muhammad combined material and spiritual values, and as a result it was a middle way between the other two. Further, Allah Glorified is He said: 'There has come to you from Allah a Light and a clear Book…' (al-Ma'ida: 15), that is, take the opportunity to correct your mistakes and start afresh a new life which will link you to Heaven in a way that combines the values of worldly life with those of the life of the Hereafter.

(1) (Salwa), i.e. kind of birds

Allah then says:

يَهۡدِى بِهِ ٱللَّهُ مَنِ ٱتَّبَعَ رِضۡوَٰنَهُۥ سُبُلَ ٱلسَّلَٰمِ وَيُخۡرِجُهُم مِّنَ
ٱلظُّلُمَٰتِ إِلَى ٱلنُّورِ بِإِذۡنِهِۦ وَيَهۡدِيهِمۡ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطٖ مُّسۡتَقِيمٖ ﴿١٦﴾ with which God guides to the ways of peace those who follow what pleases Him, bringing them from darkness out into light, by His will, and guiding them to a straight path [16] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 16)

As long as Allah is the One Who guides, He Glorified is He is free of the desires to which they are attached, and therefore, we can be sure that Islam is not governed by desires and personal inclinations. The cause of any lawmaker's failure is that he is prone to include enactments by which he achieves some personal preferences and gains, while a truly just lawmaker must not benefit from the law he enacts; and this is not true of anyone but Allah Glorified is He because He enacts the decrees and ordinances for everyone and He is greater than everyone.

'There has come to you from Allah a Light and a clear Book through which Allah shows to all who seek His Good Pleasure…' (al-Ma'ida: 15-16).

Allah guides those who seek His Good Pleasure to the paths of salvation ('salam' which means 'peace'); there is good pleasure which is sought, and paths of salvation which are given as recompense. Are there paths and venues for peace and salvation? Yes, because a soul can be at peace with itself, with its family, with its community, with its nation, with the world, with the whole universe or with Allah; peace can be found with all of these. Clearly, the paths of peace and salvation are manifold; and one attains peace with Allah by exalting Him, O slave of Allah, and not worshipping other gods along with Him, or attaching any other being to Him; that is, by not associating anything with him, or by saying that there is no god at all.

Therefore, we find that Islam takes the middle ground even in the matter of doctrine: it came in the midst of those who claim that there is no god, which is a negation, and others who said, 'There are many gods: evil has a god and goodness has a god, darkness has a god and light has a god, even the air and the earth have gods!'

Those who advocated atheism based this conviction on their material senses, all of them forgetting that man is made of both matter and spirit, and when the spirit departs, the body becomes a mere corpse. Yet none of them have asked himself, 'Where is the spirit which controls both your soul and your body? Have you ever seen it? Where is it? Is it in your nose, or your ear, or your stomach, or where? What shape is it? What colour is it? What taste is it?' You cannot perceive it, yet it exists. One of Allah's creations dwells within you, yet you cannot perceive it; so could you possibly perceive the Being of your Creator? This is a manifest error, for if a god could be perceived by the senses it would no longer be a god because if you perceive something, this means you can limit it with your vision, and as long as you can limit it, this means your vision has in a sense overpowered it–and the Supreme Power cannot be overpowered by that which is lower than it. When Allah Glorified is He wants to indicate this, He says: 'and also (there are signs) within your own selves: will you not then see?' (adh-Dhariyat: 21)

The other misguided team have claimed that there are many gods as this universe is vast, and everything in it must require its own private god. Hence, Islam came with the Truth and stated: There is only One God because if there were many gods, as you claim; one for the sun, another for the sky, another for the earth, another for water and another for air, then each of these gods would be incapable of accomplishing any other task besides that which fell under the limited authority of his godhood, and disputes and conflicts would arise amidst them, as is made clear by Allah's words: '…Each deity would surely have gone off (away from the others) with what he had created, and they would surely have (tried to) overcome one another…' (al-Mu'minun: 91).

So the sun-god might remove the sun from the universe, and the water-god might deny water to all other beings; but Allah gives the final judgement on the matter by saying: 'Say, "If there were–as some people assert–(other) deities with Him (Allah), surely (even) they would have to strive to find a way to submit to the Lord of the Throne"' (al-Isra': 42). And in another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Had there been in heaven or on earth any deities other than Allah, both (these realms) would surely have fallen into ruin!' (al-Anbiya': 22) The natural laws which you observe are also governed by the One God. Moreover, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has come to you to tell you that there is One God, and he peace and blessings be upon him adds, 'There is no god but Allah'; the confirmation' there is no god' negates that there are any gods at all, and then he says 'but Allah'; and this is for man's own good so that he does not remain in humble subservience to the 'sun-god', the 'air-god' or the 'water-god'. Allah Glorified is He also says: 'Allah sets forth a parable: A man belonging to several partners, (all of them) at variance with one another, and a man belonging totally to one person; can these two conditions be deemed equal?' (az-Zumar: 29)

Clearly, our Lord Glorified is He wants to spare us delusion, fancy and doubt: Allah Glorified is He is One God, and when He enacts a decree, no one can contradict it, as He the Almighty guides us by the laws He makes for us because He has neither desires nor preferences that can affect His laws. The meaning of desire is that you do something to serve your own interest, yet Allah the Exalted does not need anyone because He created all existence before He created mankind, and none of His creatures–no matter how much knowledge or intelligence he has been given–has any power or influence over the act or arrangement of creation' Through which Allah shows to all who seek His Good Pleasure…' (al-Ma'ida: 16). As long as one seeks His Good Pleasure, Allah Glorified is He will guide him to the ways of salvation. There are two forms of guidance: Allah Glorified is He guides those who seek His Good Pleasure to the paths of salvation, and He the Exalted said in another verse: 'But for those who are (willing to be) guided, He (Allah) increases their (ability to follow His) guidance and causes them to grow in piety' (Muhammad: 17).

Beware of thinking that the reward and recompense of Allah-consciousness only comes in the Hereafter for every time you do something, you find that it has an effect on you: when you pray, you find that your concerns are eased, and if you refrain from committing sin when no one can see, your heart will not be weighed down; and in this way, the believer lives in peace with his own self. The paths of peace and salvation are manifold. These are, the way to be at peace with Allah, the way to be at peace with the whole universe, the way to be at peace with society, the way to be at peace with one's family, and the way to be at peace with one's self. Allah says: 'And (know) that this is My Way leading straight (to Me): follow it, then, and do not follow other ways lest they cause you to deviate from His Way…' (al-An'am: 153). That is, there are ways of peace and salvation, and also ways of error.

Allah says in the following verse in the chapter of al-Ma'ida: '…and, by His grace, brings them out of the depths of darkness into light and guides them to a straight way' (al-Ma'ida: 16). The depths of darkness are where collisions occur; and when Allah takes them out of the depths of darkness into light, they see the right path that leads to goodness, and also the path which leads elsewhere. After they come out of the depths of darkness into the light, their motions are complimentary and not conflicting; they do not collide with one another, and no hatred or enmity arises amidst them. Or it may mean that Allah Glorified is He guides them to the Straight Path which leads to Heaven.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

لَّقَدْ كَفَرَ ٱلَّذِينَ قَالُوٓا۟ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ هُوَ ٱلْمَسِيحُ ٱبْنُ مَرْيَمَ ۚ قُلْ فَمَن
يَمْلِكُ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ شَيْـًٔا إِنْ أَرَادَ أَن يُهْلِكَ ٱلْمَسِيحَ ٱبْنَ مَرْيَمَ
وَأُمَّهُۥ وَمَن فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ جَمِيعًا ۗ وَلِلَّهِ مُلْكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ وَمَا
بَيْنَهُمَا ۚ يَخْلُقُ مَا يَشَآءُ ۚ وَٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ قَدِيرٌ ﴿١٧﴾

Those who say, ‘God is the Messiah, the son of Mary,’ are defying the truth. Say, ‘If it had been God’s will, could anyone have prevented Him from destroying the Messiah, son of Mary, together with his mother and everyone else on earth? Control of the heavens and earth and all that is between them belongs to God: He creates whatever He will. God has power over everything’ [17] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 17)

And Allah says earlier: ‘So, We planted among them enmity….’ (al-Ma’ida: 14) Consequently, the Jacobites said one thing, the Nazarenes said another thing, and the Melkites said another. As such, Allah Glorified is He addressed the most important issue: ‘Truly, they have disbelieved who say, “Indeed, Allah is the Messiah, son of Mary…”‘ (al-Ma’ida: 17).

And Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘Say’, replying to them: ‘…And who could have any power against Allah…’? (al-Ma’ida: 17) That is, who could prevent Allah Glorified is He from doing as He willed with the one whom you call a god, ‘…if He willed to destroy the Messiah, son of Mary, his mother, and everyone who is on earth–all of them...’ (al-Ma’ida: 17)?

They claimed that Allah is ‘Isa (Jesus) the Messiah, son of Mary; and this was a calumny against the status of divinity, which is too great to be compared and too great to indwell in anything. These noble words tell these people that no one could have prevented Allah from destroying ‘Isa, his mother and everyone on earth, for Allah is the Truth, the Sovereign Creator of the heavens and the earth and all that dwells within them, and He creates what He wills as He wills. If Allah Glorified is He created the Messiah with no father, we have been told before that He created Adam with neither father nor mother and created Eve with no mother; in His Awesome Power and Might, nothing is beyond His Ability. ‘Isa peace be upon him was a mortal man like any other.

'…For to Allah belong the dominion over the heavens and the earth and all that is between them; He creates what He wills….' (al-Ma'ida: 17) Allah mentions the heavens here to represent all that is high, and the earth to represent all that is low, and He says: 'He creates what He wills' to respond to this confusing matter with precise brevity: 'He creates what He wills' because the confusion arose from the fact that 'Isa peace be upon him was created in a unique manner which was not the usual way people are created. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He clarified, 'Do not think that when I create men I am obliged to do this by means of male and female parents; for were this the case, then this confusion should already have arisen before 'Isa peace be upon him being directed, rather, at the creation of Adam peace be upon him for he was created with neither father nor mother'. That is, those who were afflicted by doubt and consequently misguided by the fact that 'Isa (Jesus) was born from a mother without any father should have been taken aback more by the creation of Adam, for he had neither father nor mother. Allah clarifies to them, 'Allah creates what He wills; it is not completely necessary for there to be two parents, or only one father, or only one mother.'

Our Lord Glorified is He has the absolute power to create what He wills, and He has created men in all the four logically possible ways: Either from both father and mother as in the normal case for all of us, or with neither as in the case of Adam peace be upon him or from a male but not a female as in the case of Eve, or from a female but not a male as in the case of 'Isa peace be upon him. That is, Allah created men in all the four logically possible ways so that you would not think that our Lord Glorified is He has to create in certain ways; rather, He creates what He wills. The proof of this is that both potential parents may be present together, yet they might not conceive a child–and is there any further possibility aside from all these?

'Allah's alone is the dominion over the heavens and the earth. He creates whatever He wills: He bestows the gift of female offspring on whomever He wills, and the gift of male offspring on whomever He wills; or He gives both male and female (to whomever He wills), and causes to be barren whomever He wills…' (ash-Shura: 49-50).

Clearly, our Lord Glorified is He is not compelled to create by means of certain elements; the Will of the Creator, not the elements of the creation, is what matters: ‘…He creates what He wills…’ (al-Ma’ida: 17), and Allah’s Will is absolute and His Power is unlimited; for this reason, it is inevitable that He then says: ‘…and Allah has power over all things!’ (al-Ma’ida: 17)

Allah Glorified is He and then says:

وَقَالَتِ ٱلْيَهُودُ وَٱلنَّصَٰرَىٰ نَحْنُ أَبْنَٰٓؤُا۟ ٱللَّهِ وَأَحِبَّٰٓؤُهُۥ ۚ قُلْ فَلِمَ يُعَذِّبُكُم
بِذُنُوبِكُم ۖ بَلْ أَنتُم بَشَرٌ مِّمَّنْ خَلَقَ ۚ يَغْفِرُ لِمَن يَشَآءُ وَيُعَذِّبُ مَن يَشَآءُ ۚ وَلِلَّهِ
مُلْكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا ۖ وَإِلَيْهِ ٱلْمَصِيرُ ﴿١٨﴾

The Jews and the Christians say, ‘We are the children of God and His beloved ones.’ Say, ‘Then why does He punish you for your sins? You are merely human beings, part of His creation: He forgives whoever He will and punishes whoever He will. Control of the heavens and earth and all that is between them belongs to Him: all journeys lead to Him’ [18] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 18)

Did all the Jews say, ‘We are Allah’s children’? Or did all the Christians say, ‘We are Allah’s children’? No; some of the Jews said that’ Uzair (Ezra) was the son of Allah, and some of the Christians said that ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was the son of Allah; and Musaylima the Liar claimed to be a prophet, and all of his family claimed to be prophets as well, meaning that prophethood was in their stock; even the followers of ‘Abdullah ibn Az-Zubayr Abu Khabib called themselves the ‘Khubaybites’ ascribing themselves to Ibn Az-Zubayr who was the father of Khabib; they would all ascribe to themselves something which was an attribute of someone else. As such, the meaning of: ‘We are Allah’s children ‘is’ We are the devotees of ‘Uzair (Ezra), who was the son of Allah’, and ‘We are the devotees of ‘Isa, who was the son of Allah’. We can derive evidence for this from the Quran; we know the story(1) of the believer from the family of Pharaoh: ‘At that, a believing man of Pharaoh’s family, who (until then) had concealed his faith, exclaimed, “Would you slay a man because he says, ‘Allah is my Lord’ –when he has indeed brought you clear (signs) from your Lord? And if he be a liar, his lie will fall back on him; but if he is a man of truth, something (of the punishment) of which he warns you is bound to befall you: for, verily, Allah will not grace with His guidance one who has wasted his own self by lying. O my people! Yours is the kingdom this day, (and) you have the upper hand in the land…'" (Ghafir: 28-29).

(1) The story of the believer of the people of Pharaoh

Were all the people of Pharaoh Kings? No, only Pharaoh was king. But as long as Pharaoh was king, all those who followed him and supported him were also kings because they all lived under the care and patronage of the king. And Allah Glorified is He also said to the Jews that He: '…made you your own masters (muluk)…' (al-Ma'ida: 20) ('muluk', singular 'malik', which literally means 'king'). The scholars have tried to determine what the meaning of the word 'malik' is here: some say it means the man who owns a large house through which water flows; others say it means the man whose life is orderly and has servants to attend to him so that he does not have to serve himself in his own house, but when he is outside his house he serves himself; others say it means the one who is wealthy and does not need to work. And Sheikh' Abd Al-Jalil' Isa said about this, 'Do not find this strange, for even illiterate people say in their dialect that so-and-so is the "king of his time", meaning that he is a wealthy man of means who does not need to undertake hard work'. Consequently: 'Allah's children' does not necessarily mean that they are all His children, and therefore Allah told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say in response to them: '…Why, then, does He cause you to suffer for your sins? Nay, you are but human beings of His creating…' (al-Ma'ida: 18); and your forgiveness is subject to His Will: '…He forgives whom He wills, and He causes to suffer whom He wills…' (al-Ma'ida: 18). And you will always be subject to His Will to either forgive or punish: '…for to Allah belongs the dominion over the heavens and the earth and all that is between them, and to Him is the final end' (al-Ma'ida: 18).

After that, Allah Glorified is He proclaimed the true doctrine He intends for man:

يَٰٓأَهۡلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ قَدۡ جَآءَكُمۡ رَسُولُنَا يُبَيِّنُ لَكُمۡ عَلَىٰ فَتۡرَةٖ مِّنَ ٱلرُّسُلِ أَن تَقُولُواْ مَا جَآءَنَا
مِنۢ بَشِيرٖ وَلَا نَذِيرٖۖ فَقَدۡ جَآءَكُم بَشِيرٞ وَنَذِيرٞۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٞ ١٩

People of the Book, Our Messenger comes to you now, after a break in the sequence of messengers, to make things clear for you in case you should say, 'No one has come to give us good news or to warn us.' So someone has come to you, to give you good news and warn you: God has the power to do all things [19] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 19)

'Our Messenger' here means Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who has come first of all, O people of the Book, to tell you the truth about those things wherein you differ, and secondly those things which you must agree on; and as for those teachings which Islam added, it only added them because they were appropriate for the matters of life which man will face until the end of time. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent after a long period in which no Messengers appeared, meaning a time when the connection with heaven was suspended since no Divine Messages were revealed; this was the time between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his fellow Messenger, 'Isa peace be upon him. People have estimated this span to be six hundred years, or five hundred and sixty years; but the number of years is not important; what is of paramount importance is that there was a lapse of time during which no Messengers were sent. There is, however, a question concerning Allah's words: 'And set forth to them a parable–(the story of how) the people of a township (behaved) when (Our) Messengers came to them. Lo! We sent to them two (Messengers), but they disbelieved in them; and so we strengthened (the two) with a third. Then they said, "Indeed, we are Messengers (sent) to you (by Allah)!" (The others) answered, "You are nothing but mortal men like ourselves; moreover, the Most Gracious never sends any (type of revelation). You do nothing but lie!" Said (the Messengers), "Our Lord knows that indeed we are most surely Messengers (sent) to you"' (Ya Sin: 13-16).

Were these Messengers sent by Allah between Prophet 'Isa and Prophet Muhammad? Were they sent before 'Isa peace be upon him to the people of Antioch? At first, the people disbelieved these two Messengers, and therefore Allah supported them with a third.

And the people said to them: 'You are nothing but mortal men like ourselves; moreover, the Most Gracious never sends any (type of revelation). You do nothing but lie!' (Ya Sin: 15)The Messengers replied: '…Our Lord knows that indeed we are most surely Messengers (sent) to you' (Ya Sin: 16).

What is the difference between '…Indeed, we are Messengers (sent) to you…' (Ya Sin: 14) and: '…Our Lord knows that indeed we are most surely Messengers (sent) to you' (Ya Sin: 16)? Words are spoken in order to deliver a statement, and if the hearer is not acquainted with the topic, he can be addressed without any emphasis, but if he harbours a trace of doubt, he must be addressed with emphatic words, and the more his doubt increases the more emphatic the language must be. Allah Glorified is He sent two Messengers to the townspeople and they disbelieved them, and as a result, He strengthened them with a third, which was meant to add strength to their Message; after they had been two Messengers, Allah Glorified is He made them three, whereupon they said: '…Indeed, we are Messengers (sent) to you (by Allah)!' (Ya Sin: 14)

It is true that there is emphasis here because the sentence begins with 'Indeed', which is emphatic. And when they gave them the lie and said: '…You are nothing but mortal men like ourselves; moreover, the Most Gracious never sends any (type of revelation)…' (Ya Sin: 15), which was even more persistent denial on their part, what did the Messengers say? Would they say: '…Indeed, we are Messengers (sent) to you' (Ya Sin: 14), as they did the first time? No, for the denial had become even more pronounced and flagrant, and for this reason Allah placed an even more emphatic phrase into the mouths of the Messengers: '…Our Lord knows…' (Ya Sin: 16) which is akin to an oath, and is the first emphasis, while the second emphasis is: '…that indeed we are mostly surely Messengers (sent) to you' (Ya Sin: 16).

As we know, the Arabic particle' inna' (translated here as' indeed') is emphatic, and then the letter 'lam' (translated here as 'most surely') in front of the word 'mursalun' (Messengers) gives further emphasis.

We continue by saying when a word has many meanings, the meaning which links them all is the root meaning. In the case of the word 'fatra' (a long time), it basically means 'ending' or 'ceasing'. Here, (fatra) means 'ceasing'; and there was a time when revelation ceased to come and no Messengers were sent. This meant that the period of heedlessness was lengthened, and Allah's

Way was not clear for a long time and the people of goodness lived in dire need and longing for the revelation of a new Divine Way. Hence, when a Messenger finally did come, the people should have hastened to hear what he had to say. This is why Allah the Exalted tells us that He sent a Messenger after a long time during which no Messengers came; so if you are truly people of goodness, you should follow the way of guidance Allah Glorified is He brings and hasten to listen to what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has to say in order to hear his Message and his Mission.

Allah Glorified is He sent them Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him after a long suspension of Messengers in order that they will no longer be able to argue and proffer the excuse: '…No bearer of glad tidings has come to us, nor any warner…' (al-Ma'ida: 19); for now, indeed, a bearer of glad tidings and a warner had come to them. The bearer of glad tidings is the one who brings news of something which will come in the future; and as long as the one who comes is a bearer of glad tidings, he encourages the people to follow Allah's Way of life in order that they might attain goodness. There must be a period of time in which the people can practise the guided codes of Allah's Methodology; and there must likewise be a period of time wherein the misguided can drown more in there malicious unorthodox ways and thus bring evil to themselves.

This is like the teacher saying, 'Give those who study the glad tiding that they will succeed', whereupon those students who wish to succeed will study; that is, there must be a period of time for the glad tidings to be attained. And likewise, when a warning is given, there must be a period of time wherein one can avoid all that will bring him evil.

'…Now, after a long time during which no Messengers have appeared, there has come to you Our Messenger to make (the Truth) clear to you, lest you say, "No bearer of glad tidings has come to us, nor any warner…"' (al-Ma'ida: 19). The words 'lest you say' show that there is no longer any opportunity to offer the excuse: '…No bearer of glad tidings has come to us, or any warner…' (al-Ma'ida: 19).

Then Allah Glorified is He says: '…for now there has come to you a bearer of glad tidings and a warner–since Allah has the power over all things' (al-Ma'ida: 19). Allah Glorified is He is All-Powerful. He brought mankind into a universe which was precisely ordered and contained all the means to goodness and life in the best possible and organised way before man came to it. And once man had come into all this goodness, would his Creator leave him without any guidance? No; for He Glorified is He was well able to bring all His creatures into existence and give them all that preserves their life and their species. Furthermore, would Allah Glorified is He, not also give them all that preserves their moral values?

He the Exalted is well able to provide us with both material as well as moral sustenance and to give generously to His creatures in every way; and sending the Messengers was one of the techniques by which the Almighty provided for mankind for them to preserve their values.

Allah Glorified is He then turns again to the people of Musa (Moses), but this time Prophet Musa peace be upon him was the speaker:

وَإِذْ قَالَ مُوسَىٰ لِقَوْمِهِۦ يَٰقَوْمِ ٱذْكُرُوا۟ نِعْمَةَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيْكُمْ إِذْ جَعَلَ فِيكُمْ
أَنۢبِيَآءَ وَجَعَلَكُم مُّلُوكًا وَءَاتَىٰكُم مَّا لَمْ يُؤْتِ أَحَدًا مِّنَ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٢٠﴾

Moses said to his people, 'My people, remember God's blessing on you: how He raised prophets among you and appointed kings for you and gave you what he had not given to any other people [20] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 20)

When you hear the Arabic word 'idh' (take heed and remember), know that it implies an adverb of time meaning 'when', as though Allah is saying, 'Take heed and remember when Musa (Moses) said to his people: "…Remember the blessings which Allah bestowed upon you…"' (al-Ma'ida: 20) Allah Glorified is He said this to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as a reminder to aid Prophet Muhammad to endure the hardships he incurred in communicating the Divine Message, whether from the atheists or from the people of the Book.

When Allah the Exalted says: 'Take heed and remember (that), Musa (Moses) said to his people…' (al-Ma'ida: 20), it is a reminder to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him his followers or whoever reads the Quran, that Musa peace be upon him said to his people: '…O my people!

Remember the blessings which Allah bestowed upon you…' (al-Ma'ida: 20) And Musa peace be upon him would not have said: '…O my people! Remember the blessings which Allah bestowed upon you…' (al-Ma'ida: 20) had he not seen them act in a way that does not match the blessings bestowed on them. Allah is far Exalted above any comparison, but an example to illustrate this point, which is only for clarification, is when one of us scolds an ungrateful son, 'Remember all that your father has done for you'. No one says this unless the son has committed inapposite acts that are not suitable for the large amount of favours given by his father. It is as though Musa's people had subjected him to much toil and woe to the point that he said this to them in order to rebuke them and make them come to their senses and remember the blessings Allah Glorified is He had given them; and to remember blessings means to follow Allah's Methodology by obeying His commandments and steering clear of all that He forbids.

'Take heed and remember (that) Musa (Moses) said to his people, "O my people! Remember the blessings which Allah bestowed upon you…" (al-Ma'ida: 20). We know that the word 'ni'ma' (literally' blessing', in the singular) means 'blessings' as a class, meaning all blessings in total; or it may be that each individual blessing in itself was worthy and deserving of remembrance and gratitude. The proof that the word 'ni'ma' can mean all blessings in total is that Allah says: '…and should you try to count Allah's blessings (ni'ma), you will never be able to count them…' (Ibrahim: 34). As long as the blessings are countless, this must mean that they are many, which means that the word 'ni'ma' here means all blessings as a class. 'Take heed and remember (that) Musa (Moses) said to his people, "O my people! Remember the blessings which Allah bestowed upon you…" (al-Ma'ida: 20). To remember blessings means to be grateful to the Bestower, and also to be ashamed to disobey Him or make use of any of these blessings in a prohibited way that will bring about Allah's wrath. 'Remember the blessings which Allah bestowed upon you', and there are many blessings which you enjoy. Did Allah not part the sea for them: 'Strike the sea with your staff' (ash-Shu'ara': 63). And when he struck the water with the staff: '…it parted, and each part appeared like a huge mountain' (ash-Shu'ara': 63).

The flowing water became like a mountain. And he struck the rock for them and, by Allah's Command, water flowed from it: '"…Strike the rock with your staff!"–whereupon twelve springs gushed forth from it…' (al-Baqara: 60).

There were many miracles which manifested the Powerful Ability of the Supreme Creator, and this Powerful Ability is illustrated in many different ways. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him struck the sea and it parted, each side becoming like a great mountain, as though the water were rock; and Musa peace be upon him struck the rock and water gushed forth from it. These were wonders that resulted from Allah's Powerful Ability. And did He Glorified is He not shade you with clouds? Did He not send down to you manna and quails in the midst of the wilderness? And do these blessings not behove that you remember Allah and give thanks to Him, and be ashamed to disobey Him or persecute Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who has come to guide you?

All of these blessings merited gratitude, and gratitude means remembrance. '…Remember the blessings which Allah bestowed upon you when he raised up prophets among you, and made you your own masters…' (al-Ma'ida: 20). Whenever they were overcome by heedlessness, Allah sent them a prophet as a role model. He Glorified is He did not get infuriated with them and say: 'I sent them a Messenger, and then two, three, and four, but they have chosen not to be guided'. Rather, every time they disobeyed Allah the Exalted and their ailments aggravated, He sent another Messenger to guide them. They are like the sick person whose family does not suffice with one, two, three, or four doctors, but rather, every time they see something wrong, they call another doctor for him. This was a great blessing, for Allah Glorified is He sent them many Messengers, but they should have realised that their ailments had become manifold and that their disease was terminal; for had it not been terminal, they did not need all those doctors and prophets.

Interestingly enough Allah the Exalted did not only raise prophets from among them, but as He Glorified is He says He also: 'made you your own masters' ('muluk', which literally means 'kings'). This does not mean that they all became kings, but rather that, some of them were kings. The word 'malik' has come to have the political meaning of a 'king': but generally speaking, every man is the owner (maalik) of what is in his possession; the owner of his clothes, the morsel of food he eats, and the house in which he sleeps–and the 'malik' (master) is the one who possesses (yamlik) and rules (also 'yamlik') over others who possess as well.

So everyone who has the ability to possess something and to rule over others who possess things is considered a 'master'. A man who has shepherds working for him to tend his livestock, people who serve him in his house, people who farm his land, more than one driver, many people who obey his orders and only come to him when he permits, but when meeting them, he does not experience any trouble or exert any effort–such a man is certainly a 'master'. Allah, indeed, bestowed them in abundance.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him specified what it means to possess abundance according to the standards of a true believer, saying, 'If one wakes in the morning to find himself safe, healthy and having enough provisions for his day, it is as though he has been given the entire world.'

As long as he has been given the entire world by possessing these things, he is a master; and since Allah the Most High gave them these things, He made them masters.'…And (Allah) granted to you (favours) such as He had not granted to anyone else in the world' (al-Ma'ida: 20). That is, Allah the Exalted gave them that which none of their contemporaries were given, and continued to give it to them. Did He not give His prophet Solomon, who was of the children of Israel, dominion which was never given to anyone else after him? Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did not mention this fact here, since it did not happen until ten generations after his time.

Allah Glorified is He and then says:

يَٰقَوۡمِ ٱدۡخُلُواْ ٱلۡأَرۡضَ ٱلۡمُقَدَّسَةَ ٱلَّتِي كَتَبَ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمۡ وَلَا
تَرۡتَدُّواْ عَلَىٰٓ أَدۡبَارِكُمۡ فَتَنقَلِبُواْ خَٰسِرِينَ ﴿٢١﴾

My people, go into the holy land which God has ordained for you — do not turn back or you will be the losers' [21]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 21)

Musa peace be upon him was conveying here what Allah had revealed to him; and when did this take place? We know that the children of Israel had had a connection with Egypt since the time of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him and that Yusuf peace be upon him brought his father and brothers to live in Egypt, and from them were formed the Tribe of Israel. Allah the Exalted miraculously extended Yusuf's hegemony over the land so that they dwelled there for a time. It is amazing how precisely the Quran relates these historic events even though we did not come to learn about them until the French military campaign came to Egypt. The French came with a scientific delegation, and this delegation uncovered archaeological information which briefed them much on the ancient Egyptian civilisation and the advances which the Arabs had made many centuries before Europe; and Europe gained many sciences and arts from this at the very time the Arab world was falling into decline and ignorance.

The Muslim Arabs had invented things which astonished the Western world; history tells us how one of the Arab kings(1) sent the French king Charlemagne a gift of a clock, and the French people thought that there was a demon in the clock. The way the clock worked was amazing as the scientist who invented it placed a tube of water inside it which had a small hole from which drops fell onto something resembling the hand of a clock, which caused the clock to advance by a single minute. The clock was thus powered by water droplets and it was extremely accurate, and when the people in Charlemagne's court saw it, they thought it had demons inside it. This is one single example from many other examples which are beyond counting, all of which manifest Allah's words:

'In time we shall show them our signs (through what they see) in the utmost horizons (of the universe) and within themselves, until it becomes quite clear to them that this (Revelation) is indeed the Truth…' (Fussilat: 53).

And when the French came to Cairo, they brought with them this scientific delegation together with a printing press. Those scientists gave a presentation of a magic lantern and made simple people marvel at their scientific advancement; but this campaign was hidden behind displays which were more like' acrobatics'. The job of the scientists was to investigate the secret of the Egyptian and Islamic civilisations; for they knew that the Islamic civilisation had been transferred to Egypt and the ancient Egyptian civilisation was also once established there.

(1) The story of the clock offered by the Arab king to the French king, Charlemagne

They would exhibit their scientific displays and conjuring tricks at Darb Al-Gamamiz, with the intention of causing the people to marvel at the French civilisation. At the very same time, their scientists were unravelling what was carved on the Rosetta stone, a stone which was inscribed with hieroglyphics and whose mysteries were uncovered by a young Frenchman named Champollion. Champollion was able to identify the names in the hieroglyphic text and thus to decipher the alphabet of the language; it is as though Allah wanted to use those who disbelieve in His religion to serve His religion.

In language, the pronunciation of proper nouns is fixed; that is, if a man or a prince has a name, this name is composed of unchangeable letters. Let us consider an example in the English language: there was once an English prime minister named' Churchill', but if we were to translate this name literally into Arabic it would no longer refer to this man and would not indicate his identity to us; what we actually do is leave the name as it is and transliterate it by writing it with Arabic letters instead of Roman ones. To conclude, the pronunciation of proper names is fixed.

Champollion discovered that there were unchanged letters on the Stone. In this way he was able to decipher the hieroglyphic alphabet and thus to read what was written on the Rosetta Stone, and then present to us the first discoveries of the history of ancient Egypt by reading what was written on the Stone.

Moreover, we can see the magnificence of the Quran when it relates the stories of historic figures: it relates the civilisations of ‘Ad, Thamud, and Pharaoh in the chapter of al-Fajr; Allah Glorified is He says: ‘I swear by the daybreak, and the ten nights! By all that is even and all that is odd! And by the night as it runs its course! Is there (not) in all this evidence for those endowed with reason (that Allah is able to punish the ungodly)? Are you not aware of how your Lord has dealt with (the tribe of) ‘Ad, (the people of) Iram, the nation of lofty pillars’ (al-Fajr: 1-7).

Iram, the nation of lofty pillars, dwelled in the Arab Peninsula. They have still not been discovered, and until now we know nothing about them; Allah the Exalted says about the pillars: 'the like of which has never been created in all the lands' (al-Fajr: 8). And Allah Glorified is He speaks of Pharaoh: 'and with Pharaoh (lord) of (many) stakes' (al-Fajr: 10). The pyramids indeed were built with the use of stakes, as were the ancient Egyptian obelisks and temples, and the other wonders which have amazed people across the ages. 'The like of which has never been created in all the lands' (al-Fajr: 8).

And Allah Glorified is He speaks of the civilisation of Thamud: 'and with (the tribe of) Thamud, who hollowed out (huge) rocks in the valley' (al-Fajr: 9). We have seen this civilisation wherein the people hewed their dwellings out of solid rock, just as we have seen the civilisation of Egypt. The civilisation of 'Ad is the one which, to this day, we have not seen; it must lie buried beneath the earth.(1) We know that in these places a single sandstorm can bury an entire caravan, so we can imagine what the long centuries which have passed, and the thousands of sandstorms which have blown, must have done. We will surely have to dig very deep to unravel the civilisation of 'Ad. Allah called the ancient Egyptian civilisation: '…Pharaoh (lord) of (many) stakes' (al-Fajr: 10); and when Allah Glorified is He spoke about Musa (Moses) peace be upon him He also spoke about his contemporaries, among whom were the Pharaohs. And He the Exalted said to Musa and his brother Aaron peace be upon them: 'Go forth, both of you, to Pharaoh: for, verily, he has transgressed all bounds!' (Ta Ha: 43)

As a result, Musa peace be upon him went to Pharaoh to free the children of Israel from his tyranny; but why did Pharaoh wreak tyranny upon them? We know that every new regime tries to annihilate the one which ruled before it and punish those who supported the old regime, and this is clear to us when we look at the world. The matter becomes clear to us when we remember the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him who became a minister to the ruler of Egypt and who brought his parents and his tribe to settle there; and the story of Pharaoh was not mentioned in the chapter of Yusuf.

When the Quran speaks of the ruler of Egypt at the time of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him, it says: 'And the King said, "Bring him to me…"'

(1) From the proofreader: The location of the city of 'Ad has since been discovered by photographs taken from the NASA Space Shuttle in 1990.

(Yusuf: 54). Allah Glorified is He does not call the ruler ‘Pharaoh’: even though He used the word ‘Pharaoh’ to refer to the ruler at the time of Musa. In the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He does not say ‘Pharaoh’, but rather, He mentions’ King’. When the Rosetta Stone was discovered, we found out that at the time when Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him was in Egypt, the land was ruled by the so-called ‘Shepherd-Kings’, the Hyksos who invaded Egypt and seized it from the Egyptians and became their kings; and their dynasty was called the ‘Dynasty of Kings’.

The Quran relates, ‘the King said, “Bring him to me”’ (Yusuf: 54), and does not call the ruler ‘Pharaoh’. For this reason, when the Pharaohs reclaimed their rule and expelled the Shepherd Kings from the land, the Pharaohs sought to exterminate those who had served the kings, namely the children of Israel. The precision of the Quran can be clearly seen by how it calls the ruler at the time of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him’ Pharaoh’, yet calls the ruler at the time of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him ‘King’. These are things which have only recently been discovered, but the Quran told us of them; such matters needed to be discovered, and they are some of the innumerable signs of which Allah Glorified is He says: ‘In time We shall show them Our signs (through what they see) in the utmost horizons (of the universe) and within themselves…’ (Fussilat: 53).

Then, after He Glorified is He aided Musa (Moses) peace be upon him with His signs and drowned Pharaoh, Musa peace be upon him said to them: ‘O my people! Enter the holy land which Allah has promised you; but do not turn back (on your faith), for then you turn back as losers!’ (al-Ma’ida: 21)

The mission to free the children of Israel from Pharaoh had been accomplished, and the Egyptian people got rid of Pharaoh; and now the children of Israel were bidden to enter the Holy Land. The word for ‘land’ in Arabic is ‘al-ard’, and if this word is used in a general sense it means ‘the earth’, as in the name for the entire planet earth. The word ‘al-ard’ is used many times in the story of the children of Israel, in many different circumstances.

Allah Glorified is He says at the end of the chapter of al-Isra’: ‘and after that we said to the children of Israel, “Dwell now securely on earth…”’ (al-Isra’: 104).

Is it possible to dwell anywhere but on earth? No one says 'Dwell here' unless he is referring to a specific place on earth because all dwelling takes place on earth; so how could Allah Glorified is He say: '…Dwell now securely on earth…' (al-Isra': 104)? The usual thing is to say, 'Dwell in such-and-such a place', such as Al-Mansura, Jericho or Jerusalem. Allah's Command: 'Dwell now securely on earth' is a subtle eloquent point that Allah uses in the Quran; and as long as Allah Glorified is He did not specify a particular place on earth, it is as though He is saying, 'Disperse on earth, for you have no homeland; wander the earth and settle nowhere', that is, never settle in one place, but rather wander the earth, dispersed. Allah Glorified is He also says: 'And we dispersed them as (separate) communities throughout the earth…' (al-A'raf: 168).

When the Quran states a certain point, we should investigate its conformity to worldly matters. What the Quran states here is that the children of Israel would disperse throughout the earth in separate communities, i.e. they would be divided and scattered. Allah Glorified is He did not say 'We integrated them (with other societies)' but rather: 'We dispersed them', i.e. He kept them connected to one another, but in groups dispersed through the lands. When we look at any place where they have settled, we find that they always have their own quarters, that they never integrate with the inhabitants of the land, and that they have their own independent means of living. It is as though they are dispersed and scattered throughout the earth; they are still communities, and there are' ghettos' or special places for Jews in every land.

This happened after the time of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him but what were they commanded to do at the time of Musa? Allah the Exalted said to them: '…Enter the holy land which Allah has promised you…' (al-Ma'ida: 21) That is, now that you have escaped from Pharaoh, go to the land which Allah has appointed for you. We may observe here that the words 'the holy land' serve to specify and identify the land in question.

But what does 'holy' mean? The word in Arabic is 'muqaddasa' the root of which is (q-d-s) is connected to the notion of purity and purification. The verb 'qaddasa' means 'to clean and purify', and 'muqaddasa' means 'cleansed'. When words are derived from a single root, they all have interconnected meanings; and when we say 'muqaddasa', this means 'purified'.

One of Allah’s names is Al-Quddus (The All-Holy), and the phrase ‘quddisa Allah’ means ‘Allah is beyond all likeness’: Allah’s Being is not like man’s being, and His attributes are beyond any resemblance to your attributes; He Glorified is He has actions, but in His holiness and purity His actions are beyond any resemblance to your actions. Allah’s Being is Necessary, while man’s being is only possible because man’s being was preceded by non-existence and will be followed by non-existence; Allah’s Being is Necessary in Itself, while man’s being is only necessary because Allah the Exalted has made it like this, and He is well able to end it. Allah has life and man has life, but is your life like Allah’s? Certainly not!

Allah’s life is beyond any resemblance, and His Being is not like yours, and nor are His attributes. You have limited power, while Allah Glorified is He has Omnipotent Power; He hears, and His slave hears, but man’s hearing is limited, while His hearing is unlimited.

His Attributes are holy, and when you hear that Allah Glorified is He hears and knows, His Hearing is not like our hearing, and His Actions are not like our actions. When Allah says that He acts, His Action is beyond any resemblance to human action; for man is Allah’s Creation, and human actions require time and effort, having a beginning, middle, and end and taking up a certain amount of time. We carry things over periods of time, and those who carry them must have strength; but Allah’s Actions are unique, for He acts by saying ‘Be!’ He the Most High says: ‘And we have indeed created the heavens and the earth and all that is between them in six periods, and no weariness ever touched Us’ (Qaf: 38).

That is, Allah Glorified is He is absolved of ever experiencing tiredness, for He needs only say ‘Be!’ –and it is. Therefore, when we give the account of the Night Journey, we must ascribe this event to Allah, not to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in order for it to be clear that those who disbelieved Prophet Muhammad concerning the matter of the Night Journey were wrong. They said, ‘We flog our camels for a month to reach it, and you claim to have gone there in a single night!’

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not claim this for himself, and he did not say, ‘I went from Mecca to Jerusalem’ which would have given them cause to say' We flog our camels for a month to reach it, and you claim to have gone there in a single night!' Rather, he peace and blessings be upon him said, 'I was taken'. That is, he was not the one who made it happen, but rather, Allah Glorified is He made it happen. And as long as it was Allah's Action, it did not require any time at all, and therefore they should have understood exactly to what they were objecting. But we know that Allah Glorified is He wanted them to understand it like this because certain so-called intellectuals have emerged in our times who say, 'The Night Journey was only in spirit'. To them, we say, 'By Allah had Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to the Arabs, 'I went in spirit alone', would they have disbelieved him? It is just like when someone says, 'I was in New York last night: I saw it in my dreams'. Would anyone disbelieve him? No. The Arabs did not believe him because they understood that he was claiming to have been 'taken' according to the complete meaning of the word: by body and spirit together. This is proved by the fact that they compared one action to another and one event to another and one journey to another, and they said what we have just quoted. Consequently, this matter served to aid Islam.

So the word (Quddus) means 'purified and far removed from any imperfections'. Whenever you see something which seems unbelievable, judge it according to Allah's action Glorified is He not your own action as a human being; for actions are proportionate with the power of the one who performs them. If the one who performs the action possesses great power, then it will take less time. For example, consider moving a certain amount of wheat from one place to another: if the one who lifts the wheat is a child, he will have to move it one sheaf at a time, whilst if he is a full grown man, he will move it one bale at a time and if he is especially capable, he might carry it all in one trip. So the time an action takes is inversely proportionate to the power of the one who does it: the greater the power, the less time is needed. So if an action is performed by Allah Almighty's Omnipotent Power, it will take no time at all.

So Allah Glorified is He is Sacred in every way; and this was what the True Lord willed, just as He willed that a certain place on earth be the Inviolable Sanctuary, wherein it is forbidden to hunt, cut trees, or harm people. The point is to determine whether this is a natural law or a legislative law? ‘Have they not seen that we made (Mecca) a safe sanctuary?’ (al-’Ankabut: 67) If it were a natural law, then it would have never been violated and no one would ever have harmed anyone else. So what is the difference between a natural law and a legislative law? Natural laws exist because nothing can stop the inevitable. The True Lord might want one person to be tall, and this is a natural law in which the person plays no part; but if the True Lord wants you to be obedient and to pray, this is a legislative law. The legislative law of Allah Glorified is He covers those things wherein man has free will and can choose whether to obey or not. Natural law, on the contrary, covers those things wherein man has no free will and which inevitably befall him whether he likes it or not.

Allah Glorified is He wants the Sanctuary to be secure, which is a legislative law because there have been occasions when people have been attacked therein and their security has been violated. Had it been a natural law, this would have never happened. Therefore, it is a sacred law, and if we obey our Lord we will make the Sanctuary secure, but if we do not obey Him, those who disobey will assault people therein and terrorise them. Allah’s Will, as a commandment of legislative law, is that the Sanctuary be made secure.

‘O my people, enter the Holy Land which Allah has assigned to you’ (al-Ma’ida: 21). So the question is, did Allah Glorified is He promise this land to them as a natural law or as a legislative law? If it was a natural law, then they would have inevitably entered it; but He said: ‘it is forbidden to them.’ (al-Ma’ida: 26)

So it was a commandment of legislative law, not a declaration of natural law. If they were to obey the commandment of Allah Almighty, find their courage to enter the holy land, then they would take it, otherwise it would be forbidden. So there is no contradiction between His promise to give them the land and making it forbidden to them. He promised it to them as a commandment of legislative law which would have been achievable had they entered it boldly without fear of those within it, trusting that they had the support of Allah the Almighty; but since they had not done so, it has been made forbidden to them.

'O my people, enter the Holy Land which Allah has assigned to you and do not turn back (from fighting in Allah's Cause) and (thus) become losers.' (al-Ma'ida: 21) That land is mentioned more than once: 'And We said after Pharaoh to the children of Israel, 'Dwell in the land.' (al-Isra': 104)

We have already seen what these words meant. The precision here is that He Glorified is He commanded the children of Israel to dwell anywhere on earth and it was their destiny to be scattered and dispersed. 'And when there comes the promise of the Hereafter, We will bring you forth in (one) gathering' (al-Isra': 104) That is, He will gather them from every land, after which the second promise will be fulfilled, as it was stated at the beginning of the chapter of al-Isra': 'And We conveyed to the children of Israel in the Scripture that, 'You will surely cause corruption on the earth twice, and you will surely reach (a degree of) great haughtiness.' (al-Isra': 4)

For when the True Lord said: 'Glorified is He who took His Servant by night from Al-Masjid Al-Haram to Al-Masjid Al- Aqsa, whose surroundings We have blessed, to show him of Our signs. Indeed, He is the Hearing, the Seeing.' (al-Isra': 1) This entails that by this verse, He Glorified is He includes the Aqsa Mosque among the holy sites of Islam. And the True Lord clarified to them: 'O Jews, you shall live in a certain place and make a treaty with My Messenger, but you will corrupt the place in which you live and the people will bear you once or twice, after which Allah shall unleash His servants upon you; and they shall go amongst your houses and banish you from this land.'

And the True Lord tells us that He informed the children of Israel in their scriptures of what would happen to them when Islam came: 'And We conveyed to the children of Israel in the Scripture that, 'You will surely cause corruption on the earth twice, and you will surely reach (a degree of) great haughtiness. (4) So when the (time of) promise came for the first of them, We sent against you servants of Ours – those of great military might, and they probed (even) into the homes, and it was a promise fulfilled. (5)' (al-Isra': 4-5)

Some people say that this refers to the days of Nebuchadnezzar, but we say to them: You must understand the words of The True Lord when He says: 'So when the (time of) promise came for the first of them' correctly. The word 'promise' does not refer to something which happened before one spoke, but rather, it refers to something which will happen after speaking. So this does not refer to the time of Nebuchadnezzar and the 'time' at the start of the sentence refers to something which will happen in the future, i.e. after these words are spoken. Moreover, was Nebuchadnezzar one of the servants of Allah Almighty? The words of The True Lord 'servants of Ours' mean the forces of faith, and Nebuchadnezzar was a Persian Zoroastrian.

These wise words actually refer to the first troubles the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him experienced when they broke the treaty he had made with them, so he banished them. And was this the end of the matter?

We might ask: Did the children of Israel only spread corruption on earth twice? No, compared to what they actually did, two is only the least. The corruption they spread on earth which is mentioned here must refer to what they did in the land ruled by Islam. And He Glorified is He says: '…We sent against you servants of Ours – those of great military might,' so as long as there are Allah's 'servants' who have true faith and make proper preparations, the promise of Allah the Almighty will inevitably come true; but if the people fall short of this description, then those who suffer the corruption of the children of Israel will encounter the truth of Allah's words: 'Then We gave back to you a return victory over them.' (al-Isra': 6)

So they will not be allowed to prevail once again unless the believers do not live up to their faith. And if some people ask, 'Why, O Allah, would You allow the children of Israel to prevail once again?' The answer is: because you people have fallen short of the requirements of true service to Allah Glorified is He. As long as we are not true servants to Allah the Almighty, we will inevitably have to experience the long history of transgression of the children of Israel with which we are all familiar. Now we are facing the Jews in the midst of the manifestation of Allah's words 'Then We gave back to you a return victory over them.' And if we are true servants to Allah the Almighty, they will not be able to harm us. And also for pilgrimage and also for pilgrimage Were life to continue without the Jews being allowed to have the upper hand over us, even though we had lost our way and all started following our desires, this would mean that what the Quran said was not correct. But of course, life's continuum inevitably came to show that the Quran indeed is correct. This is why when the news that the Jews had entered Jerusalem reached one of those who has sound knowledge of Allah Glorified is He and whom we hold to be close to Allah Almighty, he prostrated to Allah Almighty. We said, 'Are you prostrating to Allah Glorified is He because the Jews have taken Jerusalem?' He said: 'Yes, for our Lord spoke the truth when He said: 'to enter the temple in Jerusalem, as they entered it the first time.' (al-Isra': 7) Could they enter it a second time if they had not been expelled from it a first time? This man who had sound knowledge of Allah Glorified is He praised our Lord because real-life events confirmed the truth of the Quran.

Allah Almighty says: 'and made you more numerous (than ever).' They (the Jews) are rich because they control most of the economic movement in the modern world. All of them are military reserves. This is what' and made you more numerous (than ever)' means. The Jews are not powerful because of their state alone, but because they are supported by the most powerful nation in the modern world. In short, what Allah Almighty said: 'Then We gave back to you a return victory over them. And We reinforced you with wealth and sons and made you more numerous in manpower,' proved true.

After this, Allah Glorified is He pronounces His final verdict and says to the Jews: (And said), 'If you do good, you do good for yourselves' (al-'Isra': 7) And will they continue to prevail, O' Lord? No, because the True Lord says: 'and if you do evil, (you do it) to yourselves. Then when the final promise came, (We sent your enemies) to sadden your faces.' (al-Isra': 7) It is as though the True Lord is giving us the glad tidings that we shall be victorious, as long as we fulfil Allah's requirement that we be true servants to Him, whereupon He will ease the fulfilment of His promise to the Jews: 'to sadden your faces.'

The noblest part of a man is his face. When we are true servants to Allah Almighty, we shall 'mar their faces'. There is even more: 'and to enter the temple in Jerusalem, as they entered it the first time and to destroy what they had taken over with (total) destruction.'

The True Lord had not mentioned the Temple up to this point, but rather, this is what He said: 'And We conveyed to the children of Israel in the Scripture that, 'You will surely cause corruption on the earth twice and you will surely reach (a degree of) great haughtiness. (4) So when the (time of) promise came for the first of them, We sent against you servants of Ours – those of great military might and they probed (even) into the homes and it was a promise fulfilled. (5)' (al-Isra': 4-5)

So the True Lord did not mention the Temple here at first; so how will we enter it? We entered the Aqsa Mosque for the first time when Islam spread under the rule of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab. During his caliphate, the Aqsa Mosque was not under Jewish control, but rather, under Byzantine control; so the first time we entered the mosque, they were totally out of the picture. But here the True Lord speaks of the second time now that the Mosque is under the control of the children of Israel. So we shall be true servants to Allah Almighty, of great prowess in war and we shall enter the Aqsa Mosque as we entered it before. The True Lord speaks of the Mosque here because the first time we entered the Mosque it was not an abasement of the Jews, but rather as we said, it was under the control of the Byzantine Empire. The True Lord then adds: 'and to destroy what they had taken over with (total) destruction.' In order to destroy what they raised, there must first pass some time for them to build giant buildings.

In the verses of the chapter of al-Ma'ida which we are currently examining, the True Lord tells us some of what He told Musa (Moses) to tell his people after they came out of Egypt: 'O my people, enter the Holy Land which Allah has assigned to you and do not turn back (from fighting in Allah's Cause) and (thus) become losers.' (al-Ma'ida: 21)

The True Lord's words 'but do not turn back' explain to us the natural human impulse which comes into effect when one must face the enemy. When a man faces his enemy, he must turn his face towards theirs. When the enemy flees, he turns his back. A man turns his back in battle for one of two reasons: either to go and join another troop to boost their strength and aid them in defeating the enemy; or to make some kind of ruse with the intention of returning to fight the enemy; or else he turns his back to flee, which is blameworthy and considered one of the deadly sins. Concerning this, the True Lord says: 'And whoever turns his back to them on such a day, unless swerving (as a strategy) for war or joining (another) company, has certainly returned with anger (upon him) from Allah and his refuge is Hell – and wretched is the destination.' (al-Anfal: 16)

To turn one's back in battle is not blameworthy if one intends thereby to make a ruse or to ambush the enemy. If this is the case, there is nothing wrong with turning one's back – but otherwise, it is blameworthy. Does turning one's back mean to move backwards, whilst still keeping one's face turned towards the enemy? Or does it mean to turn oneself around and flee from the enemy? Both are possible. The children of Israel were commended not to flee and to enter the land. How was their response given that this promise was a legislative law?

قَالُواْ يَٰمُوسَىٰٓ إِنَّ فِيهَا قَوۡمٗا جَبَّارِينَ وَإِنَّا لَن نَّدۡخُلَهَا حَتَّىٰ يَخۡرُجُواْ
مِنۡهَا فَإِن يَخۡرُجُواْ مِنۡهَا فَإِنَّا دَٰخِلُونَ ٢٢

They said, 'Moses, there is a fearsome people in this land.
We will not go there until they leave. If they leave, then we will enter' [22] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 22)

How could they openly rebel against the commandment of the True Lord in this way? And how did they know that ferocious people dwelt in this land? We should remember that the True Lord said before: 'We delegated from among them twelve leaders.' (al-Ma'ida: 12)

So the leaders went first, scouted, spied, and learned information about this holy land. They learned it and contained the huge giants (Amalekites) of Canaan; and when they saw these people, they said to themselves: 'Could we possibly fight these people? This is impossible; we shall not enter the land as long as they are there.' So they capitulated and turned their back and fled.' They said, 'O Musa (Moses), indeed within it is a people of tyrannical strength' (al-Ma'ida: 22).

The Arabic word for 'tyrannical' is (jabbar) and this is an abstract concept derived from a concrete root. The root word (jabbara) means a date palm the fruits of which are too high for a person to pick with his hand stretched out, when the palm's fruits are within the reach of one's hand, whilst when they are too high to reach, it is called (jabbara). This word (jabbar) was then taken to refer someone who cannot be defeated. It can also mean someone who practices coercion but for a good cause. For example, the Egyptian title for the person who sets broken bones is (mujbirati) because he forces the bones to go back to their normal places; and this might cause the patient pain, but it is good for him.

And (al-Jabbar) ('The All-Compelling') is a Name of Allah Almighty because He conquers all and cannot be conquered and He might force us to do something for our own good. He tests us with trials in order to purify us and give our lives balance. So (al-Jabbar) is one of the True Lord's attributes of perfection because He uses His power of compulsion for good and vanquishes the evildoers, the haughty, and the arrogant, which benefits those who are good and righteous. And He Glorified is He cannot be vanquished; so those on his side cannot be defeated by anyone. But if a human being is a (jabbar) (tyrant), this is blameworthy because his claim of invincibility has nothing to back it up, like a hollow building. The one who makes a show of invincibility might get something as small as a headache and be forced to lie down because of the pain. We see examples of this in our lives. We find that a person who acts as though he is invincible might have a heart attack and be taken to hospital. Another might get a stomachache and runs off holding his belly so that even children laugh at him. They might say to him: 'Go away, you are not invincible or strong or anything for that matter!' If someone really wants to be invincible, he should be so at all times so that you never see him act in any other way; and endless strength and invincibility belong to none but Allah Glorified is He.

The True Lord continues: 'we will never enter it until they leave it.' When you hear the word 'never' coming before a verb, you know that this is forever, at which case they have decided that they will never enter that land. Yet, when attached with' until' it becomes conditional, at which case their entrance is happening provided that the tyrannical people leave.' But if they leave it, then we will enter.' If a nation inclines towards evil and indulges in it, does this mean there cannot be any good in it? No, because the True Lord preserves some elements of goodness so that it cannot be completely snuffed out; and the True Lord makes it clear that this was the case with the children of Israel, for when they said this to Musa (Moses), two men among them demurred:

قَالَ رَجُلَانِ مِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ يَخَافُونَ أَنْعَمَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيْهِمَا ٱدْخُلُوا۟ عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلْبَابَ
فَإِذَا دَخَلْتُمُوهُ فَإِنَّكُمْ غَٰلِبُونَ ۚ وَعَلَى ٱللَّهِ فَتَوَكَّلُوٓا۟ إِن كُنتُم مُّؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٢٣﴾

Yet two men whom God had blessed among those who were afraid said, 'Go in to them through the gate and when you go in you will overcome them. If you are true believers, put your trust in God' [23] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 23)

They were two men who feared to disobey Allah Glorified is He, whilst the rest of the children of Israel, as a group, did not understand Allah Almighty properly. Had they obeyed the commandment of Allah Glorified is He to them in the Holy Land without disobeying it, Allah Almighty would have allowed them to enter successfully. But none of them understood the will of Allah Almighty properly except for two men, who were named Caleb and Joshua, son of Nun. One of them was from the tribe of Judah and the other from the tribe of Ephraim, both of whom were sons of Joseph peace be upon him. These two men said: 'As long as Allah Almighty has promised us that you will enter, He is only asking us to strive a little.'

When Allah Almighty commands one to do something, it is enough for him to begin this work with a sound intention and then Allah Almighty will help him with it. Allah Glorified is He says to His servant: 'I am as my servant thinks of me, and I am with him when he invokes me. If he invokes Me to himself, I invoke him to Myself; and if he invokes Me in a gathering, I invoke him in a better gathering; and if he draws a hand's span nearer to Me, I draw an arm's length nearer to Him; and if he draws an arm's length nearer to me, I draw a fathom's length nearer to him; and if he comes to Me walking, I go to him at speed.'(1)

So, if it is tiresome to walk, Allah Almighty does not want those who walk for His sake to become weary. He sends His grace and mercy to them at speed; for the first priority is that the deed be yours, O servant of Allah. One of the wonders of Allah Almighty's grace is that He does the deed and then ascribes it to you and He rejoices to see His servant come to Him. Let me give an example to illustrate this – and Allah Almighty is beyond compare – suppose you want to hold a sword: why do you not analyse the matter? The sword which you grasp is made of iron and you got this iron from within the earth. The True Lord said: ‘And we sent down iron, wherein is great military might and benefits for the people’ (al-Hadid: 25).

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim.

The True Lord is the One who sent down iron. He is the One who taught us how to melt it and shape it with fire: ‘And we taught him the fashioning of coats of armour to protect you from your (enemy in) battle.’ (al-Anbiya’: 80)

I would like the physiologists to tell us: when a man grasps something, say a sword, what muscles does he use to do this? And how does he tell his muscles to do this? And how many muscles and nerves are involved in this action? Despite all this, all a man has to do to grasp something is to make the intention and desire to grasp it and he will do so. And when a man takes a single step, which muscles initiate this step?

When a person moves a mechanical arm on a machine, tonnes of cables, tools, and electric circuits are required to move this mechanical arm. So how many muscles move in a person’s body when he takes a single step? A great many parts of the human body act when it takes a single step – indeed, a great many parts of the human body react simply because he wills them to do so! So if a man’s mere will causes action, whether his will is to grasp a sword, take a step, or hold a pen in his fingers and write, he should be aware that his will is a gift from Allah Glorified is He; and if a human being cannot specify the part of his body which contains his will, then what do we think about the True Lord when He wills something?

Let us return to the verse which we are currently examining. Allah Glorified is He blessed these two men with sound understanding of His will, so they said to the children of Israel: ‘Help yourselves by entering this land and Allah will succour you.’ These two men were like the mother whose son asks her to pray for his success, so she says to him: ‘I will pray for you, but you must help the prayer by studying hard.’ It is as though fear of disobeying Allah Almighty was a blessing for these two men and as though it is a blessing to understand the words of Allah Almighty properly.

‘Enter upon them through the gate, for when you have entered it, you will be predominant’. (al-Ma’ida: 23) It is as though as soon as they enter the gate, they would defeat the giant Amalekites; Allah Almighty did not ask them to fight the Amalekites, but rather as soon as these ferocious men saw them enter the gate, they would suddenly be filled with dread.

Regarding this story, one of the legends says that a giant Amalekite named ‘Awj ibn ‘Inaq went out to his orchard outside the city to gather some fruits for his chief and took two of these people and hid them in his sleeve. He then threw them down before his chief as he gave him the fruits, saying: ‘These are two of the people who wish to enter our city.’ Such was the level of exaggeration that their fear of the Amalekites had aroused in them, despite the fact that two men among them had understood the intentions of Allah Almighty correctly and thus said, ‘Enter upon them through the gate.’ (al-Ma’ida: 23) This was the will of Allah Almighty, which would have guaranteed victory for them had they followed it.

Some of the exegete’s have said that the two men in this verse were not actually from the children of Israel because they understand that’ two men from among those who feared’ means ‘two men from amongst those whom the children of Israel feared’. And they said to the children of Israel: ‘Do not be struck with fear and dread because of the size of these people’s bodies, for Allah’s forces will grant you victory’: ‘And none knows the soldiers of your Lord except Him’ (al-Muddaththir: 31).

The True Lord ends this verse by saying: ‘And upon Allah rely, if you should be believers.’ (al-Ma’ida: 23) Do not put all your faith in calculations of numbers versus numbers and resources versus resources, but rather judge the matter according to faith, for Allah Almighty is with you: If you help (the cause of) Allah, He will help you’ (Muhammad: 7). And He says: ‘And (that) indeed, Our soldiers will be those who overcome.’ (as-Saffat: 173) The one who believes in Allah Glorified is He must draw strength from this belief; and if those children of Israel who were commanded to enter the land were true believers, they would have placed their trust in Allah Almighty. So how did they respond?

قَالُواْ يَٰمُوسَىٰٓ إِنَّا لَن نَّدۡخُلَهَآ أَبَدٗا مَّا دَامُواْ فِيهَاۖ فَٱذۡهَبۡ
أَنتَ وَرَبُّكَ فَقَٰتِلَآ إِنَّا هَٰهُنَا قَٰعِدُونَ ٢٤

They said, ‘Moses, we will never enter while they are still there, so you and your Lord go in and fight, and we will stay here’ [24] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 24)

It is as though the core of what they said to Musa (Moses) was: ‘Do not bother with us and save your efforts; for we shall never enter this land as long as these giant Amalekites are there. And if you insist on us entering the land, then you go first with your Lord and fight and we shall stay here and wait for you.’ Their fear was so strong that they went as far as to mock Musa (Moses) and his Lord; their mockery reached such a despicable level. And this was not even new on their part, for they had said before: ‘Make us see Allah face to face.’ (an-Nisa’: 153) Before that, they had worshipped the golden calf. So what did Musa (Moses) say?

قَالَ رَبِّ إِنِّي لَآ أَمۡلِكُ إِلَّا نَفۡسِي وَأَخِيۖ فَٱفۡرُقۡ بَيۡنَنَا وَبَيۡنَ ٱلۡقَوۡمِ ٱلۡفَٰسِقِينَ ٢٥

He said, ‘Lord, I have authority over no one except myself and my brother: judge between the two of us and these disobedient people’ [25] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 25)

Aaron was Musa’s (Moses’s) brother and a fellow messenger. So it is as though Musa (Moses) was announcing that he had no trust in those people to whom Allah Almighty had sent him as a messenger, as well as Caleb son of Jephunneh and Joshua son of Nun. But did he have mastery over his brother’s soul? Or did he mean: ‘I am master of none but myself and likewise my brother is master of none but himself, but You have heard, Lord, how the rest of them say that they will not enter the land as long as the Amalekites are there. My brother and I are on one side and the rest of the people are on the other. So draw a dividing-line between us and these disobedient folk!’

The True Lord put these words into the mouth of Musa (Moses) that perchance the heart of one of Musa (Moses)’ followers might incline to him. He says to Musa (Moses), ‘I am with you!’ Therefore, Musa (Moses) said: ‘so part us from the defiantly disobedient people.’ (al-Ma’ida: 25) As we know, the meaning of 'disobedient' is' outside faith', just as the fresh date breaks free from its shell when it ripens. It is as though faith is like a skin or a shell which covers a man. When he breaks free of his faith, he removes himself from the rules which guarantee his proper maintenance. Likewise, the children of Israel broke free of their faith and therefore the True Lord said:

قَالَ فَإِنَّهَا مُحَرَّمَةٌ عَلَيۡهِمۡۛ أَرۡبَعِينَ سَنَةٗۛ يَتِيهُونَ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِۚ
فَلَا تَأۡسَ عَلَى ٱلۡقَوۡمِ ٱلۡفَٰسِقِينَ ﴿٢٦﴾

God said, 'The land is forbidden to them for forty years: they will wander the earth aimlessly. Do not grieve over those who disobey' [26] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 26)

Was the period of prohibition meant to last for forty years? Or did He say 'it is forbidden to them' without any further discussion because they firstly refused to enter it? Therefore, none of those who said: 'we will not enter it, ever, as long as they are within it' (al-Ma'ida: 24) would live to enter this land; and after this, the following was decreed: 'or forty years (in which) they will wander throughout the land.' (al-Ma'ida: 26) Are these two parts interconnected or are they separate?

Both meanings are possible. 'Wander' means to travel without any guidance, so one does not know where he is from or where he is going. When a person enters a place where there are many different paths and roads leading different ways and does not know how to get out of it, this is the meaning of 'wandering.' But how wide was the wilderness in which they wandered? The scholars say that it was only eighteen miles; but how could they get lost in such a small area of land?

Allah Glorified is He willed that every time they became weary of travel and slept, they would awaken in the morning to find themselves back where they started; and they would set up markers to show the way and every morning they would find that the markers were gone. They continued to wander like this for as long as forty years of wandering. When Allah Almighty wishes to chastise a sinner, He makes sure he has the provision and sustenance he needs to stay alive, even if he is a disbeliever; for He is the One Who called them into existence. He did not abandon them in the wilderness forever just as He does not abandon those who do not believe in Him.

So the preservation of life is essential. When someone commits a grave sin against society, we put him in jail, but we give him food and drink. When society advances, it gives convicts jobs which allow them to use their talents while still preventing them from moving freely in society. The convicted prisoner remains in jail, but he eats, drinks, sleeps, and works. The difference is found in the most important aspect of life, which is freedom of movement. So what do we think Allah Almighty did when He imprisoned them in the wilderness? Allah Glorified is He gave them food and drink and sent down to them manna and quails.

Someone might say: 'Did Allah Almighty send manna and quails down to them so that they could live a life of laziness, arrogance, and delusion?' We say: No, the wisdom behind this divine decree was that it made the period of their wandering lengthy; for had He made them farm for their food, they would have been occupied with the affairs of daily life. But the True Lord wanted them to be well aware of how long they spent wandering. There is not only food and drink, but there is also the matter of dignity, which is more important than food and drink.

We can see this when we consider the example of some of those who were jailed for crimes against society and whom the authorities permitted to have food brought to them from their homes. This made these convicts ever more aware of the discomfort of having their freedom taken from them. So the True Lord wanted to punish them severely during their period of wandering; and therefore we find that some people calculate the period of time they spent wandering and then recall that the True Lord said: 'And We made an appointment with Musa (Moses) for thirty nights and perfected them by (the addition of) ten; so the term of his Lord was completed as forty nights. And Musa (Moses) said to his brother Aaron, 'Take my place among my people' (al-A'raf: 142)

And after Musa (Moses) had left the people, they worshipped the golden calf which Musa, the Samaritan, made for them. When Musa (Moses) returned to them, he rebuked his brother Aaron harshly; and their Lord punished them for their unbelief for forty years. It is as though every day they spent worshipping the golden calf was punished by one year of wandering. Because He is a Merciful Lord, He did not leave them without giving them the sustenance they needed to stay alive. Was Musa (Moses) with them in the wilderness or not? Did he die with them whilst they were wandering, or not? These are questions which do not concern us, even though some of the scholars have occupied themselves with them; for these are matters which bring neither benefit nor harm. What is important is that the children of Israel had not entered Jericho until forty years later, under the command of Joshua son of Nun.

It is possible for us to read the verse in the following way:' (Allah) said: 'Then indeed, it is forbidden to them.' (al-Ma'ida: 26) If we pause here, this would mean that the land was forbidden to them forever, after which Allah Almighty decreed that their punishment would be to wander for forty years: 'for forty years (in which) they will wander throughout the land. So do not grieve over the defiantly disobedient people.' (al-Ma'ida: 26)

But if we read it so it is all connected as follows:' (Allah) said, 'then indeed, it is forbidden to them for forty years (in which) they will wander throughout the land. So do not grieve over the defiantly disobedient people.' (al-Ma'ida: 26) This would mean that the punishment of these disobedient folk would last for forty years wandering, after which they would enter Jericho.

And the True Lord commanded Musa (Moses) not to grieve for these disobedient folk; for when Musa (Moses) prayed to Allah to' so part us from the defiantly,' (al-Ma'ida: 24) he felt somewhat uncomfortable after making this supplication and said to himself: 'Why did not I pray for their guidance instead of praying for their separation?' Therefore, the True Lord said to him: 'do not grieve over the defiantly disobedient people.' (al-Ma'ida: 26) Do not grieve for them because they deserve to be punished for their iniquity and disobedience.

The True Lord then says:

وَٱتْلُ عَلَيْهِمْ نَبَأَ ٱبْنَىْ ءَادَمَ بِٱلْحَقِّ إِذْ قَرَّبَا قُرْبَانًا فَتُقُبِّلَ مِنْ أَحَدِهِمَا وَلَمْ
يُتَقَبَّلْ مِنَ ٱلْءَاخَرِ قَالَ لَأَقْتُلَنَّكَ ۖ قَالَ إِنَّمَا يَتَقَبَّلُ ٱللَّهُ مِنَ ٱلْمُتَّقِينَ ﴿٢٧﴾

[Prophet], tell them the truth about the story of Adam’s two sons: each of them offered a sacrifice, and it was accepted from one and not the other. One said, ‘I will kill you,’ but the other said, ‘God only accepts the sacrifice of those who are mindful of Him [27] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 27)

A story is an important piece of information. It is not just for any piece of information, but also for those which are particularly noteworthy. When we hear the words ‘in truth, ‘we should be aware that this is something which has been revealed from on high by the True Lord and which cannot be altered or replaced. Therefore, He said: ‘And with the truth we have sent the Quran down and with the truth it has descended.’ (al-Isra’: 105)

That is, what Allah Glorified is He has sent down has not been adulterated by any other speech. It has been sent down with the fullness of truth, commanding what is good and forbidding what is evil. When Allah Glorified is He says ‘And recite to them the story of Adam’s two sons, in truth,’ (al-Ma’ida: 27) He is telling a factual story that relates a true incident. And as long as Allah Almighty is the One telling this story, He will tell it in a way which most perfectly imparts its truth and its beneficial lessons; this is why He calls it ‘the true narration’: ‘Indeed, this is the true narration.’ (Al-’Imran: 62) And He says: ‘We relate to you, (O Muhammad), the best of stories.’ (Yusuf: 3)

We know that Adam was the first human being. The exegetes tell us that the sons of Adam were named Cain and Abel. Each of them offered a sacrifice (whose aim is to draw nearer to Allah Glorified is He. Did the two offer one joint sacrifice or did each of them offer their own individual sacrifice? As long as the True Lord accepted from one of them and not from the other, this means that each of them must have offered his own individual sacrifice.

We know that Adam was the first human being and Eve was made for him in order to allow procreation to take place because procreation needs the presence of both male and female: ‘And of all things we created two mates.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 49)

So when the True Lord wishes for a being to procreate, He creates it in pairs.' Glorified is He who created all pairs – from what the earth grows and from themselves and from that which they do not know.' (Ya Sin: 36)

We see this when we cross-pollinate female date palms with males. There are some creatures in which we do not observe male and female elements; this may be because the male is not visible to our eyes, but exists at a distance and is transported by the wind, such as pollen: 'And We have sent the fertilising winds and sent down water from the sky and given you drink from it. And you are not its retainers.' (al-Hijr: 22) So the wind transports pollen from place to place so that plants are fertilised. Or otherwise, it is because the male and female elements exist together in the same place such as is the case with maize stalks wherein the male and female elements exists alongside one another. The top of the stalk contains the male elements and from the cob protrude delicate silk fibres which are the female elements. The wind causes the male pollen to fall from the top of the stalk onto the female silk fibres and every fibre takes enough pollen to allow the seed to germinate. When the leaves of the cob stick together and do not allow the female silk fibres to protrude from the ear, the pollen cannot reach them and so the cob does not germinate and no seeds grow on it. And when you take a corncob and open it, you may find that some of its seeds are dead; these are the ones which no pollen reached because they did not have silken fibres to catch the pollen as it fell, and if a maize seed does not have a silken fibre protruding from it to catch the pollen, it will not germinate. So everything has its male and female elements. And He says: 'And it is He who creates the two kinds – the male and the female.' (an-Najm: 45)

Everything which can be called a 'thing' has its male and female elements. Even rain must be seeded and if it is not seeded with atoms, then rain does not fall. And even stones contain positive and negative atoms. And when we discovered that electricity has positive and negative charges, we were able to harness it. The True Lord says: 'And of all things we created two mates; perhaps you will remember.' (adh-Dhariyat: 49)

And this was the first knowledge ever to come to the Arabs for until the Quran was revealed, they had no knowledge; and the Quran imparted such knowledge to the Arabs that they surpassed all others when they utilised the means Allah Glorified is He gave them. But when they became lax and others began to utilise the means in their stead, many discoveries were made. Now we find that all of these discoveries were alluded to in the Quran: ‘Glorified is He who created all pairs – from what the earth grows and from themselves and from that which they do not know.’ (Ya Sin: 36) So whenever new things are discovered which contain positive and negative (or male and female), they are included in the words: ‘and from that which they do not know.’ (Ya Sin: 36)

Man, the master of existence, must be composed of male and female, not in order to exist, but in order to procreate. As for the existence of man, he was made by Allah Almighty who creates everything from nothing. When Adam and Eve were made and procreation began, the population of the earth began to grow; and if we were to follow the chain of procreation in the whole world back to its origins, we would find that the population would get smaller every generation until we reached Adam and Eve. For example, if we travelled one hundred years back, we would find that the population of Egypt was no greater than five million at most, and if we went further centuries back, we would find the population smaller still, all the way back until we arrived at the first man whom Allah Almighty created, Adam from whom He created Eve. So man as a species did not come into existence by means of procreation.

When we count the population of the earth, and then follow it back in time, we will eventually come to the first man. Everything procreates, whether animal or plant. And when we follow the population count forward in time, we see that it increases and the steps it traverses are huge. And when the True Lord tells us that He created us from a single soul from which He made its mate and that from these two He caused many men and women to arise; statistics bear this out. Increase can only come by procreation and Adam and Eve were the first to procreate. The True Lord willed to give Adam twins so that each twin would pair with a twin of the opposite sex from another set of twins born separately; that is, the male would mate with the female who was not his own twin.

Our Lord told us this story to impart unto us the origin of procreation in a symbolic way. He made it clear that there was still distance between the partners, but it was a relative distance. It is true that the partners were brother and sister, but because the girl was born with a male twin and then the boy was born separately with a female twin, there was a relative distance between them. The girl from one set of twins would mate with the boy from another set and vice versa. This was the only relative distance which was possible at that time because the human race was still in its infancy.

We can see this concept at work in the countryside when one farmer says to another, 'Your maize crop has failed.' He replies: 'I take the seeds from the land where the maize grows and give the seeds to the crop: I sowed a field of maize from which I took a few bales to use as seeds to sow, but the crops come up weak.' So the experienced farmer says to him: 'Take some seed from your neighbour.' This is because there is some distance between my crops and my neighbour's crops; and once the two crops have become too closely related, the experienced farmer says: 'Take some seed from the next town' and so on and so forth. How did breeding and reproduction develop? And from where do we get the seeds? Every time we get them from outside, the result is stronger.

The same is true of human procreation so that it will result in more diverse talents. An Arab poet became aware of this in ancient times and it is amazing that this uncultured nomadic Arab, who knew nothing of education or learning, was guided to this fact in such a way that he presented it as a matter of innate natural disposition. He wanted to praise a man for his chivalry, so he said:

He was not born by his father's cousin,
For inbred youths may be scrawny;

How did this poet know this fact? And after this, he said:

I gave up my uncle's daughter, though I loved her,
For I feared that any child we had would be scrawny.

That is, he loved her but let her go lest their children are born weak.

And another poet said about this:

I advise those who have high aspirations:

Wed not your sons to their cousins,

For they will not evade weakness and sickness.

How did the Arab poet who did not belong to a cultured community and who knew nothing of breeding or anything else, know this? He either was guided to it by experience, seeing that the marriage of relatives produces weak offspring or else this was a leftover fragment of the ancient religions and admonitions of which man had still retained some vestiges. When Allah Glorified is He first willed that procreation begins, brothers had to marry their sisters; but He wanted us to have some distance, and hence He decreed that twins could not marry each other. So when they came to study the story of Adam’s sons Cain and Abel, they differed in some aspects. For example, there is the book of Genesis; and we can accept things from the book of Genesis despite the changes made to it because no changes about this matter would have been mad, since the only changes that were made were those relating to things such as references to the Prophethood of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Other things were not important to them, yet they likely changed much of them too.

They say that Abel was the first victim of murder in human history, and that Cain murdered him. Some stories say that he did not know how to kill him or make him die, so Satan showed him how by taking a bird and crushing its head between two rocks to kill it. Thus he taught him how to kill; and this is similar to how the raven later showed him how to dig. We are not told how he killed him, but we are told how he buried him: Then Allah sent a crow searching in the ground to show him how to hide the disgrace of his brother. He said, ‘O woe to me! Have I failed to be like this crow and hide the body of my brother?’ And he became of the regretful.’ (al-Ma’ida: 31)

This was the first person to kill and cause death; but why do they say that he did not know how to kill until Satan came and taught him how to kill his brother? We say that they did not pay close enough attention; for the True Lord says:

لَئِنۢ بَسَطتَ إِلَيَّ يَدَكَ لِتَقۡتُلَنِي مَآ أَنَا۠ بِبَاسِطٖ يَدِيَ
إِلَيۡكَ لِأَقۡتُلَكَۖ إِنِّيٓ أَخَافُ ٱللَّهَ رَبَّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٢٨﴾

If you raise your hand to kill me, I will not raise mine to kill you. I fear God, the Lord of all worlds [28]
(The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 28)

So Cain knew about killing. It is not true that he had to be taught how to do it; although it is true that the matter of burial was new to him. This story came to tell us how procreation began, and how Allah Glorified is He brought spouses together who had a relative amount of distance from one another because nothing more than a relative distance was possible at that time. According to their standards, the male of one set of twins and the female of another set of twins were not close kin and this remained the case until there were more people, whereupon the law was decreed that brothers and sisters of any kind were completely forbidden to wed. After this, things became even more comprehensive and the laws about unmarriageable kin by blood and suckling were fully developed. This story had an origin: they decided to offer a sacrifice, but why?' When they both offered a sacrifice (to Allah), and it was accepted from one of them but was not accepted from the other.' (al-Ma'ida: 27)

Why did they want to offer a sacrifice? They say it was because Cain's twin sister was very beautiful, whilst Abel's twin was not and because of the law of distance in marriage, Abel was obliged to marry Cain's sister and Cain was obliged to marry Abel's sister. But Cain envied his brother and said: 'Why should he take the beautiful one? I have more right to my sister than he does.' Adam had only recently begun to receive revelation, so he said: 'Each of you offer a sacrifice and see.' This is because he knew well that the sacrifice would be offered in a way which preserved the necessary distance of matrimony. Some of the exegetes say: 'By Allah we do not know how it was accepted'; and we say to them: Let us look for the word 'sacrifice' in the Quran and determine exactly what it means. This word appears in the Quran more than once.' (They are) those who said, 'Indeed, Allah has taken our promise not to believe any messenger until he brings us an offering which fire (from heaven) will consume. (Al-'Imran: 183) And the True Lord responded to them: 'Say, 'There have already come to you messengers before me with clear proofs and (even) that of which you speak.' (Al-'Imran: 183) And what exactly was 'that of which you speak'? (Al-'Imran: 183) It was an offering which fire consumes. So the concept of an offering or sacrifice was known and if fire came and consumed the offering, this was a sign that the Heavens had accepted it and that the one who offered it had succeeded in drawing nearer to Allah Glorified is He. The reason Cain and Abel offered a sacrifice was to determine which of them would marry the beautiful woman; and Allah Almighty accepted Abel's offering. But was the loser content with this? No; rather, he was envious and this was the first time anyone had objected to the True Lord's Will and His commandments. 'I shall not raise my hand against you to kill you.' (al-Ma'ida: 28) We are told that Abel kept livestock and so possessed milk, cheese and butter, whilst Cain was a farmer. It is said that Cain offered the worst of his yield, whilst Abel offered the best of his livestock for the offering. An offering was accepted, as Allah Glorified is He says 'one of them' (al-Ma'ida: 27) without specifying whose offering. Then one said: 'I shall not raise my hand against you to kill you.' (al-Ma'ida: 28) Who said this? It was the one whose offering was not accepted because he has not achieved his purpose.

'He (Cain) said: 'I will surely slay you.' The other (Abel) said: 'Indeed, Allah only accepts from the righteous (who fear Him).' (al-Ma'ida: 27) Is this an appropriate response to: 'I will surely slay you'? (al-Ma'ida: 27) Yes it is, because the reason he wanted to kill him was: 'The offering you sacrificed was accepted, whilst mine was not.' So he responded: 'And what did I have to do with that? I have no say in whether an offering is accepted or not, but it is up to Allah Glorified is He'. The Lord did not accept yours because He only accepts from those who are conscious of Him and He knows that you are not conscious of Him. The offering you sacrificed will never be accepted as long as you rebel against the law of Allah Glorified is He which was to intermarry between twins of separate births. 'This was the first rebellion against Allah's Way and His decree. Therefore, Abel said: ''Indeed, Allah only accepts from the righteous (who fear Him)'. (al-Ma'ida: 27) And: 'If you will stretch forth your hand towards me to kill me, I shall not stretch forth my hand towards you to kill you. Indeed, I fear Allah, the Lord of the worlds' (al-Ma'ida: 28).

The word 'basata' (to stretch forth) is the opposite of 'qabada', (to contract). The word 'basata' can be used with the preposition 'li' (to) or (for) to mean: one thing and with 'ila' (towards) to mean another. When it is used with 'li', it means that the stretching of the hand is for the welfare of someone, as in the following verse: 'And if Allah had extended (excessively) provision for His servants….' (ash-Shura: 27) Here we notice 'basata' (extended (excessively)) and 'li' (for). He did not say 'towards His servants', but rather 'for His servants' (ash-Shura: 27) which means that this use of 'basata' implies something good coming from the subject to the object of the verb. The Lord, in this verse, does not say 'ila' (towards) which is only used to indicate something bad, as we have seen before when the True Lord says: 'when a people determined to extend their hands (in aggression) against you….' (al-Ma'ida: 11)

So the one who stretches out his hand to you gives you benefit and the one who stretches it towards you intends to take benefit from you for himself. 'If you will stretch forth your hand towards me to kill me, I shall not stretch forth my hand towards you to kill you….' (al-Ma'ida: 28) The words 'to kill me' explain the intention behind 'towards me' and the reason he did not respond was not that he lacked the power to do so, but rather that he feared Allah Almighty; it was not that he was remiss in defending himself, but rather that he wanted to cause his brother's heart to soften so that he would come to his senses. When someone shows that he intends to kill another and that other responds by saying, 'By Allah Almighty, I shall not fight you because I fear our Lord', he thereby made it plain that his fear of Allah Glorified is He was so firmly established in his consciousness that it overrode even his instinct of self-preservation. He may have also recognised this in his heart because his brother was well able to defend himself powerfully. He referred the matter back to the Supreme Truth, Allah Glorified is He. So, do not say that Abel was passive. No, he consigned the matter to the Almighty.

The True Lord then, says:

إِنِّىٓ أُرِيدُ أَن تَبُوٓأَ بِإِثْمِى وَإِثْمِكَ فَتَكُونَ مِنْ أَصْحَٰبِ ٱلنَّارِ ۚ وَذَٰلِكَ جَزَٰٓؤُا۟ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾

and I would rather you were burdened with my sins as well as yours and became an inhabitant of the Fire: such is the evildoers' reward' [29] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 29)

The word 'tabu'a' (here means: to bear) literally means: I want you to return from the bargain of killing me with bearing the sin of such a deed and obtaining its punishment. 'And your sin…' (al-Ma'ida: 29), i.e. and likewise the sin for which you committed this murder; for you rebelled against Allah's Way when our Lord did not accept your offering and you sinned by not accepting the distance of kinship which is obligatory for marriage. So you have committed two sins: the first is that you refused to accept Allah’s decree, for reason of which Allah the Exalted did not accept your offering and the second is that you murdered me. And I have nothing to do with this, for the evildoer must take his requital.’

When Abel said, ‘Indeed I want you to bear (thereby) my sin and your sin…’ (al-Ma’ida: 29), he was not wishing for his brother to sin, but rather, he was saying that if he were to sin, he would bear the burden of this sin and its punishment. He wished that he would be punished if he committed the sin and he wanted him to refrain from doing it. ‘Indeed I want you to bear (thereby) my sin and your sin so you will be among the inmates of the Fire. And that is the recompense of wrongdoers.’ (al-Ma’ida: 29) The recompense of wrongdoers is a prompt punishment which prevents their tyranny from continuing; for were the True Lord to leave them until the Hereafter, evil would become prevalent and those who do not believe in the Hereafter would excessively engage in evildoing. Therefore, we said before, that the True Lord propounds a parable for us in the chapter al-Kahf when He tells us the story of Dhu Al-Qarnayn, whom Allah Almighty granted means of access to everything and so he followed a course and utilised those means. Then, the True Lord showed us what the purpose is of those who are given and made use of the right means and told us how He placed them on earth in order to make the world thrive, to rectify it and to give security to society. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘(And he marched westwards) until, when he reached the setting of the sun, he found it (as if) setting into a black sea…’ (al-Kahf: 86). This is how it seemed to his eye; for, when you are at sea, the sun appears to set in the water. Of course it does not actually do so, but it seems to do so because the water is as far as you can see. ‘(And he marched westwards) until, when he reached the setting of the sun, he found it (as if) setting into a black sea and he found near it a people. Allah said, “O Dhu Al-Qarnayn, either you punish (them) or else adopt among them (a way of) goodness.”’ (al-Kahf: 86)

So the Lord gave him the choice: do this, or do that. ‘He said, “As for one who wrongs, we will punish him. Then he will be returned to his Lord, and He will punish him with a terrible punishment.”’ (al-Kahf: 87) This is the rule by which society must be run: so that those who do not believe in Allah Almighty or the Hereafter are not left to continue unabated into evildoing, they must be punished in this world. ‘And indeed, for those who are bent on doing evil, there is suffering in store (even) closer at hand than that, but most of them do not know.’ (at-Tur: 47) That is, they will be punished before the Hereafter. Therefore, when the people see an evildoer die or meet with misfortune and failure, they take admonition from this. And our generation has seen a great many evildoers who have been one another’s downfall; and even if those they oppressed were allowed to have vengeance on them, they would not have done as much to them as they did to one another. The True Lord wanted their punishment to take place before our eyes so that things would be made clear.

‘He said, “As for one who wrongs, we will punish him....”’ (al-Kahf: 87) And this is not all; for to whom would he be referred after this? To Allah Almighty, ‘Then he will be returned to his Lord, and He will punish him with a terrible punishment.’ (al-Kahf: 87) The first suffering here is that of this worldly life which will be bearable because it is inflicted by the power of temporal incapable beings; as for the suffering of the Hereafter, it is inflicted by the power of the All-Powerful.

‘But as for one who believes and does righteousness, he will have a reward of Paradise and we will speak to him from our command with ease.’ (al-Kahf: 88) This is the task which Allah the Strong and Steadfast has appointed to Himself: He deters those who do evil and gives incentives to those who do righteous deeds. And the True Lord says in the verse which we come to next:

فَطَوَّعَتْ لَهُۥ نَفْسُهُۥ قَتْلَ أَخِيهِ فَقَتَلَهُۥ فَأَصْبَحَ مِنَ ٱلْخَٰسِرِينَ ٣٠

But his soul prompted him to kill his brother: he killed him and became one of the losers [30] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 30)

You do not say that you’ facilitate’ something unless this thing is resistant to what you want to do with it; you do not facilitate twisting water, but you might facilitate twisting iron.’ And his soul facilitated to him the murder of his brother’ (al-Ma’ida: 30). So, will his soul perform the killing in addition to facilitating such a deed? We should be aware here that within a man there are two dispositions: a natural disposition which loves truth and goodness and a disposition which inclines to desires; and these two dispositions are in a constant struggle.' And his soul facilitated to him the murder of his brother' (al-Ma'ida: 30). It is as though the evil and passionate side of the soul overwhelmed the good side and it is as though they pulled back and forth, struggled and jostled, For a man does not like to have evil done unto him though he might well consent to do evil unto others.

'And his soul facilitated to him…' (al-Ma'ida: 30). There was still a remnant of Prophethood in his soul because he was Adam's kin and there was still an inner struggle within his soul. Evil wanes in good people and deepens in evil people; if you rile a good man, he says, 'If I see him, I will shoot him, or strike him, or scold him', whilst an evil man will say, 'By Allah Almighty, if I find him, I will spit in his face, or strike him, or shoot him.' So evil deepens in an evil person and he finds that the first response is not enough to slake his anger so he must increase its severity. The good man's soul, on the other hand, vents his anger and relinquishes it with a simple word. Therefore we may observe that the story of our master Joseph peace be upon him says: 'When they said, 'Joseph and his brother are more beloved to our father than we, though we are a (stronger) company. Indeed, our father is in clear error.' (Yusuf: 8) It is curious that their argument was actually against them, which shows you that passion, anger, hatred and envy upset a person's judgement. They said 'though we are a (stronger) company' (Yusuf: 8), which shows that they were strong; and this is exactly what made their father, Jacob's heart incline towards young Joseph peace be upon him. You say that 'Joseph and his brother (Benjamin) are more beloved to our father than we are' (Yusuf: 8); yes, indeed this is the case because he is the youngest. An Arab was once asked, 'Why do you love your youngest son?', and he replied: 'Because he has spent fewer days with me. My first born has been with me for a long time, so I am compensating the youngest with love and affection for the days which he has missed.' So when they said 'though we are a (stronger) company' (Yusuf: 8), this was actually an argument against them. This shows that when a man's moral standards of judgement are impaired he will make an argument which is against him and imagine that it helps him! After this, they said:

'Indeed, our father is in clear error.' (Yusuf: 8) They agreed on this argument and then started to suggest: 'Kill Joseph." (Yusuf: 9) Then they said: 'or cast him out to (another) land….' (Yusuf: 9)

And because they were the sons of Jacob peace be upon him and descended from a household of Prophethood, they relented from the ideas of killing or banishing and one of them said: 'Do not kill Joseph but throw him into the bottom of the well; some travelers will pick him up – if you would do (something).' (Yusuf: 10)

Does anyone plan for the rescue of someone he hates? It is as though there was still goodness in their souls. At first they said, 'Kill Joseph,' (Yusuf: 9) and this was at the height of their anger; then they said 'or cast him out to (another) land;' (Yusuf: 9) where he might be eaten by wild predators; and then one of them said 'but throw him into the bottom of the well; some travelers will pick him up – if you would do (something).' (Yusuf: 10) So, good people relent.' And his soul facilitated to him the murder of his brother, so he killed him and became among the losers.' (al-Ma'ida: 30)

We know well what loosing means in terms of business wherein there is profit and loss: profit means you have made back your capital and more and loss means: your capital has decreased. Why did Cain slay his brother, when his brother was the only person in the world with whom he could find solace? This all happened because of his desire for the girl and when they both offered sacrifices and his was not accepted his enmity deepened and he killed his brother. So he lost his capital after intending to make profit: 'and became among the losers.' (al-Ma'ida: 30) The True Lord then says:

فَبَعَثَ ٱللَّهُ غُرَابًا يَبْحَثُ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ لِيُرِيَهُۥ كَيْفَ يُوَٰرِى سَوْءَةَ أَخِيهِ ۚ قَالَ يَٰوَيْلَتَىٰٓ
أَعَجَزْتُ أَنْ أَكُونَ مِثْلَ هَٰذَا ٱلْغُرَابِ فَأُوَٰرِىَ سَوْءَةَ أَخِى ۖ فَأَصْبَحَ مِنَ ٱلنَّٰدِمِينَ ﴿٣١﴾

God sent a raven to scratch up the ground and show him how to cover his brother's corpse and he said, 'Woe is me! Could I not have been like this raven and covered up my brother's body?' He became remorseful [31] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 31)

The word 'saw'a' (here translated as dead body), which literally means 'what the soul abhors', is derived from the verb 'sa'a' which means (abhor); and we call the private parts of the body ‘saw’a ‘because revealing it is abhorred.’ Then Allah sent a crow digging up the earth…’ (al-Ma’ida: 31). Did Allah Almighty send the crow so that He could show Cain how to bury Abel’s body or was the crow the one that will say this to Cain? It is the same either way since our Lord is the One Who sent it. If you focus on the direct means, it was the crow; and if you focus on the means of the sender, it was Allah Glorified is He. So it all goes back to Allah Glorified is He and when you try to attribute the means to an entity, you will find out that they are all provided by Allah Almighty.

‘He (Cain) said, ‘O woe to me!’ (al-Ma’ida: 31) When you hear the words ‘ya waylata’ (O woe to me), know that this expression is used for two different meanings. The basic meaning of ‘wayl’ is (perishing) and if we want to make it more intense, we add the suffix -(ah) so it becomes (waylah), since the suffix ‘ah’ can often add emphasis to a noun in Arabic. - So ‘wayl’ means ‘perishing’ and so does ‘waylah’; and what does ‘ya waylata’ mean?

We know that ‘ya’, in Arabic, expresses a call; so why would one call woe and death upon himself? And can other than a sensible being be called? Yes, it can, because as long as ‘woe’ means ‘perishing’, it is as though you are saying, ‘I cannot take this discomfort and anguish any longer and nothing can rid me of it save death; O death, now is your time to come to me!’ So ‘O, woe to me’ (al-Ma’ida: 31) means ‘O death, come to me’. The poet Al-Mutanabbi said of this:

It is sufficient ailment for you to see in death a cure
And it is enough of deaths to be wished for desires

What a grave ailment it is to which one says, ‘O Lord, give me peace and let me die!’ The person who wishes for death must be experiencing something even worse than death. So the first meaning of ‘O, woe to me’ (al-Ma’ida: 31) is that you call for death to come and therefore the True Lord says: ‘And the record (of deeds) will be placed (open) and you will see the criminals fearful of that within it and they will say, “Oh, woe to us! What is this book that leaves nothing small or great except that it has enumerated it?” And they will find what they did present (before them). And your Lord does injustice to no one.' (al-Kahf: 49) They wish for death; and likewise Cain said, 'O, woe to me!' (al-Ma'ida: 31) Did death come to him when he called for it? No, for the deed was already done and he had murdered his brother.

The second possible meaning of 'O, woe to me' (al-Ma'ida: 31) is to express amazement at something which could not possibly have been caused by means. There is a difference between what means give and what the Supreme Causer gives. If what means give is the sole governor of natural law, this would mean that the True Lord had practised his authority over His dominion only once, and it is as if He created the means and natural laws and left them to govern on their own. But we say no: He created the means with His omnipotent power and they exist to manifest the independent and all-encompassing nature of His power – but the True Lord can command means to cease functioning whenever He wills.

So there are means and there is the Supreme Causer; and amazing events cannot be given by the means. When means do not affect, man is amazed and he therefore refers the matter back to the Origin, for which nothing is amazing. When the guests came to our master Abraham peace be upon him and he offered them food and saw that their hands did not stretch out to it, he was distrusted them and felt from them apprehension and was filled with disquiet and fear of them. The True Lord says of this: 'And he felt from them apprehension. They said, "Fear not" and gave him good tidings of a boy who would be endowed with deep knowledge. Thereupon, his wife approached with a cry (of alarm) and struck her face and said,' (I am) a barren old woman!' (adh-Dhariyat: 28-29)

And the True Lord also says about this: 'And his Wife was standing and she smiled. Then We gave her good tidings of Isaac and after Isaac, Jacob.' (Hud: 71) The wife of our master Abraham peace be upon him said: 'Woe to me! Shall I give birth while I am an old woman and this, my husband, is an old man? Indeed, this is an amazing thing!' (Hud: 72) That is, there were no means that could give such a thing.' They said, 'Are you amazed at the decree of Allah' (Hud: 73) You might well be amazed at the means when they were defied, but when you remember that means come from Allah Almighty, there is nothing strange at all.

Our master Zechariah peace be upon him said something similar to this. He had taken custody of our Lady Mary peace be upon her and would bring her all her life's needs; and he was amazed to see that she had with her provisions of food and fruit and asked her: 'He said, 'O Mary, from where is this (coming) to you?' (Al-'Imran: 37) Why did he say this? He must have seen that she had something which he did not bring her; and she responded to his amazement and alerted him to the eternal truth: 'She said, 'It is from Allah. Indeed, Allah provides for whom He wills without account.' (Al-'Imran: 37)

The True Lord willed that our Lady Mary peace be upon him say this, whilst she was still young; as we said before, it was as though she was saying this as a foreshadowing of how she would later experience something which only The Supreme Cause could make happen. She would bear a child without a father and this is an amazing thing and therefore she would surely have understood it and applied to it her own words: 'It is from Allah. Indeed, Allah provides for whom He wills without account.' (Al-'Imran: 37) It is as though the True Lord wanted to implicitly tell her that should remember that she herself was the one who said these words because in the future something would happen to her which would require her to remember them; and she herself reminded our master Zechariah peace be upon him of this truth. Let us observe the precision of the Quranic allusion to the circumstance wherein Mary peace be upon him reminded him of this truth: 'There, Zechariah called upon his Lord, saying, 'My Lord, grant me from Yourself a good offspring.' (Al-'Imran: 38)

It is as though when he heard this, he decided to make his supplication to Allah Glorified is He right there in the sanctuary. And was our master Zechariah peace be upon him unaware of this fact? He was aware of it, but there is a difference between a notion which lies in the margins of the consciousness and one which lies at the forefront of the consciousness. And when Mary said to Zechariah peace be upon them 'It is from Allah. Indeed, Allah provides for whom He wills without account' (Al-'Imran: 37), this truth moved from the margins to the forefront of his consciousness.

'There, Zechariah called upon his Lord' (Al-'Imran: 38). Why did he not pray unto his Lord in the first place? Our master Zechariah peace be upon him was going on his life amidst the means and the monotony of the means may distract from the Supreme Cause; and when he heard Mary peace be upon her say: 'Allah provides for whom He wills without account' (Al-'Imran: 37), he wanted to experience this for himself, so he prayed unto his Lord. And the True Lord gave him tidings that He would grant him a child, whereupon Zechariah was amazed once again, describing his condition: He said, "My Lord, how will I have a boy when I have reached old age and my wife is barren?" (Al-'Imran: 40)

As long as you have prayed to Allah Almighty, O Zechariah, to give you a child and you have moved the matter of Allah Almighty's provision from the margins of your consciousness to its forefront, then Allah Almighty has made His decree: 'Thus (it will be); your Lord says' (Maryam: 9). So do not investigate means and causes, for it is a matter of Allah's will. And Allah Almighty explains the findings on which the following saying is based: 'Allah provides for whom He wills without account' (Al-'Imran: 37) and can grant you a son, when he says: 'It is easy for Me, for I created you before, while you were nothing'. (Maryam: 9)

These were all portents for our Lady Mary peace be upon her and our master Zechariah peace be upon him her guardian, for our master Zechariah peace be upon him would be a witness when she bore a child without any father and as her guardian, he would be involved in this matter.

But why was all this foreshadowing necessary? It was necessary because usually when natural laws and conventions are broken, it does not threaten anyone's reputation, but in Mary's case peace be upon her her reputation would be threatened and reputation is the most sacred thing a woman possesses. Therefore, all this foreshadowing was necessary and although it was a strange thing, it was not strange for Allah Glorified is He.

Here, Cain says: 'O woe to me! Have I failed to be like this crow…?' (al-Ma'ida: 31) Cain only said this after becoming aware of a harsh psychological reality which disturbed his emotions greatly. It is as though the crow's actions showed Cain that he did not know something which the bird before him did know: here is something that even a crow can do, but you, Cain, cannot do it. You had the power to murder your brother, but you cannot even conceal his dead body like what this crow did. So, Cain became filled with remorse: ‘And he became of the regretful.’ (al-Ma’ida: 31)

We should be aware that there are different kinds of remorse. For example, suppose that a man violates Allah’s law by drinking wine which he buys with the money he should have used to buy food for his family. When he gets home and finds his family waiting for their food, he regrets that he drank the wine – Does he feel remorse for disobeying Allah Glorified is He or for not buying food for his family? He feels remorse for not buying food for his family and this remorse is unacceptable because it is not true repentance. This wine-drinker might put on his best clothes, go off to drink wine and then fall on the ground, and thus feel remorse because the wine he has drunk has led him to this situation. Does he feel remorse for disobeying Allah the Almighty? Or does he feel remorse because he looks silly in front of other people? This was the nature of Cain’s remorse: he felt remorse because of his failure as he did not know what the crow knew. The True Lord then says:

مِنۡ أَجۡلِ ذَٰلِكَ كَتَبۡنَا عَلَىٰ بَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ أَنَّهُۥ مَن قَتَلَ نَفۡسَۢا بِغَيۡرِ نَفۡسٍ
أَوۡ فَسَادٖ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ فَكَأَنَّمَا قَتَلَ ٱلنَّاسَ جَمِيعٗا وَمَنۡ أَحۡيَاهَا
فَكَأَنَّمَآ أَحۡيَا ٱلنَّاسَ جَمِيعٗاۚ وَلَقَدۡ جَآءَتۡهُمۡ رُسُلُنَا بِٱلۡبَيِّنَٰتِ ثُمَّ
إِنَّ كَثِيرٗا مِّنۡهُم بَعۡدَ ذَٰلِكَ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ لَمُسۡرِفُونَ ﴿٣٢﴾

On account of [his deed], We decreed to the Children of Israel that if anyone kills a person – unless in retribution for murder or spreading corruption in the land – it is as if he kills all mankind, while if any saves a life it is as if he saves the lives of all mankind. Our messengers came to them with clear signs, but many of them continued to commit excesses in the land [32] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 32)

The True Lord says that He ordained all that this verse states as a plain law, because the words ‘min ajl’ mean ‘because of’ (al-Ma’ida: 32); and the word ‘ajl’ can be derived from ‘ajal’ which means to cause evil for someone, meaning ‘to commit a crime’, in which case it means ‘because of this crime…’ It could also mean, ‘On account of this crime’, we decreed this law:

'Whoever kills a soul unless for a soul or for corruption (done) in the land – it is as if he had slain mankind entirely.' (al-Ma'ida: 32) So, when you hear the words (min ajl), know that they mean' because of' (al-Ma'ida: 32) or 'on account of' or 'because of this crime'.

Was this decree for the children of Israel alone? Some of the scholars say that the two' sons of Adam' here do not mean literally the sons of Adam peace be upon him, but rather, the descendants of Adam peace be upon him from the children of Israel. To this, we reply: First of all, who is this' Israel' to whom the children of Israel are ascribed? He is Jacob son of Isaac, son of Abraham peace be upon him, who descended ten generations from Noah peace be upon him, who descended from Seth, the son of Adam peace be upon him. Was it possible that all these generations had no knowledge of how to bury their dead until the children of Israel's time? Of course, it was not, and as long as the True Lord states that He sent a crow to dig in the earth to show Cain how to bury his brother's body, this proves that Abel was the first human being to be buried. It is therefore unacceptable to say that humanity did not know how to bury their dead until the time of the children of Israel and that they were the ones to teach this to humanity!

So, why does the True Lord mention the children of Israel here? It is because the children of Israel did not only dare to take lives, but they even dared to take the lives of those who were sent to guide them, meaning those who were sent as prophets and messengers – and this is why they were singled out for mention here. They slew the Messengers who were sent to them bearing Allah's Way of guidance in its practical form; for prophets come as role models who put Allah's Guidance into practice to show people the true way to follow it. Prophets, then, do not bring new divine laws, but they follow the laws of those who came before them. And why did the children of Israel kill some of their prophets? It was because they bore a grudge against those prophets.

We know that when a good person does something good and is seen by an evil person who is incapable of doing good, the evil person comes to bear a grudge against the good person and hates and envies him; and the more good the good person does, the more the evil person feels offended. And so the evil person tries to get rid of the good person. The Messengers were role models of good conduct; and the True Lord says of the children of Israel: ‘Then why did you kill the prophets of Allah before, if you are (indeed) believers?’ (al-Baqara: 91)

The True Lord says ‘before’ (al-Baqara: 91) here for a wise reason: The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was at odds with the Jews and they would conjure evil plots to assassinate him and indeed they made attempts to do so. For example, they tried to drop a boulder onto him and to poison him. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He said ‘before’ (al-Baqara: 91) as if to say: Your ability to slay the Messengers was from the past; as for Prophet Muhammad, the chosen one peace and blessings be upon him, you will never get him. Allah the Almighty says here: ‘Because of that, we decreed upon the children of Israel that whoever kills a soul unless for a soul or for corruption (done) in the land – it is as if he had slain mankind entirely.’ (al-Ma’ida: 32) This manifests the True Lord’s will to establish a union of faith which would make a firm bond in faithful society, as the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him elucidated when he said, as Abu Musa Al-Ash’ari may Allah be pleased with him narrates: ‘A believer to another believer is like a building whose different parts enforce each other.’

Beware of seeing someone wrongfully harm someone else without doing anything to prevent him, for the unity of faith makes the believers like a single body: when one part of it aches, the whole body responds to it with sleeplessness and fever. If one man kills another and the faithful society stands idle, this will cause corruption on earth; and so society must treat this action not as the slaying of one individual, but as though it is the slaying of all mankind – unless his killing of that person is a punishment for murder or for spreading corruption on earth.

And the True Lord then gives the other half of this doctrine: ‘And whoever saves one – it is as if he had saved mankind entirely.’ (al-Ma’ida: 32) This is the unity of faith; if someone transgresses against an innocent life it is as though he has transgressed against all humanity and if someone saves a life in peril it is as though he has saved all humanity. And when Allah Glorified is He ordains a regulation of this nature, there is always a practical application for it. The one who takes an innocent life incurs the curse and wrath of Allah Almighty and He will punish him, and it will be as though he has killed all humanity; and if we consider it from the perspective of the requital, he will be requited with the same requital as would be given for this: 'And whoever saves one – it is as if he had saved mankind entirely.' (al-Ma'ida: 32) The Almighty wants a faithful society to stand in the way of the one who dares to behave unjustly as one united society and not to leave the victim to stand alone; for the thing that encourages evildoers is that some people say, 'What does it have to do with me?' These words 'what does it have to do with me' provide encouragement to evildoers and therefore you should read the story (1) of the three bulls: There was a black bull, a red bull and a white bull. A lion made a deal with the red and black bulls, who allowed him to eat the white bull. Then, the lion made a deal with the black bull, who allowed him to eat the red bull. Then the lion came for the black bull who said to the lion: 'I was doomed to be eaten the day you ate the white bull!' It is as though the black bull realised in the end that his' what does it have to do with me' attitude caused his demise, but had the three bulls stuck together in the beginning, they could have killed the lion.

And the Noble Hadith (Prophetic saying) gives us a parable of the one who upholds Allah's boundaries and the one who transgresses them: An-Nu'man ibn Bashir may Allah be pleased with him related that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said: 'The likeness of the man who observes the limits prescribed by Allah and that of the man who transgresses them is like the people who get on board a ship after casting lots. Some of them are in its lower deck and some of them in its upper (deck). Those who are in its lower (deck), when they require water, go to the occupants of the upper deck and say to them: 'If we make a hole in the bottom of the ship, we shall not harm you.' If they (the occupants of the upper deck) leave them to carry out their design they all will be drowned. But if they do not let them go ahead (with their plan), all of them will remain safe.'(2)

(1) The story of the three bulls

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, At-Tirmidhi and Ahmad

This is the parable of the one who upholds Allah's boundaries and the one who transgresses them. It is as though the True Lord is says to us: Do not consider that one person has wrongfully killed another, but consider that he has killed all humanity; for all people have an equal right to life. And as long as the killer has dared to kill one person, he might dare to kill anyone, or his action might be an example for others; and as long as this behaviour has been established, you will find that whenever someone becomes angry with someone else he will kill him and other murders will follow in succession. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him says: 'He who introduced some good practice in Islam which was followed after him (by people) he would be assured of reward like one who followed it, without their rewards being diminished in any respect. And he who introduced some evil practice in Islam which had been followed subsequently (by others), he would be required to bear the burden like that of one who followed this (evil practice) without theirs being diminished in any respect.'

Circumspection, precision, and restraint are manifested in the words, 'whoever kills a soul unless for a soul or for corruption (done) in the land…' (al-Ma'ida: 32); for had this been a human legislation and had these caveats been left out, they might have been amended later with a commentary or alteration; but the Supreme Lawgiver cannot be corrected.

'Whoever kills a soul unless for a soul or for corruption (done) in the land…' (al-Ma'ida: 32) imply that those who kill others in retaliation for murder or the spreading of corruption on earth are not deemed to have slain all of mankind, but rather to have saved all mankind. This is because when an action is criminalised, this means that there must be a text which clearly announces that this act is a crime, after which we assign a punishment to it. You cannot say to someone who has committed an action, 'I shall detain you and punish you for this' if there is no text which states this action to be criminal. Therefore, there is a legal principle which states that' there can be no criminalisation without a text and no punishment without criminalisation.' That is, we assign punishments to crimes, or when an act is criminalised the punishment for it is specified at the same time. Is the purpose of this to punish criminals? No, the purpose is to deter the crime by making the prospective criminal think of the punishment before he commits it; the purpose is to prevent the crime. Therefore, the common aphorism says: 'The best way to prevent killing is killing.' And of course this aphorism is not as sublime as the True Lords' words: 'And there is for you in legal retribution (saving of) life, O you (people) of understanding…' (al-Baqara: 179).

We might ask: What kind of killing prevents killing? We see that the meaning of the aphorism is not aggressive acts of murder, but rather, the just retribution of the death penalty. Thus, we see that the human expression falls short of the sublime exhortation against murder which is found in the True Lord's words: 'Whoever kills a soul unless for a soul or for corruption (done) in the land – it is as if he had slain mankind entirely. And whoever saves one – it is as if he had saved mankind entirely.' (al-Ma'ida: 32) The word 'saves' (al-Ma'ida: 32) (ahya) here has more than one meaning and specifically it has two meanings: The first meaning is to preserve the spirit which controls the body and the second meaning is to give life to the faithful spirit, as is the case when the True Lord says: 'respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you the life.' (al-Anfal: 24)

We may observe here that the True Lord also declares that spreading corruption on earth also deserves the death penalty. 'To corrupt' means to disrupt the soundness of what is sound, whilst our faith requires us to preserve the soundness of what is already sound; if we are able to make it better, then we should and if we cannot, then we should at least leave it as it is.

So why does the True Lord state that this is a punishment for spreading corruption on earth? The meaning of 'land' (earth) is the place wherein the True Lord made man His vicegerent. And when the True Lord says; 'or for corruption (done) in the land…' (al-Ma'ida: 32), this means that all corruption affects everything which the earth contains; and the primary thing which earth contains or earth's master, is man. And to corrupt man is to kill him.

So, this 'corruption' must refer to other things, namely other beings or species: animals, plants, and minerals. To corrupt these things is to remove them from the property of those who possess them, such as if a group of people seize the goods of another man or if someone steals someone else's crops or if someone steals the steel of a factory or iron products or the like.

There are two kinds of corruption. Corruption on earth is related to the things which the earth contains, which primarily is man, the master of the earth; and to corrupt man is to kill him or threaten his personal safety and causing him to feel panic and fear. We can observe that the True Lord told Quraysh of how He blessed them by giving them food against hunger and making them safe from danger.

So it is a kind of corruption to frighten people and terrorise them and this takes two forms: you might frighten someone with whom you are at odds and with whom you hold a mutual grudge; or you might frighten someone with whom you have no connection and who have not done anything to you. If someone transgresses against someone when there is a history of hatred and enmity between them, we do not say that this person violates the Sacred Law by claiming his rights; but he cannot take the law into his own hands. Rather, this must be done by the authorities so that it is carried out properly and fairly. He only violates the Sacred Law when he transgresses. But if he transgresses against people without any provocation, this is called hiraba (robbery with violence and sometimes translated as warmongering). An example of this is the one who commits highway robbery and strikes fear into everyone he meets, causing them to feel panic and terror for their lives and their belongings; and their belongings could be animals, plants, or minerals. This is what the Sacred Laws calls hiraba, and there will presently come a verse devoted to it.

So, to spread corruption on earth means to disrupt the soundness of what is sound on earth, which primarily means manthe master of the earth and to corrupt him means either to kill him, attack him, or terrorise him, or to transgress against the things he owns of the lower species such as crops, plants or animals. So it is as though those who spread corruption on earth deserved to be killed.

‘Whoever kills a soul unless for a soul or for corruption (done) in the land – it is as if he had slain mankind entirely.’ (al-Ma’ida: 32) That is, killing someone who has not spread corruption on earth is an offence which must be punished, but to kill someone who is guilty of spreading corruption on earth is another matter; for to kill someone in order to exact lawful retribution for murder or in order to carry out Allah Almighty's law, is a different matter. And even if the family of the victim forgive the murderous warmonger or highwayman, this does not avail him or excuse the punishment for his crime because his crime has been committed against all of society. Allah the Exalted continues: 'And our messengers had certainly come to them with clear proofs. Then indeed many of them, (even) after that, throughout the land, were transgressors.' (al-Ma'ida: 32) A transgressor is the one who goes too far, the one who does not act within the confines of his own status and position in existence but rather attempts to violate the bounds of his capabilities in the universe.

An example of this is the man who tries to usurp the rights of other people, going beyond the limits of fairness and not being content with his own rights alone. This is like highway robbers and thieves who steal the fruits of other people's labours and become accustomed to and comfortable with living like this. This problem does not affect the highwayman alone, but it also affects society, and it is said, 'So-and-so sits in his house all day in comfort and one hour a night spent in robbing people is enough for him.'

The matter is not limited only to that one person, but it affects others as well. All those who own wealth live in fear and when they have their excess wealth stolen from them they will lose the desire to do enough work to earn extra wealth because they will not feel safe and secure. When this happens, those who are unable to work in society will lose the aid and support of those who used to work and earn a lot. So it was in His mercy that Allah Glorified is He gave mankind the opportunity of ownership, as long as it is sought in lawful ways.

Let us give an example to illustrate this – and Allah Almighty is beyond compare: if a man gives a needy person a usurious loan of one hundred pounds, how can he ask for an increase from someone who cannot even meet his life's basic needs? In doing this, he is forced to give the wealthy person more than he took from him, despite his poverty and incapacity. This is the very essence of transgression.

The True Lord then says:

إِنَّمَا جَزَٰٓؤُاْ ٱلَّذِينَ يُحَارِبُونَ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥ وَيَسۡعَوۡنَ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ فَسَادًا أَن يُقَتَّلُوٓاْ
أَوۡ يُصَلَّبُوٓاْ أَوۡ تُقَطَّعَ أَيۡدِيهِمۡ وَأَرۡجُلُهُم مِّنۡ خِلَٰفٍ أَوۡ يُنفَوۡاْ مِنَ
ٱلۡأَرۡضِۚ ذَٰلِكَ لَهُمۡ خِزۡيٞ فِي ٱلدُّنۡيَاۖ وَلَهُمۡ فِي ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ عَذَابٌ عَظِيمٌ ﴿٣٣﴾

Those who wage war against God and His Messenger and strive to spread corruption in the land should be punished by death, crucifixion, the amputation of an alternate hand and foot, or banishment from the land: a disgrace for them in this world, and then a terrible punishment in the Hereafter [33] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 33)

The primary motive of war is appropriation; when a people wage war on another, its aim is to take over the riches or possessions of the other side. So how could anyone make war on Allah Almighty when He is beyond perception? The first way in which people wage war on Allah the Almighty is to attempt to usurp His authority, meaning His Law. When man tries to make laws which are contrary to the way of Allah Glorified is He, he thereby desires to usurp Allah's Right as Lawgiver; and this is the first way in which people wage war on Allah Almighty.

Do those who make war on Allah Almighty desire to usurp His domination? No, because Allah's dominion over everything is timeless and will last forever and He Glorified is He will never relinquish it to any of His servants. So what exactly do they wish to usurp? They wish to alter Allah's laws and regulations, although Allah Alone is truly the Lawgiver. As we said before, laws are like rules for the maintenance of a product. Why then, should we not leave it for the Creator of man to set the regulations which maintain man? So the first mistake people make is to make laws for themselves because the rules for man's maintenance can only be set by his Creator. If anyone comes along with the intention of making rules of maintenance for mankind – of which he himself is a member – we say to him: You seek to usurp Allah's Right.

And how do they wage war on the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him? We know that the Messenger, peace and blessings be upon him, has two different positions: Allah Glorified is He is unseen to us (beyond perception), but the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him dwelled among us in plain sight for a period of time, wherein people waged war on him with the sword. And when the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him passed on to the Supreme Companion, the war waged on him became like the war waged on Allah the Almighty, meaning that they attempted to usurp his lawgiving authority, the second source of law and they said, 'We shall set laws for ourselves and we do not need this messenger.' Or, those of a particular system said, 'we shall only base our laws on Allah's Book' and this notion has spread in certain lands. If we ask every one of these people if they pray, they will say yes; and if we ask them how many cycles there are in the sunset prayer, they will say three; and if we ask them how they know this, even though the Noble Quran does not state it, they will have no answer.

If we ask them how to calculate 'zakat' (the poor-due alms), they will say it should be 2.5% on money and trade, for example. But how do they know this? And how do they know how to perform the pilgrimage? So the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him had a mission and to wage war on him peace and blessings be upon him is to abstain from following his instructions whether it is a saying, a deed or a resolution.

An example of this is those who say that there are too many Hadiths (Prophetic sayings) for the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. To them, we say: The message of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him lasted twenty-three years and everything He peace and blessings be upon him said was a Hadith. Every word which came from his lips was a noble Hadith; and if we were to only count the words he spoke, it would still fill countless volumes. And then everything he peace and blessings be upon him heard someone else say and approved is also a Hadith and everything anyone ever did in front of him to which he did not object is also a Hadith; so how many Hadiths of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him must there be? And how can some people object to the number of Hadiths which have been related to us, even after their authenticity has been so rigorously ascertained? They explain this by saying, 'It is better to deny something that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him actually said than to claim he said something which he did not.' They claim that what they are doing serves to protect Islam, but they forget that Allah Glorified is He protects His own religion and that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him ordained the rules for screening and classifying Hadiths when he peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘Whosoever deliberately tells a lie about me, let him take his seat in the Hell-fire.’(1)

Imam Al-Bukhari may Allah be pleased with him narrated from those who both lived at the same time as the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and were known to have met him, whilst Imam Muslim considered that to have lived at the same time as the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was sufficient because it makes it likely that a meeting took place; and each one of them was extremely precise in his investigations. If a person had a defect in his behaviour, they would not accept his narrations. Therefore when some people try to attack the Prophetic Hadiths by saying, ‘It is enough for me to say there is no deity but Allah Glorified is He’, I wondered why they do not also remember that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of Allah Almighty? How do such people make the call to prayer? And how do they perform the prayer itself? And how does he understand the True Lord’s words: ‘And whatever the Messenger has given you – take; and what he has forbidden you – refrain from’ (al-Hashr: 7)? This is a clear declaration that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is authorised by Allah Glorified is He to legislate.

The same is true of those who impropriety attempt to discredit the great Imams; first they dared to criticise the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, then, they tried to bring the entire religion crashing down. The True Lord says about them: ‘The punishment of those who wage war against Allah and His messenger and strive to make mischief in the land…’ (al-Ma’ida: 33) meaning that they take what is inherently sound and try to make it unsound, thus corrupting it. The recompense is that they be killed or crucified and the phrasing of the words ‘they should be murdered or crucified’ (al-Ma’ida: 33) is meant to give emphasis and strengthening so that the entire faithful society works to apply this commandment and the legal authorities implement it on behalf of all people. The public prosecutor acts on behalf of the people when he prosecutes; this prevents people from taking matters into their own hands and executing others without understanding the law properly.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad, At-Tirmidhi and Al-Hakim on the authority of ‘Ali

'They should be murdered or crucified or their hands and their feet should be cut off on opposite sides that they be exiled from the land.' (al-Ma'ida: 33) Is the use of the word 'or' the words of the verse (al-Ma'ida: 33) here meant to imply choice or do these words apply respectively to the words which preceded them? In Arabic rhetoric there is something called (laff and nashr), which mean 'furling and unfurling', i.e. 'contraction and expansion'. For example, a poet said:

My heart, my eyelid, my tongue and my Creator…

He mentioned several nouns all at once, but no description of any of them; this is called (laff) or 'furling' because all the subjects are drawn together without any of their predicates being mentioned. The (nashr) or 'unfurling' is when the predicates are given together in the same order when the poet continues:

Are content, weeping, grateful and forgiving

So when we read the two lines together, they say:

My heart, my eye, my tongue, and my Creator

Are content, weeping, grateful and forgiving

And the True Lord says: 'And out of His mercy He made for you the night and the day that you may rest therein and (by day) seek from His bounty and (that) perhaps you will be grateful.' (al-Qasas: 73)

His words "that you may rest" therein refer to "night" and His words "and (by day) seek from His bounty" (al-Qasas: 73) refer to "day". So first comes the furling, and then the unfurling.

Corruption, as we know, has many forms. To corrupt a man might mean to kill him, or to kill him and take his possessions or to usurp his possessions without killing him or to terrorise him without killing him or taking his possessions. It is as though the word "corruption" incorporates all the different modes of corruption: killing and stealing, stealing without killing, terrorising and intimidating.

The True Lord says: 'or that they be exiled from the land' (al-Ma'ida: 33). To exile means to expel and cast out; and only someone who is settled somewhere can be banished and only someone who is resident can be cast out. We call this a ‘residence’ or a ‘homeland’ meaning a place where a person lives and settles. The meaning of his being ‘settled’ there is that he moves within its circles but has a place to which he always returns to on a regular basis. Therefore it is called a ‘residence’ because he resides there after having moved in various circles. The meaning of ‘banishment’ is to take a person out of his residence and the place he calls home and the place wherein he spread corruption. But where do we send the person whom we banish? Someone might say that if you take him out of one place wherein he has spread corruption and send him somewhere else, he will continue his corruption there! No, because banishment does not give him the opportunity to indulge in this corruption because in his original homeland he was familiar with the geography and with those whom he terrorised and he knew the behaviour of his neighbours and knew how to frighten certain people, how to steal the goods of others and so on. But when he is banished to an unfamiliar place, he will need a lot of time to become familiar with the geography of the place, the people’s positions there and their weak spots. Because of this, banishment is an effective way to bring an end to the corrupt person’s corruption.

When Allah Almighty says; ‘or that they be exiled from the land’ (al-Ma’ida: 33), we know that we use the word ‘land ‘ard’ nowadays to mean planet Earth. In the past, they understood this to mean the dry land and the water which covers the planet; once we became aware of the atmosphere, the earth’s atmosphere became considered part of the earth. Therefore, we said that in the case of sacred sites, the atmosphere above a sacred site is considered to be part of it and to share its sanctity. The air above the Ka’ba is part of it. This is proved by the fact that, if someone prays on the third level of the Sacred Mosque, he is still facing the Ka’ba, even though he is higher than its building because he faces the air above it. And if someone on a plane wants to pray, he can face towards the air above the Ka’ba. And when more and more people began to perform pilgrimage and the area between Al-Safa and Al-Marwah became too small to accommodate them all, they made a second level so that people could pass between them there. So the ground between the two sites is not the only place where the rite can be performed, but the air above it is also sacred; and however many levels we build, they will still be fit for the ritual.

So the earth's atmosphere is part of the earth in every way. Because of this, and before there were Muslim pilots, they would not allow any non-Muslim plane to fly above the Sacred Mosque because a non-Muslim pilot would not be permitted to enter the Ka'ba and the Sacred Mosque; and as long as he would not be allowed to enter the Ka'ba, he should not be allowed to fly over it either.

This is because the air above a sacred object shares in its sanctity and the air is part of the earth; and we know that the atmosphere turns as the earth turns. From this, we can recognise the wonders of the Quran which were placed in it by its Speaker, the Creator of the universe. As long as the Quran is the speech of the Creator of this universe, there cannot be any contradiction between scientific facts and Quranic facts. Contradictions can only occur in two instances: we either consider a mere theory to be fact even though it has not actually been proven fact or else we erroneously attribute something to the Quran which it does not actually say. If something is truly a scientific fact and truly a Quranic fact, there will be absolutely no contradiction. A proof of this, for example, is that the True Lord says: 'and knows what is in the wombs.' (Luqman: 34)

And now modern science has come up with ways of investigating and analysing so that some superficial people say, 'No, science can tell us what is in the womb and whether it is male or female.' To this, we say: We do not dispute that because it is a scientific fact; yet it does not contradict a correct understanding of the Quranic fact given here. But let us ask: when do the scientists know this? They do not know it until a certain amount of time has passed, but the True Lord knows it before any time passes at all. And anyway, who said that by 'what is in the wombs' (Luqman: 34) The True Lord meant the gender of the baby only? Do these words only mean one thing? No, they mean many things: no one knows whether what is in the womb will grow to be tall or short, intelligent or not, happy or sad, forbearing or quick-tempered or whether its life will be long or short. Why should we take the word 'what' to refer to the gender of the baby alone?

He the Exalted knew the future from pre-eternity before any scientist knew it and before the scientist can take any sample. Moreover, does every pregnant woman go to a doctor to be examined to see what she is carrying in her womb? Of course, she does not, and we do not know what her womb contains; but the Supreme Creator knows. Moreover, do all the pregnant women in the world go to the same doctor? Of course, they do not, but the Supreme Creator knows what is in every womb.

Therefore, there is no Quranic fact that contradicts any scientific fact; the contradiction only occurs when we erroneously understand the Quranic fact on Allah's Knowledge of what is hidden in the womb. (Luqman: 34) We misunderstood this verse thinking that it refers only to the question of gender.

There is another instance which is misinterpreted by people, that is, when Allah Glorified is He says that He has spread the earth out wide (al-Hijr: 19). Some people, wrongly and incorrectly, understand these Words of Allah Glorified is He and think that they mean that the earth upon which man dwells is flat. It has been proved as a scientific fact that the earth is spherical by some evidence as the voyage of Magellan, the special rules for building pillars and the fact that the upper parts of things appear first as you move towards them and so on; in our age, satellites have allowed us to witness such evidence by our own eyes. So this is a scientific fact which does not need further discussion; therefore, the mistake was made through misunderstanding the meaning of the Quranic facts as a result of the false assumption that the earth should be flat. Accordingly, the correct meaning of this Quranic fact is that wherever we go, the earth is there before us, without an end or edge. Allah Glorified is He spread out the earth before man so that wherever he goes, he will find the earth expanded before him and this could only be the case if the earth was spherical. So we see that the mistake was made in the understanding of the Quranic fact because contradictions only occur if something is believed to be a scientific fact, while actually it is not or when a Quranic fact is misunderstood. They can never truly be contradictory, for the one speaking is the Creator Himself. Therefore, we have recently learned that the atmosphere is part of the earth and that it turns with the earth's orbit. We used to say that we travel 'on' the earth, but Allah Glorified is He says; 'Say, Travel throughout the earth' (al-An'am: 11).

He previously knows that the atmosphere is part of the earth; so however far a man travels on land, the atmosphere remains above him which means that he travels in the earth, not on the earth. Only when he goes above the atmosphere does man go above the earth.

Now we return to Allah's saying '…or banishment from the land...' (al-Ma'ida: 33). We know that banishment means expulsion and exile from land, but from which land are they banished and to which land are they sent? No one can be banished except someone who is currently settled. Thus, we sensitively have to differentiate between two opposite words; Nafi (Negation) which is equal to banishment and (Affirmation) which is equal to settlement. When we take water from a well, we lower a pail on a rope to collect it. And when we bring the pail back up from the well, it carries as much water as it can hold according to its size and volume. But is there a stable process by which we can ensure that the pail is filled up exactly to its brim so that water does not spill? Of course, this is not possible and a little water always spills from the brim of the pail and in Arabic, this spilled water is called (Nafi). We cannot get the pail out of the well when it is filled to the brim with such stable motion that no water spills from it at all.

Water, as we know, flows very easily with only the subtlest of inclines so that people use spirit levels devices that measure how perfectly horizontal a surface is. Many other words are derived from the root word (Nafi), such as (Nifaya) which means 'excess'. So, how can someone be banished (Nafi) from the land? Should we understand the word 'land 'in its general or specific meaning? Does it refer to the land wherein the highwaymen operate?

If we understand it according to its specific meaning, then it means that they are to be banished to any other land; and if we understand the word 'earth 'according to its general meaning, then how can they be banished? We may observe the meaning that Allah Glorified is He has intended in light of another verse of the Quran whereby Allah Glorified is He ordered the children of Israel to dwell in the land after Pharaoh had died. (al-Isra': 104)

Of course, they would dwell on the land, but these words are used to impart a particular meaning. We know that we only speak of habitation when we specify a particular place on earth in which we dwell, such as if someone says, "Dwell in the US," or "Dwell in the UN." Therefore, the meaning intended here is that Allah Glorified is He is telling us that He would disperse them throughout the earth in such a way that they would never settle together in one place. This affirms what Allah Glorified is He says elsewhere that He has ordained on the children of Israel to disperse on the earth as separate communities. (al-A'raf: 168) So, they had no homeland of their own and were to be dispersed on the earth and this was what actually happened.

Did the children of Israel ever settle together in one homeland? No. Allah Glorified is He never changes His Decree even in the case of the country they were established in because of the Balfour Declaration; Allah Glorified is He has fulfilled His promise to the believers that they will enter the Mosque as soon as they made their best effort to restore it. Furthermore, the Jews actually remain, according to their nature, dispersed all over the earth and in every country they have their own special quarters and every group of them preserves its own identity and does not integrate with those amongst whom they live. Allah Glorified is He informs us concerning the last stance of the children of Israel that when the promise of the Hereafter shall come to pass, they would be gathered in one place after their dispersing in the land. (al-Isra': 104)

When Allah Glorified is He brings them forth at the onset of the Last Day, they will be gathered together because when Allah Glorified is He gives the community of the believers the strength to deal the final blow to those people, they must all be gathered together. It is as though Allah Glorified is He wants them to have this 'nation-state 'so that they would gather therein and thereupon He will rain down His final blow upon them, having gathered them to the assembly of all people. So, we should not grieve because they have a state, for He has brought them to the assembly of all people.

Now, we return to the verse under discussion; how is this banishment from the earth to be undertaken? When Allah Glorified is He wants to specify a place, He says for example: '…Enter the holy land…' (al-Ma'ida: 21). In doing so, He has negated all other places. And He also says that' He means to drive you out of your land!' (al-A'raf: 110) Here, Egypt is meant.

If we consider the word "earth" in its general meaning, it will share the same meaning with the following verse '...Dwell on earth…'. Banishment is one of the punishments for spreading corruption and there are four kinds of spreading corruption on earth: murder, theft and frightening and the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him also added something which can be learned from his biography, wherein he alerted us to another form of corruption of which the scholars should be aware. The first banishment which took place in Islam occurred when the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him banished Al-Hakam ibn Abu Al-'As from Medina to At-Ta'if because Al-Hakam had – Allah forbid – imitated ironically the way in which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to walk. When the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to walk, he would stride as though he were descending a steep hill and thus, he had a unique way of walking. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him learned that Al-Hakam had been mockingly imitating the way he walked; when he noticed this suddenly one day, he banished him from Medina to At-Ta'if. Al-Hakam remained there until Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him passed away and then when Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him became the caliph, Al-Hakam's family went to him to ask him to allow Al-Hakam to return to Medina, so Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him said: ''I would never remove a decree which the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him issued." So they went to 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab after he became the caliph and likewise he refused. Also when 'Uthman ibn Affan may Allah be pleased with him who was a shy and coy man, became the caliph, he said: ''I heard something from the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him which may have indicated that Al- Hakam should be pardoned"; so 'Uthman may Allah be pleased with him pardoned and permitted him to return to Medina.

During the lifetime of Al-Hakam in At-Ta'if, he owned a few sheep and goat which he would tend to foster in the hills of the city; and this matter had repercussions that will affect thereafter. As you know, Mu'awiya's son Yazid became a caliph after him and after Yazid, the caliphate passed on to the family of Marwan, the son of Al-Hakam.

Khalid ibn Yazid, the one who passed the caliphate on to Marwan, was a great chemist, and had a brother named 'Abdullah, who owned horses for racing. One of 'Abd Al-Malik ibn Marwan's sons also owned horses, which he raced against 'Abdullah's. And when 'Abdullah's horses were about to win the race, a dispute broke out between him and 'Abd Al-Malik's son and ‘Abd Al-Malik’s son chided ‘Abdullah harshly. So, ‘Abdullah went and complained to his brother Khalid who went to 'Abd Al-Malik ibn Marwan and said, ‘‘A dispute has arisen between your son and my brother.”

At that time, Abd Al-Malik was known amongst the Arabs for his eloquence, and they had never heard him make a grammatical error and he had raised his children to never make mistakes in their Arabic. However, he had a son named Al-Walid who was incapable of speaking the language correctly without any grammatical mistakes. So, when Khalid went to ‘Abd Al-Malik, he wanted to find a way to criticise him, but ‘Abd Al-Malik said to Khalid, ‘‘Do you dare to speak to me about ‘Abdullah when he came to me just now and spoke without grammar?”

So, Khalid said to ‘Abd Al-Malik, referring to Al-Walid: ‘‘By Allah’s eloquence impresses me! ‘Abd Al-Malik replied: ‘‘If Al-Walid makes mistakes in his speech, then his brother Sulaiman never does!” So, Khalid said: ‘‘And if ‘Abdullah makes mistakes in his speech, then his brother Khalid never does!” “Be quiet, man!” ‘Abd Al-Malik said, ‘‘for you were not part of the Caravan or the troop!”

Now ‘the Caravan’ originally meant the caravan of goods which Abu Sufyan was bringing from the Levant when the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him wanted to seize it, but Abu Sufyan escaped. And ‘the troop’ originally meant the people whom Abu Sufyan called forth from Mecca for support because he feared the Muslims. The ‘Caravan’ was led by Abu Sufyan and the ‘the troop’ was led by ‘Utba ibn Rabi’a; ‘Utba was Khalid’s maternal grandfather, while Abu Sufyan was his paternal grandfather. So Khalid replied: ‘‘and who is more closely connected to the Caravan and the troop than me? My grandfather, Abu Sufyan, was the leader of the Caravan and my grandfather ‘Utba was the leader of the troop. Mockingly Khalid said, “But perhaps you had better spoken about the little flocks of sheep and goats and hills of At-Ta’if in which your grandfather was confined – and may Allah Glorified is He have mercy on ‘Uthman who let him free! And with these words his opponent fell silent.”

So, banishment was the first punishment that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him carried out, but was what Al-Hakam did a form of corruption?

We say that all corruption is lesser than that which is directed against the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and Al-Hakam was mocking the way the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him walked.

A lawmaker might say that prison fulfils the same function of banishment, but we say: No, for today, the prison has many comforts and in the past prison was much harder than it is today. The purpose of prison is to remove the criminal from society so that his/her evils are prevented, even if he/she is not actually taken from the land in which he/she lives. This is up to the discretion of the ruler who can apply it however he/she wishes, especially if there were no longer several Islamic lands so that he/she could banish the criminal from one land to another.

Allah Glorified is He continues: '…A disgrace for them in this world and then a terrible punishment in the Hereafter.' These words refer to the aforementioned prescribed punishment for those who spread corruption in earth and wage war against Allah Glorified is He and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him which should be punished by death, crucifixion, the amputation of an alternate hand and foot, or banishment from the land and these punishments are a disgrace for them.

The Arabic word khizi (disgrace) has two meanings; it may refer to 'scandal'; the verb with the verbal noun (khizi) means 'to be exposed', whereas the verb with a verbal noun (khazaya) and (khaza) mean 'to feel ashamed'. These two meanings are related to each other, for when a person's secrets are exposed, he/she feels ashamed. These actions are ignominious, such as the one who commits highway robbery; and we say to those who do such deeds: "Your power is not intrinsic, but rather ephemeral; for if it were intrinsic, you would be able to escape when they came to kill you, crucify you or cut off your hand and foot. And you chose to assault those who were unarmed and thus, unable to defend themselves and this is also ignominious and disgraceful for you, especially when you see those who used to fear you, while you are being punished. Furthermore the ignominy you suffer now is but a prelude to another great suffering in the Hereafter, wherein you shall undergo a yet more a painful and great punishment." Allah Glorified is He says that there will be disgrace for them in this world and then a terrible punishment in the Hereafter. Requital in this worldly life is limited to man’s power to punish; but what will happen when they are given over to the ultimate Power of Allah the Almighty?

Then, the Justice of Allah Glorified is He is manifested, for He gives those who commit sins and act wrongly against themselves the chance; first to repent, for if Allah Glorified is He the Dispenser of Mercy to His servants were to punish every man for a single crime or sin he/she committed without any possibility of forgiveness, the world would be filled with the corruption of everyone who commits sins because they would despair of Allah’s Forgiveness and sink further into sin and iniquity. Allah Glorified is He has opened the door of repentance for all those who act wrongly against themselves and if there were no repentance, then every sinner would lose hope. So, suppose that one of the people guilty of these crimes regained his/her conscience: if he repents before you catch him, then there is a ruling for this situation; but if he/she repents after society catches him/her, then his/her repentance is worthless. Allah Glorified is He says:

إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ تَابُوا۟ مِن قَبْلِ أَن تَقْدِرُوا۟ عَلَيْهِمْ ۖ فَٱعْلَمُوٓا۟ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٌ رَّحِيمٌ (٣٤)

unless they repent before you overpower them – in that case bear in mind that God is forgiving and merciful [34] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 34)

As long as the one who deserves such penalties repents and turns himself/herself in before he/she is caught by society, he/she has the right for his/her repentance to be accepted. We must understand that Allah’s Forgiveness and Mercy are related to His Right; but the families of the victims are entitled to demand the punishment of the assaulter.

If they repent before the society overpowers them, then Allah Glorified is He will accept their repentance. The Quran combines all the different aspects of the way of faith into a single unit and divides different matters into different sections, in the way that human legislation is arranged into chapters. Therefore, we find that the Quran treats issues as though they are opportunities for the soul to wake up and come to its senses, so Allah Glorified is He directs the soul methodologically to follow instructions, and finally becomes obedient.

We gave an example before on how the Quran speaks about family issues in the chapter al-Baqara where Allah Glorified is He says that the husband should give half of the bride-gift to the wife if he divorces her before consummating the marriage yet after fixing a Bride-a gift for her, unless they waive their right, or unless the one who holds the marriage tie waives his right. (al-Baqara: 237)

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He turns to the issue of prayer in the two verses that follow the previous verse when He commands us to take care when offering the prayers and to do them in the best way by standing before Him in devotion. If we are in danger, we can pray when we are out walking or riding, but when you are safe again, we should remember Allah Glorified is He for He has taught us what we did not know. (al-Baqara: 238-239)

Allah Glorified is He placed the issue of prayer in between two issues related to the family, since after speaking of the importance of being mindful of the prayers, even in times of war, He said that those who may die and leave wives should make a bequest for them: a year's maintenance and no expulsion from their homes during that time. But if they leave of their own accord, they will not be blamed. (al-Baqara: 240)

He mentioned the issue of prayer between two issues of familial relations in order to show that the religion is a single unit and also because the soul which is filled with hatred and the woes of the contentious issues of marriage; inheritance and divorce is calmed when it performs the prayer. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is an excellent example for us: when something occupied him and seemed difficult to him, he would pray.

So, Allah Glorified is He does not present the different facets of the religion in separate chapters; one chapter for prayer, another for fasting, and a third for zakat, the poor-due; no, rather, He mixes all this together into a single blend. Therefore, when He has decreed that spreaders of corruption and those who wage war against Allah Glorified is He and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him are to be killed, crucified, amputated or banished, this was meant to inspire awe and dread in the human soul; and once that dread was awakened in the human soul, Allah Glorified is He says:

يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ ٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ وَٱبْتَغُوٓا۟ إِلَيْهِ ٱلْوَسِيلَةَ
وَجَـٰهِدُوا۟ فِى سَبِيلِهِۦ لَعَلَّكُمْ تُفْلِحُونَ ﴿٣٥﴾

You who believe, be mindful of God, seek ways to come closer to Him and strive for His cause, so that you may prosper [35] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 35)

We now come out of a stern atmosphere and talk of punishments and penalties and turn to having piety and being mindful of Allah Glorified is He. Piety -as we have come to know- means to place a protective barrier between oneself and all that might harm one.

We know that Allah Glorified is He has commanded us to be mindful of Him and also to be mindful of fire. (al-Baqara: 24) Furthermore, we know that fearing Allah Glorified is He and piety mean that we must place a protective barrier between Allah's Punishment and ourselves. And when someone says that Allah Glorified is He tells us to adhere to His Path and to always be under His Care, we should place a protective barrier between Allah's punishment and ourselves, one of which is the fire of hell.

So, Allah Glorified is He commands the believers to be mindful to Him, which means that we should have awe of His Attributes of Majesty; and hell-fire is one of the creations of Allah the Exalted and one of His soldiers.

He Glorified is He then commands us to seek ways to come closer to Him, that is, we should search for the intermediary means which will bring us closer to His obedience, pleasure and love. And is there any way of drawing closer to Allah Glorified is He other than doing what He has ordained? Can a man draw closer to any being except by those things which he knows that this being loves?

On the human level, we find that someone might ask, 'What does so-and-so like? 'When they tell him that so-and-so likes neck ties, he gives him a gift of some ties. And if they tell him that so-and-so likes good quality rosaries, he gives him a lovely rosary. So people always draw near to others by means of what they love – so how do we think we should draw closer to Allah Glorified is He? He explains to us what He loves in a Qudsi Hadith: The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Allah said, 'I will declare war against he who shows hostility to a pious worshipper of Mine; and the most beloved things with which My slave comes nearer to Me, is what I have enjoined upon him; and My slave keeps on coming closer to Me through performing Nawafil (praying or doing extra deeds besides what is obligatory) till I love him, so I become his sense of hearing with which he hears, his sense of sight with which he sees, his hand with which he grips and his leg with which he walks; and if he asks Me, I will give him and if he asks My protection (Refuge), I will protect him, (i.e. give him My Refuge).'(1)

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He shows His servant the right way saying in this a Qudsi Hadith; '…and My slave keeps on coming closer to Me through performing Nawafil (praying or doing extra deeds besides what is obligatory)….' That means the servant seeks closeness to Allah Glorified is He with those things which He has not obliged him to do, yet which are from the same type of actions as those which He has made obligatory; for it is not correct to invent new ways of worshipping. So to seek to come closer to Allah Glorified is He means to obey Him and adhere to His Path, manifested by His words 'Do' and 'Do not do.'

The word (Al-Wasila) is also the name of one of the levels of paradise. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him advised us to call Allah Glorified is He to give him (al-Wasila) virtue when he says: 'When you hear the Adhan (the call to prayer), repeat what the Mu'adhdhin (the one doing the call to prayer) says. Then ask Allah to exalt my mention because everyone who does so will receive in return ten rewards from Allah. Then beseech Allah to grant me al-Wasilah, which is a high rank in paradise, fitting for only one of Allah's slaves; and I hope that I will be that man. If any one asks al-Wasilah for me, it becomes incumbent upon me to intercede for him….' (2)

We do not wish to enter here into a discussion of the practice of taking the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him or the pious worshippers of Allah ('Awliya') as intermediaries between us and Allah Glorified is He because it is not something which should cause any dispute. Some people have even declared that those who do such a practice are unbelievers; and to those who say this, we say:

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

(2) Narrated by Muslim

You must subject this statement to a little refinement because statements such as this are the result of the lack of understanding. Those who take the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him or a Wali of Allah the Exalted as an intermediary between them and Allah Glorified is He do so because they see that he has a high rank in Allah's sight. Does anyone believe that the Awliya' could flatter him by giving him something which is not one of his rights? Of course not, and there are people who say, ''It is fine to use living people as intermediaries, but not dead people." To them, we say: You are restricting something which is broad because a person's being alive does not have anything to do with their being taken as an intermediary. If you seek to take the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him as an intermediary between you and Allah Glorified is He the basis of your endeavour is the love you feel for one whom you know to be closer to Allah Glorified is He than you are; your love for him is what intercedes. Also do not think that this will get you anything you do not deserve.

To those who say, ''We cannot seek to use the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him as an intermediary between us and Allah Glorified is He because he has passed away", then we say: Wait a moment, and think about what 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him said: ''At the time of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him when the rains failed, we would seek his intermediation and pray for rain. But after the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him passed away, we would seek the intermediation of his uncle Al-'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him. 'So they will ground their proof by saying,' if seeking the intermediation of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him after his passing were permissible, then 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab may Allah be pleased with him would not have stopped seeking his intermediation after he passed away and would have sought the intermediation of his uncle instead. But we ask: Did 'Umar supplicate to Allah the Exalted saying, ''We used to seek the intermediation of Your Prophet, but now we seek the intermediation of Al-'Abbas to draw closer to You?" Or, did he say: ''We seek to draw closer to You by the intermediation of Your Prophet's uncle?" So those who declare this to be forbidden only serve to restrict themselves even further because we are not only able to seek the intermediation of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him, but we can also seek the intermediation of anyone who has a connection with him. When you seek the intermediation of someone to draw closer to someone else, this means that you believe that the one whose intermediation you seek cannot do anything for you; the reason you seek his intermediation is that you know that he alone cannot meet your need. So let us distance the concept of 'associating partners with Allah Glorified is He' from this matter, so we say: We seek his intermediation because we know that the One to Whom we seek intermediation is All-Powerful, whilst the one by whom we seek intermediation is powerless – and this is the very ultimate degree of certitude and faith in Allah Glorified is He.

But the one whose intermediation is sought might benefit or might not. When 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him sought the intermediation of Al-'Abbas, the Prophet's uncle, he did this to seek rain and in such a circumstance, rain would not have benefited the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. So it is as though 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him brought forth one of the Prophetic family and said, ''O, Lord, Your Prophet's uncle is thirsty, so for his sake, we seek rain.'

So the intermediation which 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him sought from the Prophet's uncle is evidence against those who say that it became forbidden to seek the intermediation of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him when he passed away. In order for us to avoid dispute, we say that the good deeds embodied by 'Do' and 'Do not do' are the purest form of intermediary; and in this way, we will avoid getting caught up in disputes.

Allah Glorified is He commands the believers to be mindful of Him, to seek ways to come closer to Him and to strive for His cause. So that they may prosper, we consider the faithful altruism through which Allah Glorified is He wants to instil fear in the soul of the believer by means of Allah Glorified is He, which means to steer clear of what He forbids and by his seeking to come closer to Allah Glorified is He by following His Commandments.

The religion did not come only for your own sake, but rather, your faith is not complete until you love for your brother what you love for yourself. And if you love for yourself to be guided on the right way, then you should do your best to ensure the same for your fellow men. And your fellow believers are not the only people who live with you now, but also the people who might come afterwards; therefore you must strive in Allah's Cause to establish His religion. In this way, the aspiration of faith widens; it does not only apply to the believer or his contemporaries. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He makes a straight Path for us and shows us where it leads.

The beginning of the Path was that when the believer was convinced that Allah Glorified is He will give him a pleasure and reward in the Hereafter better than what he seeks in the worldly life, he sacrificed his life and was martyred for His cause. Therefore a great Companion said, 'Does nothing lie between me and paradise except that I enter this battle, and either kill the enemy or die at their hands?' The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'Indeed, this is so.' So the Companion threw down the dates which he had been eating and entered the battle.

He must, therefore, have known that the life which awaited him was better than the life which he was living. Yet, Allah Glorified is He has not made struggling in His cause a means of drawing closer to Him in the beginning; rather, He kept commanding them to wait and have patience until He had moulded those who would bear His Message. He did not want to make it a suicide mission.

And after that, we see that as the Islamic Mission continued on its journey, a Companion might grieve because during a battle 'Amr ibn Al-'As and Khalid ibn Al-Walid escaped from him so that he was not able to kill them. Yet the passing of time confirmed that the people had been unaware that Allah Glorified is He saved Khalid and spared him from the blade of the Companion in order to later make Islam victorious by means of Khalid Allah be pleased with him. And likewise, Allah Glorified is He saved 'Amr ibn Al-'As may Allah be pleased with him so that he too would give succour to Islam.

So the struggle in Allah's Cause assures the believer that the Path of Allah Glorified is He in which he believes will continue until the end of time and this can only be attained if the Message is allowed to be spread to the whole world. Furthermore, when the believing soul is prepared to struggle in Allah's Cause, this means that the altruism of faith must be placed in it and that it knows that it has chosen the best faith. It loves to pass it over to others and it does not accept that it takes the goodness of faith and deprives those who live alongside it in the non-Islamic lands from its goodness and that it is keen that the whole world embraces faith. If we consider this matter, we find that it represents a deep understanding of the meaning of life. If people are good, then man will benefit from all their goodness; and if they are evil, then man will suffer from their evil.

So it is in the interest of the good person to pass his goodness on to others, because if his goodness spreads then he will expect to benefit from this goodness in turn; for people trust the good man and no evil comes to them from him because he loves for all people to be good and to be on the side of faith; for if they are on the side of faith the good man will benefit from their goodness. But if people continue to do evil, whilst the good man continues to be good, then they will continue to benefit from his goodness, whilst he suffers from their evil. So it is part of the wisdom of faith for one to pass on his good to others. And if the believer wishes to call to Allah's Cause and spread His Path, he must be prepared for this before he meets the enemy in battle. So before meeting the enemy on the battlefield, one must be prepared; and when the believer prepares himself, he finds that all the motions of life are with him. To call to Allah Glorified is He requires good conduct and good conduct spreads among people and when this happens, the forces of faith become stronger and improve both in conduct and in action. And when the forces of faith become stronger, they can extract the treasures of the earth and defend the abode of faith by means of industrial, scientific, and military progress. Allah Glorified is He says that He has sent Iron on earth with both; mighty strength and benefits for mankind. (al-Hadid: 25)

He sent down the Quran and He also sent down iron. He also continues to say that He makes evident those who support Him and His messengers though they cannot see Him. This refers to the attribute of 'great might' and this is the second means concerning which Allah Glorified is He counselled us: Do not consider that the way of Allah Glorified is He is confined to Do's and Don't's, but also consider Allah's Glorified is He Path to incorporate everything that protects Allah's way such as scientific progress, through extracting the treasures of the earth like iron and using them in manufacturing. Just as Allah Glorified is He has sent down the Quran to convey His Path of guidance, He also sent down iron and it is man's job to utilise iron and the other raw materials to manufacture scientific apparatus and build factories in which we make steel out of the iron and make armature out of the steel and produce the precise instruments which give the soldier the chance to attain victory. And we must also store up enough foodstuff to suffice us during wartime.

So all the motions of life are part of the struggle and you must not think of striving in His cause as applying only to the battlefield. Rather, you must prepare yourself for battle. Now if you are well prepared and your enemy sees that you have done so, he might refrain from attacking you. In our times, what prevents the world from entering into a vicious battle which would ultimately destroy it is the fear of the evenly matched forces, for each nation has prepared itself for war and were there only one power in the world everything would be destroyed.

We understand the Words of Allah Glorified is He 'strife (jihad) in His Cause' to refer to striving in the cause of Allah's Path that we must study and understand it and then strive in its Cause with words and if necessary, with arms, by the book and by the troops.

So Allah's Command to strive in His cause is meant to form a faithful and civilized so that we do not give the disbeliever the chance to utilise the means and secrets which Allah Glorified is He has placed in the universe. Those who worship Allah Glorified is He alone are entitled to the secrets He has placed in the universe more than others; and even if we suppose that war will not take place, but we still possess factories which produce and farms which suffice everyone, then we will truly have attained sufficiency, for what is not used in war can be used in the time of peace. You must understand that all of the inventions of modern life are first meant to be used in war and afterwards when people calm down, humanity uses these inventions for the good of peace.

Allah Glorified is He subsequently says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ لَوۡ أَنَّ لَهُم مَّا فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ جَمِيعٗا وَمِثۡلَهُۥ مَعَهُۥ
لِيَفۡتَدُواْ بِهِۦ مِنۡ عَذَابِ يَوۡمِ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ مَا تُقُبِّلَ مِنۡهُمۡۖ وَلَهُمۡ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٞ ٣٦

If the disbelievers possessed all that is in the earth and twice as much again and offered it to ransom themselves from torment on the Day of Resurrection, it would not be accepted from them – they will have a painful torment [36]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 36)

Allah Glorified is He spoke before about punishments, retribution, killing and amputation; then He moved us from this topic and exhorted us to have Fear of Allah Glorified is He and to seek to draw closer to Him, and to strive in His Cause in order to attain to a happy state. It was, therefore, inevitable that Allah Glorified is He would then remind us of the contrary state. The punishments mentioned before, such as retribution and execution, are confined to this world; but what will come in the Hereafter, which is referred to in this verse, is even more severe and bitter.

We can imagine the disbelievers who hold themselves so lofty in this worldly life and wreak tyranny on account of their haughtiness –what will happen to them on the Day of Judgement? They used their power to oppress others, but this power will leave and desert them on that Day. They had power in this worldly life because of the means which Allah Glorified is He gave to them, and the natural order which Allah Glorified is He established did not prevent them from progressing. Allah Glorified is He has created this natural order and anyone who seeks to utilise Allah's means, will get the results of his effort. But on the Day of Judgement they will learn that these means were not intrinsically theirs and that their strength was only a gift from Allah Glorified is He. They will face this living reality and if they possessed all that the world contained, or even twice as much and sought to offer it as a ransom to save them from the torment of hell, Allah Glorified is He would not accept it. This is the ultimate disgrace and they will not be able to save themselves from the torment of hell.

This reality makes the soul conscious and well aware of the fact that this is not all a game or an amusement, but that it is as serious as can be. A man must consider the punishment before he enjoys the crime; what makes people steep themselves in sin is that they separate the punishment from the crime. If before wronging himself, a man thought of the punishment for this crime, he would not commit it. The same is true of the one who is too lazy to obey Allah Glorified is He; if he considered what the reward for obedience is, he would be eager to obey. Let us give an example to illustrate this matter– and Allah Glorified is He is beyond comparison: Suppose that a man in a desert sees a tree above the highest mountain and realises it is an apple-tree when he sees a rotten apple fall from it onto the ground. He says to himself, ‘‘I can see how people could die here: one might fall from the mountainside, another might be attacked by wolves, and a third might lose the way – all this because of their hope that the tree has fruit. I must, therefore, choose the safest way to the fruit.” The road which leads to the fruits of this world is that of obeying Allah Glorified is He – and it is also the road to the fruits of the Hereafter.

Another example is: A hard-working student gets up early and makes ablution and prays and then goes out to school in the cold weather to attend his lessons. He comes home to eat the food his mother has prepared for him, but his mind is engrossed in his studies. This young man bears in the mind what the result of this effort will be and therefore, all the hard work he does for his education is easy for him. Had he been neglectful and slept late, not getting up early for school but instead, going out to hang around in the street with others like him, he would not be thinking of the end to which this loafing was taking him. The problem with people is that they separate actions from their results, crimes from their punishments and obedience from its reward. If we were to consider consequences along with actions, no one would ever commit a sin, or fail to obey Allah Glorified is He.

We can imagine how the tyrants of this world will look in hell in the Hereafter. In this world they tyrannised and usurped; and even if we suppose that one of them owned everything in the whole world – even though this is impossible – and owned it twice over and then offered it as a ransom to save himself from the suffering of hell, Allah Glorified is He will reject it from him, and he will suffer a severe punishment. This is the ultimate disgrace which anyone must be at pains to avoid. Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

يُرِيدُونَ أَن يَخْرُجُوا۟ مِنَ ٱلنَّارِ وَمَا هُم بِخَٰرِجِينَ مِنْهَا ۖ وَلَهُمْ عَذَابٌ مُّقِيمٌ ﴿٣٧﴾

They will wish to come out of the Fire but they will be unable to do so: theirs will be a lasting torment [37]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 37)

Every time the flames of the fire touch them, they will wish to come out of it. But how will they get the idea of coming out of the fire? It must be that as the Fire touches them and pushes them here and there, the flames will push them towards the exit so that they will imagine that their suffering is over. Similarly, Allah Glorified is He gives us a perfect image of the ferocity of hell when He says that if the wrongdoers ask for relief they will be relieved. (al-Kahf: 29)

This seems to suggest that mercy will be extended to them, but what comes next depicts the pure horror of the reality that they will be relieved with water like murky oil which scalds faces. This is the ultimate horror, imparted by the contrast between the early hope and the final despair.

For example, a thirsty prisoner might ask for a cup of water. The guard could simply say, 'No, there is no water'; but if he wants to torment the prisoner more than this, he would say, 'I will bring you water' and brings a cup of cool water and as the prisoner reaches out to take the water the guard throws it onto the floor. This is an example of early hope and final despair. The same applies to their desire to leave the hell; they would only have the desire to leave if they had thought that it is possible, as the flames will toss them here and there. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He also commands the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to give them glad tidings. (Al-'Imran: 21)

The notions of the "glad tidings" gives the soul hope of mercy, so they will rejoice, but what comes next which is a glad tiding of severe punishment. In this way, Allah Glorified is He wants them to be shocked by the pain of disappointment after having entertained with some hope. He says that they will wish to come out of the fire but they will be unable to do so and they will suffer a lasting torment. Afterwards Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱلسَّارِقُ وَٱلسَّارِقَةُ فَٱقۡطَعُوٓاْ أَيۡدِيَهُمَا جَزَآءَۢ بِمَا
كَسَبَا نَكَٰلٗا مِّنَ ٱللَّهِۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَزِيزٌ حَكِيمٞ ﴿٣٨﴾

Cut off the hands of thieves, whether they are man or woman, as punishment for what they have done – a deterrent from God: God is almighty and wise [38] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 38)

Allah Glorified is He previously speaks of the punishment for the highway robbers and spreaders of corruption and here He speaks of another matter by which He wishes to protect the fruits of the believer's work in his society; for faith wants the believer to work and if a person is to work, he must be sure that the fruits of his labour are secure. But if a man works and earns the fruits of his labour and then someone else seizes them, this will cause him to be averse to labour. Subsequently, the progress of the world comes to a halt. Therefore, it is in our interest that the motions of life continue, and the motions of life will not continue unless man feels secure about the fruits of his labour and unless his labour is compatible with Allah's Glorified is He Law. And when a man works in something which Allah Glorified is He has permitted and has a lawful source of income, no one has the right to interfere with this because this man's work benefits society whether he intends this or not.

We said before that the man who has a lot of wealth saved up, finds that Allah Glorified is He commands him to invest this wealth, as He commands the doors of goodness to open for the one who is wealthy; so He casts the idea of constructing a large residential building into the wealthy man's heart and the man says to himself: 'I have plenty of wealth saved up, so why do I not build an apartment for myself?' Allah Glorified is He beautifies this idea to the man and he thinks about building a ten-storey apartment block with four apartments on each floor and charging one hundred pounds a month rent for each apartment – and this is a fine monthly income. The man thinks about this without realising that Allah Glorified is He cast these thoughts into his mind and he eagerly buys some land, then brings an architect to design the building and construct it and spends the wealth he saved. Thus, we see that before the wealthy man benefits from his apartment, other people benefit from his wealth, even those from the poorest sectors of society – and all this happened because of a thought. Everyone has his thoughts: the miser will have thoughts that make him spend some money and the generous man will have thoughts that make him save some money. Do not think that there is any motion in the world which is outside the Will of Allah Glorified is He.

He says, 'Except for those who repent after that and correct themselves….' (Al-'Imran: 89) They do this because they have sinned before, so they seek to expiate these sins by putting their deeds right. Therefore we find that much good comes from those who have sinned against themselves and now wish to put themselves to right and there is no one who can take anything from Allah Glorified is He without His permission. He clarifies this issue by saying that good deeds do away with evil ones. (Hud: 114)

It is as though Allah Glorified is He drives people to do what He wants by mere passing thoughts. Indeed, He is the Unseen Sustainer of all existence and therefore, the way He manages the universe is also unseen. In our villages, they reserve one day for the market and on the morning of this reserved day we look at the marketplace and reflect on it and marvel at the wondrous creativity of the One Who moves the universe. In the morning, some men go to the marketplace carrying their canes and nothing else: they are going to buy what they need and others come driving cows or donkeys: they are going to sell their goods. We see women carrying different kinds of vegetables, so we know they are going to sell them at the market and we see others carrying empty baskets, so we know they are going to buy. At the end of the day, we see the reverse issue: those who were carrying things in the morning now are not and others are carrying what others brought. Who was it that cast the thought of selling into the minds of those who went to the market to sell? And who inspired the others to buy? It was Allah Glorified is He who provides those who wished to sell with people to buy from them and those who wished to buy with people to whom they sell. This is the arrangement of the Ever-Living and All-Sustaining. We hear people say, ''We have brought twenty tons of tomatoes to market today and forty tons of zucchinis," and so on and as the day ends, we find that it has all been sold. These are the notions which Allah Glorified is He inspires in people to give balance to society. So Allah Glorified is He wants to protect the labour of those who work and He also does not want people to take nourishment or amusement without any effort; for those who steal usurp the effort of others, and this makes others averse to working at all.

There is a principle in Islam which states that when unemployment is rife, do not give charity to people from your own money, but instead make a project, even if you do not really need it – for example, dig a well and then fill it again afterwards – and pay the workers their wages. People should not become accustomed to inactivity, but rather, you must make them accustomed to working; and those who are unable to work must be provided for. A man's provision is primarily assured by his labour and if he is unable to work, then he must be provided for by his family and relatives and if he has no family, then the people of his neighbourhood are responsible for him and if the people of his neighbourhood or village are unable to support him, then the treasury of the state must provide for the poor.

So the ground of faith urges us to make sure that people have work or to provide for their needs if they are incapable of working. The problem is that some people love certain jobs, and they want to be employed in jobs which involve no real work. To such people, we say: ‘‘The modern world has the crisis of unemployment; so learn a skill, for life and never deprive someone who wishes to earn a living of having work.”

We have the excellent example in the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him when he held the first auction in Islam: ‘‘A man of the Ansari (Helpers) came to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and begged from him. He (the Prophet) asked: “Have you anything in your house?” He replied: “Yes, a piece of cloth, a part of which we wear and a part of which we spread (on the ground) and a wooden bowl from which we drink water.” He said: “Bring them to me.” He then brought these articles to him and He (the Prophet) took them in his hands and asked: “Who will buy these?” A man said: “I shall buy them for one dirham.” He repeated twice or thrice: “Who will offer more than one dirham?” A man said: “I shall buy them for two dirhams.” He gave these to him and took the two dirhams and giving them to the Ansari, he said: “Buy food with one of them and hand it to your family and buy an axe and bring it to me."[1] The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him asked the man to bring the piece of cloth he spread on the ground and a wooden bowl from which we drink water in order to tell him that he is trading with his property, not with what the people may give him. He then brought them to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him who fixed a handle on it with his own hands and said: "Go, gather firewood and sell it and do not let me see you for fifteen days."[2] The man went away and gathered firewood and sold it. When the fifteen days ended he had earned ten dirhams, then he came to him and bought a garment with some of them and food with the others. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him then said: "This is better for you lest that begging should come as a spot on your face on the Day of Judgement" [3].This is true education.

Therefore, it is a fundamental goal of Islam to protect the affairs of the members of society. If someone does not make a living, then we help him with advice, education, power and strength, for the best thing is for us to teach them to work for themselves. Allah Glorified is He tells us the story of Dhu Al-Qarnayn which is full of lessons for us. Allah Glorified is He says that when he reached a place between two mountain barriers, he found beside them people who could barely understand him. (al-Kahf: 93) That is, he could barely communicate with them. But they subsequently said to him that Gog and Magog are ruining this land, and they asked him to build a barrier between them and Gog and Magog. They offered a tribute to him if he did so. (al-Kahf: 94) So Dhu Al-Qarnayn made it clear that he was not in need of them, but nevertheless, he would give them tasks to ensure that their aim was fulfilled: he asked them to bring him lumps of Iron and when he had filled the gap between the two mountainsides, he ordered them to work their bellows. When he had made it glow like fire, he ordered them to bring molten metal for him to pour over it. (al-Kahf: 96)

It is noteworthy that when the Quran tells a story, it only does so for a particular reason. They asked Dhu Al-Qarnayn to build a barrier, but he suggested that he will make a rampart for them. What is the difference? Modern science has proved that a barrier can be destroyed by being afflicted by a jolt on any part of it; whilst a rampart (radm) is jolted, and actually becomes firmer. Furthermore, Dhu Al-Qarnayn did not do the work for them; he taught them how to build the rampart so that they would not live with the feeling of impotence.

Thus, the Quran teaches us that a man must work – but what would happen if he steals? First of all, what does steal (sariqa) mean? It is to take the valuable property of another with stealth. If stealth is not employed, then it is usurpation (ightisab); and in Arabic, there are also the words (khatf) (snatching) and (ikhtilas) (embezzlement).

So there are different ways in which property can be taken. If a merchant is standing in his shop selling his goods and a child comes and snatches some candy and runs and the shopkeeper cannot catch him, this is (khatf) or 'snatching'. As for usurpation (ightisab), it means to forcibly seize something from its rightful owner; and embezzlement (ikhtilas) means that a person is given the responsibility of looking after some money, but he takes some of it for himself. As for stealing (sariqa) it means to take the valuable property of another with stealth from a secure place, i.e. from a place which by rights no one but the owner can enter unless they have his permission. But if someone leaves his door wide open or leaves his good son the street, he is at fault. Just as the Islamic Law commands us not to steal from one another, it also commands us not to be negligent; a person must first lock up his things and then trust in Allah Glorified is He; as a Just Lawgiver, Allah Glorified is He demands that both sides be aware of their duties. The Islamic Law defines the penalty for stealing in legal terms as applying to objects of one quarter-dinar (a gold coin) or more; and in those days, a quarter-dinar would be more than enough for a man to feed himself and his dependants; indeed even a dirham (a silver coin) would be enough to provide for family for one day at that time.

So how should we estimate the parallel value of a quarter-din*ar* in our time? If it is not enough to live on, then we must raise the minimum value to that which is enough to live on; and as long as in those days a dinar was made of gold, then the value of a quarer-dinar will have risen since then. In the past, a golden pound coin was worth ninety-seven and one-half Egyptian piaster, but today a single golden pound coin is worth more than two hundred and seventy Egyptian pounds. A person might also steal because he is needy or hungry and therefore, the Islamic Law established a value beyond which a needy person would not need to go in order to provide for himself and his family, namely one dirham. To steal a dirham has no fixed punishment, nor is it a sin, as long as all the lawful means of earning a living are unavailable. We have just seen that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him gave the dirham to a man and said: 'Buy food with one dirham and hand it to your family' which means that, as we said, a dirham was enough in those days. Traditionally, a dirham is worth one-twelfth of a dinar, so one quarter-dinar is equivalent to three dirhams – and this dirham is equivalent in our time to more than twenty Egyptian pounds.

Superficial people say, "Umar Allah be pleased with him abolished the punishment for stealing during the year of drought." To them, we say: No, 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him did not abolish the punishment; the punishment remained, but he did not consider that the event which occurred was worthy of the punishment. The event which occurred in the year of drought or the year of famine was a matter of doubt and because of his sagacity as Commander of the Faithful, he did not consider that the event which occurred was worthy of the punishment. When 'Abd Ar-Rahman ibn Hatib Abu-Balta'ah's slave-boys stole from him; what happened? The slaves said to 'Umar Allah be pleased with him: ''We were hungry, but the son of Abu Balta'ah did not give us any food. 'So 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him waived the punishment because of the doubt involved. So, Allah Glorified is He wants to protect the fruits of the worker's labour. Some superficial people might say as Abu Al-'Ala' Al-Ma'arri said:

A hand whose indemnity is five hundred golden pieces
wherefore cut off for stealing a quarter of a dinar a contradiction that we have to keep silent about and to take refuge with Allah from the hell-fire
So a faithful scholar replied to him:
Honesty made it valuable, betrayal made it cheap
So, mind the Wisdom of the Creator

We should be aware that these laws concerning crime and punishment are not human laws, but laws of its utmost precision. By Allah Glorified is He, if a mere lawmaker were to make laws for male and female thieves and male and female fornicators, what would the situation be?

The one speaking here is the Lord of the worlds, and He says: 'Cut off the hands of thieves, whether they are man or woman, as punishment for what they have done– a deterrent from Allah Who is Almighty and Wise.' (al-Ma'ida: 38) Stealing is usually done out of need and it is mostly men who do it. When Allah Glorified is He proclaims His Laws, He does so with Wisdom. When He Glorified is He has enacted the issue of retribution, an occasion when the murdered victim's family tend to be enraged and emotional. He Glorified is He says: 'But if the culprit is pardoned by his aggrieved brother, this shall be adhered to fairly, and the culprit shall pay what is due in a good way.' (al-Baqara: 178) Notice the compassion implied by the word 'his brother'. We never see any legislation marked by compassion in this way except the legislations of the Lord Who created man and knows him best.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Cut off the hands of thieves, whether they are man or woman' (al-Ma'ida: 38). This is the final ordained punishment for stealing in Allah's Glorified is He Law; and in the days of Prophet Musa (Moses), a person who stole would have been slaved as punishment for his stealing. This is why we read the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph): Allah Glorified is He says that once he had given them their provisions, he placed the drinking-cup in his brother's pack. (Yusuf: 70)

The cup from which the king drank was known as 'The King's Chalice', and they would use it as a standard for measurement. After he put the cup in his brother's pack, what happened? An announcer called out, 'O, caravan, indeed, you are thieves.' They said while approaching them, 'What are you missing?' They said, 'We are missing the measurement cup of the king. For he who produces it is (the reward of) a camel's load, and I am responsible for it.' (Yusuf: 70-72) Then, the brothers of Yusuf (Joseph) claimed that they had not come to spread corruption on earth, and so Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him let them decide how they should be punished if they were found to be guilty, and he did not apply the King's laws to them. The brothers said, 'Its recompense is that he in whose bag it is found - he (himself) will be its recompense. Thus do we recompense the wrongdoers?' (Yusuf: 75)

He made them confess to this and treated them according to their own law since the law of the King stated that whoever steals something shall be fined double the stolen object's value.

This explains the meaning of the True Lord's Words: 'We thus planned for Joseph…' (Yusuf: 76). That is, it was a plan contrived to keep Yusuf's (Joseph's) brother with him. Had the Egyptian law of the time been applied, he would not have been able to keep his brother with him. So, this plan was for the good of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him which is what the word 'for 'here implies. Also, Yusuf's (Joseph's) brothers added: 'They said, "If he steals - a brother of his has stolen before." But Joseph kept it within himself and did not reveal it to them…' (Yusuf: 77).

Why did they say this? The origin of this issue was that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him used to stay with his paternal aunt. When he grew up and they wanted to take him, his aunt wished to keep him with her so she concealed in his pack a statue or a belt which she had inherited from her father Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him. Then, she claimed that she had found it to be missing. So, they searched the boy and found that he had the thing his aunt had claimed to have been stolen, so she kept him with her according to Israelite law. The Sacred Law's punishment for stealing used to be enslavement, and then this law was abrogated and the verse giving the punishment for stealing was revealed to affirm this abrogation. If it had not been abrogated already, then this verse heralded its abrogation:' (As for) the thief, the male and the female, amputate their hands in recompense for what they committed as a deterrent (punishment) from Allah. And Allah is Exalted in Might and Wise.' (al-Ma'ida: 38)

The Prophetic practice (Sunnah) is what prescribes for us the mode of this amputation: the right hand is the one to be cut since it is usually the hand used for this activity. During one of my trips to America(1), a Muslim member of the audience at one of my lectures said to me, ‘we are supposed to use our right hand for everything, so why is it that some people eat with their left hands?’ I replied that this is a natural phenomenon, which is proved by the fact that some people’s organs are different; it is not a mechanical issue. Moreover, I added that one of the weaknesses of human inventions is that they do not make errors, such as the calculator. If they were able to evaluate and choose, then they would make errors. As for the mind, it knows how to evaluate. Then, I asked the questioner to stand up and walk towards me, and when he did so, he stepped with his right foot first. I commented that this is a natural phenomenon; and therefore if you have a son and his right hand does not work well, then you must not force him to use it, for the Creator wanted this to occasionally occur in man, in order to show His Power.

(1) The story of the American Muslim who asked Sheikh As-Sha'rawy about those who are born leftists.

So there is no need to force a child to use his right hand if it does not function naturally since scientists say that the control centre is not in the hand but in the brain. The True Lord Glorified is He brought these things into existence in order that we understand that He did not create the universe and then left it to follow its natural laws. This is not the case since; He can break these natural laws whenever He wills. However, if someone were to refuse to use his right hand for eating, for example, when he is quite capable of doing so, he is thereby going against the Sunnah of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and violating man’s natural disposition.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…amputate their hands in recompense for what they committed as a deterrent (punishment) from Allah…’ (al-Ma’ida: 38). The word for ‘wrought’ in this verse is kasaba, which literally means ‘to earn’, and to earn means to receive more than the capital you expend; the thief ‘earns’ his sin because he takes more than he needs. Also, the word nakal (deterrent) literally means a punishment or an admonition which deters the crime’s occurrence, whether for those who commit the crime or for those who witness it. The True Lord Glorified is He orders us elsewhere to let a group of the believers witness their punishment: ‘And let a party of the believers witness their punishment. (an-Nur: 2)

It is necessary to make the punishment of criminals in public in order to stand as an admonition and a warning. This law does not come from one human being to another, but from the Creator to His creation. The Creator is the One Who made the product, so do not hold yourself to be more knowledgeable than He of the product. The Shar'i Law does not proclaim this punishment out of a desire to cut hands, but out of a desire to prevent hands from being cut.

Furthermore, if the law remains only on paper without being implemented, then it will not deter anyone. Also, to those who say that cutting off hands is 'brutal', we give the following reply, 'A single hand was amputated in Saudi Arabia, and all stealing crimes ceased. Also, if an execution prevents murder, then cutting hands prevents hands from being cut. As for the "mutilation" which they clamour about, a single car accident mutilates people, and a single gas explosion does even worse. Do not isolate the punishment from the crime which would spread through society otherwise.' The way that the judiciary slows down the process of punishment causes society to forget about the vileness of the crime so that by the time the villain goes to trial people feel mercy for him.

However, if a punishment was meted out immediately after the crime was committed, the issue would be stopped. Furthermore, when thieves hear that we are cutting hands, they will think well before they steal and will refrain from the crime. The purpose of the punishment is to act as a deterrent and an admonition, and is a way of educating and reminding man of what Allah requires of him when the heedlessness of life's affairs overcomes him. So, requital here is a nakal (deterrent) which means a punishment, and the word nukul means to be deterred from committing a sin. So, it is an admonition which deters the occurrence of a crime. It is as though the intention of the punishment for people to see those whose hands that have been cut off since they are deterred from doing anything that would cause them to suffer the same fate.

Or, it is a way to make the one whose hand has been cut off eager to preserve his remaining limbs since if after his right hand has been cut off, he may steal again, and then he will lose his left hand. Thus, it is a deterrent both to the one who sees the punishment implemented on a thief and to the thief himself when he sees that he has lost one of his limbs, making him eager to keep the others. The True Lord Glorified is He treats His Creation according to a natural law of the universe which is that those who take the rights of others, their own rights must be denied. For example, when some of the children of Israel made lawful what Allah had forbidden, Allah punished them by removing some of their freedoms and forbidding them what He had previously allowed them: ‘So, because of the transgression of the Jews, We forbade them pure things which had been allowed to them, and also because of their hindering many men from Allah’s Way.’ (an-Nisa’: 160)

Therefore, no one can deceive Allah or take what is not rightfully his. If someone takes too much, then Allah will deny him other things, and the time will come when He will deny him things which He had allowed him before. For example, when someone goes to excess by drinking alcohol or taking intoxicating drugs, the True Lord Glorified is He will subject him to trial by denying him other pleasures which He used to allow him. Also, if a man eats sweet things excessively, he will become ill, and Allah will prevent him from many things.

Likewise, if the one who commits sins against himself were to compare what he has been allowed to what Allah has prohibited for him, he will find that he has lost out. The person who indulges in unlawful excess by usurping the wealth of others will see his own wealth squandered before his eyes, and we have seen examples of this. In the old times, the wealthy men of the countryside would sift flour to a high degree until it became especially free of chaff, and they would call this kind of flour’ superior grade flour’. They would consume this kind of flour and leave the rest, adulterated with chaff, for the servants and the poor to consume. Then, a time came when physicians forbade them from eating this white flour, and they were only allowed to eat the inferior flour which they had disdained in the past. So, we should understand that this is an overriding natural law, and we should always be aware of Allah’s Words that for wrongdoing on the part of the Jews: ‘We forbade them pure things which had been allowed to them.’ (an-Nisa’: 160)

Therefore, if you steal what another hand has earned, the True Lord Glorified is He prevents you from your hand, not your income. Also, if you steal again, Allah prevents you from another limb, and so on. This is a natural law which causes man’s life to be balanced, especially in the case of those who see the punishment of the Hereafter as being far-off and those who are tempted and deluded by how forbearing Allah is with them.

Also, if you look closely at the geographical area in which you live: your family, your neighbourhood, your town, or your community, you will find people who have prevented themselves from things with no prevention from others. One person might suffer – Allah forbid – from uraemia so that he is unable to eat even a piece of meat, while another might have diabetes so that he cannot eat a single sweet or a spoonful of honey. This is due to the fact that no one can take anything without Allah knowing about it, and He made it this way because He is the Almighty and the Invincible. So, do not think that you can take anything without Allah's Knowledge or that you can get around His Law, for He is the Almighty and the Invincible. In our lives, we see those who take wealth unrightfully in the form of bribes, theft or embezzlement, and we see that they spend these ill-gotten gains on things which bring them woe and misery. We find that what they take unlawfully ends up marring and spoiling what they earn lawfully. I would like all those who commit sins against themselves to make an account of their earnings, recording all their ill-gotten gains in one place and all their lawful income in another, and then bear in mind the trials with which Allah has afflicted them because of this. Invariably, they will find that in order to escape from these misfortunes, they should have neither earned nor spent their ill-gotten gains and even some of their lawful income. Therefore, the Hadith goes: 'When a man makes money by snatching it out of mouths, Allah will cause him to lose it in abysses.'

I used to know two men who each had a son in school, and I used to see one of them giving his son five pence, whereupon the son would say to his father, 'I still have my pocket-money from yesterday.' The other man would give his son ten pence, whereupon he would say, 'It is not enough to buy anything!' Allah willed that the three of us met together in the office of the Irrigation Ministry in Zaqaziq, and just as we were leaving, the president of that office came with a large yellow envelope stuffed full of things and gave it to one of these men. I asked him what it was, and he said it was some white paper, blotting paper, and pens for the children to do their homework. I said to him, 'This explains why your children are failing at their studies, why they are so profligate, why you are buying them private lessons, which you cannot afford and why your son says to you, "Ten pence is not enough to buy anything!"' As for the other man, his son would say to him, 'I do not need my pocket-money today because I still have my five pence from yesterday, and I do not want to take private studies because I prefer to rely on myself.'

Furthermore, the True Lord Glorified is He the Ever-Living and All-Sustaining, Who is overcome neither by slumber and nor by sleep, tells us of this. Abu Al-Jalad said that Allah Almighty revealed to one of the Prophets, 'Tell your people, "What is wrong with you, that you hide your sins from My creation but show them to Me? If you deem that I cannot see you, then you are guilty of associating partners to Me. Likewise, if you deem that I can see you, then why do you make Me the most trifling of all who can see you?"

So, the True Lord's Words '...in recompense for what they committed as a deterrent (punishment) from Allah…' (al-Ma'ida: 38) are completely clear, and He follows them with the words: 'And Allah is Exalted in Might and Wise.' He the Almighty cannot be defeated by anyone, including the thief when he steals, for he is only stealing the provision which has been ordained for him. The scholars agree that stolen items are also deemed to be provision because they are benefitted from, so by Allah, had the thief simply been patient this provision would have come to him. Beware of trying to play games with Allah's Decree, for He is Wise in all that He ordains.

The word 'wise' has meaning for me in my own life. When I was still in my formal education, I loved literature and poetry. Once when I was reading the poet Al-Ma'arri, I found some verses which seemed almost atheistic, so I lost interest in him. In particular there were the lines:

The days destroy us, as though we are glass;
Yet once we are broken we cannot be remoulded.

I understood from this that he was denying the Resurrection, so I said, 'Allah suffices us of need for him!' However, my friend Sheikh Fahmi 'Abd Al-Latif Allah rest his soul saw Al-Ma'arri in a dream, and he loved his poetry. The next morning he came to see me in Zaqaziq and he said to me, 'O, Sheikh, I saw Al-Ma'arri in a dream last night, and he was angry with you because you rejected him.' I said, 'I rejected him for (such-and-such), and you know why.' So, Sheikh Fahmi' Abd Al-Latif said, 'In any case that is what happened.' I said to myself, 'Perhaps, I should re-evaluate Al-Ma'arri', so I got copies of his books Saqt Az-zand and Luzum ma la yalzim, and I found that the man had excuses for the things he might be blamed for. The problem with the people who record the sayings of great thinkers is that they pick these sayings out of their historical context. Al-Ma'arri composed the verses which I disliked when he was still an immature young man, and when he had matured, he retracted it. Many great thinkers go through this kind of thing, such as Taha Hussayn and Al-'Aqqad, both of whom made statements during their youth which could be taken as being atheistic, but after they matured, they wrote poetry which bore the scent of true faith. Therefore, one should not judge them by their earlier writings, which they made when they still harboured doubts, for they later came to full certitude. So, I looked into the work of Al-Ma'arri, who said:

The days destroy us, as though we are glass;
Yet once we are broken we cannot be remoulded.

And I found that he was the same man who said, once his unstable ideas were behind him:

The doctor and the astrologer both claim
There is no resurrection; but I say:
If you are right, then I lose nothing,
But if I am right, then you are the losers!

It is as though he had returned to faith. And Al-Ma'arri also said:

If a hand is cut unlawfully, its penalty is five hundred,
But if it steals a quarter-dinar it is amputated:

And he followed these lines by saying:

This is a contradiction, for which we can only be silent,
And seek refuge in our Lord from the fire of hell.

I said to Sheikh Fahmi ‘Abd Al-Latif, ‘I think Al-Mu’arri had the right to object, so I shall try to revise his poetry and amend the lines which I find problematic.’ When I came to this line, I said that it would have been better – with his permission – to say:

There is wisdom in this that we must accept,
And seek refuge in our Lord from the fire of hell.

Everything has its wisdom. When we see a doctor restraining a child whose heart cannot bear the anaesthetic during an operation, does anyone think that this doctor is exacting revenge on the child? Of course, he is not. No one thinks that. So, everything has its wisdom, and when we look at things, we must link them to their wisdom. Allah is Almighty, meaning He cannot be defeated or fooled by anyone, and He is Wise in the punishments He allots to crimes since He is allowing society to restore its balance thereby.

Furthermore, after this, the True Lord Glorified is He opens the door of repentance out of mercy for both of them, the sinner, and society, by saying:

فَمَن تَابَ مِنۢ بَعۡدِ ظُلۡمِهِۦ وَأَصۡلَحَ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَتُوبُ
عَلَيۡهِۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٌ ٣٩

But if anyone repents after his wrongdoing and makes amends, God will accept his repentance:
God is most forgiving, most merciful [39]
(The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 39)

A thief is a wrongdoer since he takes what rightfully belongs to others. However, if he repents, meaning that he regrets what he has done and intends never to do it again and his repentance is not merely verbal, but he actually makes amends for what he did, then his repentance will be accepted. So, how does he do this? If he still has what he stole, then he must return it to its rightful owner. If he has spent it, then he must go to its owner, seeking to make amends by saying, ‘I was heedless and tempted by Satan, and I did such-and-such.’ I believe that if someone steals from someone else, and then after some time has passed, he confesses what he has done to him and seeks his pardon, I swear by Allah that he will pardon him gladly. Therefore, the thing he stole will be excused. What about the case when the thief does not know who the owner of what he has stolen is, such as those who steal from people on buses, for example? If he steals a wallet from someone and finds his address within, he can return the stolen money by sending an anonymous postal order for the amount he stole and ask the owner to forgive him. Yet, if he does not know from whom he stole, he must say, 'Allah knows best to whom it belongs; I will give it in charity for Allah's Cause and say, "Lord, give the reward of this deed to the rightful owner."'

Thus, there are many ways to make amends. In the case that he is too ashamed to return the stolen property, he should say, 'To be exposed in this world is better than to be exposed in the Hereafter.' There are many verses in the Quran concerning repentance, such as Allah's saying that He turned to them so they could repent: '…then He turned to them with mercy that they might turn to Him. Surely it is Allah Who is Oft-Returning with compassion and is Merciful.' (at-Tawba: 118) It is as though Allah Glorified is He is first ordains repentance, and then the servant repents. He Glorified is He also says: 'But indeed, I am the Perpetual Forgiver of whoever repents…' (Ta Ha: 82).

As we know, repentance has three stages. When the True Lord Glorified is He established repentance, He first gave leave for it, thus, the servant repents, and then secondly, He accepts his repentance and erases his sin, and finally, He forgives when He accepts repentance. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He then says in this verse: '…indeed, Allah will turn to him in forgiveness. Indeed, Allah is Forgiving and Merciful.' (al-Ma'ida: 39)

Forgiveness and mercy in their absolute forms are possessed solely by Allah, and they are manifested by the criminal's repentance and the victim's mercy. The Words '...Indeed, Allah is Forgiving and Merciful' (al-Ma'ida: 39) explain to us that He the Exalted possesses the Absolute Power to forgive and show mercy. So, one should not say, 'So-and-so does not deserve forgiveness and mercy' since Allah Glorified is He possesses dominion over the heavens and the earth. Also, He gives human beings what they deserve because of the justice He has ordained for Himself, and He has absolute Power over everything in existence.

Therefore He Glorified is He then says:

أَلَمۡ تَعۡلَمۡ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَهُۥ مُلۡكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِ يُعَذِّبُ مَن يَشَآءُ
وَيَغۡفِرُ لِمَن يَشَآءُۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٌ ﴿٤٠﴾

Do you [Prophet] not know that control of the heavens and earth belongs solely to God? He punishes whoever He will and forgives whoever He will: God has power over everything [40] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 40)

The True Lord Glorified is He uses rhetorical styles to bring us out of our heedlessness. He did not say, 'Allah has dominion over the heavens and the earth;' had He said that, it would have been a statement on the part of the speaker here, who is Allah. However, He wanted the statement to come from of the one being addressed, as an acknowledgement from the servant himself. People do not form statements as questions unless they are completely sure that the answer will be to their advantage. For example, if someone were to come to you and says, 'You have ignored me,' you might reply, 'I have been kind to you.' However, if you intended to draw the statement from him, you would say, 'Have I not been kind to you?' You pose it to him as a question, and questions demand answers. It is as though when the one you ask thinks about this question, he will have no option but to say, 'Yes, you have been kind to me.' If you had simply said it yourself, it would be a claim, but when the latter is the one who says it, it is an acknowledgement.

Another example of this is found when the True Lord Glorified is He says that not expand for you, (O Muhammad), your breast: 'In the name of Allah, the Gracious, the Merciful, have we not opened for you your breast.' (ash-Sharh: 1)

This is a statement on the part of the speaker and an acknowledgement on the part of the one being addressed. Someone might ask why Allah the Almighty did not say, 'Have We opened up your heart?' The True Lord Glorified is He could have said this, but He did not so that the question would not contain any hint of a positive response, rather it comes in a negative wording. Also, when the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Do you not know that to Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth?

He punishes whom He wills and forgives whom He wills, and Allah has power over all things.' (al-Ma'ida: 40) We find that the wording of this verse is not a claim made by the True Lord Glorified is He but a question posed to mankind for which they may think of an answer; they will not find any answer except to affirm that to Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth: 'To Allah belongs the Kingdom of the heavens and the earth and whatever is in them, and He has power over all things.' (al-Ma'ida: 120). This is a rhetorical style meant to provoke affirmation and acknowledgment from the servant, not a statement from the True Lord Glorified is He. 'Do you not know that to Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth?' (al-Ma'ida: 40) Someone might say, 'There are certain areas of the earth which are owned by human beings.' Our reply is that indeed, this is true that there are certain areas of the earth which are owned by human beings, but there is a difference between Allah's Dominion and man's dominion; man's dominion is over something which he cannot preserve, such as the ownership of his house or an allotment of land. In Arabic language, the word milk means the limited ownership of man, and mulk means the absolute Dominion of Allah Who is the Sovereign, Al-Malik. In this worldly life, everyone has some kind of ownership, but the earthly owner has dominion over all the possessions of his ownership. This is true in this worldly life where Allah has created means and causes, but in the Hereafter, all those means and causes will be annulled since power will be held only by Allah.' To whom belongs the kingdom this day? To Allah, the One, the Subduer (of all)' (Ghafir: 16).

Therefore, no one will possess anything on the Day of Resurrection. 'Do you not know that to Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth? He punishes whom He wills and forgives whom He wills…' (al-Ma'ida: 40). The one who reads carefully the Quran will find that it contains expressions that are the combination of two expressions: one of which comes first and the other comes later. In some cases, the two expressions are mentioned adversely. However, this is the sole case in the Quran wherein these two expressions come in this order, whereas in other cases of the Quran, forgiveness comes before torment, for as the True Lord Glorified is He says in the Qudsi Hadith: 'My Mercy supercedes My Wrath.'(1)

(1) Narrated by Ahmad

So, why did He mention torment before mercy in this verse? '...He punishes whom He wills and forgives whom He wills…" (al-Ma'ida: 40). Is it merely a matter of artistic style? The answer is no since the majority of verses mention forgiveness first and then give the warning of tormentfor those whom He Glorified is He wills. Let us consider the context of this verse. First of all, He spoke of those who steal, be they male or female, and then He spoke of those who repent. Therefore, stealing deserves torment, whereas repentance deserves forgiveness; thus, the order here is logical.

We may also notice that these words follow a verse concerning stealing, and then a declaration of which Allah has dominion over the heavens and the earth. Therefore, the verse needed to be concluded with something that served both of these expressions, in order to affirm the supremacy of the Divine Power. When the True Lord Glorified is He wants to have mercy on someone, this person who is subject to this mercy cannot say, 'I do not want mercy.' Likewise, when He punishes someone, this person who is subject to this punishment cannot say, 'There is no need for torment.' The supremacy of the Divine Power means that no one has the power to avoid the due punishment or mercy. This verse, then, serves several purposes that if we were to weigh it in the scale of events, then all Power belongs to the True Lord Glorified is He. However, what if we were to weigh it in the scale of time?

We know that the punishment for stealing has two parts: application of Al-Had (the legally prescribed punishment), and then the forgiveness in the Hereafter. So, the statement is logical and appropriate to its context. I always say that you should not be deceived by the claim that disbelievers and sinners do what they do without suffering punishment, for those who become accustomed to violating Allah's Way by disbelieving or sinning will assuredly be punished. They rebel against His Way, but in no way they can rebel against Allah Himself.

A man might rebel against the Way of Allah not by negligence of belief or prayer, for no one has the power to rebel against Allah Himself. Furthermore, no one can stand in defiance of death, for it is one aspect of Allah's Power. Allah Glorified is He ordains whatever He wills, and He willed that man be free in some things, while being compelled in others. So, those who have chosen to live in rebellion against Allah's Way of Guidance, they may also feel challenged to rebel against the owner of this way: Allah Himself. Yet, they have no power to do so, whether regarding their shape, colour, health or the time of their death. Therefore, everyone who used to rebel should listen carefully to these words and know fully that he can never rebel against the Owner of the Way: Allah Himself. Therefore, He the Exalted spoke the truth when He says: 'Allah has power over all things.' (al-Ma'ida: 40)

The True Lord Glorified is He and then says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلرَّسُولُ لَا يَحۡزُنكَ ٱلَّذِينَ يُسَٰرِعُونَ فِي ٱلۡكُفۡرِ مِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ قَالُوٓاْ ءَامَنَّا بِأَفۡوَٰهِهِمۡ
وَلَمۡ تُؤۡمِن قُلُوبُهُمۡۛ وَمِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ هَادُواْۛ سَمَّٰعُونَ لِلۡكَذِبِ سَمَّٰعُونَ لِقَوۡمٍ
ءَاخَرِينَ لَمۡ يَأۡتُوكَۖ يُحَرِّفُونَ ٱلۡكَلِمَ مِنۢ بَعۡدِ مَوَاضِعِهِۦۖ يَقُولُونَ إِنۡ أُوتِيتُمۡ هَٰذَا فَخُذُوهُ وَإِن
لَّمۡ تُؤۡتَوۡهُ فَٱحۡذَرُواْۚ وَمَن يُرِدِ ٱللَّهُ فِتۡنَتَهُۥ فَلَن تَمۡلِكَ لَهُۥ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ شَيۡـًٔاۚ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ لَمۡ
يُرِدِ ٱللَّهُ أَن يُطَهِّرَ قُلُوبَهُمۡۚ لَهُمۡ فِي ٱلدُّنۡيَا خِزۡيٞۖ وَلَهُمۡ فِي ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ عَذَابٌ عَظِيمٞ ٤١

Messenger, do not be grieved by those who race to surpass one another in disbelief – those who say with their mouths, 'We believe,' but have no faith in their hearts, and the Jews who listen eagerly to lies and to those who have not even met you, who distort the meanings of [revealed] words and say [to each other], 'If you are given this ruling, accept it, but if you are not, then beware!' — if God intends some people to be so misguided, you will be powerless against God on their behalf. These are the ones whose hearts God does not intend to cleanse – a disgrace for them in this world, and then a heavy punishment in the Hereafter [41] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 41)

When we call someone, we use the word 'O!' starting with it before calling the name of the one we want in order to attract his attention so that he will come to us. Do we merely call him to only come to us, or do we have another reason for calling him? For example, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Say, I will recite what your Lord has prohibited to you.' (al-An'am: 151) Therefore, the purpose of this call was to convey the religious responsibility to them. So, when the True Lord Glorified is He calls the noblest of all those He calls, His messengers, we find that He called all of them by their given names, as in ‘O, Adam!’ A given name is one which only describes a person’s identity, not his attributes.

Likewise, the True Lord Glorified is He calls Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him by that ‘O, Abraham, You have fulfilled the vision.’ (as-Saffat: 104-105) The True Lord Glorified is He addressed Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him: ‘O, Nuh (Noah)! Disembark in peace.’ (Hud: 48) Likewise, the True Lord Glorified is He called Musa (Moses) peace be upon him saying: ‘…O, Musa (Moses)! Verily, I am Allah.’ (al-Qasas: 30) As for Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them the True Lord Glorified is He to 'Isa (Jesus), called him saying: ‘…“O, 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), did you say to the people...’? (al-Ma’ida: 116).

Allah the Almighty calls all the messengers by their given names which gave only their identity. However, as for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the Seal of the Messengers, Allah never calls him by his first name, rather, He calls him by his attributes, which gives extra meaning to his name. He says, ‘O, Messenger’ or ‘O, Prophet!’

Of course, they are all messengers of Allah Glorified is He but He wants to inform and confirm with us that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was the Messenger who came to replace all other messengers and who believed in all of them. Therefore, he deserved to be called by an attribute which gave extra meaning to his personal name: ‘O, Messenger!’ Furthermore, he would be the Messenger whose message would last until the coming of the Day of Judgment, and this is why we find that the True Lord Glorified is He would always address His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by saying, ‘O, Messenger!’ or ‘O, Prophet!’; this was a form of honouring.

Also, the True Lord Glorified is He says in this verse: ‘O, Messenger, let them not grieve you who hasten into disbelief…’ (al-Ma’ida: 41). What this really means is this: ‘O, Messenger of Allah, do not be grieved by those who hasten into disbelief.’ When the True Lord the Exalted tells His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him not to grieve, we should be note the cause of this grief. He Glorified is He clarified to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, ‘Do not be grieved, for I am with you, and your enemies shall not harm you. Also, I would not choose you to be My Messenger and then leave you. They shall never harm you in any way.’

Or, the grief of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him might have been of a different kind; it might have been a compassionate grief of which the True Lord Glorified is He describes: 'So it may be you will grieve yourself to death sorrowing after them if they believe not in this Discourse.' (al-Kahf: 6)

Had the True Lord Glorified is He decreed that they all be believers, He would not have given them the ability to disbelieve.' If we willed, we could send down to them from the sky a sign for which their necks would remain humbled.' (ash-Shu'ara': 4) However, does Allah Glorified is He really want necks? No, He truly wants hearts, for He has the power to do whatever He wills which is proved by having the sky, the earth, the mountains and all other created beings being subservient to Him, their Creator. Nothing in the creation can rebel against its Creator, and His Omnipotent Power means that He has authority, control, and domination over all His creation. However, Allah wants His servants to come by their free will to Him, their Master, with faith, for the first kind of faith is developed and built by compulsion and power, whereas the second kind of faith is developed and built by love.

Previously, we gave a clear and clarifying example of two hypothetical servants, one of which must be kept chained because if he were unchained, he would flee; when one wants him, he must pull his chain, and when he comes, he only does so because of the power one has over him that compels him to do so. As for the other servant, if one were to leave him free, he would come as soon as being called. Which one of them would one love more? One would undoubtedly love the one who comes out of conviction, not compulsion. Every being in the universe is subdued by Divine Power, but the True Lord the Almighty chooses to make man free. Therefore, He says: 'Verily, We have offered the trust of the Divine Law to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, but they refused to bear it and were afraid of it. But man bore it. Indeed, he is capable of being unjust to and neglectful of himself.' (al-Ahzab: 72)

Therefore, every other being refused to bear the trust, out of their fear and worry that they would not be able to carry out the responsibility for it. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He tells His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him 'not be grieved'; but if he is grieved due to his fear of being harmed adhering to Allah's Way, in which case the True Lord Glorified is He would support him so they would not be able to harm him. Also, if he is grieved due to his fear concerning them, in which case he needed not be so since Allah the Exalted created man with free will, not forcing him to obey the teachings of His Way; He the Almighty wants to see who will come to Him out of love and goodness.

Also, the True Lord Glorified is He says to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him: 'O, Messenger, let them not grieve you who hasten into disbelief…' (al-Ma'ida: 41). This is a divinely worded expression because it uses the words 'into', even though we generally know that in Arabic we say ila (to), not fi (into). For example, the True Lord says: 'And hasten to forgiveness…' (Al-'Imran: 133).

However, in this verse, we find that He says: '…who hasten into (fi) disbelief…' (al-Ma'ida: 41). Had He said, 'who hasten to disbelief', this would mean that first they had faith, but then they turned to disbelief. This is not the case, for the True Lord the Almighty wants to clarify for us that they are hastening within the confines of disbelief, and that they started out in a state of disbelief and now they are hastening with one another in indulging further into it. We know that volumes could be written about the use of the Arabic preposition fi (generally it means 'in') in the Quran. We saw before that Allah Glorified is He says:' (O Muhammad) travel through the land' (Al-'Imran: 137) and not 'travel, then, on the earth'. Also, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And give not to those weak of understanding your property which Allah has made for you a means of support…' (an-Nisa': 5). Then Allah says to provide for them: 'but feed them therewith and clothe them and speak to them words of kind advice.' (an-Nisa': 5)

The properties mentioned in this verse are not the possessions of those who are being addressed, but they actually belong to those who have weak judgment. However, the True Lord Glorified is He is telling us that those who have weak judgment cannot be trusted to look after their own property, and therefore, He commands the guardians and trustees of this property to consider it as though it is their own property so that they will guard it well. Likewise, He commands them not to hoard the money, but to allow its weak-minded owners to live off it; at the same time, the guardian should be careful that the property not run out as the weak-minded people consume it and pay the poor-due on it. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And give not to those weak of understanding your property which Allah has made for you a means of support (an-Nisa': 5).

He did not say minha, which literally meanst 'herefrom' since He the Almighty wants to tell us that the provision is contained within the capital, which must be circulated or invested so that it does not decrease as it is spent on provisions and the poor-due, and furthermore, when the weak-minded person reaches maturity, he should find that his wealth has increased. These are just some of the meanings we can derive from the word fi.

Likewise, there is also the verse which speaks of crucifixion: '…and I will crucify you on the trunks of palm trees…' (Ta Ha: 71). Some of scholars interpret this verse as 'I shall most certainly crucify on ('ala) trunks of palm trees', but we say that those who say this have not really explained this verse. What they should have said is this, 'I shall most certainly crucify you on trunks of palm-trees so firmly that your bodies will enter the wood itself.' For example, if you take a matchstick and tie it firmly to your finger with a fine thread; if it is tied very tightly, then the matchstick will be pressed so it will seem to be inside it. When the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…I shall most certainly crucify you in great numbers on (fi) trunks of palm trees…' (Ta Ha: 71), we should only understand this to mean that the crucifixion would be so severe that the crucified body would seem to actually enter the wood. This is why the word fi (in) is used, and not 'ala (on).

The True Lord the Exalted says in this verse: '…O, Messenger, let them not grieve you who hasten into disbelief…' (al-Ma'ida: 41). Those who hasten with one another either do so 'to' something or 'in' something. If they hasten 'to', this mean they move towards something which they were not in before they began to hasten, whereas if they hasten 'in', this means they go even deeper into something which they were already in before they began to hasten.

'…O, Messenger, let them not grieve you who hasten into disbelief of those who say, "We believe" with their mouths, but their hearts believe not…' (al-Ma'ida: 41). The seat of belief, or iman, is the heart, and the seat of self-surrender, or Islam, is the body. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'The Arabs of the desert say, "We believe." Say, "You have not truly believed yet, "but rather say, "We have submitted" (al-Hujurat: 14).

They rush to join the first row of the communal prayer, and this is Islam (self-surrender), whereas Iman (faith) resides in the heart. So, those who say with their mouths, ‘We believe’ should know that faith does not dwell in the mouth but in the heart; they speak with their mouths about what is not in their hearts. Furthermore, as long as they claim to have faith with their mouths, but it is not in their hearts, they are hypocrites. This means that every day they would demonstrate things which would bring them deeper into disbelief, for, from the onset, they conceal their disbelief, and then they hasten with one another to indulge deeper into it.

‘…Those who vie with one another in denying the truth, such as those who say with their mouths, “We believe,” while their hearts do not believe; and such of the Jewish faith…’ (al-Ma’ida: 41). Therefore, there are two kinds of people who vie with one another in disbelief: the hypocrites who say, ‘We believe’ with their mouths, and the Jews, whom the True Lord Glorified is He describes by saying that they are those who say, ‘"We believe" with their mouths, but their hearts believe not and from among the Jews.’ (al-Ma’ida: 41) Then, they are two classes who hasten into disbelief; the hypocrites who say we are believers by their mouths and the Jews. The True Lord says that they are avid listeners to falsehood’. (al-Ma’ida: 41) The Arabic root s-m-’ means that the ear hears a sound made by someone; and if a person is speaking words of truth, then the faithful ear will listen attentively, and this listening will be followed by acceptance. When a believer says: ‘I listened istama’a to so-and-so’, he does not only mean that he heard sami’a him, but that he intentionally listened to him and accepted what he said.

We know that many pious people hear lies, but the important point is whether these lies are accepted or rejected. What matters is not that a person hears, but if he believes what he hears. In our daily lives, we might see a person who wants to fix an item of his furniture, so he gets the necessary tools to do it. Such person is said to have ‘engaged in carpentry’, or najir, but we do not call him a ‘carpenter’ or najjar since a carpenter means someone whose profession is carpentry.

Thus, if one says that someone ‘hears’ (sami’) falsehood, it does not matter. However, if one says that he ‘eagerly listens’ (samma’), this gives the full meaning, which is that he intentionally and wilfully listens. Also, when the True Lord Glorified is He says that they '... (They are) avid listeners to falsehood, listening to another people who have not come to you…' (al-Ma'ida: 41), this means that they became accustomed to accepting falsehood. Also, how will the mood of someone who accepts falsehood be? It will surely be sick and abnormal.

What is meant by 'falsehood' in this verse, and who are those who 'eagerly listen' to it? It may mean rabbis and monks who told their followers things with no basis in reality in order to support their positions; otherwise, they eagerly listened to falsehood which does not benefit them; rather, it benefitted others such as the case of someone engaged in spying. Spying, as we know, is done with the eye or the ear; and in our times, these means have been advanced to the point that spying is conducted by means of sounds and images. It is as though Allah Glorified is He wanted to tell us that they eagerly listened to falsehood for the benefit of other people; and those for whom they listened were those who were too arrogant and haughty to attend the gatherings of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, they could not bear to wait and wanted to know what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was saying. Thus, they would send spies to the Prophet's peace and blessings be upon him gatherings to convey unto them what he said.

Therefore, those who eagerly listened to falsehood would also listen on behalf of those who were too arrogant to come to Prophet Muhammad's peace and blessings be upon him gatherings. Likewise, these arrogant people were the leaders of the Jews, who would not go to Prophet Muhammad's peace and blessings be upon him gatherings lest they lose their status with their followers. Also, when their spies passed on what was said at these gatherings to them, they would try to depict it in a way which served their own ends, which is why the True Lord Glorified is He said of them that they '...They distort words beyond their (proper) usages…' (al-Ma'ida: 41). What this means is that after the words had been set in their proper places, they would remove them from there, neglecting and erasing them after Allah had put them there by changing His Laws. Furthermore, the True Lord the Exalted also said about them earlier: '…They distort words from their (proper) usages…' (al-Ma'ida: 13). What this means is that they would distort the words before they had even settled in their proper places. Allah says: '…(They are) avid listeners to falsehood, listening to another people who have not come to you. They distort words beyond their (proper) usages, saying "If you are given this, take it…"' (al-Ma'ida: 41). They are those who say to their followers, who spied for them by listening to Prophet Muhammad's peace and blessings be upon him gatherings: '…saying, "If you are given this, take it; but if you are not given it, then beware."' (al-Ma'ida: 41) It is as they came to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him after having been given those instructions so that if they could take any of his words and were able distort them, they would do so, and if they could not find anything to distort, they had to be on their guard.

By studying the history of manmade laws, we discover the meaning of temporal power. The laws, which people concocted to govern the order of life only appeared after the priestly system, wherein priests would claim they had a direct connection with Heaven and so they ruled. That is to say, the basis of law-making is the mandate of Heaven, and what made people resort to making their own laws is that their experience of the priests' rule was the following: they would make a ruling on a given issue and then give a different ruling on a similar issue. The priests' words were accepted when they claimed to have a direct link to Heaven, but when they have contradictory rulings, people stopped following them and rejected their rulings. Thus, they resorted to making their own laws for themselves.

Historical narrative(1) makes this clear to us. During ancient times, it was narrated that one of a kings' followers committed adultery, and they wanted to punish him as the Torah prescribes, but the king said to the priests, 'I do not want this man to be stoned, so seek out another ruling.' The priests obeyed the king and said, 'Let us blacken the adulterer's face with charcoal, and make him ride on a donkey facing backwards for all to see, instead of stoning him.' Thus, the temporal power gave the political power the command to change the law.

When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to Medina, they tried to take advantage of his presence by making laws which were flexible and lenient. Also, with this aim in mind, they presented certain issues to him. If his ruling was lenient, they accepted it, but if it was hard, they refused it. Likewise, the matter of adultery came up, and they tried to get a more lenient ruling from our master Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, but he gave them the ruling which was mandated from Heaven: stoning. However, they refused stoning by saying that it was enough to give the guilty party forty lashes, blacken his face, and make him ride around on a donkey facing backwards. After this, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked, 'Do you not have among you a righteous man who has knowledge of the scripture?' They were silent, so Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Do you not know a white-faced, one-eyed, beardless young man who lives in Fadak, named Ibn Suriyya? 'Yes, 'they said, 'he is the most learned Jew on the face of the earth.' So the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him called for him to be summoned to declare the punishment for adultery prescribed by the Torah. The man came forth, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him encouraged him by saying, 'He besides whom there is no God, and by the truth of Him who sent forth Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and revealed to him the Torah, and by the truth of Him who cleaved the sea, drowned Pharaoh and shaded them with clouds (i.e. Allah).' He peace and blessings be upon him wanted to disturb any falsehood that dwelt within the man, and incite him to obey Allah and speak the truth. Thus, Ibn Suriyya said, 'Indeed, we find that the adulterer must be stoned.' Upon hearing this, the Jews began to revile this righteous man.

(1) The story of the Jew who committed adultery

They wanted to get a lenient ruling from the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to save the adulterer of high social standing and the adulteress of noble lineage. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He tells us that they would say, 'If you are given this, take it…' (al-Ma'ida: 41) which means that the lenience you seek, 'accept it'; but if you find the punishment to be severe, then beware of it and do not accept it. So, they did not go to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in search of the truth, rather, they went to him in search of lenience. Also, if the ruling matched their desire, they would say, 'Muhammad is the one who gave the ruling!' It is strange that they were enemies to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and did not believe in him, yet despite that they sought his judgment.

Imam Muslim Allah be pleased with him narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked to judge a Jewish man and woman who had committed adultery, so he went to a Jew and said, ‘What does the Torah say about those who commit adultery?’ They said, ‘We must blacken their faces with charcoal, set them back-to-back on a mount and lead them around on it.’ He said, ‘…O Muhammad, “So bring the Torah and recite it, if you should be truthful. "’ (Al-’Imran: 39) Therefore, they brought it forth and recited it. However, when they came to the verse about stoning, the boy who was reading covered the verse with his hand and read what came before and after it. So, ‘Abdullah ibn Salam Allah be pleased with him who was with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him at that time, said, ‘Tell him to move his hand’, so he moved his hand and the verse of stoning was there beneath it. Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him commanded that the two guilty parties be stoned, and it was done.’ Abdullah ibn ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him said, ‘I was among those who stoned them, and I saw him protecting her from the stones with his own body.’(1)

They wanted a lax and lenient ruling. Some say that the circumstance behind the revelation of this verse was the story(2) of the retaliation meaning the lawful retribution. However, the story is narrated by Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud and others on the authority of Ibn ‘Abbas Allah be pleased with him is that two groups of Jews, Banu An-Nadir and Banu Qurayzha, had waged war against one another during the pre-Islamic days of ignorance. Banu An-Nadir had been victorious. After that, whenever a member of Banu An-Nadir, the stronger tribe, murdered a member of Banu Qurayzha, the weaker tribe, they would not allow them to exact retaliation by giving up the killer to be executed; rather, they would only give them blood money as restitution. Yet, if a member of Qurayzha killed a member of Banu An-Nadir, they would accept nothing less than retaliation. When the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him came to Medina, they asked him to rule on this matter, and he ruled that they would henceforth be treated equally. However, this ruling displeased them, and they did not accept it. Both of these stories affirm the meaning of this verse.

(2) The story of paying uncommercial ransom money among the Jews in war

After this, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…But he for whom Allah intends fitnah – never will you possess (power to do) for him a thing against Allah...' (al-Ma'ida: 41). The word fitnah (which can mean 'temptation', 'test', 'trial', etc.) can mean the torment of hell, as when Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, `It will be the day when they will be tormented with the torment of the Fire.'' (adh-Dhariyat: 13)

Ftina can also mean 'trial' and 'test', and fitnat ad-dhahab means smelting gold by placing it in a melting point and subjecting it to high temperatures so that it melts into liquid and is purified from the base metals with which it is intermixed. In its own right, a trial is not a bad thing; what is bad about it are the ends to which it may lead, depending on whether one passes the trial or fails it. The tests which a man must go through are all trials, and for the one who succeeds a trial is a good thing, but for the one who fails, a trial is a bad thing. Therefore, when Allah Glorified is He wants to try or test someone, it is to see whether they will come to Him in obedience of their own free will or not. As long as the True Lord Glorified is He has given man the power to choose in order to prove his love for Him, this was His Will, and no one can take man's free will from him. Allah Glorified is He wanted him to have free will and to be tried and tested, so as to see whether he will succeed or fail, and whether he will be a believer or a disbeliever.

However, he for whom Allah intends fitnah: 'never will you possess (power to do) for him a thing against Allah...' (al-Ma'ida: 41). He the Exalted made this a law for His creation with the utmost clarity; and one side of man is compelled, while the other side is free. However, he for whom Allah intends fitnah 'never will you possess (power to do) for him a thing against Allah...' (al-Ma'ida: 41). This means that no one could possibly alter the laws of the universe, nor will Allah ever alter these laws for anyone; for the natural laws of the universe must proceed as He intended, even for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

We know what happened at Uhud when the archers disobeyed by not heeding the command of their high commander, our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, did Allah change His immutable laws because His beloved was among them? No, they were defeated despite the presence of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him among them. This was due to the fact that Allah wanted the laws of nature to proceed as they were so that things would turn out for the best. Had they been given victory for the Prophet's sake, then what would they have thought of hiscommandments thereafter? One of them might have said, 'We disobeyed him yet, we were victorious.' So the immutable laws of Allah must come to pass.

'…But he for whom Allah intends fitnah – never will you possess (power to do) for him a thing against Allah. Those are the ones for whom Allah does not intend to purify their hearts. For them in this world is disgrace, and for them in the Hereafter is a great punishment' (al-Ma'ida: 41).

Why has Allah not wished to purify their hearts? This was due to the fact that they were hypocrites, and the heart of the hypocrite is diseased. For example, when good events which benefit the believers happen, a hypocrite's hatred and disease increases since his heart is filled with grudge. Allah wishes not to purify one's heart unless he comes to Him first, that is why He says this verse: 'O, you who believe, render not vain your alms by reproach and injury like him who spends his wealth to be seen by men, and he believes not in Allah and the Last Day. His case is like the case of a smooth rock covered with earth, on which heavy rainfalls, leaving it bare and hard. They shall not secure aught of what they earn. And Allah guides not the disbelieving people.' (al-Baqara: 264)

And Allah says this verse: 'How shall Allah guide a people who have disbelieved after believing and who had borne witness that the messenger was true and to whom clear proofs had come? And Allah guides not the wrongdoing people.' (Al-'Imran: 86) The question to ask is the following, 'Did Allah never guide them first, then they disbelieved; or did their disbelief come first so that He did not guide them?' We know that the reason why they were not guided is that they were evildoers or disbelievers. As stated previously, there are cosmological will and legal will. The cosmological will applies to everything that happens in the universe of Allah, and nothing ever happened in the universe of Allah against His Will. Allah has created free will in man in order to have the choice to believe or disbelieve. Also, as long as the True Lord created man with free will to choose this or that, He wills, cosmologically speaking, all actions of man that happen voluntarily whether he believes or disbelieves. Does He will this legally? No, He does not.

The Shar'i Law is a Divine Command which man can either obey or disobey, and we know that certain things are allowed cosmologically, while others are allowed legally. Cosmological things happen, but as for man, Allah has created him with free will. The one who steals does not do so in defiance of Allah, rather he uses his free will and strength which He has given him, which he can use either to do good or to do evil.

When we look at a wristwatch whose maker made it so that one can set it to the time of any place, is this done in defiance of the maker? The answer is no. and the same is true of the television. If we wish to show religious programmes on it, it can do this. Likewise, if we wish to show a dance party on it, it can do this, too. The one who made the television made it able to do this and that; what is important is how the power is directed or used – and man is the same. Allah's cosmological will is all that exists in Allah's Dominion, and His legal will is all that exists in His Law of 'Dos' and 'Do nots'. As long as there are cosmological commandments and legal commandments, Allah created the universe to serve believers, disbelievers and sinners, but His legal commandments are for believers alone. Having said that, it is clear that Allah the Almighty wanted believers to rely on His Way of Guidance and the Shari'a in order to attain faith. As for disbelievers, his disbelief is not against the Will of Allah the Almighty; rather, it is due to the free will that man has, yet, it is important to know that the act of disbelief is against the Shari'a. Therefore, if Allah's cosmological will is that someone should be subjected to trial and temptation, no one can impede His Will. Likewise, if he does not obey the Sacred Law, it is due to the fact that he was created with the ability to obey and the ability to disobey.

Let me give an example to illustrate this point. A father gives his son a pound and says, 'You are free to spend this as you wish. If you buy a religious book or something for you and your brothers to eat, I will reward you and trust you with many other things, but if you use it to buy playing cards, I will be angry with you.'

If the boy then buys the playing cards, does this mean that he does this against his father's will? No, it does not mean that he does this against his father's will, but the result is that he becomes unloved by his father. This is the difference between something which is willed both naturally and legally: something which is willed naturally but not legally and something which is willed legally but not naturally.

As for the saying of Allah the Almighty 'Those are the ones for whom Allah does not intend to purify their hearts' (al-Ma'ida: 41), it indicates that He the Almighty created them in such a way that makes their hearts eligible to be purified or not, and thus, all their actions will not be beyond Allah's Will. This is why He the Almighty concludes the verse with His saying, 'For them in this world is disgrace, and for them in the Hereafter is a great punishment'. This indicates clearly that there is something in their hearts which prevents them from being purified, and therefore, they shall experience disgrace in this world. The word Khizy or 'disgrace' is used in Arabic to give the meaning of both 'scandal' and 'shame'. In fact, these two meanings are related to each other. Yet, what is meant by 'disgrace' and fitnah mentioned in this verse? We should know that this verse refers basically to two groups, namely hypocrites and Jews. As for hypocrites, Allah the Almighty used to expose and reveal all of their conspiracies against believers. In the Quran, Allah Glorified is He tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that had He so willed, He would have shown them clearly to him so that he would know them for sure as by a visible mark. He the Almighty then tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he will most certainly recognise them by the tone of their voice: 'And if We pleased, We could show them to you so that you should know them by their marks. And you shall, surely, recognise them by the tone of their speech. And Allah knows your deeds.' (Muhammad: 30)

The same ruling applied to Jews who would also be afflicted with disgrace, i.e. scandal and exposure; this means they would be despised after having been held in esteem. We know that when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to Medina, the Jews were the leaders of that area; they were the most knowledgeable because they were people of the Book, whereas the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Kha*zraj* were unlettered and had no knowledge. Also, the economy of Medina was run by the Jews in terms of wealth, production, and farming, and thus, they were haughty and proud. Yet, upon the arrival of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in Medina, their conspiracies and lies were exposed, and they were banished, to the extent that their womenfolk were taken prisoner, while some of them were even killed in retribution for their treachery. As a matter of fact, whenever the Jews plotted against him peace and blessings be upon him and the believers, Allah the Almighty would expose their plots. In fact, disgrace is not their only requital, but they would also endure painful suffering in the Hereafter. He the Almighty then says:

سَمَّٰعُونَ لِلۡكَذِبِ أَكَّٰلُونَ لِلسُّحۡتِۚ فَإِن جَآءُوكَ فَٱحۡكُم بَيۡنَهُمۡ
أَوۡ أَعۡرِضۡ عَنۡهُمۡۖ وَإِن تُعۡرِضۡ عَنۡهُمۡ فَلَن يَضُرُّوكَ شَيۡـٔٗاۖ وَإِنۡ
حَكَمۡتَ فَٱحۡكُم بَيۡنَهُم بِٱلۡقِسۡطِۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُحِبُّ ٱلۡمُقۡسِطِينَ ٤٢

they listen eagerly to lies and consume what is unlawful. If they come to you [Prophet] for judgment, you can either judge between them, or decline – if you decline, they will not harm you in any way, but if you do judge between them, judge justly: God loves the just [42] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 42)

Before explaining this verse, we should shed light on a very important point, that is, how dictionaries give the abstract meaning of a word out of the context. For example, the word Sajanjal, when one looks it up at the dictionary, he finds that it means 'diamond', and so are the two words 'As-Safa' and 'Al-Marwah'. If one looks up the word Al-Marwah in the dictionary, he gets the abstract meaning of the word without any kind of attribution. Thus, the first and foremost thing one must understand about Arabic words is to know their abstract meanings, that is, out of their contexts; this is actually the role of dictionaries. For example, if one looks up the word 'weather' in the dictionary, he will find that it means 'the air and other atmospheric conditions which surround a person', but the dictionary does not tell whether the weather is overcast, clear, or cold.

Yet, if one attaches a relative attribution to a given word, then its meanings will be understood within context. For example, when we say, 'The weather is bright.' we thus move from simply understanding the meaning of the word 'weather' to ascribing brightness to it. Meaningful speech is made by the use of ascriptions, which can only be made after the meanings of words are known in the beginning. ‘Ascription’ means that we ascribe something to something else. For example, when we say, ‘Mohamed is hard-working’, we thus have ascribed the quality of hard working to Mohamed, and we could only do this after first knowing about the meanings of the words used in the sentence.

Therefore, it is clear that meaningful speech is made by the use of ascriptions, and the meaning might be more clearly understood by attaching a word to what came before it. For example, when someone asks you, ‘Who is with you?’ you give a short answer by saying, ‘Mohamed.’ The questioner, relying on the context of the speech, will understand that ‘Mohamed’ is the person with you.

Therefore, ascription means to ascribe a particular meaning to something, which may be either positive or negative. In truth, ascriptions are of two kinds: real and unreal. If an ascription is real and has been proven, then it is ‘Ilm, or ‘knowledge’. If it is real and one believes in it but cannot prove it, then it is Taqlid, or ‘imitation’ such as a child who imitates his father by saying, ‘Allah is One’ when the child is unable, at this point, to give proof that this ascription is true.

Undoubtedly, knowledge is the highest level of ascription because it is believed, real and proven. On the other hand, if an ascription is believed but not actually real, this is Al-Jahl, or ‘ignorance’ since the ignorant person is the one who ‘knows’ something in a way which is incorrect; the unlearned man, or Al-Ummi, by contrast, is the one who does not know anything at all. We find it difficult to explain things to someone who is ignorant such as the one who holds that the earth is flat and defends this position. He speaks of an ascription in which he believes but which is not real since the earth is actually spherical. Ignorance, then, means to believe in an ascription which is not real. Indeed, it is the ignorant, not the unlearned, who cause trouble in the world because the unlearned man’s mind is empty, and all you have to do is to tell him the truth and he will believe it. As for the ignorant, we first must remove the false notion from his mind and then replace it with the true one.

If an ascription is still unconfirmed and unachievable, there is no difference whatsoever between denial and affirmation; this is Ash-Shakk, or ‘doubt’. If an ascription has something that is likely to take place, this is Azh- Zhann, or 'supposition'. If an ascription is something that is unlikely to take place, this is Al-Wahm, or a 'fancy'. So, ascriptions are of several kinds: knowledge, blind imitation, ignorance, doubt, supposition, and fancy. Based on this, we can say that falsehood is an unreal ascription, and if one believes in it, he is ignorant. The opposite of falsehood is truth. Therefore, when Allah the Almighty says: 'They listen eagerly to lies…' (al-Ma'ida: 42), this indicates that the ascription in this verse has no basis in reality.

Adversaries of Islam attempt to take advantage of some of the ascriptions in passages of the Quran to declare that it, i.e. the Quran, has some imprecise passages. These adversaries support their opinion by relying on the saying of Allah the Almighty in the chapter of Al-Munafiqun in which He Glorified is He states that when the hypocrites came to Prophet Muhammad, they said: 'We bear witness that you are indeed the Messenger of Allah', and Allah knows that Prophet Muhammad is truly His Messenger: 'In the name of Allah, the Gracious, the Merciful. When the hypocrites come to you, they say, "We bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah." 'And Allah knows that you are indeed His Messenger' (al-Munafiqun: 1). At this point, the speech of the hypocrites is in conformity with what Allah the Almighty says. Yet, Allah Glorified is He concludes this particular verse of the chapter of al-Munafiqun by stating that He bears witness that the hypocrites are indeed liars: 'but Allah also bears witness that the hypocrites certainly are liars.' (al-Munafiqun: 1)

It is clear the ascription is the same, but Allah declares the hypocrites to be liars. But if we carefully reflect on the statement of the hypocrites that they bear witness that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of Allah, we will realise that they are bad liars since they did not truly believe in him. As such, the true meaning of 'testimony' is for the sayings to conform to what the heart believes in.

Therefore, the saying of Allah the Almighty 'They listen eagerly to lies and consume what is lawful' (al-Ma'ida: 42) means that their job was to listen to lies and to consume all that is evil, as though they despised to eat what is lawful. The word Akkal (the one who swallows greedily) is an intensive adjective; these kinds of adjectives are used to imply either the intensity or the repetition of the act. Arabs say, 'Akkal' and 'Akul' to refer to someone who Akala, or eats, ravenously or eats a lot. Thus, he nature of the intensity applies either to the mode of the action or to its frequency.

As for His saying,' (They) consume what is lawful…' (al-Ma'ida: 42), the Sahata means 'to wipe out' or 'to erase', yet it is more intensive than this and means to utterly annihilate something so that no trace is left behind of both the thing itself and also its container. For example, if you have an oil or food stain on your clothes, you could remove the stain, or you could go so far in removing it as to rip the stained material right off the clothing. Accordingly, the word As-Suht means to remove something so completely that even the thing from which it is being removed is damaged somewhat. This means that it is the act of removing the foreign object and also part of the original object with it. Therefore, the scholars recall this concept when they comment on the verse of the Quran in which Allah states that He deprives usurious gains of all blessing: 'Allah will blot out interest and will cause charity to increase. And Allah loves not anyone who is a confirmed disbeliever and an arch-sinner.' (al-Baqara: 276)

People mistakenly believe that usury is some kind of achieving gain and interest, but Allah the Exalted makes it clear to us that it is not really a gain since it intermixes with capital and then erases and annihilates it completely. On the surface, usury appears to be a gain, but it is actually a cause of loss and destruction of one's capital.

Zakat, on the other hand, seems to be a loss of money, but really it is a cause of growth. Thus, it is clear that there is a big difference between human standards and divine ones. Let us offer the following example to illustrate this point. Human beings are always concerned with making more and more money. This is actually known as Rizq Al-Ijab, but they rarely pay attention to the fact that Allah the Almighty may protect them from spending much money, which is known Rizq As-Salb. In fact, one man may earn five hundred pounds, while another earns only one hundred. However, Allah might place the first in circumstances in which he must spend thousands of pounds, while He Glorified is He might protect the second from these circumstances so that he does not even need to spend all of his earnings, but may even save ten pounds of it. So, it is clear that Rizq Al-Ijab means that Allah will provide the person with much more money, whereas Rizq As-Salb means that Allah protects and saves one from having to spend on misfortunes and calamities, even placing blessing in what He gives.

As for the word As-Suht, it means everything which one earns by unlawful means such as bribes, usury, theft, embezzlement, or filching. As such, the saying of Allah Glorified is He 'They listen eagerly to lies and consume what is lawful' indicates clearly that their ears are used to hearing falsehood and accepting it. By the same token, when we say in our prayer, 'Allah hears those who praise Him', this means that we call upon Him and He the Almighty accepts our praise and supplications. Therefore, when He the Exalted says that they, i.e. Jews, eagerly listen to falsehood, this obviously means that they accept it. Listening is undoubtedly an act which is performed by one of the body parts. It is taken for granted that man's body parts are built by food through the process of eating. We know for certain that one eats to grow, and once he is full-grown, he eats to preserve his energy and strength. To grow, then, means for more to enter the body than what leaves it; yet after a certain period of time, the same amount leaves the body in the same way it enters it. When man is old, more leaves the body than what enters it.

Indeed, as long as they eagerly listened to falsehood and greedily swallowed all that is evil and unlawful, they would always be in the same miserable state. Their consumption of evil was a cause of their listening gullibly to falsehood since they built the cells of their body on unlawfully gained sustenance; so how should their ears then reject falsehood?! Indeed, their ears are accustomed to falsehood, and their tongues composed it. Their eyes invited unlawful gazes, and their hands invited theft, for they built these limbs of theirs with ill-gotten provisions.

In this regard, it is important to know that Allah the Almighty did not say that they just 'listen to' falsehood; rather, they 'eagerly listened' to it. This means that these people, or spies, made it their business to eagerly listen to falsehood. Otherwise, if this were not the case, then anyone who ever hears a lie would be included amongst these people. As such, it is clear that these words refer mainly to those who make it their business to eagerly listen to falsehood. It goes without saying that a person does not make this particular act of listening eagerly to falsehood his business unless he is a spy for someone else. It is certainly well known that spies violate the trust of the gatherings they attend. Every gathering has its secrets, and if someone attends a gathering, he does not have the right to convey all that he hears therein to others – unless he makes it his business to do so, to the extent that they intentionally attend these gatherings for this purpose.

Allah the Almighty says: ‘They listen eagerly to lies and consume what is lawful.’ (al-Ma’ida: 42) In fact, this part of the verse imposes a very important question, which is the following: ‘Is the eager listening to falsehood caused mainly by the greedy consumption of what is evil and unlawful, or vice versa?’

When Allah the Exalted created Adam from the clay of the earth, He blew His Spirit into him. Furthermore, He Glorified is He placed all of his life’s needs into the natural products of the earth’s clay. So, if man takes something lawfully, the cells of his body are restored in accordance with the balance set by Allah the Almighty. Yet, if he introduces ill-gotten provisions into them, he causes the makeup of his cells to become imbalanced, causing him who greedily consumes evil to listen eagerly to falsehood. Were it not for this imbalance in his bodily makeup, which he himself caused, he would never have listened to falsehood.

The meaning may also be that the person began to listen eagerly to falsehood after his initial greedy consumption of what is evil and unlawful, or on the other hand, his greedy consumption of what is evil and unlawful began after his initial eagerly listening to falsehood. We may observe that Allah the Almighty did not say ‘eating evil’ or ‘hearing falsehood’; rather, He the Exalted said: ‘They listen eagerly to lies and consume what is lawful.’ (al-Ma’ida: 42) That is, they became accustomed to hearing falsehood and consuming what is evil and unlawful. One of them might have taken unlawful things from the onset, and when he became a greedy consumer and an eager listener to falsehood at the same time, the cells of his bodily makeup were thrown out of balance, thus he no longer possessed the light in the depths of his soul to reject falsehood, but instead accepted it. Falsehood then tempts him into consuming what is evil. So, the matter revolves mainly about listening to what is false and consuming what is evil.

The issue of deceit is undoubtedly part of the issue of the struggle between falsehood and truth. As long as deceit contradicts a cosmological fact or a religious truth, it causes imbalance in the universe. This is why Allah the Almighty offers us a striking example with something tangible so that we can fully realise the matter. He Glorified is He says*:* 'He sends down water from the sky so that the valleys flow according to their measure' (ar-Ra'd: 17). This means that every river carries as much water as it can. Allah the Almighty then says that the stream carries scum on its surface: 'and the flood bears on its surface swelling foam.' (ar-Ra'd: 17) Therefore, this means that before the rainwater flows from the mountains to the valleys, it picks up things which the winds leave upon the mountains and the leaves of trees, and then carries them down to the valleys; these things cause scum to form on the water.

The Arabic word Rabian, or 'on the surface' means that the scum rises and sits on top of the water. Why does it do this? It does this because it contains bubbles of air, which cause its surface area to be greater than its weight; it is less dense than the water and so floats upon it. However, what really happens after that? Continuing His Speech on this topic in the chapter of ar-Ra'd, Allah the Almighty says that the stream carries scum on its surface; and likewise, from metal which they smelt in the fire in order to make ornaments or utensils, there rises scum: 'And from that which they heat in the fire, seeking to make ornaments or utensils, comes out a foam similar to it.' (ar-Ra'd: 17)

Amazingly, Allah the Almighty draws this parable with both water and its opposite, fire. Water carries scum and dross on its surface, and the same happens when metals are placed in fire. If one watches a blacksmith blowing his bellows on a piece of metal, he will see the dross and the foreign materials which are mixed with the iron, which are later separated from it during the smelting process so that it becomes pure. Thus, there is scum within iron, which fire removes when it is smelted, and similarly, there is scum which floats on the surface of water. This is why we see that falsehood sometimes prevails over the truth in the same way dross rises and sits atop the pure iron. However, the question to be asked here is, 'Will falsehood remain permanently like this?' The answer is definitely no, for Allah the Almighty says next that as far as the scum is concerned, it passes away as does all dross, but that which is of benefit to man abides on earth: ‘Thus does Allah illustrate truth and falsehood. Now, as to the foam it goes away as rubbish and perishes but as to that which benefits men, it stays in the earth.’ (ar-Ra’d: 17)

In fact, when we see scum rising to the surface, we are surprised after a while to see that it disappears, and the water becomes pure. Likewise, the scum which rises atop the iron is expelled so that it remains pure. So, if we ever see falsehood prevailing over the truth, we should know for certain that this ascendancy cannot last since Allah the Almighty destines that only that which is beneficial to man will remain on earth. This raises another question: ‘Why does truth give the opportunity to falsehood to prevail from the onset?’ Allah the Almighty willed that it be this way so that falsehood would cause the forces of truth to arise, for if falsehood did not disturb people and vex them, would they turn to seeking out the truth? No, they would not, and therefore, falsehood must inevitably come and vex them, so that they seek out the truth. Thus, we see that even falsehood itself is one of the forces of truth. We gave an example to illustrate this point before in which we said that the pain of the sick person is one of the matters leading basically to healing, for if there were no pain, the disease would spread without the ill person feeling it. It is as though the pain alerts him to the presence of the disease and encourages him to seek medical treatment. In this way, he becomes aware of the great importance of health.

Therefore, it is clear right now that falsehood is one of the forces of truth, just as pain is one of the ways leading to healing. As a matter of fact, if the affairs of this life were always the same, man would not know anything about its different facets and aspects. If no pain came to the sick, the disease would destroy him. Thus, just as pain is a way leading to healing, likewise disbelief is a way leading to faith since when we see disbelief and its corrupting influences on society, we ask ourselves, ‘What can save us from this?’ We know for certain that only faith can free us from such corruption.

In this respect, I would like to stress that the very word Kufr, or ‘disbelief’, is the first proof of faith. This particular word Kufr means ‘to cover’; so as long as ‘to disbelieve’ means ‘to cover’, then a disbeliever covers faith, and thus, the appearance of disbelief on the surface definitively proves the existence of faith before it.

As long as Allah the Almighty says that they eagerly listen to any falsehood and greedily swallowing all that is evil, it was inevitable that He the Almighty would tell His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him how to deal with these people. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: 'If they come to you (Prophet) for judgment, you can either judge between them or decline.' (al-Ma'ida: 42) This means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has the choice to judge between them or to leave them if they come to him for judgment. In addition, He the Almighty told him peace and blessings be upon him that he had no obligation towards them, for they are people who eagerly listen to any falsehood and greedily swallow all that is evil and unlawful. It was so bad to the extent that when they came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to seek his judgment about something, they did not do this with the intention of finding out the truth or seeking justice, but they only came to him, expecting to find a way to allow themselves to follow falsehood and consume what is evil. They sought judgment in the matter of adultery, even though the Torah told them that the punishment for adultery is stoning.

They went to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because they wanted to conceal the legal punishment mentioned in the Torah about adultery and thus fabricated another one, that is, lashing the adulterer, blackening his face and parading him on a donkey facing backwards all around the town. When the judgment given by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not in accordance with their whims, they went away from him. This incident clearly indicates that they only sought lenience since they used to eagerly listen to any falsehood and greedily swallow all that is evil. In addition, they wanted to ingratiate this nobleman who committed this crime of adultery by lessening his punishment.

However, is there any contradiction whatsoever between this verse under discussion and the saying of Allah the Almighty '...Judge, then, between the followers of earlier revelation in accordance with what Allah has bestowed from above…?' (al-Ma'ida: 48)

Undoubtedly, there is no contradiction whatsoever. Some scholars conclude that the saying of Allah the Almighty '... Judge, then, between the followers of earlier revelation in accordance with what Allah has bestowed from above…' indicates an obligation to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he must judge amongst them. However, the most authentic opinion is that Allah the Almighty allows him to choose whatever he wants to do, meaning to judge amongst them or not. Yet, in the event, he chooses to judge amongst them, he has to do so according to what Allah Glorified is He has revealed. If we carefully reflect upon the style of this Quranic verse, we will fully realise that the Quran was revealed down by the All-Wise. The order mentioned in this verse clearly indicates that Allah the Almighty left the matter to Prophet Muhammad to decide whether to judge or not to judge them since they wanted him to judge between them according to their own whims and desires. Thus, He the Almighty assured him that He would protect him from their evil if he had left them alone. It is as though Allah the Almighty wanted to assure His Messenger Muhammad that the Jews would never be able to do him any harm if he had chosen to turn away from them. He the Almighty says: '…you can either judge between them or decline.' (al-Ma'ida: 42) In addition, He Glorified is He tells him not to let the threat of potential harm from them force him into judging for them, for he has the choice either to judge or not to judge them.

He the Almighty then says: '…but if you do judge between them, judge justly. Allah loves the just.' (al-Ma'ida: 42) This part of the verse indicates that in the case Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him chooses to judge among them, he must judge justly in accordance with what Allah has revealed, and not by his whims or desires. In addition, it says that Allah the Almighty loves those who remove injustice. As long as judging with equity means to remove all injustice, it is as if this law the Jews used to rely upon was unjust. Therefore, the meaning of the word Aqsata is to remove an unjust law and restore the balance so that man lives in harmony with all creation. Undoubtedly, the entire universe is run by due measure; the earth revolves around the sun, while the sun does its duty, and planets do not collide with one another. Allah the Almighty mentions this undeniable fact in the Quran where He the Almighty says: 'It is not for the sun to overtake the moon, nor can the night outstrip the day. All of them float smoothly in an orbit.' (Ya Sin: 40)

So, if you (O mankind!) want your affairs to go well for you, you should then carefully consider the balanced laws, which regulate the universe around you and maintain its fair order. You have to manage your own affairs in a balanced way and with justice so that you can have harmony, exactly just as the universe has. When just balance is referred to it means of which the affairs of the universe are perfectly run. Allah the Almighty says in the chapter of ar-Rahman: 'The sun and the moon run their courses according to a fixed reckoning. And the stemless plants and the trees humbly submit to His Will. And the heaven He has raised high and set up the measure that you may not exceed it.' (ar-Rahman: 5-8)

Therefore, He the Almighty encourages mankind to run their affairs justly as the affairs of the universe are run by due measure. So, if you see that the universe around you is free of disturbance and conflict and that it goes through its motions without any contradiction or collision, then it should be understood that it is governed and run by Allah's Measure. By the same token, He the Almighty has made a measure for you as to the affairs and decisions of your free will, which is contained in the laws and rulings He ordained upon you. So, if you really want the affairs of your free will to go well, then you should base them on the measure defined by Him the Almighty. He the Almighty then says:

وَكَيۡفَ يُحَكِّمُونَكَ وَعِندَهُمُ ٱلتَّوۡرَىٰةُ فِيهَا حُكۡمُ ٱللَّهِ ثُمَّ يَتَوَلَّوۡنَ
مِنۢ بَعۡدِ ذَٰلِكَۚ وَمَآ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ بِٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ ﴿٤٣﴾

But why do they come to you for judgment, when they have the Torah with God's judgment, and even then still turn away? These are not believers [43]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 43)

He the Almighty clarifies, 'How is it that Jews come to you asking for your judgment when they already have the Torah? Likewise, they do not even believe that you, O, Prophet Muhammad, are a Messenger from Allah. So, how could those who do not believe in you be content to have you pass a judgment for them?' Indeed, their intentions in doing so must be to find something which contradicts what the Torah teaches and instructs them to do, for if this were not the case, they would simply apply the ruling they already have in their Scripture. They only come to you, O, Prophet Muhammad, in the hope that you will give them some kind of dispensation, and they imagine (Allah forbid!) that you will allow them to continue eagerly listening to falsehood and greedily swallowing all that is evil and unlawful.

Indeed, their coming to Prophet Muhammad to pass a judgment for them is something curious, to which attention should be paid, for they already had the Torah containing Allah's Injunctions and Rulings. Were they to seek his judgment about something which is not mentioned in the Torah, this might be acceptable; but they asked him about something for which the Torah gives a judgment, and then Allah informed him of this so that he would reveal it. Having been informed by Allah the Almighty of their plot, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said to them, 'Where is Ibn Suriyya so that he may give you the ruling from the Torah on adultery?' The man attended and acknowledged that the Torah prescribes stoning to death as the legal punishment to adultery. So, they wanted to deceive him peace and blessings be upon him. Also, there is a very important point that should be taken into account, which is that the Jews knew for certain that Prophet Muhammad was unlettered and thus unable to read or write – so, who told him that the ruling was in the Torah? The One Who sent him is undoubtedly the One Who told him. As such, if they wanted to find a lenient ruling, Allah Glorified is He wanted this to be a means of bringing disgrace to them.

The saying of Allah the Almighty '... and even then still turn away? These are not believers' (al-Ma'ida: 43) shows that when the Prophet gave them a judgment which was not to their whims and desires, they turned away from this judgment. Had they truly been looking for a judgment in the first place, they would have accepted the one of stoning which he peace and blessings be upon him gave them, but they did not even believe in their own Torah.

He the Almighty then says:

إِنَّآ أَنزَلۡنَا ٱلتَّوۡرَىٰةَ فِيهَا هُدٗى وَنُورٞۚ يَحۡكُمُ بِهَا ٱلنَّبِيُّونَ ٱلَّذِينَ أَسۡلَمُواْ
لِلَّذِينَ هَادُواْ وَٱلرَّبَّٰنِيُّونَ وَٱلۡأَحۡبَارُ بِمَا ٱسۡتُحۡفِظُواْ مِن كِتَٰبِ ٱللَّهِ
وَكَانُواْ عَلَيۡهِ شُهَدَآءَۚ فَلَا تَخۡشَوُاْ ٱلنَّاسَ وَٱخۡشَوۡنِ وَلَا تَشۡتَرُواْ
بِـَٔايَٰتِي ثَمَنٗا قَلِيلٗاۚ وَمَن لَّمۡ يَحۡكُم بِمَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلۡكَٰفِرُونَ ﴿٤٤﴾

We revealed the Torah with guidance and light, and the prophets, who had submitted to God, judged according to it for the Jews. So did the rabbis and the scholars in accordance with that part of God’s Scripture which they were entrusted to preserve, and to which they were witnesses. So [rabbis and scholars] do not fear people, fear Me; do not barter away My messages for a small price; those who do not judge according to what God has sent down are rejecting [God’s teachings] [44]
(The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 44)

The word Al-Huda (Guidance) means the road or the path which leads to a destination. The safety of paths is naturally subject to changes of day and night and other conditions.(1) The path is dark at night, and the traveller might encounter obstacles, or he might not walk in the middle of the path and thus fall into holes or collide with rocks.

This is why Allah the Almighty states essentially in this verse: ‘I have made the path (of guidance) clear for you and lit it up so that you do not collide with anything or encounter any obstacles’, a matter which is embodied by the way of guidance which was brought by all of Allah’s Messengers and Prophets. In the past, the world was divided and communities were dispersed all over, and there were no means of transport or communication between them. Every community lived in isolation with a kind of autonomy, and thus, if social ailments broke out in one place, they would remain contained in that place until someone came to treat them; so were the roles to be performed by Allah’s Messengers and Prophets. One Messenger treated the problem of idol-worship; another dealt with the matter of scales and balances, while a third handled the affairs of the Jewish system of matrimonial life, and so on.

(1) This is a figurative speech which means that the way of guidance is not all the time an easy one.

These ailments were as countless as the number of communities. So, Allah the Almighty willed to unveil the secrets of His Universe to people, so that they would utilise them to narrow distances and make it easier for different nations to come together. When nations began to come together, there were no longer barriers between social ailments: a single ailment could break out in the East and spread to the West. What added to this is that, it seemed that the ailments of the world began to become homogenous.

Due to all of these matters, there was a dire need for one Messenger who could treat all these ailments, so Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to unify and protect mankind. So, when Allah the Almighty says that He revealed the Torah, wherein there was guidance and light, the same applies to the Gospel, which means that it also contained guidance and light; yet all the guidance and light in any revealed scripture was only meant to treat the specific ailments which existed in such isolated communities for which this Messenger or Prophet was sent. For example, Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him lived at the very same time as Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and so is the case as to Prophet Shu'aib (Jethro) peace be upon him. Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. All these prophets lived during the same time. So, it is clear that some of Allah's Messengers would sometimes be contemporaries since each of them was meant to treat a specific ailment, and thus, their Messages were limited to certain times and certain places.

As for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah the Almighty sent him to all mankind, irrespective of their different races; and his religion will last until the end of time. Therefore, people became no longer in need of any other Messenger or Prophet.

He the Almighty then says: 'Verily, it is We Who bestowed from above the Torah, wherein there was guidance and light. On its strength did the Prophets, who had surrendered themselves to Allah, deliver judgment…' (al-Ma'ida: 44). However, this raises a question: 'Why does Allah the Almighty speak here of the self-surrender (Islam) of all the Prophets sent before Muhammad?' As a matter of fact, Allah Glorified is He does so by way of honouring Islam and showing its prestigious status since it is the essence of every Prophetic Message.

In this respect, we find that some poets eloquently expressed this concept. One of them once said:

I praise not Muhammad with my words,
But my words are praised by Muhammad.

Yet, another one said:

They say that Abu As-Saqr is from Shayban, but I say:
Nay, by my life, Shayban is from him!

So, if the entire tribe is to be ascribed to Abu Sahyban and not vice versa.

He then added:

Many a father is exalted by his noble son,
Just as 'Adnan was exalted by Messenger Muhammad.

Therefore, when Allah the Almighty describes Prophets as having surrendered themselves, He Glorified is He wanted to honour Islam by stating how they surrendered to Him since they found that this was best for them. In fact, the self-surrender of Prophets was done in its fullest meaning: they were completely and utterly obedient to Allah's Commands and Orders. If ever one of these Prophets thought that he might be afflicted with harm because of his mission, or that someone might persecute him or that someone might enjoy abusing him, he surrendered his affair to Allah the Almighty; for all the Messengers of Allah spoke the truth and did not worry what might happen on account of it.

He the Almighty then says: '…On its strength did the Prophets, who had surrendered themselves to Allah, deliver judgment to those who followed the Jewish faith…' (al-Ma'ida: 44). They judged according to the Torah amongst those who followed the Jewish faith, and likewise, Ar-Rabbaniyyun (the early men of Allah) and Al-Ahbar (the rabbis) judged by it. The word Ar-Rabbani is derived from the word Rabb (Lord), so it means someone whose actions are all devoted to Allah. As for rabbis, they are the scholars who are well versed in knowledge, irrespective of the fact whether they implement it or not. It is true that every scholar has vast of knowledge, but he may or may not benefit from his knowledge; yet he may, nevertheless, pass on his knowledge to one who does benefit from it. Therefore, one of the scholars said:

Take my knowledge, and heed not my actions:
Pick the fruit, and leave the wood for the fire!

Therefore, one should not say, ‘This scholar tells us to do this and that, but we see him doing the opposite’ because you should take the fruits of knowledge and leave the wood for the fire. Nevertheless, the scholar should be the first and foremost person to hasten to practise what he preaches, so that he does not go to hell and become one of those about whom Allah blames for not doing what they are saying: ‘O, you who believe! Why do you say what you do not? It is most hateful in the sight of Allah that you say what you do not.’ (as-Saff: 2-3)

He Glorified is He then says: ‘…And so did the (early) men of Allah and the rabbis, inasmuch as some of Allah’s Book had been entrusted to their care…’ (al-Ma’ida: 44). We have previously explained that the Torah contains light and guidance by which the Prophets, early men of Allah and the rabbis delivered judgments by the means which Allah entrusted to their care and by the Torah, which their Messengers encouraged them to preserve. In this regard, it is important to note that Allah the Almighty says: ‘that which had been entrusted to their care’ (al-Ma’ida: 44) and not that they ‘preserved’ it, thus showing us the difference between the Quran and all the heavenly scriptures revealed before it.

We know perfectly well that every Messenger brought a miracle that proved that he was truly sent by Allah, yet these miracles have nothing, in essence, to do with their Messages. For example, the miracle of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was the staff and the cleaving of the sea, while his Message was the Torah; and the miracle of Prophet Isa (Jesus) was to heal the lame and the leprous, while his Message was the Gospel. As for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him his miracle and his Message were one and the same, namely the Quran. In the same respect, every Messenger’s mission was linked and restricted to his time and his people, and thus, he required an appropriate miracle and an appropriate Message. However, when Allah the Exalted decreed to send a Messenger to all humanity and made him the Seal of the Prophets, his miracle and his Message had to remain one and the same, so that any Muslim could forever say: 'Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, and here is his miracle, which is also his Message.'

In fact, the Quran will remain a clear miracle until the end of time since Allah the Almighty wanted it to be different from all the other messages and miracles. Previous miracles were like a matchstick which can only be lit once, which means that those who witnessed the occurrence of these miracles would believe in them, yet those who did not witness them will not believe that they had occurred unless someone they trust informs them. Allah Glorified is He entrusted the care of the Torah to the men of Allah and the rabbis, which is to say that He told them to take care of it and to preserve it. As a matter of fact, this Divine Command to them was a legal obligation, which could either be obeyed or disobeyed. Even though He the Almighty entrusted the care of the Torah and the Gospel to them, they, too, have forgotten much of what they had been told to bear in mind. Therefore, the message was forgotten and no longer inhabited their minds as much due to the fact that when something occupies one's thoughts and settles always in the forefront of his consciousness, it remains unforgettable. Truthfully speaking, forgetfulness occurs when something is far from one's thoughts.

Allah the Almighty told them to preserve the message, i.e. the Torah and the Gospel, but all of them, except for the Prophets, did not do so. As a matter of fact, man has free will by means of which he can decide whether or not to obey Divine Commands. This is why we find that the men of Allah and the rabbis forgot, even concealing what they did not forget. The first stage contributing to the lack of preservation was actually that they forgot the Divine Command; the second stage was that they concealed what they did not forget, while the third was that they corrupted what they did not conceal and altered it with their tongues. Furthermore, it would have been bad enough had they stopped with these stages, yet they also brought other things and claimed that they were from Allah when really they were not. Allah Glorified is He says in the Quran that severe punishment in the hell-fire is prepared for those who attribute what they write down by their own hands to Allah: 'Woe, therefore, to those who write the Book with their own hands and then say, “This is from Allah." That they may take it for a paltry price Woe, then, to them for what their hands have written, and woe to them for what they earn.’ (al-Baqara: 79)

Thus, they did not preserve the scriptures as they were ordered. This is why Allah the Almighty did not leave the Quran to be preserved in the same way which means by virtue of legal obligation, for He the Almighty had already tested mankind. In addition, out of the fact that He wanted the Quran to be the everlasting miracle, He the Almighty did not assign the task of its preservation to mankind; rather, He took it upon Himself to preserve it. This fact is mentioned clearly in the chapter of al-Hijr: ‘Verily, it is We Who has sent down this Exhortation and most surely we are its Guardians.’ (al-Hijr: 9)

This particular verse of the chapter of al-Hijr is proved absolutely correct, especially if we consider it in the light of the fact that some Muslims who wrong themselves by straying from the guidance of Islam and the Quran preserve the physical Quran itself; they write it in different ways and sizes. For example, there are golden copies of the Quran which women wear on pendants round their necks; there are yet small copies which can fit into the hand; and even disbelievers have invented a way to print the entire Quran on a single page.

In such a way, Allah the Almighty protects the Quran even by means of non-Muslims. Every day we see people whose conduct is far from the teachings of the religion, yet they spend money to preserve the Quran, to the extent that we find it protected in countless ways: one man keeps a copy in his car and another in his bedroom. A woman might have her hair uncovered and her chest bare, yet have a golden copy of the Quran hung around her neck. This confirms to us that the preservation of the Quran is not a commandment of moral responsibility; rather, it is protected by the Will of Allah.

If it were a matter of moral responsibility, the Quran might have been forgotten. Since Muslims have deviated from some of its teachings, it seems likely that they would have failed to preserve its letter, too. Actually, the opposite has occurred, which essentially means that despite the fact that Muslims have strayed from the message, the Quran itself has never failed to be preserved. Surprisingly, if many of those who sin against themselves hear that the printed Quran has been insulted in any way, they will turn the world upside down in their outrage. As a matter of fact, such people do so out of the Divine Will, as Allah took the pledge that He would keep the Quran intact till the end of time. By the same token, if the enemies of Islam attempt to corrupt the Quran in any way, we find that all Muslims stand in their way. Some of them who seek to distort the Quran suggest adding the following prayer, i.e. "Allah's peace and blessings be upon him" after the name of Prophet Muhammad in the chapter of al-Fath and particularly to the verse in which Allah describes Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers with him as firm and unyielding towards all the deniers of truth: 'Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah. And those who are with him are hard against the disbelievers but tender among themselves.' (al-Fath: 29)

It as though they wanted to give extra honour to Prophet Muhammad. Yet, when Muslims discovered this, clamour broke out and all the copies of that version of the Quran were burned. As such, it is clear that Muslims do not allow any kind of alteration to be made, whatever its motive may be.

He the Almighty then says: '…Therefore, (O children of Israel), hold not men in awe, but stand in awe of Me…' (al-Ma'ida: 44). The word Al-Khashiya (awe) means the fear that one feels towards someone he thinks could potentially harm him. It is certain that Allah the Almighty is the Only One Who is able to cause harm and benefit, and therefore, a man should not fear anyone but Him. This is why it is incorrect to think that rulers or authority figures can cause harm to you in any way. Therefore, we must all stand in awe of Allah the Almighty Who advises us to stand in awe for Him, and Him Alone.

Yet, if anyone changes the laws of Allah's Guidance for the sake of a ruler or his cronies or friends, which, in fact, is the very essence of corruption, this, in turn, leads to the existence of all evils and ills. Indeed, one of a ruler's cronies might, without his knowledge, order scholars to change certain elements of the religion's teachings, but none of them will capitulate to his demands except those who are weak. 'Umar Allah be pleased with him was fully aware of this fact when he said: 'Corruption may not come from a ruler himself, but it may come from those around him.'

Such a thing, i.e. being submissive to the will of a ruler in corrupting the teachings of the religion, only happens when people stand in awe for other than Allah the Almighty. This is why ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him used to gather his relatives and those who were close to him and say to them, ‘I have reached a resolution concerning this ruling, and by Him in whose hand s my soul is, if any of you defy me therein, I shall punish him severely!’ This is the manner of the one who wishes to serve and rule without incurring sins thereby. We see that many forms of corruption arise simply due to the defiance of the following wise principle: ‘hold not men in awe, but stand in awe of Me’.

He the Almighty then orders us not to trade His Messages for a trifling gain. This is because the material value of the price taken in exchange for the Messages will never last longer than this worldly life, for, as we have explained before, this world is not measured by its true life span, i.e. until Allah decides to bring an end to mankind. Truthfully speaking, everyone’s life span in this world is measured by how long he lives within it.

Suppose that life lasted for millions of years. How could any individual person benefit from these millions of years with his limited life span? Therefore, the life span of any man lasts only as long as he is alive in it; a matter which is known only to Allah the Almighty for, indeed, every term is recorded. This is why we find that one person may live a life of seventy years, while another might die at the age of sixty; a third might yet die at forty; a fourth might die at the age of one hundred; and a fifth might die whilst still a baby. Therefore, the life span of an individual might only be a moment. Furthermore, as long as life and death are not determined by times and causes, then it is part of the unseen which is determined only by the Will of Allah the Almighty.

Allah has spread out death over all times, to the effect that we can never claim that it will not afflict a person; the exception is birth which means a person will die only after he has been born, but a human being might die in the womb while still a foetus. In fact, miscarriages may take place after an hour of pregnancy, some after a month, while some after several months, and so on. In doing this, He the Almighty has allowed us to learn from the microscopic matter of the foetus in the womb the stages of its development. He Glorified is He shows us the form of the foetus after half an hour of development, after one hour, and so on. Life and death can occur at any moment. Yet, when we analyse these forms, we discover and have a better understanding about all the stages of the foetus's development along with all the stages of life, lest anyone were to imagine that his life in this world is guaranteed to be such-and-such exact period of time.

The price that corrupts men take in exchange for altering Allah's Messages and laws will only benefit them in this worldly life, and they should remember that their lives in this world are limited. They should also remember that their individual lives are short compared to the life span of this world. In order for a man to make a sound economic transaction, he must be aware that his life span is limited to an unknown number of years, no matter how long he lives. In addition, if he compares this life to the life of the life to come, he will find that his life is temporal. Therefore, if he can exchange it for an eternal life, or the life of the Hereafter, this would be a supreme triumph. Truly, a man's life may come to an end at any moment, while his life in the Hereafter is everlasting. Also, the pleasures which a person enjoys in this worldly life are only commensurate with his possibilities, while the delights and pleasures of the Hereafter are ascribed to the Omnipotent Power of Allah the Almighty.

So, which trade is more advantageous: something limited in exchange for something unlimited; something presumed in exchange for something certain; delight commensurate with one's position and power in exchange for delight ascribed to the Omnipotent Power of Allah the Almighty? Which trade is more advantageous? It is completely clear that the gain of this worldly life is paltry compared to what Allah the Exalted has prepared for those who are conscious of Him.

He the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying, '…for they who do not judge in accordance with what Allah has bestowed from above are, indeed, deniers of the truth!' (al-Ma'ida: 44) What does it mean to judge in accordance with what Allah the Almighty has bestowed on mankind from above?

We know that Allah the Almighty has ordained a judgment for every matter of dispute in existence. Thus, if you, as a human being, wish to pass judgment about something, you must seek out its nature, or crux, by looking back into its history. We will thus find that creed that pertains to the Existence of Allah the Almighty represents the apex of these rulings; if one judges that He the Almighty does not exist, he is ruled to be a disbeliever. In the same respect, if a man believes in Allah but rejects some of His Laws, he is ruled as committing a form of disbelief. However, if a person believes in the authenticity, or validity, of a ruling but is unable to help himself, is this regarded as disbelief or wrongdoing? It is not disbelief, or Kufr, but it is evildoing or azh-zhulm (if the ruling concerns two parties). Yet, it is iniquity or fisq (if it is between a man and himself because he, in essence, breaks away from the ruling just as a fresh date breaks away, or Tafsuq, from its shell.

The unjust man is the one who lives within a sphere of moral responsibilities, and then comes out of this sphere just like a fresh date that comes out of its shell. Once the date comes out of its shell, it is in danger of rotting.

Therefore, when He the Almighty says: '…For they who do not judge in accordance with what Allah has bestowed from above are, indeed, deniers of the truth' (al-Ma'ida: 44); '…And they who do not judge in accordance with what Allah has revealed – they, they are the evildoers' (al-Ma'ida: 45); and '...For they who do not judge in the light of what Allah has bestowed from on high – it is they, they who are truly unjust' (al-Ma'ida: 47), we should heed Allah's Laws and try to control ourselves, lest we fall into destruction.

Some scholars conclude that the first verse, or (al-Ma'ida: 44) refers to Jews since Allah the Almighty said before: 'Verily, it is We Who bestowed from above the Torah, wherein there was guidance and light…' (al-Ma'ida: 44). As for the second verse, or (al-Ma'ida: 45), they conclude that it refers to Christians who did not judge and rule according to the Gospel.

In reply to these claims, we say, 'Is it possible that this would apply to the religions which came before Islam, and not to exist in Islam, too?' This is neither rational nor logical, and thus, the meanings of these verses are general. If man judges against the truth that is in accordance to the creed, which represents the apex of rulings, this is viewed as the essence of disbelief or a denial of the truth. Furthermore, if he rejects a judgment, or ruling, of the Supreme Truth, this is form of disbelief. In addition, if he believes in both the ruling and Allah, but his soul overpowers him, this is viewed as injustice. Furthermore, if he judges between two parties and allows his bias to lead him away from Allah's Ruling, this is evildoing.

Thus, the use of the words 'deniers of the truth', 'evildoers' and 'unjust' tells us that the words differ according to the nature of a judgment. No one, therefore, should say that the first verse was revealed in reference to such-and-such sect, the second in reference to such-and-such sect, and the third in reference to such-and-such sect; rather, these are general principles which refer to all aspects of moral responsibility. At the beginning of each pronouncement, He the Almighty says: 'for they who…', and as we know, these words are general in their applicability. This is proved by the fact that whoever judges according to other than what Allah has revealed thereby trades Allah's signs and Messages for a trifling price along with rejecting His Judgment. In addition, He the Almighty says in the next verse: 'And We ordained for them in that (Torah): A life for a life…' (al-Ma'ida: 45).

In fact, these are laws concerning crimes and their legal punishments, in which case to judge according to other than that which Allah revealed is evildoing; so the situation differs according to the nature of the judgment.

When we discussed the matter of the creation of Adam peace be upon him and how Allah instructed the angels who are in charge of running the affairs of the creation on earth to prostrate themselves before him (Adam), we said that this prostration was a symbol of how they would serve him peace be upon him. As a matter of fact, every manifestation of power in the universe is run by an angel whom we cannot see. These angels are known as the managers of affairs. When He the Almighty informed them of the new creation which would come into the universe, i.e. Adam, and informed them that they would serve him, He commanded them to prostrate before him. This is why angels who are not in charge with managing the affairs of earth were not included in this Divine Command. Yet, when the Satan refused to prostrate before Adam peace be upon him Allah the Almighty asked him: `O Iblis, what hindered you from submitting to what I had created with my two hands? Is it that you are too proud, or are you really above obeying my command?' (Sad: 75)

The word Al-'Alin or 'those who are above' refers to the angels who glorify Allah the Almighty night and day without stopping and have no knowledge of the existence of Adam, and therefore He the Almighty asked Satan: 'Are you too proud to prostrate, or do you think yourself one of the most honoured angels who were not commanded to prostrate?' And we said before that Satan himself was not an angel since the Quran clearly says he was from the jinn: 'He was one of the jinn' (al-Kahf: 50).

Therefore, there is no reason to dispute as to whether Satan is an angel or not, for he was not an angel and the Quran explicitly states that Satan is a jinni. He was a being of free will, with the ability to choose whether to obey or disobey, for jinns are also beings of free will. If one of them chooses to adhere to Allah's Way of Guidance to such an extent that he becomes equal to the angels, he must live up to this, but Satan did not. Satan should have also obeyed the Divine Command to prostrate, for as long He the Almighty issued the order to do so, then as a lower being Satan should have done so since we know ranks must be respected. The ministers obey the orders of a president, and if some of the ministers' aides are also present, they will obey his orders too, since they are included in them a fortiori. Even if Satan were a higher being than the angels were, he would still have had to obey the Command of the Supreme Creator and not to disobey or decline. However, as a lower being than the angels, it was even more imperative that he had to yield to Allah's Command. However, Satan attempted to justify his refusal to prostrate by saying that he is better than Adam peace be upon him for Allah created him out of fire, whereas Adam was created out of clay: 'He (Satan) said, "I am better than he. You have created me out of fire while him you have created out of clay. "' (al-A'raf: 12) In another verse, he justifies his disobedience by saying he cannot prostrate himself before such creature who has been created out of clay: 'He said, "Shall I submit to one whom You have created of clay?"' (al-Isra': 61)

This raises an important question, 'When a created being refuses to obey a ruling, does he refuse the ruling in and of itself without considering the one who issues it, or does he refuse the issuer of the ruling, which in this case is the Most High?' Satan rebelled against the One Who issued the ruling, and therefore, He the Almighty cast him out of the paradise, and he became accursed. Adam, on the other hand, disobeyed his Lord by approaching the forbidden tree. Out of His Mercy, Allah Glorified is He gives His commands precursors which apply to the state of the one He commands. Thus, He the Almighty did not say to Adam peace be upon him: 'Do not eat from the tree', but rather ordered him not to approach it: 'We said "O, Adam, you and your wife dwell in the garden and eat therefrom plentifully where ever you will, but approach not this tree, least you be of the wrongdoers."' (al-Baqara: 35)

This is because He the Almighty knew that Adam peace be upon him was a man, and thus, he is subject to fluctuations. In addition, He the Almighty knew that if he saw the tree and its fruits, he might not be able to restrain himself. Therefore, it was best that he not to approach it at all. Allah Glorified is He truly wants to protect man since He does not waive or excuse the legal responsibilities He has ordained unless something happens which is beyond man's free will. Therefore, He wanted to protect Adam peace be upon him from even approaching that tree lest he be tempted. He the Almighty applied the same methodology as the prohibition of drinking wine; He did not say, 'Do not drink wine', rather, He said that intoxicants, games of chance, idolatrous practices and the divining of the future are loathsome evils of Satan's doing, so shun them: 'O, you who believe! Wine and the game of chance and idols and divining arrows are only the abomination of Satan's handiwork. So shun each one of them that you may prosper.' (al-Ma'ida: 90)

The reason for this is if a man sits in a place where wine is drunk and sees the drunken people laughing and cajoling, he might be tempted to drink. Therefore, the command to' shun' in this verse is even more explicit than 'Do not drink it.' In this respect, we know that Allah's Orders only apply to practical actions which mean the instances where a person actually moves and acts. As for perceptions, it is permissible for a man to perceive things, and Allah the Almighty has left us free to love whom we will and to hate whom we will. However, this love must not lead us to immoral actions such as giving unjust favours. Likewise, although we are not commanded or forbidden to hate, hatred of someone can lead a person to wronging him. What is forbidden is evildoing and injustice, and therefore Allah Glorified is He orders us not to let hatred of anyone lead us into the sin of deviating from justice: '…let not a people's enmity incite you to act otherwise than with justice. Be always just. This is nearer to righteousness. And fear Allah. Surely, Allah is Aware of what you do.' (al-Ma'ida: 8)

That is, you (O, Muslims), You should not let your hatred of people cause you to be unjust. Therefore, it becomes clear that Allah the Almighty does not forbid the feeling of hatred; rather, Allah Glorified is He forbids anything that may result in infringing upon the justice of others even with ones for whom one may have hatred. One must firmly believe that if someone wrongs him, he must not respond to such injustice committed against him except in the light of being obedient to Him the Almighty.

Adam peace be upon him ate from the forbidden tree. By doing so, he had committed both two sins: one of getting close to the tree and the second of eating from it. So, he peace be upon him fell into sin, yet He asked Allah for forgiveness. The Quran recorded that Adam and his wife Hawwa (Eve) peace be upon them confessed that they have sinned against themselves: `Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves and if Thou forgive us not and have not mercy on us, we shall surely be of the losers.' (al-A'raf: 23)

Truthfully speaking, this confession of Adam and Hawwa (Eve) indicates plainly that the Judgment of Allah the Almighty is absolutely right. In addition, it tells that both of them were responsible for this sin since they were unable to control the evil of their souls. So, they did not reject Allah's Ruling, but confessed that they were unable to adhere to it. This is why Allah the Almighty taught them words by means of which they could show repentance to Him and have their sins forgiven. In fact, Allah the Almighty is the One Who taught Adam and Hawwa (Eve) peace be upon them how to repent. Thus, we see that Adam is not like Satan, who completely rejected Allah's Ruling. The big difference between Adam peace be upon him and Satan is that Adam confessed his inability to control his soul, while the latter rejected the Ruling of Allah.

So, he who does not judge by what Allah has revealed because he rejects His Judgment outright and finds fault with it – Glory be to Him! – is a disbeliever and a denier of the truth. By the same token, if this person was to make a judgment between two parties, and he does not judge according to what Allah has revealed, he is an evildoer. Yet, if one makes a judgment out of his whims, he is judged to be immoral. Each attribute is thus appropriate to its designation. There is no need then to debate and differ over the interpretation of these verses by ascribing one of them to Jews and the other to Christians. In addition, falsehood should not be made attractive to people thus leading them away from adhering to the Shari'a of Allah. This is because one must firmly and strictly adhere to what Allah has revealed in Islam. He the Almighty then says:

وَكَتَبْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ فِيهَآ أَنَّ ٱلنَّفْسَ بِٱلنَّفْسِ وَٱلْعَيْنَ بِٱلْعَيْنِ وَٱلْأَنفَ بِٱلْأَنفِ
وَٱلْأُذُنَ بِٱلْأُذُنِ وَٱلسِّنَّ بِٱلسِّنِّ وَٱلْجُرُوحَ قِصَاصٌۚ فَمَن تَصَدَّقَ بِهِۦ
فَهُوَ كَفَّارَةٌ لَّهُۥۚ وَمَن لَّمْ يَحْكُم بِمَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ﴿٤٥﴾

In the Torah We prescribed for them a life for a life, an eye for an eye, a nose for a nose, an ear for an ear, a tooth for a tooth, an equal wound for a wound: if anyone forgoes this out of charity, it will serve as atonement for his bad deeds. Those who do not judge according to what God has revealed are doing grave wrong [45] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 45)

In the Torah which has been just described by Allah the Almighty as being a light and a guidance, He Glorified is He ordained for and obligated Jews the law of 'A life for a life…', that is, how to retaliate. Yet, we must understand each item of this list according to its appropriate action, that is, if one unlawfully takes the life of another, he has to be killed. However, when Allah the Almighty says 'an eye for an eye', does this mean that an eye is to be killed when retaliation is brought? No, it does not, rather, it means that an eye is to be removed in retribution for an eye, and likewise for His saying, 'a nose for a nose'; it means that a nose is to be cut off in retribution for a nose. The same applies to His saying, 'an ear for an ear' since it means that the penalty for cutting an ear is to have one's own ear cut. So, each item has its appropriate action: a life is taken for a life; an eye is plucked for an eye; a nose is cut for a nose; and an ear is deafened for an ear.

In fact, the expressions of the Arabic language are idiomatic and can accurately and precisely describe an action. A man might be hungry, for example, but hungry for what?! If he is hungry for food, he is called Jaw'an (hungry), yet if he has a desire for a particular kind of food such as meat, we do not say that he is' hungry', rather, he is Qarim. As for that man who desires milk, Arabs call him 'Ayman, but if he needs water instead, he is said to be 'thirsty', or 'Atshan. Regarding that person who is hungry for sex, he is said to be 'lustful', or Shabiq.

This shows us that humans do different actions with each having its own name and expression. For example, Arabic language differentiates between the words Jalasa and Qa'ada, both of which basically mean 'to sit'. Yet, the two words indicate two different literal meanings, as follows: Jalasa means literally to 'sit up', i.e. to move from a reclining position to sitting up with a straight back, whereas Qa'ada means 'to sit down', i.e. to go from standing to sitting. This is why Allah the Almighty mentions these two words consecutively in the same verse in the chapter of Al-'Imran: 'Those who remember Allah standing, sitting, and lying on their sides, and ponder over the creation of the heavens and the earth' (Al-'Imran: 191).

Another example to clearly illustrate this point is for the words 'to look', 'to glance' and 'to glimpse'. As a matter of fact, each of these three words indicates a meaning which differs from the other two, e.g. 'to look' means to behold with both eyes, while 'to glance' means to behold for a short moment. As for the meaning indicated by 'to glimpse', it means to behold very briefly.

Likewise, the saying of Allah the Almighty under discussion will indicate that He ordained for them that the penalty for taking life is the killing of the murderer; the penalty for plucking an eye is to have one's eye plucked; the penalty for cutting off a nose is to have one's nose cut off; the penalty for cutting an ear is to have one's ear cut, and the penalty for breaking a tooth is to have one's tooth pulled. Then, He the Almighty tells that a similar retribution for wounds must be made. We should take into account that one can be wounded anywhere on one's body, in which case retribution must be equal to the wound. Literally, the word Qisas (retribution) is derived from the word Qassa which means to tail someone by following their tracks in the sand without straying from their path. Due to the fact that retribution demands equal injury which is a difficult thing to achieve exactly, so how can we carry out retribution in the case of wounds?! In the Quran, Allah the Almighty allows us to assault whoever assaults us in the same way he has assaulted us: 'So whoso transgresses against you, punish him for his transgression to the extent to which he has transgressed against you' (al-Baqara: 194). Yet, the question is still not answered, that is, how can we exactly carry out retribution, especially if we take into account the fact that the punch given by a strong man will not be as powerful as that given by a weak person?

Truthfully speaking, Allah the Almighty is the One Who offers us an answer to this question. Allah Glorified is He tells us that we can forgo retribution out of charity and decline to claim it. We know the story of 'The Merchant of Venice', the Jewish usurer who lent money in exchange for a pound of the debtor's flesh to which the two agreed by contract in the presence of witnesses. The man was unable to repay the loan when the deadline came, but the judge was so intelligent that he said, 'Take the pound of flesh, but if you take an ounce too much or too little, we shall take it from you.' So, the usurer declined to take it.

Even though Allah the Almighty legislated for different crimes, He did not bar the way of spiritual ambition; a point which is quite clear in His saying, '…but he who shall forgo it out of charity will atone thereby for some of his past sins...' (al-Ma'ida: 45). The word 'charity' means to give others something by way of seeking out the Pleasure of Allah the Almighty even though one is not obligated to do so, nor does that particular thing rightfully belong to those to whom it is given. As a matter of fact, the main reason behind all the problems people face today concerning their legal processes is that they spend far too long a time in the litigation process; when a crime is committed, the investigation conducted by the courts might take over a year. Moreover, Wali Ad-Dam (the victim's closest male relative who has the right of retribution) should have a say in the matter since when this authority is given to him, he may be so content with enabling him to exercise his right of taking retribution, to the extent that he may well forgo it, due to the fact that the decision is given to him, giving him the ability to exact retribution; however, it is more likely that he will have mercy.

If this were to happen, that is, if Wali Ad-Dam forgoes retribution, the one who is pardoned for out of charity will, for the rest of his life, owe his life to the one who gave up his right to retribution – this will cause bonds of affection and love to be created between them. Thus, when the Supreme Lawgiver the All-Wise legislates, He wants us to take into account the fact that we will not be always sinned against; rather, we may one day sin against someone else, so if this is the case, would we not like the Wali Ad-Dam to forgo his right to exact retribution upon us? So, if governments wish to bring an end to cycles of revenge, let them fully implement the Supreme Divine Law.

The following example actually takes place in Upper Egypt. When someone is murdered, the guilty party goes to the family of the victim, carrying his burial shroud with him so that they can exact revenge upon him. As a matter of fact, when this happens, guardians of the murdered victim are cleansed of the desire for revenge and thus let him live. As such, this murderer owes his life to them, i.e. the guardians of the murdered victim who forgo retribution out of charity. The saying of Allah the Almighty '...but he who shall forgo it out of charity will atone thereby for some of his past sins' (al-Ma'ida: 45) indicates that Wali Ad-Dam is the only one who has the right to forgo retribution out of charity. The verb Tasaddaqa which literally means 'to give charity', requires the existence of a subject and an object, i.e. the one who gives the charity and the one who receives it. In this regard, it is important to know that Allah the Almighty erases the sins of the one who forgoes retribution out of charity in proportion to the forgiveness he extends towards his fellow man. As such, it is clear that Allah the Almighty wants to spread love amongst mankind.

He the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying, '…And they who do not judge in accordance with what Allah revealed – they are the evildoers!' (al-Ma'ida: 45) We have already explained the absolute necessity of judging by what Allah has revealed. He the Almighty then says:

وَقَفَّيْنَا عَلَىٰٓ ءَاثَٰرِهِم بِعِيسَى ٱبْنِ مَرْيَمَ مُصَدِّقًا لِّمَا بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ مِنَ ٱلتَّوْرَىٰةِ ۖ وَءَاتَيْنَٰهُ ٱلْإِنجِيلَ فِيهِ
هُدًى وَنُورٌ وَمُصَدِّقًا لِّمَا بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ مِنَ ٱلتَّوْرَىٰةِ وَهُدًى وَمَوْعِظَةً لِّلْمُتَّقِينَ ﴿٤٦﴾

We sent Jesus, son of Mary, in their footsteps, to confirming the Torah that had been sent before him: We gave him the Gospel with guidance, light, and confirmation of the Torah already revealed – a guide and lesson for those who take heed of God [46] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 46)

The saying of Allah the Almighty 'we caused…to follow', or Qaffayna which means 'We caused someone to come after another', for 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him came after Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. In fact, when one man walks behind another, the back, or Qafa, of the leader is directed towards the face of the follower. Therefore, the saying of Allah the Almighty 'And We caused 'Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), to follow in the footsteps of those (earlier prophets), confirming the truth of whatever there still remained…' (al-Ma'ida: 45) indicates clearly that 'Isa (Jesus) was sent in confirmation of the truth of which Musa (Moses) was sent, i.e. the Torah. He the Almighty then says: '…And we revealed to him the Gospel, wherein there was guidance and light...' (al-Ma'ida: 45). We previously explained that this' guidance and light' was appropriate for the environment wherein it was revealed.

In Arabic language, there are expressions which are said to be of 'relatively close' meanings. For example, if a man in a village tells his son to turn on the light, the boy will light a kerosene lamp, but if a man in a city tells his son to turn on the light, the boy will press the button so that the electric light comes on. These relative aspects could thus make a word indicate two meanings. Another example to clearly illustrate this point is a man living in an apartment who considers his ceiling high, yet this high ceiling is the floor for those living above him. Therefore, the word 'ceiling' in this case indicates both the meanings of 'height' and 'floor'. This is actually what we call 'relative concept'.

Likewise, a man might be a son, but this does not mean 'he cannot also be a father to his own son'. So, the words 'guidance and light' in this context are relative concepts. It is assumed that every 'guidance and light' was appropriate to the environment wherein it was revealed. For example, Jews were materialistic people, and thus, the Torah was revealed to them since it was most appropriate for them during that particular period of time. This materialistic environment was afterwards in need of spiritual energy, and thus, the Gospel was revealed with all the required spirituality. This is why when 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon him was asked a question about inheritance, he said, 'I was not sent to apportion inheritance.' This statement of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him indicates that he knew for certain that he had come bearing a spiritual rejuvenation comprised of emotional exhortations and counsels.

Allah Glorified is He and then says:

وَلۡيَحۡكُمۡ أَهۡلُ ٱلۡإِنجِيلِ بِمَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ فِيهِۚ وَمَن لَّمۡ يَحۡكُم
بِمَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلۡفَٰسِقُونَ ﴿٤٧﴾

So let the followers of the Gospel judge according to what God has sent down in it. Those who do not judge according to what God has revealed are lawbreakers [47] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 47)

This verse indicates clearly that the followers of the Gospel should adhere to the laws and rulings mentioned in it, namely the Gospel. If we understand this verse in the light of the previously mentioned one, we will fully realise that alongside its spiritual dimensions, the Gospel adopts the fundamentals of the laws found in the Torah. Therefore, Allah the Almighty made it clear that he who does not judge in the light of what Allah Glorified is He has revealed is iniquitous, that is, he has become disobedient. As a matter of fact, if someone does not obey Allah's Orders and Commands pertaining to His Divinity and Lordship, then he is judged to be a disbeliever and denier of the truth. In the same respect, if he does not obey Allah's Divine Rulings relating to how correctly judge amongst people, he is an evildoer. So, all of these concepts are closely related to each other.

Having shed light on the Torah and the Gospel, He the Almighty moves to speak about what He revealed to the Seal of all the Prophets and Messengers, namely, the Quran. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَأَنزَلۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ بِٱلۡحَقِّ مُصَدِّقٗا لِّمَا بَيۡنَ يَدَيۡهِ مِنَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ وَمُهَيۡمِنًا عَلَيۡهِۖ
فَٱحۡكُم بَيۡنَهُم بِمَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُۖ وَلَا تَتَّبِعۡ أَهۡوَآءَهُمۡ عَمَّا جَآءَكَ مِنَ ٱلۡحَقِّۚ لِكُلّٖ جَعَلۡنَا
مِنكُمۡ شِرۡعَةٗ وَمِنۡهَاجٗاۚ وَلَوۡ شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ لَجَعَلَكُمۡ أُمَّةٗ وَٰحِدَةٗ وَلَٰكِن لِّيَبۡلُوَكُمۡ فِي مَآ ءَاتَىٰكُمۡۖ
فَٱسۡتَبِقُواْ ٱلۡخَيۡرَٰتِۚ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ مَرۡجِعُكُمۡ جَمِيعٗا فَيُنَبِّئُكُم بِمَا كُنتُمۡ فِيهِ تَخۡتَلِفُونَ ﴿٤٨﴾

We sent to you [Muhammad] the Scripture with the truth, confirming the Scriptures that came before it and with final authority over them: so judge between them according to what God has sent down. Do not follow their whims, which deviate from the truth that has come to you. We have assigned a law and a path to each of you. If God had so willed, He would have made you one community, but He wanted to test you through that which He has given you, so race to do good: you will all return to God and He will make clear to you the matters you differed about [48] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 48)

When we read the phrase 'We sent', or Anzalna, we know for certain that is Allah the Almighty, the Supreme Lawgiver is the One Who has legislated. Some people yet wish to foist their foolish beliefs onto people by claiming that Islam is a 'progressive religion', while others will describe it as a 'reactionary religion'; both of these kinds of people are actually seeking to ascribe something to Islam which has nothing to do with it. We say to these people to not say that, but say instead that Islam is a 'heavenly religion' since it has been sent down from Allah the Almighty. Islam possesses all the benefits and advantages of different aspects and ideologies of life, whether materialistic or spiritual. Islam actually brought forth true social advancement and scientific progress since the meaning of 'progress' is for man to keep on refining himself until all people are equal.

Islam benefits man in this worldly life and the life to come, as well. People with these ideologies do not really understand their own ideas, whether they are progressive, reactionary, right wing, or even left wing. In this regard, it is of great importance to know that the contemporary ideologies and thoughts which have caused all this conflict in the world from East to West are capitalism, communism, socialism, existentialism and so on.

For example, when we consider those who instigated the Communist Revolution of 1917, we find that they claimed to have started on the road to true communism via the route of socialism. In fact, they should have headed towards what they claimed, but instead we actually find that the more time elapses, the more they deviate away from their original ideas until finally they turned on themselves. This definitively proves that the ideology they chose for themselves was false.

In this respect, the following question shall be asked, 'Did capitalism remain intact?' The answer is a definitive 'No', since events forced capitalism to give workers their entitled rights, and thus, capital no longer has its great impact. Furthermore, socialism became highly affected by capitalism, and so did capitalism became affected by socialism since it adopted more and more socialistic methodologies; so much intermixing of the two happened to the extent that both of them want to come to a common ground with each other. However, Islam created this common ground from the very beginning, respecting both capital and labour. In addition, it obligates everyone to firmly adhere to performing his due role in life and thus guarantee that the course of life will continue to the end of time. This is why we find capitalists speaking of the need for job creation and incentives. In the same respect, socialism did not achieve its goals, but rather ended up with destroying human rights. Furthermore, what about communities that were never touched by socialism, before it existed, and wherein there were people who exploited others?

Logic says that it was absolutely necessary for socialism to believe in the existence of the Hereafter wherein those who previously exploited people would be punished. As such, they, namely socialists, had to be religious. Likewise, in these communities that adopted capitalism, which centres on material profit, people were bereft of spirituality.

Once again, the saying of Allah the Almighty 'We sent' or Anzalna implies that a message of guidance came down, or nazala, from a higher source. If we reflect carefully upon the statements of the Quran, we find that Allah the Almighty wants to elevate our rank through revelation by asking us to come to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to listen to the Divine Orders and Commands. As a result, we will be closely connected to heaven and not the earth.

Therefore, Allah the Almighty says: 'We sent to you (Muhammad) the Scripture with the truth…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). We observe that the verses of the Quran are in correlation with each other. Yet, the fact that the Quran came down from a higher source with the truth requires that all the laws included in it must be in conformity with life. In another position of the Quran, He the Almighty says that He has sent down the Quran with the truth and with the truth it, namely the Quran, has descended: 'And, in accordance with the requirements of truth and wisdom We have sent it down, and with truth and wisdom has it descended…' (al-Isra': 105). This means that the Quran was really sent down from Allah the Almighty and not a human invention. In addition, it clearly indicates that it has come down bearing the way of guidance from Allah by means of which justice will be maintained everywhere and by everyone. In addition, all the laws under which the course of life runs normally will be guaranteed and protected by virtue of this Divine Guidance mentioned in the Quran.

Careful reflection upon the aforementioned verse indicates that it is comprehensive which means it tells clearly that the Quran confirms the truth of the earlier heavenly revealed Scriptures. Yet, there is a good question to be asked in this respect, 'The word Al-Kitab has been mentioned twice in this verse, so, is there any difference between them?'

We know well that the definite article 'the', or 'Al', can be used in Arabic language to refer to either 'classes' or 'specifics'. For example, when you say, 'I met a man, and I honoured the man', the word 'the 'refers specifically to a particular man whom you knew before, and not one you met. Accordingly, the word Al-Kitab mentioned first refers specifically to the Quran, while the second one refers to all the heavenly scriptures before it. As such, we can deduce that the Quran is a guardian and an overseer over all these previously revealed Scriptures since they had been marred by corruption and alteration.

So, the word 'truth' mentioned in this verse clearly means that the Quran, the seal of all the Divine Scriptures, was sent down bearing the absolute truth for all the affairs of the world and the needs of human life. In addition, it means that no alteration or distortion shall affect or change it. Therefore, it is clear that the meaning of the words 'with the truth' in this verse extends to the content of the Quran and to the process of its revelation, as well. The Quran was revealed after all other heavenly revealed Scriptures which were appropriate for the times in which they were revealed. Indeed, He the Almighty created man in order that they could bear witness that He is the only One Who deserves to be worshipped and that they could thrive in and build this world by means of the thinking, energy, and adaptable material He gave them. So, if they wanted to live a basic life without any advancement or comfort, they could find all they needed in the constituents of the earth; yet if they wanted to advance, then they had to make use of their minds and energies to benefit from the material created by Him the Almighty and thus, they would be able to uncover the Secrets of Allah in the universe.

The Secrets of Allah the Almighty in the universe are too many, and they certainly serve us even if we do not know how. For example, we recently knew about the force of gravity which holds the planets and the celestial bodies in their due positions. In addition, we knew nothing about the positive and negative electrical charges which flow through the universe until recently.

As a matter of fact, when He the Almighty wants people to reveal a new secret in the universe, He provides mankind with the means for discovering it. In this respect, we should know that every secret of this universe, which has been subdued for man, will be uncovered in a defined and fixed period of time set by Allah the Almighty. This discovery of the secrets of the universe may be the result of the work of the human mind, which may rely on pieces of information to reach such conclusions about these secrets, just like a geometry exercise a student solves after having been given certain information by a teacher in which he uses this information to prove the conclusion his teacher wants him to prove. Thus, if it happens that man's mind studies the matter scientifically and empirically, the secret may be revealed along with the study; yet if the time comes for the secret to be discovered in the universe, but man has not studied the clues which would lead to it, and Allah nevertheless wills for the secret to be revealed, what happens then?! Will Allah the Almighty prevent its disclosure? The answer is 'No'. In fact, He the Almighty allows this secret to be accidentally discovered by a researcher who was actually looking for something else. In this case, we say that the secret comes into the open coincidentally.

As a matter of fact, if we carefully consider today's inventions, innovations and discoveries, we will find that the most crucial ones belong to the second kind, that is, universal secrets which are disclosed coincidentally. As a matter of fact, when Allah the Almighty allows every secret in the universe to be disclosed in a defined period of time, this means that this revelation of this particular secret is one of Allah's Countless Bounties upon mankind. It is certainly well known that He the Almighty out of His Favour, granted life to man, gave him power to do things and imparted some of His Knowledge to him: 'Then they found a servant of Ours, upon whom We had bestowed Mercy from Us, and whom We had taught Knowledge from Ourselves.' (al-Kahf: 65) Furthermore, He gave him wisdom by means of which he can gain his livelihood: 'He grants wisdom to whom He pleases, and whoever is granted wisdom has indeed been granted abundant good; and none would take heed except those endowed with understanding.' (al-Baqara: 269) In this way, He the Almighty wants His creation to interact with the universe in order to discover things. In this respect, if Allah Glorified is He wants us to have this interaction, He will surely give us a way of guidance which protects our energies and our ideas from what damages them.

Truthfully speaking, conflict of people's caprices and whims is the main reason behind the corruption of man's ideas and energies; one's whims may be in conflict with another's, and the same applies for ideas; they may oppose each other. Therefore, Allah the Almighty wanted us to follow one way of guidance, so that all our actions would stem from one main source, that is, that which was sent down from a higher source, the Supreme Creator, Who can never be changed by anything. As for those things over which there is no difference, He the Almighty left us to study them for ourselves since we would be compelled to agree on them. This is why we always say that there are no conflicts whatsoever in matters of experimental sciences. In fact, we never find scholars classifying electricity into Russian, or American, etc. This is based on the fact that the laboratory does not take sides, and lifeless material has no bias. Therefore, results obtained in laboratories have only one meaning. In other words, they are conclusive.

We see that the scientists of the east and west agree concerning the results of practical experiments, and each nation tries to steal the results of the others in order to use them to help its own advancement and progress. However, when it comes to human whims, the matter is completely different since each nation tries to keep the whims of others outside its borders; for whims never reach a common ground. That is why we find all the Divine Commands fall under the following two categories: 'Dos' and 'Don'ts'. By this, He the Almighty ensures our unity and prevents our energies from working against each other. This point is affirmed in the Quran where Allah the Almighty explains that if the truth were in accord with their own likes and dislikes, the heavens and the earth would surely have fallen into ruin, and all that lives in them (would long ago have perished). 'And if the truth had followed their desires, verily the heavens and the earth and whosoever is therein would have been corrupted. Nay, We have brought them their admonition, but from their own admonition they now turn aside.' (al-Mu'minun: 71)

As a result, it is clear that Allah's Way of Guidance in His Universe only came to give order to man's behaviours in those matters wherein whims differ. As for those behaviours of life wherein whims do not differ, He the Almighty left them free and unrestricted since people are compelled to agree on them, for material does not take sides and the laboratory has no bias.

This is why we previously explained that when Allah the Almighty sent Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as the Seal of all the Prophets and Messengers, He Glorified is He gave him His commands under the two imperative forms of 'Do' and 'Do not'. As for the matter of experimental and material science, He the Almighty conveyed His Ruling on it to us by using Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself as an example. When he came to Medina, he found the people cross-pollinating date palms as they planted them, and when he saw some people doing this, he said to them, 'Were you not to do so, it would be good.' So, they did not cross-pollinate the date palms, and so the harvest was poor and the dates failed. Then, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him passed by them and said, 'What is wrong with your date-palms?' They said, 'O, Prophet Muhammad! You told us such-and-such.' He said, 'If there is any use of it, then they should do it, for it was just a personal opinion of mine, and do not strictly follow my personal opinion. However, when I say to you anything on behalf of Allah, then do accept and follow it, for I do not attribute lie to Him the Exalted and Glorious.' Another narration recounts that he said, 'I am but a human being. If I command you something to do with your religion, and then hold firmly to it, but if I command you something of my own opinion, then I am but a human being.' In a third narration, he peace and blessings be upon him said very clearly, 'You have better knowledge (of a technical skill) in the affairs of the world.'(1)

This Hadith indicates clearly that Prophet Muhammad left it to his community to look after their practical and worldly affairs. These words of

(1) Narrated by Muslim

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not yet give people carte blanche with the teachings of the religion, for he made a clear distinction between that which Divine Guidance must be followed and that which is left up to man. As we know, man undergoes different stages throughout his life: infancy, childhood, adolescence, adulthood, and advanced maturity. Therefore, Allah the Almighty ordains laws in such a way that is appropriate for each of these life stages. Due to the fact that the period of infancy requires material support, He the Almighty first gives it to an infant. Yet, when a child attains the age of puberty, He the Almighty bestows upon him the ability of perception. Furthermore, when it is the age of adulthood, He passes the reins on to him so he can live in the world according to the teachings of His Way of Guidance. The Message of Islam thus was appropriate for the time in which it was revealed. In fact, Allah the Almighty entrusted the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to defend and protect the course of life from human desires and whims. Regarding this, it is of great importance to know that Messengers would be sent by Allah to convey His Guidance to their own peoples and nations, yet when they disobeyed their Messengers, the heaven itself would afflict punishment upon them when needed; but when humanity matured, Allah ordered Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to convey the Message and allowed him to punish them if they contradict Divine Guidance in the affairs pertaining to the smooth running of the course of life since he peace and blessings be upon him had become capable of being trusted to do so.

If you look at how the world was in the past, you will find that people lived in isolation from each other, to the extent that each community in one place knew nothing about other communities. In addition, each community had its own system, course of life, customs, and traditions. Yet, Islam came for all humanity since Allah always knew for certain that Islam would come at a time when the barriers of time and space would be broken and when a social ailment that emerged in the east would spread immediately to the west, and likewise from west to east. What that means is that Islam is a universal religion which takes into account the fact that the world has become a small village in which information and news travel from east to west in the blink of an eye.

Islam came at a time when the world started to share the same ailments and problems, and therefore, a comprehensive cure needed to be sent down that would be suitable to apply for all mankind at all times and all places. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent with the final Message since no other Prophets will follow. It is the timeless Message that no other Messengers will be sent to complete or perfect, so Allah has undertaken to preserve and protect that Message from distortion or alteration. Divine Scriptures that were revealed prior to the Quran contained the Ordinances of Allah that were directed to certain people at specific times. Allah, therefore, assigned preservation of these Scriptures to the people they were sent down to. Instead of submitting to Allah and obeying His command, they manipulated His Scriptures and abandoned His guidance. Any command is subject to being obeyed or rejected based on the attitude of those commanded. Adherents of the former Abrahamic religions distorted their Scriptures which started by forgetting some of them, as Allah says: '…and have forgotten some of what they were told to remember…' (al-Ma'ida: 13).

Moreover, they concealed part of what they did not forget, as Allah says: 'As for those who hide the proofs and guidance We send down, after We have made them clear to people in the Scripture, Allah rejects them…' (al-Baqara: 159). Thus, they forgot some of what Allah revealed to them; they concealed and altered some of it, and even, distorting it with their tongues: 'There are some who twist the Scripture with their tongues…' (Al-'Imran: 78).

They did not stop at doing just that; they invented words of their own and said they were from Allah. The responsibility of preserving the previous Scriptures had been appointed to them: '…Allah's Scripture which they were entrusted to preserve…' (al-Ma'ida: 44).

Since the previous nations deviated from the Straight Path and disobeyed Allah's Guidance, He has undertaken to preserve His Final Book and has not assigned this responsibility to human beings who were tested several times, yet failed to comply with His Ordinance. Also, the Quran is the final Revelation which will never be followed by another Book, so Allah has undertaken to guard it against distortion: 'Surely, We have revealed the Reminder and We will most surely be its guardian.' (al-Hijr: 9) Therefore, the Quran prevails over the previous Books in the sense that it reveals the truth that has been concealed in them while correcting what has been distorted. Allah has guaranteed that it will never be manipulated, so when the word Al-kitab ('Allah's Book', 'the Book', 'the Scripture', etc.) is mentioned without any particular reference, it means the Noble Quran: 'We sent to you (Muhammad) Al-kitab (the Scripture) with the truth…' (al-Ma'ida: 48), so this refers to the Quran; then He says in the same verse: '…confirming Al-kitab (the Scriptures) that came before it…' (al-Ma'ida: 48) where Al-kitab refers to the Psalms, Torah, Bible and the Scriptures of Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses). The Quran was sent down '... with final authority over them…' (al-Ma'ida: 48), which means to tell both what is true and what has been distorted in them.

Whenever Allah describes Himself with a word that is also used to describe His servants, it does not mean any form of similarity whatsoever, for an adjective becomes completely different in quality and degree when attributed to Him. For example, Allah is All Hearing, and human beings also have the sense of hearing. This does not mean that the stated attribute is somehow' shared' by the servants and their Lord; rather, Allah uses a word that is familiar with the intent to bring the meaning closer to our minds. Therefore, we must always understand the words used to describe His Attributes in the light of the fact that '…There is nothing like Him...' (ash-Shura: 11).

When the word Al-ghani (wealthy) is used with Allah, it means the Self-Sufficient Who controls the treasures of the heavens and earth and Who is in need of no one and on Whom everyone is dependent. Thus, the scope of the word is completely different when it is used with Him unlike its meaning when it describes any of His servants. When the word Al-Muhaymin is used to describe the Quran, it means the following: '…with final authority over them…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). Meanwhile, it refers to an Attribute of Allah which can be interpreted in several ways. The word muhaymin has multiple connotations. It denotes' Protector', 'Guardian', 'Overseer', and 'Witness'. It means the Dominant One Who takes care of all things. All these meanings are related and apply to Allah the Exalted and Almighty. He takes care of all things and disposes all affairs, which absolutely implies that He watches over everything and is Witness over all His creation. In this sense, He is also the Guardian and Protector of His servants.

As we have also pointed out, the word Muhaymin is used to describe the Quran, and in this case, it further means that the Book is sent with final authority over all previous Books to confirm the truth of what they contain and unveil the falsehood invented by those to whom they were sent down. The 'Scriptures' mentioned in the verse refers to the original Books revealed by Allah, so whatever truth they still contain is confirmed by the Quran, while whatever truth was distorted is corrected by the Quran. The Quran cleanses Allah's Message from human prejudices, and it is in this sense that the Quran is sent as a final authority over previous Scriptures. Allah then says: '…so judge between them according to what Allah has sent down…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). The Arabic word yahkum (judge) is derived from the root h-k-m from which the word hakamah, or 'bit' which is the metal mouthpiece connected to the bridle of a horse so that it can be controlled. Allah's Guidance, likewise, is the authority that keeps creation from evading the Will of the Creator.

This command of Allah: '…so judge between them according to what Allah has sent down…' (al-Ma'ida: 48) applies to disbelievers as well which is also confirmed by the verse: 'If they come to you (Prophet) for judgement, you can either judge between them, or decline– if you decline, they will not harm you in any way, but if you do judge between them, judge justly. Allah loves the just' (al-Ma'ida: 42). This is the rule on which judgments of all cases should be based. However, why would they seek Prophet Muhammad's judgment, while they do not believe in him? The disbelievers sought through Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to sanction their own whims. They wanted him to resolve problems between them in the way they desired, and thus obtain approval for the judgment that pleased them. They already defied the Law of Allah and did not intend to submit to His Guidance by asking His Messenger to resolve between them. For example, they wanted to evade the punishment of stoning and replace it by a lighter one, so they went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Had he sanctioned a lighter punishment, they would have taken it; otherwise, they would reject his judgment. They went to him seeking an easier punishment in order to please themselves, not to please Allah by complying to His Ordinance. Since they were people of power and influence, they told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that if he judged between them in the way they desired, they would believe in his Message and call their people to embrace Islam, too. Such was their design.

However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him refused to yield to their will by obeying the words of Allah Almighty: '…so judge between them according to what Allah has sent down. Do not follow their whims, which deviate from the truth that has come to you…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). If they had a copy of the Torah which was free of distortion, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have told them to follow the judgment of the Torah. When the Prophet asked the most learned among them to recite the ruling stated in the Torah, one of them tried to conceal the lines containing the ruling of stoning with his hand as the verses of the Torah were recited. Since the truth in the Torah had been altered, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had to judge according to the Quran, for it was on the basis of it that the truth of previous Scriptures could be assessed: '…So judge between them according to what Allah has sent down. Do not follow their whims, which deviate from the truth that has come to you…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). As the verse cites, they were tempted to forsake what Allah has enjoined on them in order to further their temporal power, a behaviour which Allah the Almighty describes by saying: 'They have sold Allah's message for a trifling gain…' (at-Tawba: 9). They only wanted to falsify Allah's Law for their own advantage by seeking Prophet Muhammad's judgment, and this is why Allah warned His Messenger against following them: '…Do not follow their whims, which deviate from the truth that has come to you. We have assigned a law and a path to each of you…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). Suppose that some of the rulings in the Torah were not distorted, but Islam was sent down with new rulings that abrogate those of the Torah. Then which should be followed? The Quran should be followed then because it has been sent down with final authority over previous Revelations so as to correct as well as to perfect what they contained.

The essence of creed is one and unchanging in all religions. Only juristic rulings that govern the various aspects of people's lives vary from one religion to another.

This was due to the fact that it was based on the time, place, and condition of the people to whom the message was sent. When Allah sent Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) to the children of Israel, he told them, as the Quran quotes: ‘…and to make some things lawful to you which used to be forbidden…’ (Al-’Imran: 50). Things were forbidden in the Jewish religion which Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) came to make lawful again. Allah made certain things forbidden to the children of Israel as a punishment to them: ‘For the wrongdoings done by the Jews, We forbade them certain good things that had been permitted to them before…’ (an-Nisa’: 160). Allah forbids His servants certain things since they would harm them, and He may also forbid them things that had been lawful to discipline them. The children of Israel were forbidden certain good things as a punishment for allowing themselves other things which Allah had forbidden. ‘... We have assigned a law and a path to each of you…’ (al-Ma’ida: 48). The verse uses the word shari’a, Arabic for ‘law’, and manhaj, Arabic for ‘path’. The former literally means a ‘waterway’, while the latter literally refers to a ‘dry land path’. These meanings allude to the essential requirements of life, namely water and land. The Rulings of Allah are essential for the prosperity and well-being of mankind, and thus the similarity. Allah has assigned a law to each, but He says: ‘In matters of faith, He has ordained for you that which He had enjoined upon Nuh (Noah)…’ (ash-Shura: 13).

Therefore, the fundamentals of faith never change throughout time. During the first stage of its advent, Islam focused on establishing these fundamentals unequivocally by declaring the Oneness of Allah, His absolute Perfection and the falsehood of polytheism. After having ingrained faith in the hearts of believers, Allah established the juristic laws that govern the affairs of human lives, and this was during the second stage of the Revelation.

Rulings were ordained gradually to make compliance easier for believers. Juristic rulings were enjoined at the time of Prophet Nuh (Noah) that suited his people. Then, Allah prescribed in Islam, the Final Message, other rulings that fit all subsequent times and places after its advent until the end of time. Thus, He sent down His guidance to mankind across time in several stages to suit their lives. All these laws came from the same source, and therefore, we believe in all of them since we believe in Him Who has sent them down to us.

Allah then says in the verse: '…If Allah had so willed, He would have made you one community…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). Had He willed, Allah could have ordained the same rulings, the same obligations and prohibitions for all mankind, but this would not have been appropriate for the different times and various, quite isolated, communities that had lived before the coming of Islam. Such communities were isolated in the sense that each had a quite different nature and way of life, along with suffering from different social ailments, which makes it logical that different rulings had to be ordained for them to deal with their quite different lives and problems. '...If Allah had so willed, He would have made you one community, but He wanted to test you through that which He has given you, so race to do good. You will all return to Allah…' (al-Ma'ida: 48).

Let me present to you some of the insights I have about this verse. Had we all been made a single community, worship would have perhaps been more of a habit than a manifestation of devotion. We would perform worship without experiencing the joy and feeling the honour of being in a state of obedience to Allah. I believe this is one important reason why all mankind was not just one community with the same characteristics and the same religious duties. We get tired of monotony. For example, we eat, drink, and have intercourse with our spouses, so perhaps the pleasure associated with that may fade away as we get used to it. During Ramadan, we are commanded to observe sawm (fasting), so we abstain from all that from dawn to sunset. When it is time to break our fasts, we then feel the pleasure of what we had been deprived of during the day, and we feel rewarded for our patience, carrying out our duty and devoting ourselves to Allah, let alone the matchless reward in the Hereafter.

More importantly, as the verse cites, we have been made into different communities as a test for mankind: '…but He wanted to test you through that which He has given you…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). Tests are not bad in themselves, but they are considered bad when we fail in them. If we are wise enough to persevere and pass them successfully, the outcomes are rewarding and prove that they were indeed worth the time, effort, and determination. Therefore, so long as Allah has willed to test us through His messages, we should strive to succeed by racing to do righteous deeds that please Him: '…but He wanted to test you through that which He has given you, so race to do good. You will all return to Allah and He will make clear to you the matters about which you differed' (al-Ma'ida: 48). Success in a test requires perseverance, for otherwise, the outcomes will be most unwelcome. Acting heedless of Allah may secure transient pleasures, and perhaps devotion is rather hard for the human soul. However, reward for doing righteous deeds is uncomprehending joy, that is matchless, and through obedience, the pleasure that would be actually attained is above all in comparison to worldly pleasures. Satan and our own selves make temptations alluring so that we indulge in passing desires which begin and end in this fleeting life as they die with our death, after which lasting suffering awaits in the Hereafter. Is it wise to sell eternal happiness for such a paltry price? This is indeed a loss, and the real triumph is to succeed in the tests to which Allah subjects us.

Racing to do good may be tiring, but the outcome is worth the struggle. Allah has not forbidden you some of the desires of this world because He wants to deprive or torture you; He does so since He knows they will only bring suffering and harm if you approach them. Moreover, these prohibitions are only for the short span of time in this worldly life, and the reward is unconditional happiness that will never come to an end in the Afterlife. Such is the fruit of devotion; so it is wise to commit ourselves to it even though it is hard for the human soul.

Allah says: '…you will all return to Allah…' (al-Ma'ida: 48). Everyone returns to Allah, both the pious and the wicked, '…and He will make clear to you the matters you differed about' (al-Ma'ida: 48). As long as people differ, there must be some in the right and others in the wrong. On the Day of Judgement, Allah will resolve between His servants, and everyone will see to which of the two groups they belong.

Allah says in the following verse:

وَأَنِ ٱحۡكُم بَيۡنَهُم بِمَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ وَلَا تَتَّبِعۡ أَهۡوَآءَهُمۡ وَٱحۡذَرۡهُمۡ أَن
يَفۡتِنُوكَ عَنۢ بَعۡضِ مَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ إِلَيۡكَۖ فَإِن تَوَلَّوۡاْ فَٱعۡلَمۡ أَنَّمَا يُرِيدُ ٱللَّهُ أَن
يُصِيبَهُم بِبَعۡضِ ذُنُوبِهِمۡۗ وَإِنَّ كَثِيرٗا مِّنَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَفَٰسِقُونَ ﴿٤٩﴾

So [Prophet] judge between them according to what God has sent down. Do not follow their whims, and take good care that they do not tempt you away from any of what God has sent down to you. If they turn away, remember that God intends to punish them for some of the sins they have committed: a great many people are lawbreakers [49] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 49)

Someone might say that Allah said right in the previous verse: ‘We sent to you (Muhammad) the Scripture with the truth, confirming the Scriptures that came before it and with final authority over them…’ (al-Ma’ida: 48). The answer to this question may be manifested clearly in the fact that the Quran was revealed to determine what was true from previous revelations, and thus Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was obligated to implement it. This is why He the Almighty says next: ‘So (Prophet) judge between them according to what Allah has sent down.’ Allah the Almighty thus tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that He sent down the Quran to him with the truth so that it would confirm the truth of whatever there still remains of earlier revelations and likewise determine what is true within them. Then, He the Almighty orders him peace and blessings be upon him to judge amongst them in accordance with what has been revealed in the Quran, even if people bring him anything that contradicts what is revealed in the Quran. In this connection, it is important to know that Allah the Almighty orders him peace and blessings be upon him to beware of them, lest they tempt him: ‘Do not follow their whims, and take good care that they do not tempt you away from any of what Allah has sent down to you.’ (al-Ma’ida: 49) To beware means to be cautious and vigilant about someone who wishes to harm you. Truthfully speaking, the one who wants to harm may mistakenly believe that what he is doing is truly good, yet his actions are, indeed, truly evil. Therefore, it is clear that the meaning of Al-Hadhru mentioned in this verse is that one must practise utmost caution so that he would not be afflicted with harm from anyone who may claim to be benefiting him. For example, your adversary might come to you to offer to do you a favour or to give you a hand in something; if this is the case, you should completely reject this help.

In essence, caution requires one to be very attentive at all times. This is why people used to make a connection between the crow and caution, to the extent that they used to narrate this story on the crow that teaches its chick how to be cautious by saying, ‘Beware of man, for when he stoops to pick something up from the ground, he is picking up a stone to throw at you.’ So, the young crow said to his father, ‘What should I do then if this man is already hiding the stone in his pocket?’ This story shows how the crow is naturally cautious.

Another striking example regarding this is that of a usurer who makes it seem attractive to people to give their money to him in return for an interest rate of twenty percent; this may seem to be beneficial, but in all actuality it is harmful. Although it may seem to increase one’s wealth, it is actually subjecting one who gives in to Allah’s Wrath since He the Almighty tells us clearly that He will deprive usurious gains of all blessing: ‘Allah will blot out interest yet will cause charity to increase.’ (al-Baqara: 276)

As a matter of fact, usury is a harmful act, for which the adversary embellishes it to make it seem beneficial. This is why Allah the Almighty tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be cautious. Therefore, what is required of his peace and blessings be upon him followers in the light of this Divine Warning? They must also be cautious or beware since even the best of all mankind was instructed by Allah to be so: ‘take good care that they do not tempt you away from any of what Allah has sent down to you.’ (al-Ma’ida: 49) In fact, these types of people planned to deceive Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by saying to him, ‘We have come to you so that you might judge between us, and if you judge in our favour, we will follow you.’ As a matter of fact, this saying of these said people might seem on the surface to be beneficial, but Allah the Almighty gave His Final and Decisive Ruling on the matter by ordering Prophet Muhammad to beware of them, lest they tempt him away from that which Allah has bestowed upon him from above. (al-Ma’ida: 49) Allah the Almighty then says: ‘If they turn away, remember that Allah intends to punish them for some of the sins they have committed. A great many people are lawbreakers.' What is meant here is that if they turn away, then you should know (O, Prophet Muhammad) that Allah is protecting you from slipping into any suspicion of falsehood. These people, who do not want you (O, Prophet Muhammad!) to judge amongst them in accordance with what Allah has revealed down, have chosen to remain disbelievers and have distanced themselves from Allah's Way of Guidance. Therefore, He the Almighty will afflict them with His Punishment in return for their sins. In this regard, it is of great importance to know that Allah Glorified is He never commits injustice against them; rather, He only afflicts them with punishment because of their sins, and He knows them best, for He is All-Knowing of all of mankind.

He Glorified is He then concludes the verse with His saying; '…a great many people are lawbreakers.' (al-Ma'ida: 49) This part of the verse indicates clearly that such people are treated as lawbreakers because they disobey the teachings of their Prophets and Messengers. In addition, they rejected what has been revealed in their Scriptures. In fact, had they followed the teachings of their heavenly Scriptures, they would have believed in the truth of which Prophet Muhammad, the unlettered Prophet, came. In the Quran, Allah the Exalted says: 'Those who follow the Messenger, the Prophet, and the nations whom they find mentioned in the Torah and the Gospel which are with them. He enjoins on them good and forbids them evil and makes lawful for them the good things and forbids them the bad things and remove from them their burdens and shackles that were upon them. So those who shall believe in him and honour and support him and help him and follow the light that has been sent down with him - these shall prosper.' (al-A'raf: 157)

So, the way to happiness and prosperity was written and recorded in the Torah and the Gospel; the Divine Command to believe in Prophet Muhammad, the unlettered Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was given in previous Scriptures revealed before the Quran. In fact, the Torah and the Gospel contained glad tidings that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would be sent to enjoin all that is good and forbid all that is evil, to make lawful for mankind all things man's natural predisposition sees as good and to forbid them from changing or corrupting the Divine Way of Guidance with which he peace and blessings be upon him was sent. In the same respect, he peace and blessings be upon him was to exhort them not to give in to stubbornness, for he came to lift the punishment to be afflicted upon them due to their corruption of Allah's Way of Guidance. So, all who followed the light and guidance of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would feel salvation and triumph. As for those who did not follow this light of Prophet Muhammad, they would thereby be judged as breakers of Divine Laws. In fact, any attempt to deny the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is doomed to failure, for those who truly know and understand the Torah and Gospel are fully acquainted with the description of him (Prophet Muhammad). In the Quran, Allah Glorified is He explains that the people of the Book know Prophet Muhammad as they know their children, yet some of them knowingly suppress the truth: 'Those to whom We have given the Book recognise it even as they recognise their sons, but surely some of them hide the truth knowingly.' (al-Baqara: 146)

We all know what 'Abdullah ibn Salam Allah be pleased with him did when he went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to announce that he had embraced Islam. He said, 'Indeed, I know Prophet Muhammad better than I know my own son.' 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him then said to him: 'How can this be, O, Ibn Salam? 'Abdullah ibn Salam replied, 'Because I testify with complete truth and certitude that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, but I cannot testify with such certainty about my own son, for I do not know what women might do.' To this, 'Umar said, 'May Allah grant you all success, O, Ibn Salam!'

However, some of the scholars and rabbis of the children of Israel concealed the glad tidings of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, for they desired leadership and the gifts which people would bring them, and therefore, they sought out the descriptions of Prophet Muhammad, yet concealed them. Indeed, as long as they did this, we should know that Allah wanted to afflict them with punishment for some of their sins.

We may observe that whenever Allah the Almighty instructed His Messenger to address the Jews, He the Almighty never pronounced an accusation against all of them, but only to some, even if this 'some' comprised a great deal of them. This is what we might call 'allowing for the possibility' which means that some of the Jews had embraced Islam in secret. It is true that many of them were iniquitous, but some of them were not. This point is supported by what has been narrated by Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him who said, 'A Jewish man and woman committed adultery, and one of the Jews said, "Let us go to this Prophet, (Muhammad) for he is sent with lenient laws; and if he gives us any ruling which is less harsh than stoning to death, we will accept it and use it as an argument before Allah, saying, 'One of Your Prophets gave us this ruling.' So, they went to the masjid (mosque) where Prophet Muhammad sat with his Companions and said, "O, father of Al-Qasim, what do you say about a man and woman who commit adultery?" He peace and blessings be upon him did not answer them until he first went to their school. When he got there, Prophet Muhammad asked a young man who despised speaking untruthful words that his people would speak, and he said, "The Torah tells us that the punishment is stoning." So, Prophet Muhammad judged that the punishment should be stoning.'

In this same respect, Al-Baraa' ibn 'Azib Allah be pleased with him narrated that Prophet Muhammad passed by a Jew with a blackened face due to being flogged. He called them and asked, 'Is this the punishment for the adulterer that you find in your Book?' They replied, 'Yes.' Then, he called one of their scholars and said, 'I adjure you, by Allah Who sent down the Torah to Moses, to tell me if this is the punishment for the adulterer that you find in your Book?' He said, 'No, if you had not adjured me by Allah, I would not have told you. The punishment for the adulterer that we find in our Book is stoning, but many of our nobles were being stoned (because of the prevalence of adultery among them) so that if we caught one of our nobles (committing adultery), we would let him go. However, if we caught one of the weak amongst us, we would carry out the punishment on him. We said, "Come, let us agree upon something that we may impose on both noble and weak alike." So, we agreed to blacken the face and whip them instead of stoning.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said 'O, Allah, I am the first of those who revive Your Command which they had killed off.' Thus, he issued orders that he (the man) be stoned. (1)

(1) Narrated by Muslim

So, many of them were iniquitous, and a few of them were not iniquitous since they were contemplating about believing in Prophet Muhammad. In fact, had the charge here been that every single one of them was iniquitous, those who were considering believing in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would not have sensed the light and guidance he brought. When Allah Glorified is He says that many of them are lawbreakers, this means that those who were thinking about believing in him peace and blessings be upon him would perceive and realise the clear presence of light and guidance in his words.

We might ask why they wanted to distort Allah's laws merely to gain temporal power and a paltry sum from the matters in which they sought. Why did they do this? The True Lord gives us the answer:

أَفَحُكۡمَ ٱلۡجَٰهِلِيَّةِ يَبۡغُونَۚ وَمَنۡ أَحۡسَنُ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ حُكۡمٗا لِّقَوۡمٖ يُوقِنُونَ ٥٠

Do they want judgment according to the time of pagan ignorance? Is there any better judge than God for those of firm faith? [50] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 50)

In order for us to know the precise meaning of 'ignorance', we must call to mind the divisions of attribution of which we have previously mentioned. We know that every word we speak has meaning, and when we hear a word, a meaning comes to mind based on its context. For example, when we hear the word 'mountain', an image of a mountain comes to the mind, but the exact state of the mountain does not since the word lacks precise context. So a word has a meaning, but this meaning does not give any real benefit on its own. If we say 'Cairo is overpopulated', or 'its facilities are in poor condition', we are giving a description which clarifies what we mean when we say 'Cairo'.

There is a difference between an expression which has a single meaning without any connotation, and an expression which has a connotation with it. When an ancient Arab heard an expression that had no connotation or implied meaning, he would not accept it. An Arab once said, 'I testify that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah', as though 'Messenger' is an adjective describing 'Muhammad' that has no connotation or implied meaning; so another Arab, who heard him, said, 'What about Muhammad?' He did so in order to alert the first speaker to the fact that he had not given a complete thought. So every word has a meaning, but this meaning is isolated and is in need of an attribution. For example, if you say to your friend, 'Muhammad', and your friend knows who this Muhammad is, he will ask you, 'What about Muhammad?' When he says this, he is asking for the implied or exact meaning so he can know what Muhammad did or what happened to him. Therefore, if you say, 'Muhammad visited me yesterday,' and the speech then becomes meaningful.

So every individual word has its own meaning in isolation, and when a connotation or an implied meaning is added to it, it gives the meaning shape. If this attribution is factual, and the one who says it believes it and can prove it, this attribution is called 'knowledge'; since knowledge means an attribution which is held to be true, is actually true and can be proven true. For example, when we say, 'The earth is spherical', these words first evoke an image of the earth, and then add an attribution to it, namely 'spherical'. Therefore, we believe it to be spherical, and reality affirms that it is. When we give proof for it, it becomes 'knowledge'.

If the attribution is factual and believed, but we cannot prove it, this is 'blind following' or 'imitation'. It is similar to a child who repeats certain facts, which his father tells him, but he cannot prove them to be true. He follows someone whom he trusts. The stage below 'knowledge' is 'imitation'. If one believes that an attribution is factual, but in actuality it is not, then this is 'ignorance'. Ignorance does not mean that you do not know; it means that you think you know something which is actually contrary to reality. Being ignorant is different from being uneducated since an uneducated person simply does not know, whilst the ignorant person 'knows' something which is contrary to reality, and he clings to this false knowledge: 'Then is it the judgment of (the time of) ignorance they desire?' (al-Ma'ida: 50)

The True Lord in the verse asks if they wish to continue in their false, ignorant beliefs. As we know, dealing with an uneducated person is different from dealing with an ignorant person since you can tell an uneducated person the information you want to teach him, and he will accept it. As for the ignorant person, you must do two things with him: 1) you must help him to cast the false idea from his mind; 2) you must convince him of the true idea. The people who cause problems for those who preach religion are the ignorant people who not only harbour erroneous beliefs but also adhere and hold to false concepts.

However, what if an attribution is open to being both affirmed and negated? If affirmation is equal to negation, this is doubt; and if affirmation is stronger, this is supposition; and if negation is stronger, this is delusion. Thus, it becomes clear to us that dealing with the ignorant person is difficult, and the people who cause problems in this world are the ignorant since they harbour false beliefs. Also, if Allah has given His judgment, then why are they not satisfied by this? Do they desire to be ruled by the law of pagan ignorance? The people of the Book themselves also used to despise the laws of pagan ignorance.

Yet, we should notice this disdain, or despising, existed at a time when the confrontation existed between the pagans and the people of the Book, and they predicted that they would attain a victory over the people of Mecca and Medina They even said many times, 'The time is ripe for the coming of a prophet whom we shall follow, and alongside whom we shall slay you as' Ad and Iram were slain.' However, no sooner did the Messenger of Allah come that they began to say the opposite. What did they say to the ignorant people? The True Lord tells us the answer: 'Have you not seen those who were given a portion of the Scripture, who believe in superstition and false objects of worship and say about the disbelievers, "These are better guided than the believers as to the way"?' (an-Nisa': 51)

Some of the Jewish rabbis went to the Quraysh, and some of the leaders of the Quraysh asked them, 'You are people of the Book and possessors of ancient knowledge. Tell us what should think about Muhammad.' The rabbis asked, 'What is Muhammad to you?' The Qurayshi leaders said, 'We slaughter great camels, give people milk and water, release prisoners of war, keep our family ties, provide water for the pilgrims and our religion is ancient, while Muhammad's religion is new.' The rabbis replied, 'You are better than him and most certainly more rightly guided.' This was the extent of their deception. Narrators tell another story which is relevant to this subject. A rabbi said to Abu Sufyan, 'By Allah, you are certainly more rightly guided than he is.' The reason they said this was that they were envious of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him.

Therefore, were the people of the Book content to be ruled by the laws of pagan ignorance? No, it was really a matter of contradiction and inner conflict, and as long as they were at conflict with their own selves, it was easy for them to be at conflict with the scripture which had been revealed to them. Therefore, the True Lord asked: 'Then is it the judgement of (the time of) ignorance they desire? (al-Ma'ida: 50) Then He gives the contrasting side of the matter: 'But who is better than Allah in judgment?' (al-Ma'ida: 50) He did not say that the best lawgivers are Muslims since it is possible that some could go astray. Therefore, He referred the matter back to that which never alters, namely the Law of Allah. Also, when He the Exalted affirmed this, He always knew that one day some Muslims would come along and stray from His Way of Guidance.

We sometimes see a Muslim acting in an impious way, but do we attribute his behaviour to Islam? No, we look instead to see the ruling Allah affirmed in His Book. When we see that Allah's Law declares a certain action to be illegal and prescribes punishment for it, the punishment also applies to impious Muslim. For example, the True Lord says:' (As for) the thief, the male and the female, amputate their hands.' (al-Ma'ida: 38) This law applies to both Muslims and non-Muslims. We do not maintain that this is the law of Muslims, and that is the law of pagan ignorance, rather, we say, 'This is the law of the Revealer of religion, Allah Himself.'

We may observe that the True Lord's Words 'But who is better than Allah in judgment?' (al-Ma'ida: 50) are in the form of a question. Naturally, a question is a way of conveying an image of something to the mind, not its reality. When a speaker asks a listener to tell him the answer, we wonder whether the questioner knows the answer or not. In normal life, this might be the case. We see it when someone says to another, 'Who visited you yesterday?' This is a question about the identity of a visitor, and it is a true question. However, what if the One speaking and asking the question has knowledge of everything so that nothing escapes Him? He is asking us to answer His question, 'Who is better than Allah in judgment?' This is an elevated form of rhetorical question.

Let me give another example, and Allah is beyond compare. If someone comes to you and claims you have not treated him well, even though he was in jail and you were the one who got him released. You say to him, ‘Who was it that went and paid the bail to get you out of jail?’ You are the one who did this, but you do not want to say it to him. You want him to be the one who admits what you did for him. So, you only say this because you are certain that he will have no answer other than to admit that you were the one who did all this for him. In this way, it becomes an admission, not an assertion.

The True Lord knows that when they think of an answer, they will only be able to say, ‘O Lord, you are the best lawgiver.’ This is an admission and a declaration on their part. For a believer, on the other hand, it is completely different since he acknowledges and recognises how Allah Glorified is He has favoured him: ‘But who is better than Allah in judgment for a people who are certain (in faith)?’ (al-Ma’ida: 50) Those who understand that Allah’s Law is the best are those who have reached the level of inner certainty. We know that certainty has different levels: when an honest person tells you something, you gain knowledge of this thing. For example, if he says to you, ‘I went to New York, and this city is composed of several islands and contains many huge buildings. Violence is rife there, and the people look as though they are possessed by a mad urge for wealth.’ When you hear this honest person say this, you take him seriously and consider his words to be certain, or truthful. This is ‘the knowledge of certainty’ that means it is a report from a person whose honesty you trust. Later, this person invites you to come with him, so you board a plane with him that takes off and rises to an altitude of forty thousand feet. After eleven hours, its altitude lowers a little so that you can see the lights of a huge city, and your friend tells you, ‘That is New York, and there are the skyscrapers.’ Now, the ‘knowledge of certainty’ has become an ‘eye of certainty’. When you go out together into the streets of New York, to the island of Manhattan and up the Empire State Building, the tallest skyscraper in New York, you now have’ definite certainty’.

The stages of certainty are three: 1) certain knowledge: which you acquire when an honest person tells you something; 2) eye of certainty: which you get when you see the thing itself; 3) definite certainty: which you acquire when you deal directly with whatever it is yourself. I once gave my students a specific example to explain the difference between the different kinds of certainty. I said to them, 'In Indonesia, I saw a kind of banana that was half a metre long.' Of course, the students believed me because they trusted my words, and I had given them an image based on my knowledge, so they arrived at certain knowledge. After this, I came into the room and opened a bag and took out of it a banana which was half a metre long; their certain knowledge transformed to become an eye of certainty. Then, I took a knife, peeled the banana, and put a piece of it in each one of their hands; thus, they came to acquire definite certainty. When the True Lord uses the word 'certainty' by itself, it means both what is known and what direct experience confirms to be true.

One of those who believe in Allah might say, 'I am completely convinced by the mere certain knowledge I possess, and I do not need to await an experience of true certainty since I would never entertain any doubt.' Therefore, we find that 'Ali Allah be pleased with him said, 'Were the veil to be lifted from me, my certainty would not be any greater.' Also, the True Lord illustrates this for us when He says: 'Competition in (worldly) increase diverts you. Until you visit the graveyards. No! You are going to know. Then no! You are going to know. No! If you only knew with knowledge of certainty, You will surely see the Hellfire. Then you will surely see it with the eye of certainty.' (at-Takathur: 1-7)

At first, there is certain knowledge; and then when we see hell as we pass over the Bridge, it will become eye of certainty. Allah, out of His Mercy, does not make us Muslims experience it with definitive certainty, rather, He says: 'And there is none of you except he will come to it.' (Maryam: 71) So, He gives us the image of hell. However, when the True Lord wants to give us an image of definitive certainty, He did that by saying: 'Then I swear by the setting of the stars, And indeed, it is an oath - if you could know - (most) great. Indeed, it is a noble Quran. In a Register well protected; None touches it except the purified. (It is) a revelation from the Lord of the worlds. Then is it to this statement that you are indifferent' (al-Waqi'a: 75-81). And all of this is a precursor to the True Lord's saying: 'Indeed, this is the true certainty.' (al-Waqi'a: 95)

Allah states here that the abode of the faithful believer will be paradise which the believer will see with an eye of certainty. As for the faithless disbeliever, his abode will be in hell. Therefore, all the people will see hell with an eye of certainty, but only those whom the True Lord places therein – we seek His refuge – will suffer it as definitive certainty, whilst the believers will enjoy the bliss of paradise with definitive certainty. And after this, the True Lord says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ لَا تَتَّخِذُواْ ٱلۡيَهُودَ وَٱلنَّصَٰرَىٰٓ أَوۡلِيَآءَۘ بَعۡضُهُمۡ أَوۡلِيَآءُ بَعۡضٖۚ
وَمَن يَتَوَلَّهُم مِّنكُمۡ فَإِنَّهُۥ مِنۡهُمۡۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَهۡدِي ٱلۡقَوۡمَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ٥١

You who believe, do not take the Jews and Christians as allies: they are allies only to each other.
Anyone who takes them as an ally becomes one of them – God does not guide such wrongdoers [51]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 51)

The address here is made to the faithful who are prohibited from befriending Jews and Christians. What does befriending include? It includes helping and aiding. The meaning of this is the following: 'O, you who believe, be well aware that you are entrusted with a mission, which is to remove errors and false beliefs from mankind. These errors were represented as distortions in religion that turned to sources of misguidance after having been sources of guidance. So beware of placing your hands in their hands by seeking aid and support from them.'

The True Lord's words 'Do not take Jews and Christians as friends' (al-Ma'ida: 51) constitute a commandment of moral responsibility and a requirement of faith in Allah. As long as you have faith in Allah, if you were to see that someone's faith is compromised because of how he disobeys his Lord's Guidance, you should not trust him to help you. This person has proved that he cannot even be trusted with his own responsibilities, so do you imagine that he can be trusted to help you with your responsibilities? The answer is no due to the fact that he has proved that he could not be trusted with the religious guidance which was revealed to him. Alliance means support, and support means to actively come to the aid of another. Do you think that they are really acting to give you support, or that they are only pretending to help you? You should know that they will do just what the True

Lord says they will do: 'Had they gone forth with you, they would not have increased you except in confusion.' (at-Tawba: 47)

Were they to join your ranks, they would do just what the hypocrites do to you. What else can you expect from those who betrayed the trust of the scriptures which were revealed to them? So alliance, support, and aid can only come from someone who is united with you in the same supreme goal; and as long as there are people who differ with Islam concerning the supreme goal, namely faith, then a Muslim should not trust them. Also, He says: 'they are but allies of one another.' (al-Ma'ida: 51)

Someone might ask how the True Lord could say of them: 'The Jews say, "The Christians have nothing (true) to stand on", and the Christians say, "The Jews have nothing to stand on", although they (both) recite the scripture. Thus, the polytheists speak the same as their words.' (al-Baqara: 113)

So we have three divisions here: Jews, Christians and polytheists. The polytheists of Quraysh said the same ignoble thing the people of the Book said, despite the fact that they were in constant mutual conflict with them, and each one of them denied the other; as Allah says: 'So, We caused among them animosity and hatred.' (al-Ma'ida: 14) So, how could He then say' they are but allies of one another'? (al-Ma'ida: 51) This requires a moment of contemplation so that we can see the full picture. We know that those who go against the True Lord's Way of Guidance could be at odds with one another over the issue of temporal power, but when they confront a great power that has the ability to bring ruin to all their houses of lies, they stand together against it. This is what we see in real life: Eastern powers used to be at conflict with Western powers, but no sooner did anything emerge connected to Islam that they then joined forces, even though Eastern powers had been defeated. The teachings of Islam are a threat to the authority of both sides, even though, in reality, Islam is a mercy for them which would take them out of darkness and into light. Therefore, they indeed act in accordance with the True Lord's Words: 'they are but allies of one another.' (al-Ma'ida: 51)

Also, when they are alone with each other, the True Lord says this about them: 'We caused among them animosity and hatred.' (al-Ma'ida: 14) Thus, we understand the nature of the relationships amongst the enemies of Islam.

The True Lord says: ‘whoever is an ally to them among you – then indeed, he is (one) of them.’ (al-Ma’ida: 51) This means that whoever takes them as allies and helpers will assuredly fall into the idolatry of hypocrisy for he will be with the Muslims in his words, but with the enemies of Islam in his heart. The True Lord ends the verse by saying: ‘Indeed, Allah guides not the wrongdoing people.’ (al-Ma’ida: 51) The worst of all wrongdoing is to associate partners with Allah, which is most evil of all, as the True Lord says: ‘Polytheism is great injustice.’ (Luqman: 13) This is because when one man wrongs another by taking something that is rightfully his and giving it to another, is this man able to take anything from Allah? No, it is not possible, for man cannot wrong Allah. Nevertheless, he will be punished for his polytheism, and this is an evil that brings nothing but loss to the human soul. The one who associates partners with Allah takes nothing but loss; and this is the ultimate failure.

When evildoing brings some kind of benefit to an evildoer, it is a trifling evil, for the ugliest of evils is for a man to associate partners with Allah and gain nothing from this except grievous punishment. If a polytheist rebels against certain points of Allah’s Way of Guidance, can he dare to rebel against the Decrees of Allah which are beyond his free will, such as death?

The True Lord commands man to have faith, and the requirements of faith are the testimony of Allah’s Oneness, faith in His messengers, scriptures and in the Last Day, the performance of prayer, giving zakat, the fasting of Ramadan and the pilgrimage to Allah’s House, for those who are able to do so. The idolater who refuses to have faith and fails to fulfil his responsibilities, can he dare to refuse to fall ill or die? No, and hence he does a great evil to himself, which brings himself nothing but loss. The True Lord will not guide him since the meaning of guidance is for a man to find someone who will lead him to the road, which leads to a goal. ‘To guide’ means to show someone the way to a goal. Allah does not treat His creation unfairly by refusing to guide them; rather, those who wrong themselves by refusing to have faith thereby forgo their True Lord’s care simply by their own free choice. The True Lord then says:

فَتَرَى ٱلَّذِينَ فِي قُلُوبِهِم مَّرَضٞ يُسَٰرِعُونَ فِيهِمۡ يَقُولُونَ نَخۡشَىٰٓ أَن تُصِيبَنَا دَآئِرَةٞۚ فَعَسَى
ٱللَّهُ أَن يَأۡتِيَ بِٱلۡفَتۡحِ أَوۡ أَمۡرٖ مِّنۡ عِندِهِۦ فَيُصۡبِحُواْ عَلَىٰ مَآ أَسَرُّواْ فِيٓ أَنفُسِهِمۡ نَٰدِمِينَ ﴿٥٢﴾

And you [Prophet] will see the perverse at heart rushing to them for protection, saying, ‘We are afraid fortune may turn against us.’ But God may well bring about a triumph or some other event of His own making: then they will rue the secrets they harboured in their hearts [52] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 52)

What is meant in this verse is that there is a prohibition of taking the people of the Book as allies instead of Allah, and whoever hears this prohibition and has faith in his heart will heed it. However, as for he who conceals disease of hypocrisy in his heart will not only take them as allies but will hurry to do so, which requires reaching one’s goal in the shortest time possible. Compare ‘hurry into’ with Allah’s statement: ‘And hasten to forgiveness from your Lord.’ (Al-’Imran: 133)

The goal here is Allah’s forgiveness which believers must vie with one another to acquire it. When referring to ‘hurry into’, it means that he was already steeped in this thing from the beginning. So, when the True Lord says, ‘they hurry into their friendship’ (al-Ma’ida: 52), this suggests that they were already with these disbelievers from the onset, along with competing to befriend them. The general reason for this was the presence of a disease in their hearts that made them seek out any means possible; and these means were embodied in their words: ‘We fear lest some misfortune of a disaster may befall us.’ (al-Ma’ida: 52)

So, they forged alliances in fear that good fortune would turn against them, ‘We need them because they have wealth and weapons.’ This was the position of the hypocrite ‘Abdullah ibn Ubayy who said, ‘I am a man who fears the turns of fortune.’ He feared misfortunes and calamities. The opposite of this is what ‘Ubada ibn As-Samit Allah be pleased with him said, ‘I shall seek the alliance of the Messenger of Allah and the believers and break my alliance with Jews and Christians.’ Allah says: ‘Perhaps Allah may bring a victory.’ (al-Ma’ida: 52) We should be aware that one of the meanings of the Arabic word Fath which is commonly translated as ‘victory’ means ‘to judge’, as in the verse: ‘Our Lord! Judge between us and our people in truth’ (al-A’raf: 89).

So, when the True Lord says, ‘Perhaps Allah may bring a victory or a decision according to His Will’ (al-Ma’ida: 52), this means that He will ordain a judgment which will set the terms of alliance with the people of the Book and those who have no knowledge.

‘A decision according to His Will’ (al-Ma’ida: 52) means a judgment with which He will address believers. The one who believes in Allah performs actions which cause certain effects, while other things might come to believers without any effort on their part, but as pure Graces from Allah. So, Allah might bring about good fortune, which could mean the means with which you may utilise to make the best preparations possible to assault them, as He says in another verse: ‘for which you made no expedition with either horses or camels.’ (al-Hashr: 6)
